ABSTRACT

This bibliography is designed to help teachers find resources and suitable K-12 classroom materials that introduce and incorporate global perspectives into curricula. This collection emphasizes the interrelatedness of world problems and issues, as well as of areas of the world. The bibliography contains the following three sections: resources for teachers, resources for classroom use, and resources produced by selected projects and organizations for teachers and classroom use. Section I on teacher resources contains lists of books and pamphlets, bibliographies of resources for teachers, journal articles, and selected continuing sources for information, materials, and teaching ideas. Section II on classroom materials provides lists of reading materials, multimedia materials, media guides and publishing agencies, simulations, and bibliographies. The third section identifies projects and organizations whose resources and services may be helpful to teachers. Most of the entries in this bibliography include availability information and short annotations. (ND)
GLOBAL PERSPECTIVES: A BIBLIOGRAPHY

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

This bibliography is designed to aid teachers in finding resources and suitable classroom materials that introduce and incorporate global perspectives into the curriculum. In selecting materials, the preparers used a definition of global studies which encompasses a planetary rather than an area study or intra-cultural approach. The emphasis is on the inter-relatedness of world problems and issues as well as of areas of the world.

The bibliography is a sampling of resources and materials with a global perspective. It is not a complete listing.

Books

A teacher's guide to some United Nations tasks.

An attempt to assist teachers in their efforts to help students accept and appreciate others for what they are and to value the rich and varied contributions of all cultures. Includes case studies and bibliography.

A four volume study of the likely impact of interdependence on policy making. Includes discussions of energy, resource depletion and increased trade.

Explores the effects of increased transnational participation on hopes for achieving international accommodation.

An insightful treatment of the nature of the information machines and how they will influence our lives.

Outlines some of the imperatives of globalism, provides a perspective on transnational participation, and offers some guidelines for global education in schools.

Offers a setting and a framework for international studies. Emphasizes the need for new perspectives in many related areas.
Provides an overview of new approaches and suggests a basis for evaluating both new and more traditional approaches. Lists sources of change and provides examples of newer methods of analysis.

An interdisciplinary analysis calling for immediate efforts to stabilize the world's population and abandon the pursuit of super-affluence.

A clearly written source for both students and teachers which deals with such problems as the environment, the rich-poor gap, urbanization, and hunger, and shows the interrelationships with population trends, resource shortages, and the arms race. The author describes the meaning of multinational corporations and global interdependence, and also suggests ways of achieving a better world in the future.

An analytical interdisciplinary approach which views world society as a total environment. Describes ethnic, political, economic and ideological systems and discusses decision-making, roles, non-national activity, problems of perception, values and conflict. A clear demonstration of a systems approach.

A lucid description of ecology, and suggestions for some needed changes in economic thinking if we want to survive.

A book of readings that raises questions about basic goals and values of development; attempts to place the development process in a context of human dignity and justice.

A succinct and clear explanation of the concept of political integration.
This book contains a chapter on the curious persistence of place as an important symbolism for humans. The author's inference is that smaller, rather than larger political units are preferable.

Uses principles of spaceship operation to suggest what needs to be done in such areas as population, hunger, governmental reforms, and justice if our planet is to survive.

Outlines political and social processes which constitute a self-developing advanced industrial society.

An explanation of the assumptions, chief components, and teaching strategies of the data bank approach. Clearly outlined and illustrated with concrete examples.

Concludes that technological man is more myth than reality, but that survival may require such a development, as well as a new philosophy and a new naturalism.

Argues that preoccupation with the warfare-threat system has kept us from dealing with poverty, racism, overpopulation, and diseases; calls for massive redirection of human energy and material resources.

A handbook on the analysis of recent international affairs; uses current problems in presenting ideas; a pragmatic, non-moralistic approach emphasizing "Yesable Propositions."

Recommends "general systems theory" as a form of technical expertise for better piloting of spaceship earth.

A curriculum outline for teachers. Emphasizes interdependence and global systems. It deals with such topics as environment, resources and poverty.

A number of experts provide answers to such questions as: How can we understand the United Nations? How can we assess the prospects for the future of the UN?

An appraisal of what man must do to survive. Includes discussion of pollution, population, resources and ethics.

Specialists in various fields discuss what their respective disciplines can bring to the study of interpersonal and intergroup relations across national boundaries, and what the diplomat can learn from their findings.

