This is the post-assessment packet for the instructional module on Interpersonal Perception. It includes tests for definitions, a social opinion scale, and questions about pictures in the resource book. Guidelines are given for evaluating the pre-assessment and post-assessment tests. (MN)
POST-ASSESSMENT
FOR INTERPERSONAL PERCEPTION
LILYAN RUDERMAN
LEHMAN COLLEGE
POST-ASSESSMENT

Part I: The Cognitive Interpersonal Perception Task

A. Compare in writing (on a separate paper), or on audiotape, three theories of interpersonal perception. Give two differences and two similarities between Theory A and Theory B; between Theory B and Theory C; and between Theory C and Theory A.

B. In writing (on a separate paper) or on audiotape, state the names of three people connected with research in each of the theoretical frameworks you discussed in the previous question. Cite at least one important piece of research in each theoretical approach. Specify two implications of these findings for teaching and learning with special children. Select the theoretical approach you feel is the one you would choose to use and give three reasons for your preference.
C. In writing or on audiotape, use the definition of each of the following and state one difference and one similarity between each pair.

Part II: Teacher in the Classroom

Please fill in the following:

Name ________________________________

Sex ________________________________

Today's Date _________________________

Time Started _________________________

Time Ended __________________________

Now turn this page and, on the other side, draw a teacher at work in the classroom.

Note: Artistic ability is not part of the evaluation of this task. You will be asked to evaluate both your pre- and post-assessment drawings when you have finished the post-assessment (Parts I-IV); so for now, go on to Part III.
Part III: Social Opinion Scale

A. Please place a check in the appropriate column to designate whether you agree or disagree with each statement below.

Part IV: Interpersonal Perception Evaluation

Name ___________________________ Male ______ Female ______

Age ________ Schooling completed _______________________

Number of siblings in your family older than you _____ younger than you ______

Each of the pictures on pages 00-00 of your Resource Book shows something happening in a family or in school. You will be asked questions about the pictures. Answer the questions about the child the arrow is pointing to.

For each question choose the one answer you think is best.
Place a check mark (✓) in the space next to the answer you choose.
It is important to say what you think. If you are not sure, guess.
Be sure that the number above the question you are looking at is the same as the number on the picture you are looking at.

Here is an example of the way you should answer the question:

below:

Picture A

What is happening in picture A? Check one.

( ) 1. Being punished
(✓) 2. The cookie jar
( ) 3. The happy family
Picture A (cont.)

How do you think this child feels? Check one.

(✓) ashamed
( ) noisy
( ) pleased
( ) proud
( ) scared

How do you feel about what is happening to this child? Check one.

( ) Glad it is happening to him
( ) Sorry for him
( ) I don't care

How would you feel if this were happening to you? Check one.

( ) ashamed
( ) proud
( ) angry
( ) lonely
( ) pleased
( ) scared
( ) guilty
( ) noisy
( ) embarrassed

As you can see, this is a picture of an interpersonal situation involving a cookie jar, so a check mark was put in the space next to that answer. You can also see that the child under the arrow in the picture looks 'ashamed', so a check mark was put in the space next to that word.

Now look at the next question on your answer sheet: How do you feel about what is happening to this child? Check one; Now look at the last question for this picture - Picture A. Choose any word you want to, and place a check mark next to it. You have now answered four (4) questions by checking one answer for each question.
Now look at the first picture in the Resource Book and answer the questions under Picture No. 1 on your answer sheet. Be sure the number on the answer sheet and on the picture are the same. Also be sure that you have checked one answer for each of the four (4) questions for each picture. Go on until you finish all twenty pictures.

When you have finished all four parts of the post-assessment, give Parts I, III, and IV to your instructor for scoring. Get your copy of Part II of the pre-assessment, and score this part of the pre- and post-assessments together yourself, using the guidelines that start on the next page. When you and your instructor have both finished scoring the post-assessment, meet to evaluate your performance.
GUIDELINES FOR PROFILING T. I. C.

Note that there are two sets of guidelines here. Use them to evaluate both your pre-assessment and your post-assessment drawings, starting with the pre-assessment.

Circle the number which in your judgment indicates the degree to which each of the following characteristics is present in your drawings.

When you have finished rating both your drawings, read the following pages from Stern, Stein, and Bloom, Methods in Personality Assessment. They report on the drawings of more successful and less successful teachers. Compare yourself—both before and after taking this module—with the teachers they write about.

Conceptual Framework: Needs and their definitions

(used for subdivisions of the assessment model)

A. INTERPERSONAL RELATIONS

1. Reaction to Others—Direction of process of interaction with others.
   1.1 Affiliation (Aff)
       Positive association with other persons, either peers or authority figures, valued as an activity involving friendly reciprocal interaction with others.
   1.2 Rejection (Rej)
       Disassociation from other persons, either specifically or in general, limiting opportunities for interaction with others.
   1.3 Narcissism (Nar)
       Preoccupation with self.

