Volume 3 of a three volume final report presents prototype job training plans developed as part of a research project which pilot tested a distributive education program for rural schools utilizing a retail store simulation plan. The plans are for 15 entry-level and 15 career-level jobs in seven categories of distributive business (department store, food store, variety store, petroleum, restaurant, hotel/motel, and wholesaling). They were constructed for students in a distributive education simulation plan but are also appropriate for students in a cooperative plan. An introduction describes the origin of the tasks contained in the plan and suggests steps for their use. The plan for each job lists specific tasks and related tasks associated with that particular job. Eight columns are provided for recording where the student had experience with each task: class, simulated store, school store, observation, Distributive Education Clubs of America, or on-the-job training (paid or non-paid). Two columns are provided for the student and teacher to rate level of competency development. The first page of each training plan serves as a student contract and indicates the conditions under which he agrees to participate in the training experience. (Author/MS)

PREFACE

The report of the project, "Developing and Testing Simulated Occupational Experiences for Distributive Education Students in Rural Communities," is presented in three volumes.

Volume I includes the goals and objectives of the project, procedures followed, curriculum for the simulation project, third-party evaluation of the project and summary, implications and recommendations. This Volume also includes a selected bibliography, sample correspondence, sample forms, and a schedule of career progressions in six categories of business.

Volume II includes curriculum guides in the form of Competency Area Packets. Special recognition is due Mrs. Stephanie M. Dowdy, research assistant, for her work in developing the materials in this volume. The volume includes the following Competency Area Packets: Advertising, Communications, Display, Human Relations, Mathematics, Merchandising, Operations and Management, Product and Service Technology, and Selling. A suggested list of instructional materials is also included in this volume.

Volume III includes prototype training plans for 15 entry-level and 15 career-level jobs.

The entry level jobs are:

INTRODUCTION

This volume of the final report on the research project, "Developing and Testing Simulated Occupational Experiences for Distributive Education Students in Rural Communities," includes prototype training plans for fifteen entry-level and fifteen career-level jobs in seven categories of distributive business. These training plans were constructed for students in a distributive education simulation plan, but are also appropriate for students in a D.E. cooperative plan.

A prototype training plan is a model training plan that includes specific and related tasks customarily associated with a particular job. In the prototype training plans included in this volume, the specific and related tasks are those which were identified in the Crawford study, "A Competency Pattern Approach to Curriculum Construction in Distributive Teacher Education." In that research, structured interviews were held with full-time employees at entry, career, and specialist levels in selected distributive businesses in a large city, a medium-sized city and a small town in Virginia. These interviews were reviewed by a National Advisory Committee in each of the seven categories of business to evaluate the list of tasks for accuracy and completeness in relation to the job requirements in all parts of the country. These tasks may be evaluated at the local level as the prototype training plans are individualized for each student.

The first step in individualizing a prototype training plan is a review of the job tasks listed on the plan. The student, the teacher-coordinator, and an appropriate individual from a distributive business in which the student has a career interest should add or delete tasks so that meaningful learning experiences may be designed.

The second step is for these individuals to plan where suitable learning experiences to develop competencies to perform these tasks might be obtained. On the individualized training plan students should sign an agreement to obtain simulated and/or real experiences that will develop competencies to perform the tasks detailed on the training plans designed for them. On this plan a check mark should be placed in the appropriate column or columns which indicate where the experiences will take place. The learning experiences listed on the plan are classroom, simulated store, school store, observation, DECA and on-the-job. The curriculum materials included in Volume II provide individual and group learning experiences designed for classroom and for simulation experiences. The learning experiences in Volume II should serve as "idea stimulators" rather than specific learning experiences for every student, because appropriate learning experiences for each student should be designed with that student's career interest as the focal point.

For students in a distributive education simulation plan, skill development will most likely be available in the simulated and/or school store, whereas skill development for cooperative students will most likely be available in the training agency where they receive their on-the-job training. Learning experiences to develop knowledge and understandings will most likely take place in the classroom, although some experiences may take place in the business community through such activities as interviews, observations and field trips. Activities of DECA (Distributive Education Clubs of America) are particularly appropriate for the development of leadership and communication skills. DECA events provide an excellent means of developing and evaluating certain technical skills. Attitudes may be developed in the classroom, in the simulated and/or school store, on-the-job, and through DECA. Every effort should be made to provide experiences with customers in a "real life" situation so that attitudes regarding customer relationships can be developed.

The third step is for the student and the teacher-coordinator to evaluate the development of competencies to perform the identified tasks. If the student has on-the-job experience, the job sponsor should assist in evaluating the student's competence to perform the various tasks. The training plan provides space for indicating in code the degree to which the student has attained competence.

The evaluation of learning experiences should provide a basis for the evaluation of the various competencies. A Competency Record for each job is available through the IDECC System (2). It is suggested that one copy of each job represented in the class be purchased and that the teacher-coordinator make copies for each individual student from that master copy. It should be noted that some of the competencies on the Competency Record will be developed in the first year and others developed in the second year. Since the competency number identified on the Competency Record and the Competency Number indicated in the curriculum materials in Volume II are identical, the teacher-coordinator and the student can easily identify the competencies as they are being developed.

The evaluation noted on the training plan is a performance evaluation and should improve as the student obtains more experience. For this reason, it is suggested that the evaluations be noted in pencil and dated, so that the evaluation can be changed as a higher level of performance is developed.
