Abstract
The publication was developed for use in the career education workshops for professional development sponsored by the Missouri State Department of Education. It serves as a resource guide for establishing career development goals and objectives at both the elementary and secondary levels, with emphasis on the junior high school level. The reference volume is divided into eight sections: (1) the process from concepts activities; (2) numbering systems; (3) definition of terms; (4) concepts, goals, and developmental goals; (5) objectives; (6) activities; (7) program strategies for career education and career guidance; and (8) reference materials. THE PROCESS - FROM CONCEPTS TO ACTIVITIES

With the aid of the Concepts-Goals-Objectives-Activities Reference Book and charts, you are now ready to experience the process of developing goals and objectives for career education-career guidance and creating activities that will implement these goals and objectives in and out of the classroom.

The Career Conscious Individual Model comprises the basis for this experience. It has four domains:

1. Self Knowledge and Interpersonal Skills
2. Knowledge of Work and Leisure Worlds
3. Career Planning Knowledge and Skills
4. Basic Studies and Occupational Preparation

A domain serves as an organizational framework to describe related elements of career education-career guidance.

Step 1 - Chart 1

For each Domain, choose appropriate concepts. Concepts are statements that identify what has been determined is important and are derived from needs and values expressed by society. An example of a concept appears on Chart 1 under each of the four Domains. The concept under the first Domain of Self Knowledge and Interpersonal Skills states: "1.1 An individual is unique." Other suggested concepts appear in the Reference Book beginning on Page 8.

Step 2 - Chart 1

Next concepts are translated into goals. A goal is a general statement indicating what one hopes to accomplish. Goals represent what individuals should possess in the way of knowledge, skills, and/or attitudes. The concept "1.1 The individual is unique" may be translated into the goal: "1.1 For the individual to understand his abilities and limitations." as illustrated on Chart 1.
Step 3 - Chart 1

Next goals are restated as developmental goals for the four grade levels: K-3, 4-6, 7-9, 10-12. Developmental goals provide a frame of reference for goal attainment at each level. For example, the goal: "1.1 For the individual to understand his abilities and limitations" may be restated developmentally:

At the K-3 level, "1.1 For the individual to understand his abilities to perform specific tasks."

At the 4-6 level, "1.1 For the individual to understand that his interests and aptitudes influence his activities."

At the 7-9 level, "1.1 For the individual to understand the effects of health and physical development on his performance of tasks."

At the 10-12 level, "1.1 For the individual to understand, accept, and respect his own uniqueness as a result of learning, growth, and maturation.

Step 4 - Chart 2

Each developmental goal for the various levels is broken down into a number of performance objectives. A performance objective is a specific behavior(s) an individual will be able to exhibit or demonstrate as a result of a particular learning experience(s). In breaking down the K-3 developmental goal: "1.1 For the individual to understand his abilities to perform specific tasks", a performance objective would be: "1.1 The individual will identify why he is unique."

Step 5 - Charts 3 and 4

Once objectives have been determined, activities that have a high probability of meeting the objectives are selected. In addition, resources needed to perform the activities are listed and outcomes are stated so that a determination may be made that the objectives have been reached. The examples of activities beginning on page 44 of the Reference Book illustrate how career education could be integrated into a variety of subject areas. The 7-9 developmental level was selected as representative of what is possible at every developmental level.

DEFINITION OF TERMS

Life Career Development

Self development over the life span through the integration of the roles, settings, and events of a person's total life.

Career Education

The systematic organization of total education (guidance and instruction) to facilitate the life career development of individuals. The educational domains which make up career education include: Self Knowledge and Interpersonal Skills, Knowledge of Work and Leisure Worlds, Career Planning Knowledge and Skills, and Basic Studies and Occupational Preparation.

Career Guidance, Counseling, and Placement

An educational program responsible for assisting individuals to develop self knowledge and interpersonal skills, career planning and placement competencies, and knowledge of the work and leisure worlds. The guidance program also is responsible for helping individuals understand and relate the meaning of basic studies and occupational preparation in their present and future lives.

Domain

A basic category that is used to describe related elements of career education. Domains serve as an organizational framework for the knowledge, skills and attitudes of the program.

Concepts

Statements of those ideas considered important for one's life career development. These statements are derived from needs and values expressed by members of society. Concepts are the basis for goals.

Goal

A goal is a general statement derived from a concept indicating what one hopes to accomplish. Goals are not considered measurable, but represent what knowledge, skills and attitudes individuals may be expected to possess.

Developmental Goals

A restatement of a goal in terms of four developmental levels: K-3, 4-6, 7-9, 10-12. This sequencing provides a way of monitoring progress toward achieving the goal. It provides a frame of reference for goal attainment at each level.
Performance Objective

As a result of a particular learning experience(s), the individual will be able to exhibit or demonstrate specific behavior(s).

