DESCRIPTORS Behavioral Objectives; *Consumer Education; Curriculum Development; Educational Principles; Family Life Education; *Home Management; *Learning Activities; *Money Management; Resource Materials; Secondary Education; *Teaching Guides; Teaching Methods

ABSTRACT The primary objective of the guide is to help teachers and administrators identify scope and plan for sequence in learning experiences in teaching consumer aspects of personal and family money management in grades 7-12. Behavioral outcomes and principles at the beginning (you), intermediate (your family), and advanced (your future) levels of learning are presented for the following areas of concentration: (1) managing personal and family money to meet family needs, (2) individual and family save for the future, (3) individual and family using credit, (4) how insurance protects the individual and family, (5) consumer buying, (6) social security and family security, (7) meeting long-term goals through investments, (8) individual and family role as a taxpayer, (9) a major investment—a home, and (10) legal aspects of personal and family finance. Each subject area is arranged with a general representation of its behavioral outcomes and general principles at the different levels of learning and is followed by separate sections for each level elaborating on its principles (generalizations), learning experiences (including evaluation), and resources for learning. Resource materials referred to in the text, additional resources, film, and filmstrips are appended. (EC)

GUIDELINES FOR TEACHING PERSONAL AND FAMILY MONEY MANAGEMENT

(Consumer Education)

In Junior and Senior High School
Homemaking Classes

The Guidelines for Teaching Personal and Family Money Management endeavor to identify behavioral outcomes, principles and learning experiences in money management on BEGINNING, INTERMEDIATE and ADVANCED levels of learning. Home and family life teachers and administrators will need to keep in mind that the primary objective for these guidelines is to help identify scope and plan for sequence in learning experiences for teaching consumer aspects of personal and family money management in grades seven through twelve.

HOW TO USE THE GUIDE

This guide has been developed to assist home and family life education teachers in identifying important behavioral objectives and principles in the field of personal and family money management. The learning experiences are designed to help students understand the principles identified for each behavioral outcome.

The teacher will find more suggestions than can be used at each level. The selection should be made with student-teacher-parent planning after determining the knowledge and understanding the student brings to this unit of study. Other learning experiences may be developed for specific individual and community needs.

For ease in finding materials each level is printed on different colored paper:

BEGINNING (GREEN)
INTERMEDIATE (PINK)
ADVANCED (YELLOW)

Each reference has a KEY. The numbers in parentheses after bulletins and pamphlets refer to the publisher as listed in the Appendix page 133. The letters in parentheses after films and filmstrips refer to the distributors as listed in the Appendix page 141. Names of texts and references with publishers are on page 127 and 129. For additional references, see Appendix page 131.

What could be an interpretation of this bulletin board which relates to the principle that as teenagers you contribute to income in various ways? (Careful use of articles frees income for other purposes; loss of articles adds to expenses)

Bulletin board: "Judy vs. Jane"
- Under name "Judy" hang a sock, blouse, lipstick, scarf.
- Under name "Jane" = kleenex.
Area of Concentration: Managing Personal and Family Money to Meet Family Needs

Learning Level: YOU

Behavioral Outcome: D. The student will be better able to manage personal money.

PRINCIPLES (GENERALIZATIONS)

1. Recorded expenses can give one data with which to construct, analyze and evaluate the spending plan.

LEARNING EXPERIENCES (INCLUDING EVALUATION)

"Help Monica Manage Her Money". (This heading with a cartoon drawing of Monica on a bulletin board.) From expenses listed on bulletin board, as well as facts about Monica, make a plan for spending $5 a month.

Jot down everything you spent or borrowed last week (as much as you can recall). Include charge accounts, gifts, loans, clothing, cokes, etc. Keep a factual record this week of all you spend excluding meals at home. Compare expenses jotted down with actual expenditures.

Make a plan for spending this amount of money for the next week. Keep a record of money spent. Discuss and evaluate the results of your planning.

Make adjustments and construct a spending plan for a month.