The Council's annual assessment of current issues and decisions facing the United States in its relation with the developing countries. The study consists of a keynote essay; eight policy analyses of specific issues including "The Energy Shock and the Development Prospect," "The Politics of Scarcity," and "Food: Growing Global Insecurity," and over 70 pages of up-to-date data covering the entire range of U.S. developing world economic transactions.

The author argues that nations should think of education as a means to full humanity for their populations rather than as a means to power, prestige, or wealth.

Contains a chapter on the nation-state and the world community.

Suggests a "spaceship earth" perspective for education in response to our new global interdependence. Reviews recent curriculum projects, innovations in teaching methods and resources, and introduces strategies for change.

An ethical and practical plan for transforming the educational system, with the idea that humanity can be measured against human treatment of the nonhuman world.

Discusses some likely characteristics of the impending planetary society. Includes discussions of life styles, cultural diffusion, individual participation, and work.

An analysis of the search for a new commitment by today's youth. Suggests that there are new resources and approaches available.

Predicts a world-wide collapse within a century unless the growth of population and industry is halted and a "global equilibrium" established.

Designed to help teachers include a global perspective in existing courses. The brief essays in Section I suggest ways to provide a global perspective in such courses as U.S. History, Anthropology, Economics, World History, and others. Section II contains background essays on such topics as modernization and change; population, hunger, and affluence in an interdependent world; the global crisis in jobs, trade and tourism; and environment and development. Ideas for class activities and guidelines for simulation and role-playing are also offered. Part II includes case studies, maps and charts. A selective film guide and glossary are included.

Critical review of the operation of multinational corporations. Includes case studies and a wealth of data.

This book draws upon the generalizations and conclusions of Myrdal's massive three-volume study, Asian Drama: An Inquiry into the Poverty of Nations (1969), but is written for a general audience. Myrdal concludes that most programs fail because they ignore fundamental defects in the world's economic structure--defects that require radical changes, not mere band-aid patchwork and repair.

Provides a framework for classroom consideration of questions about causes of conflict, violence, and war. Contains suggestions for classroom exercises and a selected bibliography.

Pickus, Robert, and Woito, Robert, To End War, World Without War Council, 1730 Grove Street, Berkeley, California 94709, 1974.

Introductory, comprehensive guide to all the topics affecting the problems of war and peace. Identifies and annotates the best current books, all of which can be ordered through the World Without War Council. More than a bibliography, it rationalizes a complex field.
Argues that the universal problems faced by humankind require international negotiation which in turn requires an informed citizenry educated in a new and radically different way. Better understanding of the outside world and changes in attitudes toward other people are seen as crucial to human survival.

This book describes and criticizes the maintenance of poverty and wealth in the United States. Sections of the book, drawn from the works of such writers as David Horowitz, Frances Fox Piven, and William Ryan, provide an historical perspective, survey governmental subsidies to the rich and governmental programs for the poor, examine exploitation of poverty programs by corporations and attempts of the poor to work within the system, discuss causes of poverty, and suggest steps to reduce poverty and inequality.

Expresses the conviction that the "one world" idea is coming too rapidly, that people are not ready and will not accept it, and that, in the meantime, it helps erode authentic cultural localism.

A dispassionate, objective analysis of why expenditures for national defense are so high and what some of the consequences are for American politics, the economy, and the society.

Presents arguments for limiting growth and brings up the relevant question of whether the nation-state is a suitable vehicle for handling such limitation.
Uses case studies to demonstrate a way of viewing societies or issues in a comparative framework. Cases include nationalism, the American Revolution, and interventionism.

A documentation of the economic problems of developing countries and their relationship to the economic and political policies of the United States. The book provides specific recommendations for U.S. policies in light of developing country problems of hunger, overpopulation, and poverty.

Explores the possible revolutionary effects of the threat of world-wide ecological catastrophe on the organization and governance of our world. Shows how the dilemma of rising demands and insufficient resources is producing important changes in the power and policies of nations.

An assessment of the degree to which international studies concepts permeate the major social studies curriculum projects. Contains information about readily available materials needed for use in global studies classes.

Contains a useful annotated bibliography in the general subject area of world problems.

Takes the reader on a spiritual voyage along a variety of paths which suggest possible futures for man.
Provides insight into the problems posed by business and government to this new kind of enterprise.

An analysis of the failings of modern civilization and proposals for a radically restructured world order for the future.

Stresses the need for efforts to preserve human values in our technical society. Argues that it would be suicidal to let technology overshadow ecology.

