
This first attempt to list child advocacy programs reflects the great variety and richness of advocacy efforts throughout the nation on behalf of children and youth. The listing includes strictly defined advocacy programs—both direct service, and planning and coordinating programs, as well as other services offered by agencies without defined advocacy programs. There is considerable fusion of advocacy activity with other direct services to individuals. Descriptions of program purposes, activities and other pertinent information are listed by states and regions. One index lists programs by their current emphases: adolescent parenthood, bilingual-bicultural advocacy, child welfare, developmental disabilities, juvenile delinquency, Native Americans, public education and recreation. A second index lists them by their current activities: legal action and assistance, legislative action, consultative services, research, maintaining responsive grievance procedures for students and community involvement. (KS)
INTRODUCTION

This first attempt to list child advocacy programs reflects the great variety and richness of advocacy efforts throughout the Nation on behalf of children and youth. Taken together the descriptions suggest advocacy resources which may be available in communities and states. It is not an exhaustive listing.

An effort has been made to list those programs which have been established specifically to influence modification for improvement in practices and service of community institutions significantly affecting the lives of children and young people.

As is well known, there is considerable fusion of advocacy activity with other direct services to individuals. Also frequently agencies act on behalf of their clientele without having a defined advocacy program. A public relations program interpreting an agency’s services and the needs of those served could be considered advocacy. Finally concerted efforts to increase coordinated planning can appreciably influence the services of an agency. However, none of these are identified here as discrete, separate advocacy programs.

This listing includes strictly defined advocacy programs. Descriptions of a few related direct service programs as well as planning and coordinating programs are included in a separate section of the publication. The distinction between some of these descriptions and some included in the listing may not be apparent. This fact only illustrates the difficulties inherent in trying to distinguish advocacy programs from other programs.

We hope that this listing will be useful not only to students and planners of advocacy for children, but that it also will stimulate communication among persons with similar interests and concerns. It contains illustrations of various types of programs and suggests similarities in practice. It includes programs in the process of organizing as well as well established and functioning programs. The listing can provide a base for further investigation and documentation of practice.

This publication is released with appreciation to all who are active on behalf of children and young people especially to those who prepared descriptions of their advocacy programs to help make this publication possible.

HOW TO USE THIS LISTING

DESCRIPTIONS OF ADVOCACY PROGRAMS

How are the descriptions listed?

Descriptions are arranged by states, alphabetically.

At the end of the state list, several programs serving two to four states are listed as "Regional Programs."

What Information is Included?

Descriptions of state and local advocacy programs are included. Descriptions of national programs are not included with the exception of the federally financed National Association for Retarded Citizens project which is related to developing local and state programs.

The descriptions include the title of the program, name and address of the agency, name and telephone number of the person to contact for further information, a statement of the purpose of the program and a listing of current advocacy emphases and activities.

Respondents indicated whether their advocacy efforts were on behalf of individuals, groups or classes of children, or issues. They also checked strategies employed.

With the exception of an occasional minor editorial change, the descriptions are as written by the respondents. The National Center for Child Advocacy has not validated any of the information, nor does the inclusion of a program description imply endorsement.

Most of the descriptions were received in April and May, 1975. Forty-five percent of those approached initially, responded. A few additional requests were made at the suggestion of respondents. It may well be that staff, or programs have changed in the interim. However, the information is substantially current.

Code Explanation

At the bottom of each description is an italicized code which summarizes on whose behalf advocacy efforts are made and the strategies used.
The first line of codes, which are underscored, identify those on whose behalf advocacy efforts are made. Strategies used are listed on the second line. Since different interpretatations appear to have been attributed to some strategies, each should be viewed in conjunction with the purpose and activities of the given program.

All designations were made by the respondents. The apparent different interpretations are included in the code explanation provided at the end of this section.

This coding has been done particularly for internal use, to facilitate further study. However, others may also be interested in learning what various programs do in some one aspect of their work. The codes are to be computerized with the assistance of the Social Research Group of George Washington University under contract of OCD. When data is computerized, information can be secured through the National Center for Child Advocacy.