Activities

Those endeavors which have a high probability of aiding individuals in attaining the objectives in question.

Resource

People, places, and materials needed to perform an activity or activities.

Outcome

A behavior demonstrated by an individual or group which indicates that an objective has been reached.
Domain: Self

Concept: An individual is unique.

Goal 1.1 For the individual to understand his aptitudes, abilities and interests.

| The class will discuss the evidence that led scientists before the time of Copernicus to believe that the earth was the center of the universe. | Teacher
Suggested readings and resources
Textbooks | Given a previous experiment, the student will duplicate it and decide whether the original findings should be accepted or altered. |

The class will discuss how the discovery of new information and evidence about the nature of the atom led to the beginnings of nuclear power between the years of 1930-1950.

Given the statement "the earth is flat" each student prove or disprove this statement on the basis of evidence that he has acquired on his own initiative.

Goal: 4.3 For the individual to understand the relationship between what goes on in school and out of school.

Dev. Goal: 4.3 For the individual to understand how participation in school activities can relate to selected occupational areas.

Objective: 4.32 The individual will identify skills required in occupations of interest to him and where these skills can be acquired in school.

| Invite a surveyor to visit the class and bring the equipment he uses in his occupation. After explaining the use of his equipment, he will aid the students in surveying school grounds. | Counselor: provide resource person
Surveyor | Given a list of occupations in the index of the Chronicle Guidance Kit, the individual will select the three occupations that most interest him and describe what areas of math, and what specific mathematical skills, are most important in performance of the duties of those occupations. |
| Take the class on a field trip to a computer center to see what sorts of occupations are found there. A computer programmer would explain to the students the necessity for accuracy and a systematic approach in writing a program. | Counselor: provide resource person
Parents: provide transportation
Computer Programmer | |
| The students will interview their mother and/or father (observe them on the job if possible) about how math is used in their occupations. The students will then report back to the class their findings. Special notation might be made where students report different uses of math for individuals in similar occupations. | Parents
Students | |
| Students will share with the class how they have made use of mathematical skills in part-time or summer jobs they’ve held. | Students | |

Show the film "Andromeda Strain," having the students identify in writing the steps taken in the systematic solution of the mystery. The class can follow up this film with a discussion of PH of a solution, replicating the logic and emphasizing the realism of the film.

The class will be broken into groups of 3, 4, or 5 students. Each group will be given a statement to "prove" true or false (teacher may use any "known" theories, or make up fictitious statements). In "proving" the statement true or false, the important point will be the systematic method used in coming to a group conclusion. Groups will then share and compare methods, suggesting alternate procedures if possible. A possible example might be the statement: "You're a doctor involved in medical research. You believe that people in sedentary (mainly sitting down and low level of activity) occupations have more heart attacks than people in more physically active occupations." Design an experiment (systematic problem-solving method) to either prove or disprove your hypothesis. The rightness or wrongness of your hypothesis is not as important as your method.

PROGRAM STRATEGIES FOR CAREER EDUCATION—CAREER GUIDANCE

The program strategies outlined below represent ways of combining processes for the integration of career education—career guidance systems. Naturally, combinations of the five major program strategies are also possible.

1.0 Separate Content requiring additional activities and/or personnel.
   1.1 Substantive part of each day’s activities presented by each instructor.
   1.2 Specialized personnel teach a course or a special unit; often a course at the middle school level. He may also coordinate out of school experiences and maintain informational systems.

2.0 Traditional Content Area Fusion as a vehicle for career development concepts.
   2.1 Fused in each curriculum area
   2.2 Fused in selected curriculum areas, e.g. social studies

3.0 Career Content as a vehicle for basic education.
   3.1 Extend basic subject matter into relevant career settings
   3.2 Focus basic education around career themes or points of departure.

4.0 Individually planned in a conventional or alternative educational system.
   4.1 Prescribed experiences and activities
       4.11 mini courses and voluntary seminars
       4.12 work/study in cooperation with business and industry
       4.13 service work in hospitals, homes for aged, and the handicapped
       4.14 activity centered projects
       4.15 kits that provide information or simulated work experiences
       4.16 life career games
4.2 Contracts with teachers, counselors, parents, and community personnel

4.21 performance (behavioral) -- skill development with specified competencies

4.22 planning (program development) -- individualized education through specified in school and out of school observation and work experiences.

4.3 Self-directed

4.31 computer based interactive systems

4.32 community worker observation and reporting

4.33 career information seeking via media

4.34 youth clubs

4.35 junior achievement