Examines environmental problems in a global perspective. Discussed are the social, economic and political dimensions of such issues as: misuse of resources, pollution, population, unbalanced development, and urbanization. Drafted originally as an unofficial report for the United Nations Conference on the Human Environment.

Bibliographies of Resources for Teachers

This bibliography, recently revised, is now a standard in the field, covering the substantive aspects of war-peace issues.

The U.N. publishes a bibliography of its materials called United Nations Documents Index every month with a cumulative yearly index. Reports and papers of the organizations are included. A large public library would carry this index. Some of the Specialized Agencies, which are relatively independent bodies, publish their own catalogs as well as being included in U.N.D.I.

Webster, Gordon V., An Annotated Bibliography on War and Peace. Available from War, Peace, and Conscience Project, Box 731, Stonybrook, New York 11790.

Articles

A series of articles dealing with the impact of the multinational corporation in rich and poor nations.

Barnet, Richard, "The Game of Nations," Harper's, November 1971. Examines the mentality behind America's belief that in order to be the number one nation you have to be able to do what you want, when and where you want to do it.

Becker, James M., "The Nation-State, Obsolete or Dominant?" Atlantic Information Centre for Teachers, 37a High Street, Wimbledon, London, SW19 5BY, England, 1971. The question of the utility of the nation-state is raised directly in this article.

Bohannan, Paul, "Beyond Civilization," Natural History 80: 10, 50-67; February 1971. A look at the requirements for survival and ironies in the post-civilization culture. Sees "phase 2" as a new opportunity to understand the mysteries of life and culture.
Brown, Lester R., "Global Food Security," The Futurist, 1974. Rejects the view that current food shortages are a temporary phenomenon, and argues that shortages reflect long-term trends that have been exacerbated by growing populations among poor nations and rising standards of living among the rich.

Cleveland, Harlan. "Our Coming Foreign Policy" Saturday Review September 6, 1975. Notes that two-thirds of the world wants a fairer shake in the distribution of the world's riches. Discusses how the U.S. might react.

This special issue deals completely with the issue of hunger and poverty. A publication of the National Council for the Social Studies.

A series of articles by experts suggesting some approaches to furthering the cause of peace.

Provides different theoretical frameworks for studying revolution as an important force in politics.

Identifies several different widely accepted goals for international education and demonstrates the need to face honestly their implications. The goals are: national power, mutual understanding, permeation of ideas, and national development.

Deals with the problems created by the impact of mass media on the formation of a coherent view of world events. Includes articles on the media, classroom implications of media viewing, and a selected bibliography. The World and the School, a review for teachers of current international affairs, and Crisis Papers, an ad hoc series analyzing current crises, including comments from newspapers and journals of several countries.

Looks toward a transformation of civilization to planetization with a mystical view to guide humankind.

Argues that wider distribution of power and broadening of participation by individuals in controlling their own lives are creating a new social vigor.

Using Vietnam as an example, the author points out how, once an activity is well under way, the tendency is to retain thoughts in harmony with it and discard others.

The report of a study of whose opinions are more manipulated by the mass media—the common man or the upper-middle-class elites.

Selected Continuing Sources for Information, Materials and Teaching Ideas

Development Forum is a monthly newspaper published free of charge by the Centre for Economic and Social Information (CESI), United Nations, Palais des Nations, CH-1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland. It is available in English, French, Spanish, Italian, and German. Areas of interest include: Development, Education, Disarmament and Development, Economic Development, Environment, Population, Social Development, and Trade. When ordering Development Forum, name, address, country, and organizational affiliation are requested.

Focus on Asian Studies is a quarterly newsletter published for $1.00 a year by the Service Center for Teachers of Asian Studies, Association for Asian Studies, Ohio State University, 29 West Woodruff Avenue, Columbus, Ohio 43210. News and information on activities of organizations interested in Asian studies, teaching ideas and extensive annotated lists of materials and books are included in each issue. Focus is an excellent way for a teacher of Asian studies to keep current on what's happening in the field.
Headline Series is published five times a year by the Foreign Policy Association, 345 East 46th Street, New York, New York, 10017 at a cost of $1.40 per copy. Back copies are also available; over 70 titles are listed in their 1974 catalog. Included are the U.S.S.R., Eastern and Western Europe—17 titles; Asia—14 titles; Africa, Latin America, the U.N. and the Middle East with five titles each; U.S. foreign policy problems—10 titles; and World Problems—19 titles. These 60 page booklets give concise, understandable, thorough and sophisticated treatments of the topics covered.