DESCRIPTIONS OF RELATED PROGRAMS

Several programs providing information did not appear to fit the definition of a clearly defined advocacy program whose activities are directed toward improvement in the functioning or services of an institution or community. Some of the descriptions appear to be direct service programs for those requiring them, rather than impacting another group to provide or improve the service.

The provision of a much needed service can be considered advocacy activity if the advocacy purpose is to demonstrate the feasibility of providing the direct service and the intent is to secure other agency sponsorship and provision of this service. The advocacy program then could turn its resources and attention to securing another improvement.

Other descriptions included here are of programs which appear to be coordinating and planning mechanisms rather than designed to influence improved coordination and planning by agencies responsible for the delivery or operation of programs.

The primary reason for trying to separate out advocacy activities is to understand them better to the end that persons and agencies undertaking advocacy can be more effective.

INDEXES

Two indexes are included. One lists programs by their current emphases. The other lists them by their current activities.
It is hoped that these lists will facilitate exchange of experience and knowledge and will stimulate further communication.

CODE EXPLANATION

- all chdr: all children. Includes youth, if designated in description.
- ch ab and neg: child abuse and neglect.
- dev dis: developmentally disabled children; used as a comprehensive term; includes exceptional children.
- foster chdr: foster children.
- ment ret: mentally retarded.
- inds: individuals.
- grps: groups or classes of children.
- cl: class action.
- issu: issue.
- admin: work with administrators. A few programs indicated that they worked for change both within the administrations or their own agencies (internal) as well as with administrators of other programs (external).
- legis: legislative action. In addition to promoting and supporting participation in the legislative process to affect the formulation or adoption of specific legislation, this strategy seems also to include review of proposed legislation, study of existing laws, and identification of needed legislation.
program of public education awareness. Apparently this approach is used extensively to focus public attention on particular needs and detrimental conditions as well as on possible remedies or services for the improvement of conditions.

leg act

legal action. Use of the courts and the judicial process.

coal bldg coalition building. Convening groups and possibly individuals with like concerns to tackle a specific condition or problem.

org prgms organize programs. This has been interpreted two ways. One is to organize other (local) continuing programs of advocacy such as local advocacy councils. The second interpretation is to organize a program of action to achieve a particular purpose, such as the provision of education for mentally retarded children.

tra adv

training advocates. This has also been interpreted two ways. One is to train persons to serve as advocates on the behalf of children and youth. The other is related to public education and awareness programs. The assumption, apparently, is that increased understanding leads to action. Thus education about conditions is expected to stimulate persons to be advocates.

Sonoma County Citizen Advocacy Project
Sonoma County Citizen Advocacy, Inc.
300 South A.
Santa Rosa, California 95401
Telephone: 707/546-4622

Contact Person: Dennis Pankratz

Purpose:
To create a structured advocacy program where competent citizen volunteers (advocates) are matched with developmentally disabled children and adults (proteges) in one-to-one relationships, with advocates meeting specific unmet expressive and/or instrumental needs and ensuring that the handicapped person's rights and interests are safeguarded.

Current advocacy activities:
The Advocacy staff recruits, screens, trains, matches, and provides follow-up support to advocates in their one-to-one relationships. Advocates fill a variety of informal roles from friend to teacher, to formal roles of representative payee and conservator. In the past 20 months, 90 advocacy relationships have been established. The staff conducts an active public awareness program stressing the rights and dignity of developmentally disabled persons. Over 160 presentations have been made to various groups. The staff also responds to "advocacy issues" where handicapped persons' rights are violated.

Purpose:
To provide a one-to-one relationship to developmentally disabled individuals, matching volunteers (advocates) to mentally retarded and other developmentally disabled citizens (proteges). Advocates can assume roles which vary according to the needs of the impaired person. The state office coordinates and supervises 12 local programs including Ridge House in Wheatridge and other programs in the following counties: Adams, Arapahoe, Aurora, Boulder, Denver, El Paso, Fremont, Fort Morgan, Jefferson, Larimer, and Mesa.