2. A plan for spending may result in a more satisfying use of money for the individual.

Lynn Peterson is a student in your school. How much did she cost her parents (food, clothing, etc.) last year? Mr. Peterson is a fireman (policeman, civil service clerk in post office). What was his salary for the year ($$ )? Estimate take home pay and percentage of this Lynn had.

Present petite dramas (one-minute spontaneous skits) on "quarrel-starters" like these:

1. Jim has lots more money to spend on clothes than I.
2. I don't know why Sally has to have another pair of shoes. She already has two more than I.
3. All the girls I go with have all the money they want to spend while I don't have any.

In buzz groups, search for suggestions to avoid "quarrel-starters". List on board and discuss with class.
Behavioral Outcome

A. The student will be better able to understand that goals may be achieved through management of income.

PRINCIPLES

1. Family values influence goals.

LEARNING EXPERIENCES

- By groups prepare bulletin boards that illustrate "Family Values Influence Goals".

- Divide into family groups. Assume role of family members:
  - mother
  - father
  - children: boy, 12 years; girl, 15 years; boy, 17 years

- Describe family situation:
  - income
  - expenses
  - values
  - interests
  - goals

- Discuss differing goals and values of each family.

- Show and discuss the filmstrip, "Directing Your Dollars". Note how family values differ.

4. Needs and wants may be influenced by various social pressures.

Prepare and present bulletin boards that can be put up in thirty seconds on the topic, "Keeping up With the Joneses". List ideas presented in "want" or "need" column.

Identify some social pressures apparent in the society column of several newspapers.

Find news articles that illustrate types of social pressures that affect families.

Role play typical social pressures that could affect:

1. A young married couple, the Jim Browns, married one year.
2. The L. R. Jones family with two children in high school.
3. Mary and Don Bates, retired couple, living in a retirement home.

B. The student will be better able to understand personal and family resources and assets.

Family members differ in the ways they contribute to the real income of the family. Make up and use a questionnaire to find ways teenagers contribute to the real income of the family. Reporting by presenting minute skits with class identifying contributions.

By groups, plan and give demonstrations reflecting resources and assets of hypothetical families. (Jim B. fixes his own car; Bob L. raises a garden; etc.) Note differences among families.

D. The student will be better able to participate in financial planning for families.

1. Recording expenses can give one date with which to construct, analyze and evaluate the spending plan. Select several appropriate case studies. Given the income of the family, in committees of 3 to 4, show how you think they might plan to spend their monthly income before comparing with actual expenditures as reported.

Estimate and record how much you think it costs a family for necessities for one month. (Do not discuss your family estimates. These figures are tools only.) Use these figures as a guide. Make a spending plan, stating family goals, for a fictitious family.

Discuss, "How can Shirley and Jim extend the family's income?" The Myers cannot seem to make incoming money match outgoing bills. They have two small children, Lisa and Jeff, three and five.

Make up and use a questionnaire to find ways class members contribute to the real income of the family.

Using daily newspapers, study food advertisements and make menus with shopping list for your family for three days to demonstrate that one can increase real income by studying advertisements and planning carefully before shopping.

For a home experience, discuss with your family a way in which you can contribute to the income of the family by performing some service that is now done outside the home. (Baking bread for the family, mowing the lawn, washing and ironing men's shirts, etc.)

The family's decisions regarding money at any given time are based on many factors. Have a panel of speakers, representing families with young children, teenagers, college age, no children, or retired, describe factors that influence their decisions in spending money.

Role play discussion scenes on "Money and a Vacation" for families with children of different ages. (Include parents and families with two children, 5 and 8; three children, 14, 16, 17; and one child, 21.)

Note decisions each family might make.

When working toward an FHA degree of achievement, To Grow as a Member of Your School and Community, prepare skits or panels on various factors involved in making family money decisions and present for PTA, Back to School Night or FHA programs.

D. The student will be better able to manage money.

1. Recording expenses can give one data with which to construct, analyze and evaluate the spending plan.

Evaluate methods of record keeping by role playing a household at income tax time.