2. Coping Mechanisms—Characteristics of process of interaction with others.
   2.1 Succorance (Suc)
       Helplessness; infantile dependence upon others for love, assistance, and protection.
   2.2 Nurturance (Nur)
       Supporting others by providing love, assistance, and protection.
   2.3 Dominance (Dom)
       Achieving assertive, autocratic ascendancy over others.
   2.4 Deferrance (Dfr)
       Sycophantic submission to the opinion or preference of another; emphasis on the glorification of another who is perceived as superior.
   2.5 Abasement (Aba)
       Self-deprecation; mortifying, mutilating, or otherwise devaluing the self.
2.6 Aggression (Agg)
Hostility towards others, overt or covert, in fact or in fantasy.

2.7 Autonomy (Aut)
Self-sustained; independent and unfettered.

B. INNER STATE

3. Impulse Acceptance—Acceptance of characteristic feelings and sensations.
3.1 Sex (Sex)
Erotic interest or expression.
3.2 Sentience (Sen)
Sensual or voluptuous self-gratification.
3.3 Exhibition (Exh)
Self-display.
3.4 Play (Ply)
Valuing of amusement and entertainment.

4. Impulse Control—Inhibition, denial or sublimation of characteristic feelings and sensations.
4.1 Blamavoidance (Bla)
Control of impulses in order to avoid criticism or disapproval.
4.2 Superego Integration (SI)
Functionally autonomous impulse control, positively cathexed.
4.3 Superego Conflict (SC)
Unsuccessful or incomplete internalization; impulse control accompanied by feelings of anxiety and uncertainty.

5. Energy Level—Intensity and direction of goal-directed activity.
5.1 Intensity (Int)
Liberation of affective or effective tension.
5.2 Endurance (End)
Sustained effort.
5.3 Achievement (Ach)
The drive for success, accomplishment and recognition; surmounting obstacles—physical, personal, and interpersonal—in order to achieve success.
5.4 Ego Ideal (EI)
Fantasied achievement.

C. GOAL ORIENTATION

6.1 Exocathexition-Extraception (ExX)
The manipulation of external objects through practical, concrete, physical or social action; adaptation to reality "as given" for more or less immediately tangible ends.

6.2 Exocathexition-Intraception (ExI)
Dramatic, idealistic social action; active modification of reality to conform to private value-system; expression of ideals in concrete action.

6.3 Endocathexition-Extraception (EnX)
The manipulation of external objects through speculative abstract thought or discussion; reflection and discussion about events or systems; data collection and inductive reasoning.

6.31 Cathexis of physical objects and systems, e.g. physics, chemistry, etc.

6.32 Cathexis of social objects and systems, e.g. history, politics, etc.

6.4 Endocathexition-Intraception (EnI)
Preoccupation with private experience; psychological, spiritual, esthetic, or metaphysical truth; introspection and deductive reasoning.

6.5 Understanding (Und)
Disinterested intellectualization; analysis, abstraction, synthesis for the sake of conceptualization rather than action.

6.6 Projectivity-Objectivity (PrO)
Ego-centric perception: animism, anthropomorphism, mysticism, superstition.

7. Self-Maintenance—Incorporation of past frustration and failures; patterns for buttressing level of self-esteem.

7.1 Harmavoidance (Har)
Avoidance, withdrawal, or protection from situations which might result in physical pain, injury, illness, or death.

7.2 Infavoidance (Inf)
Avoidance, withdrawal, or protection from situations which might result in frustration, failure, humiliation, or embarrassment.

7.3 Defendance (Dfd)
Concealment or justification of failure or humiliation.

7.4 Counteraction (Ctr)
Restriving in order to overcome experienced frustration, failure, or humiliation.

8.1 Order (Ord)
   Organization of immediate environment; preoccupation with cleanliness, neatness, orderliness, arrangement, collecting, detailed precision.

8.2 Conjunctivity (Cnj)
   Purposeful co-ordination, organization, and integration of specific activities as well as broader goals.