Current advocacy activities:
Current activities include a mass media campaign using radio, TV, billboards, speakers, brochures, etc., to spread the word on Citizen Advocacy. Our hope is that this will not only help in the recruitment of more advocates, but will make us more visible in the communities of Colorado. We also have a legal advocacy branch that we work with very closely.
Purpose:
A new Information, Referral and Ombudsman service to developmentally disabled individuals and their families in the Greater New Haven area. This IRO service aims at finding and using effectively all of the community resources which can be helpful in meeting the wide variety of requests, problems and needs of those who come to us.

Current advocacy activities:
IRO program and its Advisory Council are currently involved in researching areas of special interest to their consumer clientele. These areas include transportation, baby sitting, recreation, legislation, parent/consumer advocacy contact group, speaker's bureau, newsletter. The IRO Program has also involved itself in a coalition on the Community and Development Act funding. We have projects focusing on the need for adult recreation services, Community Public Awareness Day at IRO Service, and the unmet needs of the developmentally disabled in the Greater New Haven area.

HAWAII

Child Advocacy Committee
Mental Health Association of Hawaii
200 North Vineyard Blvd., Suite 101
Honolulu, Hawaii 96817

Contact Person: Carol Eblen

Telephone: 808/521-1846

Purpose:
To advocate for the mental health needs of children and youth in our communities. Through social action (i.e., legislation) we work for improved diagnostic and treatment services and for programs aimed at preventing emotional problems in children and youth.

Current advocacy activities:
- We researched and documented the need for children's mental health services.
- We sponsored a legislative bill which became law in 1974 mandating the delivery of preventive, treatment and rehabilitative services for children and youth in Hawaii.
- The state hired 6 or 7 children's mental health team workers (social workers, psychologists, psychiatrists, educational therapist, etc.) to be appended to the already existing Community Mental Health Centers throughout the state. (Total of 60 persons were hired in 1975)
- We are setting up a monitoring system to evaluate delivery of services to children.
- We are servicing community advocate committees to insure that MHC's respond to the needs of the children in each area.
Social Advocacy Department
United Charities of Chicago
64 E. Jackson Blvd. 7th Floor
Chicago, Illinois 60604
Telephone: 312/939-5930
ext. 214

Contact Person: John D. Purdy

Purpose:
A service designed to improve life conditions of people and especially families. Its purpose is to see to it that systems and institutions which affect families work for and, where possible, with those families --- not against them. Program emphasis is on humanizing and making more effective the contacts of people with institutions -- both public and private -- and the framework within which institutions serve people.

Current advocacy activities:
Currently our committee and staff are relating in several ways at various levels to the Illinois Department of Public Aid. Since the function or malfunction of this system has great impact upon a large number of our clients, activities range from challenges by our Legal Aid Bureau where regulations are not upheld, to the providing of systems experts for intake design. Also working on public education and health.
Purpose:
The development and promotion of solutions to meet the needs of children are the basis for the workload of the Commission. This is carried on through special project committees and consultation and preparation of materials for persons in policy-making responsibilities. A unique feature of the Commission on Children has been and continues to be that working committees of the Commission not only have responsibility for the fact finding and determination of the scope of the problem, but the responsibility for helping to bring about the implementation of the solutions they develop.

Current advocacy activities:
Rights of minors, deinstitutionalization of children when necessary, diversion from court proceedings when unnecessary, limitations on detention, right to treatment when custody removed, appropriate educational services, protection from exploitation in child labor, interrelationship of preventive services to remedial services, duties of State Administration for delivery of services as opposed to authorizations or authority to do so but no mandate, comprehensive planning as opposed to fragmented planning.

Sub-Committee on Placement and Protective Services
Community Survey, Inc.
505 East First Street
Des Moines, Iowa 50309

Contact Person: Senator Philip B. Hill and Helen McDonald, Co-chairpersons

Purpose:
To develop plans and proposals and to seek community action through volunteer, citizens committee acting in response to recommendations for improved adoption, foster care, group home, institutional and protective services contained in a comprehensive survey of social, health and recreation needs and services in Greater Des Moines.