Ideas and Action Bulletin is published monthly, except in the summer, by the Coordinator, FFH/Action for Development, FAO, 00100 Rome, Italy. The Freedom From Hunger Campaign and Action for Development are joint projects of the U.N. and the Food and Agriculture Organization, a specialized agency of the U.N. Many of the articles are written by Third World personnel who have been practically involved in development efforts. The Bulletin has about five or six short articles on development projects in various parts of the world in a typical issue. News from the national committees of the FFH campaign and Action for Development committees and discussions of educational materials from both developed and less developed countries are frequently included as well.

Intercom is presently published by the Center for War/Peace Studies, three to five times a year. Subscription rates start at five issues for $6.00 with bulk rates available from Intercom, 218 East 18th Street, New York, New York, 10003. Prior to January, 1969, the magazine was published by the Foreign Policy Association whose address is given above. Some 37 titles are available from the FPA. Up to September, 1973, each issue of Intercom had several articles on a single topic, with an extensive bibliography and lists of materials available on the subject. In a major change of format, Intercom retains the single topic format, but the bibliographic features have been drastically curtailed. Instead of factual articles, much more emphasis is placed on practical teaching suggestions and use of material presented in the classroom.

InterCulture News is a newsletter published free of charge by InterCulture Associates, Incorporated, Box 277, Thompson, Connecticut 06277. InterCulture Associates specializes in the importation of books, records, and artifacts, primarily from Asia and Africa. Filmstrips and slides are also availa-
The newsletter is essentially a low key advertising instrument containing editorials on the educational philosophy behind the company and news of its activities and of other organizations with similar interests.

News and Notes on the Social Sciences is published twice a year by the Coordinator for School Social Studies, 513 North Park, Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana 47401 and is free of charge. Articles on projects, reviews of books and lists of free and inexpensive materials are included in each issue. Articles by teachers, news of conferences, etc., are also included.

Newsletter is published six times per year for $10.00 a year by the Society for Citizen Education in World Affairs. The address of the Newsletter is SCEWA Newsletter, 1511 New Hampshire Avenue, N.W., 9th Floor, Washington, D.C. 20036. The Newsletter consists of three parts. The first contains news of non-governmental organizations and activities dealing with world affairs. The second is news of another sort, a who's who and what are they doing of world affairs organizations. Lastly, new materials of the major organizations dealing with world affairs are described.

Transition is a bi-monthly publication of the Institute of World Order, Inc., an organization involved in promoting the values of peace, social justice, economic well-being, and ecological balance through research and education.

Simulation/Gaming/News is published five times a year at a cost of $4.00 a year (check with order) by Simulation/Gaming/News, Box 3039, University Station, Moscow, Idaho 83843. It is an excellent way of keeping up with books, games, conferences, etc., on simulations and games for the classroom. Reviews of new materials and articles on various aspects of simulations and their use are included. The March, 1974 issue had a special section on simulations and games in the church and values taught by gaming generally. The interested novice as well as those familiar with simulations and games will find S/G/N useful as a way to find out what's happening in a rather fluid field.
Spectrum is a newsletter examining foreign policy issues of domestic significance. A bi-monthly publication of the Student Advisory Committee on International Affairs, 1717 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Suite 503, Washington, D.C. 20036.

ERIC (Educational Resources Information Center) is a nationwide information system designed to help educators keep up-to-date in their field. ERIC ChESS, Clearinghouse for Social Studies/Social Science Education, 855 Broadway, Boulder, Colorado 80302, has produced a number of valuable documents in the world studies field. Included are Off the African Shelf: An Annotated Bibliography; The Status of World History Instruction in American Secondary Schools; Teaching International Relations; Global Dimensions in the New Social Studies; A Preliminary Review of the Intercultural Dimensions in International/Intercultural Education, Grades K-14. They also publish Keeping Up, a free newsletter containing announcements of all publications, news items and a selection of abstracted documents.

Communique is a Newsletter of Intercultural Communication Programs, published by the Regional Council for International Education, 101 Bruce Hall, University of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 15213.