Dad is looking for the doctor and drug expenses of the past year. Show good versus poor practices. (Unorganized with Junior going to drugstore, mother calling the doctor versus all expenses recorded in book or receipts kept in envelopes, cancelled checks in order, etc.)

Record personal expenses for one month and analyze for data that will be helpful when making a plan for spending. Try the plan, take another look, make a new plan.

On a bulletin board set up case study for family of four. Distribute $370 in "play" money to groups of 4-5. Each plan how to spend money for the family for a month. Figure percentage for each distribution. Compare with "Where a Typical Family Dollar Goes".

In committees, make spending plans for hypothetical cases: career girl, college or business student.

View film, "Home Management: Why Budget?" Using ideas presented make a plan for a young married couple's first year. Consider local wages, rents, etc. Include payroll deductions, net income and all expenditures.

Secure census figures from the County Welfare, Chamber of Commerce or County Extension Office. Make up hypothetical families from this census report of people who could live in your community. Find as many references as possible about family planning or budgeting by checking references in the library. Make a spending plan for one of these families.

A savings plan should consider both present and future wants and needs.

By committees prepare a different bulletin board for each day’s assignment:

- Is the Gobblebug Getting Your Dollars?
- Save or Squander - Ski or Stay Home
- Savant Susan, Saves Securely
- Are You the Piggy Bank or Panic Button Type?
- Miss Hoarder or Miss Spendthrift?

Each take $10 (mock money) from a bulletin board entitled, How Would You Like to Spend These? Pin a statement of how you would spend the money to the bill and return it to the board.

Organize a panel of senior girls and recent graduates. Discuss planned savings in relation to short and long term goals.

Discuss philosophy of saving as expressed by panel members.

Write another statement about how you would spend the $10 reflecting the philosophy of the panel. Discuss.

Decide on the purchases you would make in a six-month period if you had $10, $20, or $50. Then calculate the amount of money that could be earned if this money were in a savings account for ten years.

C. The student will be better able to understand savings plans which seem appropriate for the stages of family life.

The family's decisions regarding money at any given time are based on many factors.

Set up case studies for families in various stages of family life. (Young married couple; family with first child; with three children; with children in college; with children married and away from home; a retired couple.)

Brainstorm possible need for savings in each family group.

Identify factors which will influence the choice of a savings program for each family at the particular stage in the family life cycle.

For further references, check pages 95-103 in your Consumer Education Bibliography (prepared for the President's Committee on Consumer Interests).

Check library for references to list additional factors that determine decisions regarding savings.

Interview a store manager to determine misuse of credit by teenagers in the community. Formulate a code for teenagers to consider when using credit. Ask member of Household Finance Corporation or other informed person to talk over code with class.
PRINCIPLES (GENERALIZATIONS)
- Credit may provide conveniences but costs money.

LEARNING EXPERIENCES (INCLUDING EVALUATION)
- Divide class into committees. Each inquire about cost of some article (record player, coat, etc.) when paid by cash and when paid for over a six-month period. Report to the class.
- Obtain copies of contracts used for installment buying of merchandise above. Discuss terms. Figure carrying charge for length of contracts.
- React to bulletin board, "How Much Debt Can You Afford". (Pictures or articles that teenagers would like to have plus a yardstick.) Read, "How Much Debt Can You Afford". Formulate credit tips and apply to your own budget.
- Analyze basis of credit as shown in film, "Using Bank Credit". Present skits based on fictitious case studies similar to film couple illustrating a sound philosophy of credit.

RESOURCES FOR LEARNING

Behavioral Outcome
A. The student will be better able to understand how families use credit.

PRINCIPLES (GENERALIZATIONS)
1. Credit may be secured from many sources.