8.3 Disjunctivity (Dsj)
   Confused, unco-ordinated, disorganized, diffuse or conflicted activity.

8.4 Sameness (Sam)
   Fixated, repetitive, perseverative behavior.

8.5 Change (Cha)
   Plastic, unroutinized, labile, changeable behavior.

8.6 Impulsion (Imp)
   Impulsive, spontaneous, unreflected behavior.

8.7 Deliberation (Del)
   Hesitant, cautious, deliberative behavior.

8.8 Emotionality (Emo)
   Mobile, active, expressive, intense emotional responsiveness.

8.9 Placidity (Plc)
   Passive, phlegmatic, restrained emotional responsiveness.

Drawings. The analysis of the drawings proved particularly useful. The subjects had been required to draw “a picture of a teacher at work in the classroom.” The successful and unsuccessful trainees differed quite sharply in their response to this task. The results are of the same nature as those found in the Rorschach and the Activities Index to be reported below. The differences in the drawings of the two groups were as follows:

1. Successful trainees elaborated the figures and faces, giving each figure an aspect that set it off uniquely from the rest. This was true even in cases where stick figures were drawn. Embellishments included such things as facial expressions, posture, and clothing. Unsuccessful teachers drew figures that lacked individuality. They were stereotyped and stylized, and uniformity was emphasized.
2. The successful group drew the children in activity, either among themselves or with the teacher. Separate clusters of children were drawn, grouped about a project table, a piano, etc., the teacher being pictured with only one of these, or even apart from them all. It was possible for the children in these drawings to be doing things which the teacher could not even see. By implication, control of children by the teacher in these drawings did not necessitate constant physical supervision. The teacher could tolerate activity not under her immediate control. This type of situation was not found in the drawings of the unsuccessful trainees.

3. The unsuccessful trainees always indicated clearly in their drawings who the teacher figure was. They did this by increasing the teacher's size, putting her into a prominent position, and attaching some status symbol to the figure such as a ruler in her hand or a large brooch on her dress. In any case, casual inspection could immediately reveal the teacher in these drawings, which emphasized the authority of the teacher. The drawings of the successful trainees, on the other hand, emphasized what may be called the comradeship of the teacher with the children. In no case was the teacher figure clearly distinct by size, position, or symbol, and it was sometimes difficult to tell who the teacher in the drawing was. Usually the teacher was involved in activity with some of the children.

4. The unsuccessful trainees emphasized order and regularity in their drawings. The children were arranged behind desks that were distributed systematically in the classroom, in the manner of the traditional schoolroom. In some cases rows of X's were drawn to indicate either desks or pupils, the only figure being that of the teacher. The successful trainees, in contrast, organized their drawings around groups of children engaged in some activity and working together, even though sub-groups might be doing different things. Order of the type described above was entirely lacking. The unifying principle for the successful trainees seemed to be the relations of the people in the drawing, rather than the regimented lines of desks or pupils.

5. The unsuccessful group paid much more attention to physical details in their drawings. These included blackboards with a variety of things written on them, books, rulers, erasers, and so on. These details were not always relevant. The successful trainees paid little attention to such details, concentrating more on the figures in the drawing.

These drawings contributed a great deal to the assessors' conception of the hypothetical model, and were considered as one of the most valuable techniques employed. Their content is surprisingly similar to drawings obtained by Travers and others (76), from teacher-trainees in New York City.
Activities Index. The data from the Index for the teacher-trainees, when broken down in terms of the subdivisions of the assessment model, were as follows:

1. Interpersonal Relations. Both the successful and unsuccessful trainees showed a similar pattern here. There is a great deal of interest in others and desire to give to them. The level of maturity at which this operates must be questioned, since strong egocentricity and dependence are present. Evidence for autonomy is missing. In comparison with a group of physicists, to be described later, the teachers show their much greater interest in interpersonal relations than in strictly intellectual pursuits. The teachers are interested in their impulse life, want to give in to their impulses for sex and play, but have controls lurking in the background. Impulses for play, together with interest in change, suggest possible bases for identification with children as well as the capacity to face changing situations, such as a classroom which is in constant flux. Evidence for organization and integration is found, showing that the teachers are not overwhelmed by their impulses.

2. Inner State. No particular emphasis on a high energy level was found in either group of trainees. This finding is unlike that postulated for the original analytic model.

3. Goal Orientation. The unsuccessful students showed a marked interest in immediate, practical gains. For the successful trainees dedication in goal striving is indicated by lack of interest in immediate, concrete, and opportunistic problem-solving and rewards. Their intellectual interest is focused less on practical ends and more on social action, ideals, scientific examination, and introspection. Similarly, no particular importance was attached by either group of trainees in the Activities Index to the necessity of striving actively against obstacles. On the other hand, the successful trainees in particular emphasized strongly a need for change and novelty in an integrated framework. This desire appears to be independent of the influence of obstacles and stress. Actually, a willingness, in fact a desire, to meet new situations in which inhere the possibilities of failure and frustration, in itself is indicative of more than simply a counteractive attitude to obstacles as they occur. It demonstrates a search for possible obstacles. The unsuccessful trainees indicated much more caution and fear of danger and were less inclined to seek out novelty than were the successful trainees. This refers directly to the desire for change discussed above. The unsuccessful trainees' caution was also demonstrated in their increased concern with order and organization. This finding parallels the interpretation of the Drawings, discussed previously.