International Peace Studies Newsletter, Center for Peace Studies, The University of Akron, Akron, Ohio 44325.
SECTION II -- RESOURCES FOR CLASSROOM USE

Reading Materials -- Books, Kits, Unit Materials

Bliss, Betsy (ed.), "Concern: Poverty" and "Concern: Race," Available from Silver Burdett Company, 250 Jane Street, Morris-town, New Jersey 07960. The Leader's Guide is a guide to the entire series of booklets. The above two (of a series of eight booklets on social issues) are excellent discussion resources. They include photos, drawings, questions, quotes from writers, songs, firsthand accounts, statistics, etc. The discussions focus on domestic issues. Since the materials in "Concern: Race" also deal with poverty, the two are complementary. The Leader's Guide has an excellent section on how to facilitate a discussion. Films are suggested for each of the topics and there are four or five pages of good discussion questions for each booklet.

Concisely outlines the dimensions of hunger and malnutrition around the world and the broad solution required—stabilization of population, lessening ecological stress, and elimination of abject poverty. Brown argues that only by reordering global, national, and personal priorities can these be accomplished.

Lester Brown discusses the diverse and complicated developments of the past decades to document the growing interdependence of nations in a world in which problems are increasingly of global dimension (world food shortages, world inflations, world population problems, world environment crises, etc.) and in which only global responses can meet the challenges posed by these problems.

A selection of readings designed to provide insights into many aspects of development from a number of diverse viewpoints. Good for senior high school students and undergraduates.

Vivid, frank photographs and compelling text (comments of the poor as told to interviewer Robert Coles) document poverty in the United States in human terms. The faces and words give poverty a meaning and reality most Americans cannot comprehend.

Topics include: brotherhood, environment, war, and peace.

This autobiography of a "favelado" (one who lives in a slum) in Sao Paulo provides startling insights about life in one of the worst urban slums in the world. Selections can be assigned as readings, in order to convey understanding of the physical and psychological effects of poverty.

Challenges students to become aware of their values, to seek meanings in the changing present by exploring, imagining, and evaluating the future. Includes problems, probes, and projections to stimulate the reader and open his or her vision to new possibilities.

Describes how the world system is functioning, cites population growth, increasing affluence, and faulty use of technology as major factors in the declining quality of life, and offers suggestions for survival.

Families Around the World and Teacher's Guide, Minneapolis: Project Social Studies Center, University of Minnesota.

Uses studies of family patterns to deal with such concepts as culture, role, and socialization. Provides a basis for subsequent study of community, political systems, and culture values.

An excellent selection of visuals, readings and commentary dealing with human viewpoints and cultural patterns.

Four Communities Around the World (and Teacher's Guide), the Taba Social Studies Curriculum, Addison-Wesley, Menlo Park, California, 1969.

A series of curriculum guides and teaching units, interdisciplinary and planned for sequential development of skills and attitudes as well as knowledge.

The four societies and corresponding concepts emphasized in this course are China (political change), India (economic development), Brazil (race relations), and West Africa (urbanization). A variety of materials and activities helps students to better understand these particular countries and to explore the human issues and values involved in social change no matter where the locale. A semester course for grades 9-12.

Fraenkel, Jack; Carter, Margaret; Reardon, Betty, "Peacekeeping," Perspectives in World Order Series, New York, Random House. A booklet which helps students to think about alternative ways in which conflict can be controlled in the future through changes in the present international system, and the adoption of some better system of world organization.

The Handwriting Is on the Wall, published by World Neighbors, 5116 North Portland Avenue, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 74112. Presents a spectrum of commentary on world development including the writings of Third World economists and political leaders. Through the variety of perspectives, it poses important questions: What should be the goals of development? How can the needs of developing nations be met most satisfactorily? What has been the effect of past aid granted by developed nations? What obligations do developed nations have to developing ones? It is a useful source for pithy comments to start class discussions; it has a special section on food and agriculture.

The first section of this fourth-grade text deals with the study of people in different geographical locations and in groupings of various sizes. The second section deals with changing cultures and the movement from rural to urban life. Examples are drawn from nineteenth-century and contemporary America, and cities in Nigeria, Brazil, and India. Excellent text, clearly written, makes easy transitions in connecting basic development issues across time and national boundaries.

This sixth-grade text helps students understand basic contemporary problems in modern and non-modern countries—the economic interdependence of rich and poor nations; food/population and the standard of living in India; poverty in America and technology and environmental pollution. Complex issues become clear through carefully chosen examples, simple graphs, powerful illustrations, and a supplementary simulation game.