LEARNING EXPERIENCES (INCLUDING EVALUATION)
- Prepare a series of bulletin boards during this unit. Take ideas from pamphlets or books you are using including, When, Why, How, Where to Borrow Money.
- Conduct a survey (in class, businesses, friends, home, etc.) to determine the ways families use credit.
  - View films for information on kinds of credit available to families or ask banker, credit union manager or others to discuss the types of credit available to families. Summarize learnings by circular response.
  - Check the following references for information on ways credit is extended to families: Facts You Should Know About Borrowing; Using Consumer Credit: A Tool or a Trap?
  - Present information to class with panel discussion.
- Arrange a tack or flannel board display on the types of credit available to and used by the families in community or town.

Behavioral Outcome A. The student will be better able to understand the purpose of insurance.

PRINCIPLES (GENERALIZATIONS)  LEARNING EXPERIENCES (INCLUDING EVALUATION)  RESOURCES FOR LEARNING

Insurance protects against financial loss due to accident, theft, loss or damage. Use specific cases of imaginary loss or theft of possessions such as a bicycle, radio, skis, etc. Evaluate cost of insurance versus cost of replacing the article. Example: John has a paper route after school. Recently he had an accident on his bicycle breaking his leg and badly damaging the bicycle. He will be in the hospital for three days and his leg will continue to be in a cast for six weeks. The bicycle is a total loss. Estimate the cost to John's family. Investigate types of insurance coverage John could have had and compare these costs with John's expenses due to the accident.

Behavioral Outcome B. The student will be better able to understand how insurance works (risk sharing principle).

Insurance substitutes a certain cost for the risk of a large uncertain loss. List on the blackboard hazards a family may encounter which can be covered by insurance. Check to find out which of these are actually insurable. Ask insurance agent to compare the number of claims to the number of policies as a means of understanding the risk principle.

Prepare bulletin boards:
1. "Life's a Pretty Risky Affair" illustrating some hazards which may be covered by insurance.
2. "Share the Risk" - Show many people putting money in a big pot to pay for one person's accident.

There are insurance coverages for the family through employment by father and/or mother.

Divide into committees. Survey local business firms for types of insurance protection. Find out if they have: group life insurance; an employee pension plan; group health insurance for employees. Share the collected information with class.

View film, "Outside That Envelope". Were there ideas on insurance in the film not previously discussed?

Prepare skits illustrating benefits from various plans represented by families in class.

Each class member interview a family in the community to secure information on additional types of insurance keeping names anonymous.

Present information by means of a flip chart or illustrated talk.

1. A consumer has responsibilities to himself and to retailers.

As a basis for discussion, role play situations which point up consumer to salesperson relationships. (Example: A formal is worn by Susan X to a dance. The next day she takes it back to the store saying it is too small.)

Solve some consumer problems. Examples: You buy a raincoat that is not waterproof; a blouse marked "sanforized" shrinks. What is the consumer's responsibility? Discuss.

Plan and make purchases for the Home Economics Department, self or own home. Evaluate the choices in terms of intended use.

By groups, role play scenes at the stores when articles were being selected that point up how needs were made known to the merchant.

Prepare a bulletin board to illustrate the theme, "The Shopper and Merchant are Partners".

Ask a salesperson to speak on, "Tips from a Merchant on How to Be a Better Shopper".

Read, "How to Spot a Bargain". Each group of three or four has $5 in "play" money to spend. Select merchandise from table marked "Bargain Sale". Evaluate purchases in terms of intended use.

Behavioral Outcome: The student will be better able to understand aspects of Social Security in relation to family security.

PRINCIPLES (GENERALIZATIONS)

1. Social Security enables the wage earner to pay now toward future financial returns.

LEARNING EXPERIENCES (INCLUDING EVALUATION)

Write, call or visit the nearest Social Security Office for information available to citizens.

Have resource person discuss benefits from Social Security. Explain fully insured, currently insured, etc. Summarize information by use of tack board, flip chart or bulletin board.

View film, "Sam'l and Social Security". Discuss benefits to Sam'l and every citizen covered by Social Security.

Prepare a bulletin board illustrating how Sam'l benefited from Social Security.

Secure sample deduction statements and calculate tax to be paid by employer and employee for various incomes:

- $80 - week
- $300 - month
- $50 - week
- $400 - month

What financial return will each employee have at age 65?