This handbook contains six exemplary lessons which could be plugged into any course to provide a global perspective and a greater understanding of interdependence.

Provides insight into and raises questions about the implications of man's exploration of space for life on earth.

Let Us Examine Our Attitude Toward Peace, edited by Priscilla Griffith and Betty Reardon.

A booklet of readings on the psychological and political barriers to world peace. Discussion questions and activities suggestions. Grades 11-14.

"Man at Aq Kuprik: Tradition and Change in Village Life," a teaching/learning packet; also Perspectives (a set of 12 separate booklets on a single theme). American Universities
Field Staff, 3 Lebanon Street, Hanover, New Hampshire 03755. Topics include: "The Impact of Modernization on Traditional Societies," and "The Impact of Population on Society."

A novel about the struggle of a village family in India for survival. They are trapped by forces beyond their control—natural disasters, famine, the effects of industrialization. It is a simple story of the dilemmas faced by millions of people in poor nations and is good reading for high school students.

Emphasizes problem-solving skills. It is concerned with ways of achieving and maintaining a world without war. Students are asked to analyze war as a way of resolving conflicts, and to look at alternative models of world organization in the year 2000.

This book is aimed at high school students and takes up the causes of war, from human nature to factors intrinsic to the nation-state system. It is especially helpful in discussing alternative models for preventing war, including the limited world government. The book includes scenarios for testing the models and gives suggestions for classroom activities.

Three lessons demonstrate the interdependence involved in three global topics: political systems, food distribution, and health conditions. These materials could be used with elementary or senior high groups.

This book of thirty activities is subtitled "Four-Dimensional Fluid Geography of Spaceship Earth." Activities direct students in measuring the globe, using locational grids, and considering the time dimension. It is designed to strengthen student understanding of the earth as a totality with many dimensions. Initiated by a transnational group, this book has been field-tested in eight nations. Plans for Phases I and II call for materials about global crises and decision-making for global survival.

Based on selected sociological concepts such as culture, stereotypes, ideology, and values, these materials emphasize the process of sociological inquiry. Includes episodes (short units) and readings which can be used to supplement problems of democracy in other social studies courses.

These materials, first appearing in 1972, attempt to promote the study of "large and complex human issues" in an interdisciplinary way. They were developed for ages 11-14. Three units are available. Exploration Man (Unit One) contains a teaching guide for helping students understand their local surroundings. It has no student materials. Communicating With Others (Two) and Living Together (Three) provide pamphlets, tapes, and slides flexibly designed for small or large group use. Materials utilize some cross-cultural examples, especially historical case studies, such as Imperial China, as the focus of Unit Three. Thus, the course approaches a global outlook.

Schools Council/Nuffield Humanities Project -- United Kingdom, published by Heinemann Educational Books, London.

These materials, designed for British high school students, first focus on group process. Teachers are asked to chair discussions in place of lecturing. The project provides a vast range of articles, tape recordings, essays, pictures and poems on various topics which serve as the context for those discussions. Students individually study those materials which interest them most. Each one then brings a unique perspective to the discussion. Materials have been prepared on nine topics of global concern: war, education, the family, relations between the sexes, poverty, people and work, living in cities, law and order, and race relations.

Honduras and El Salvador are used to present a graphic microcosm of population and poverty problems in Latin America. Photographs and text (much of it drawn from interviews with the poor) make appallingly clear the web of problems facing poor countries and how grim the prospects are for change. Teachers can use pictures and case studies from this to make real the conditions so often described by statistics and generalizations.

A revealing, exciting treatment of the process of rapid change. Provides suggestions for future shock observers.

An excellent background piece to the whole question of global development and the role of the global corporation.

Ms. Ward describes the growing disparity between the rich and poor nations of the world and calls for an energetic program of foreign aid designed to meet the problem of economic deprivation. She sees such a program as a just and necessary response to an economically, religiously, and socially interdependent world.

Xerox Educational Publications, 245 Long Hill Road, Middleton, Connecticut. Several short supplementary paperbacks designed for high school classrooms and dealing with global issues: Diplomacy and International Law; Alternatives to War; The Limits of War; National Policy and World Conscience; Organizations Among Nations; The Search for World Order; Peacemaking and Power Politics; Population Control; Propaganda and Public Opinion.
Multi-Media Materials

"Age of Negation," Robert Hanvey, SSSS, 10,000 Culver Blvd., Culver City, California, 90230.
A sound filmstrip reviewing development of nuclear arms with discussion questions and activities.

"Art and Man," Scholastic Magazine.
Published eight times a year in cooperation with the National Gallery of Art. The program includes slides and other visuals. Topics for 1971 and 1972 include issues on Japan and Africa.

"Can the Earth Provide?" 28 minutes, Black and White, NFBC-McGraw-Hill rental $7.00, Indiana University, Audio-Visual Center, Bloomington, Indiana.

"Conflict Resolution," SSSS, 10,000 Culver Blvd., Culver City, California, 90230.
A teaching unit based on the film "Little Island," which encourages students to analyze various modes of communication, including games of strategies, and a case study of the Cuban Missile Crisis. Grade level 7-12.

"Confrontation," Meyers, Ralph and Thorpe, Garry, SSSS, 10,000 Culver Blvd., Culver City, California, 90230.
Audio-visual material which deals with the international system. This unit contains four sound filmstrips using American and original Cuban and Soviet sources to show the background and the perspectives of the protagonists in the Cuban Missile Crisis, and analyze the roles of advisors to policy-makers.

Three titles: The Universal Language of Children; Cultural Dignity; and Masks are included in this unit.

"Future Shock," 42 minutes, Color, $575.00, Rental, $35.00, McGraw-Hill Films, New York, New York.

Simulations

Aid Committee Game. Oxfam-American, Inc., 474 Center Street, Newton Massachusetts, 02158, $5.00.

This game is actually a series of decision-making situations drawn from 12 different countries of Africa and South America. After reading a brief overview of each country, including such aspects as its economic condition, population size and distribution, primary products, and trading partners, students must decide their priorities in allocating limited funds to specific development projects. It's an exciting game because the situations are both concrete and realistic. For junior high and above. Playing time requires three to five one-hour segments.

Alpha Crisis Game: Origins of World War I, Center for International Programs, New York State Education Department. Free. This simulation-game is designed to introduce the subject of the first world war in an experimental way.

Báfá Báfá, Simile II, A cross-cultural simulation.
Intended to teach some basic facts about what is meant by the term culture and some of the characteristics of cultures; create feelings which are similar to those one will likely encounter when one travels to a different culture; and to give the participants experience in observing and interacting with a different culture.

Baldicer, Wilcoxson, Georgeann, John Knox Press, Box 1176, Richmond, Virginia 23209, $25.00.
Simulates the problems of providing food for the world's populations, encouraging students to think about solutions in an economically interdependent world. Students are food coordinators for a hypothetical country and through negotiations, trading and buying try to sustain their populations. The players learn the effects of the population explosion, unequal distribution of resources and technology, inflation, and competition among nations. For grades 6-14.

Conflict, Simile II, P.O. Box 1023, La Jolla, California, 92037.
This simulation-game presents a projected, futuristic, disarmed international system which students are encouraged to analyze and evaluate through a simulated crisis occurring within that system in the year 1999. $50.00.

Conflict Resolution, a teaching unit, based on the film Little Island.
Encourages students to analyze various modes of communication; including games of strategy and a case study on the Cuban Missile Crisis. Grade level 7-12, $1.00.
Crisis, Simile II.

Crunch, Abington Press.

Culture Contact, ABT Associates.

Dangerous Parallels, Scott, Foresman.
A series of six roles consisting of New Zenith, Control Nordo, Hameel, Tansana, Inland and Outland. Students take roles of ministers for each of these countries. Each nation differs as to resources, power and government.

Guns or Butter, Simile II, P.O. Box 1023, La Jolla, California, 92037.
This simulation places students in an international system like the present, with nuclear weapons, and raises questions about how the system can be changed to be less war-prone and satisfy human needs for more "butter."

Intelligence Gathering.
A role playing exercise designed to motivate inquiry into the roles that various intelligence communities play in policy making. Illustrates the problems of decision-making in crisis situations. Grade level 7-12, $.50.

Mission-Peace, Interact, P.O. Box 262, Lakeside, California, 92040.

Inter-nation Simulation, SRA, Cherryholmes, Cleo and Guetzkov, Harold, 259 East Erie Street, Chicago, Illinois 60611.
This simulation, a simplified representation of a system of nations and international organizations, gives the participants the experience of making decisions in a miniature prototype of the world.

An article that originally appeared in this issue and is available as a reprint from the Institute for World Order, enables students to test out models of international organizations through scenarios.

Propaganda Game, SS School Services.

Star Power, Simile, P.O. Box 1023, La Jolla, California, 92037, R. Garry Shirts.
A highly involving game about the world's unequal distribution of wealth and power in which individual players have a chance to progress from one economic level to another by acquiring wealth through trade. At one point, the rich are given the right to make the rules for the game and invariably act to keep themselves in the privileged position. The post-game discussion should focus on the world's unequal distribution of wealth and power. For grades 7 and up. Requires 1-3 hours playing time. Powderhorn is an elementary version that is appropriate for grades 4-6. $25.00 ($3.00 for do-it-yourself instructions).

Interact's Simulations, Interact, Post Office Box 262, Lakeside, California, 92040.

Simile II Catalog, Post Office Box 1023, La Jolla, California 92037.

This short book is both basic and practical. It is for teachers who decide to run a game and become uneasy at their audacity. Chapters include what games are, how to run them, where they fit into a curriculum, designing games, research on the performance of games, and standard examples of a game appendix. $4.95.

This is a short, one-hundred page book. A good introductory chapter on the definition of games is followed by short chapters on the history of games, games and learning. A relatively long chapter on the design and use of games is the main attraction of the book. It discusses this aspect of games in a step-by-step process, outlining problems at each step. A bibliography is included. $2.95.
Systems Imperiled! Center for Teaching International Relations, University of Denver.

The Planet Management Game, Houghton Mifflin, Boston, Massachusetts. This simulation game helps the students understand the interrelationship between various problems in which the players must manage an earthlike planet and make decisions about such variables as population, pollution, food and income.

The Value Game, Long, Barbara and Linehand, Thomas E., New York, Herder and Herder, Inc., 1970. This game is designed to reveal differing value systems.

Trade and Develop, Academic Games Project, John Hopkins University.

Simulation and Games Bibliography

A very handy guide from the Social Science Education Consortium, Boulder, Colorado 80302. Contains information for each game on where to order, grade level, subject area, number of players, time to run game, and price.

A list of 18 games dealing with international affairs, which can be rented from the center for a small fee.

This is an extensive annotated bibliography concerning simulations and games. It is largely composed of theoretical or game descriptions on a wide set of areas of interest. Access to the bibliography is through descriptors.
Discusses what simulations are, the kinds of simulation games and their values, limitations, and prospects. Also includes an annotated bibliography of simulation games and books. Price $2.50.

Simulation/Gaming/News, Box 3039 University Station, Moscow, Idaho 83843.
This newsletter is published five times a year for $4.00. The newsletter contains reviews of books, articles both for novices and veterans in the gaming business, ideas for teaching with simulations, etc. It is a good way to keep up with what is happening in simulations and games.

Topics include: what are games, their history, their advantages and disadvantages, and running and designing games. Six games are completely described, including their materials. A directory of 87 non-commercial games and a bibliography is included. $1.95.

Teaching Global Issues through Simulation (#75), Intercom.
These and other games relating to international affairs are described in this 1974 issue.

This is an expensive, but very complete directory of some 600 games with extensive annotations. Some 18 are in international relations. There is also an extended discussion of five games for beginners, an article on designing simulations, and an article for beginners with an annotated bibliography. Information on producers of games is provided as well. This is the directory of games and makes interesting browsing to see what's available. The articles are also interesting. $15.00.

Data on the Human Crisis: A Handbook for Inquiry, with Teacher's Guide. The handbook contains data sheets, most of which are in graphic form, that succinctly summarize important information. The data sheets are organized under the following categories: 1) International and National Violence; 2) The Cost of Arms; 3) Population Growth; 4) Pollution and Depletion of Natural Resources; 5) The Rich-Poor Nation Gap; 6) Rapidity of Change; 7) International Cooperation; 8) Interrelationship of Problems and the Future. A Teacher's Guide suggests ways the data can be used with an inquiry approach and provides questions and possible hypotheses for each data sheet.

Readings on Human Nature and War. A collection of interdisciplinary readings in under-development for junior or senior high school students that helps to explore the question of whether war and other forms of mass violence are to be explained by something innate in humans. These readings, from such fields as ethnology, psychology, biology, and anthropology, ask if aggressive behavior is innate or learned. The questions will also encourage students to develop hypotheses on ways to reduce the level of violence in conflict situations. The materials will point out the crucial difference between individual aggressiveness and the highly organized, institutionalized phenomenon of warfare. A bibliography, including films and additional readings, is provided.