Current advocacy activities:
Activity stems from a preliminary report issued in June, 1974, that proposes fundamental community policy calling for a planned division of responsibility between public and private service sectors and between the state welfare department and the county juvenile court. Individual proposals provide concrete examples of policy recommendations. Included are recommendations for improved data systems to improve administration, planning and overall accountability. Proposals also see a centralized case management function to assure consistency and continuity in care and to establish clear accountability for services rendered to children whose cases become the responsibility of various jurisdictions.
The Advocacy Project for Exceptional Children is an initiative that aims to test the effectiveness of citizens, with staff support, as advocates for exceptional children working on a coordinated basis through governmental structures at the state and regional level. The purpose is to provide citizens an opportunity to work together in defining needs and working toward implementation of recommendations.

Current advocacy activities:
At state level, current activities include the development of supportive staffing to coalitions of voluntary and professional organizations; informing citizens of and facilitating participation in the development of legislation, and implementing regulations. A provision of mechanism for citizens to define concerns, research issues, communicate concerns to appropriate officials, and implement recommendations. Specific issues include Teacher training, funding of special education, right to appropriate educational programs, lead poisoning, guardianship, transportation, architectural barriers. District level also includes staffing of steering committees with more emphasis on interagency linkages. Issues/activities include parent education, public awareness, demonstration screening program, recreational opportunities, local utilization of resources for education of exceptional children.

Purpose:
To advise the Citizen's Commission for Human Resources, the Secretary for Human Resources and other officials of Commonwealth on policy matters relating to the development and delivery of services to children from birth to 18 years of age and the developmentally disabled of all ages. Institute will also facilitate regular and meaningful communication between citizens and state officials.

Current advocacy activities:
Immediate priorities are: (1) establishment of a comprehensive program for early detection of children's health and development problems; (2) development of master plan for provision of preventive and treatment services to children with emotional problems.

Institute has established following Task Groups and Committees to carry out its activities: Early Childhood Development; Children with Emotional Problems; Juvenile Delinquency; Early Detection; Advocacy for Exceptional Children; Developmental Disabilities Council; and Review and Evaluation.

MINNESOTA

Family and Children's Service
414 Eighth Street
Minneapolis, Minnesota 55404 Telephone: 612/340-7444

Contact Person: Jerri Sudderth/Alta Quello/Earl Beatt

Purpose:
A professional service designed to improve life conditions for families by harnessing direct and expert knowledge of family and children's needs with a commitment to action and application of skills to produce necessary community change.

Current advocacy activities:
Family and Children's Service has developed an advocacy program which has a unique component, that of hiring minority professionals to work with minority communities. In particular, the agency has a Native American MSW whose primary responsibility is working with the Native American community. One of his concerns is making appropriate counseling services available to Native American families, either through this or other agencies.

Two functions of the Advocacy Unit particularly relevant to Child Advocacy:

1. Community Organization
   Work with community organizations and agencies, developing and facilitating the implementation of programs to meet unmet needs. Examples of two projects:
   - With the Family Life Education Unit, developing a pilot program of self-awareness for Black teenage girls in a local street academy.
   - With a coalition of groups concerned about chemical dependency, developing a group program for pre-teens whose parents are chemically dependent.

2. Advocacy Issues
   Attempting to bring about positive changes in those dysfunctional institutions, systems, and attitudes which negatively affect families. For example, with a local welfare rights organization, working to establish an on-going awareness program for financial assistance workers in the welfare department to help them in dealing with AFDC recipients.

Current advocacy activities:
- Provide emergency and start up funding for youth serving agencies
- Provide assistance in fund raising, program development, financial management, and physical property
- Publish a directory of youth agencies and a newsletter for youth agencies
- Sponsor legislative intern to monitor youth related legislation
- Special projects: Girl Programming, Youth on Boards

The City Inc. - Legal Project
The City Inc.
1536 E. Lake Street
Minneapolis, Minnesota 55407
Telephone: 612/724-2117

Contact Person: David Nasby

Purpose:
To provide advocacy and support for youth from this neighborhood in the process of adjudication.

Current advocacy activities:
Through a program of "peer advocacy" the entire peer group begins to assume responsibility for the development of positive behavior patterns in one of its members and as a result there is conscious examination of behavior alternatives. Maintains a liaison with probation officers, parole officers, police and numerous community resources for chemical treatment. Maintains a prison visitation program for friends and relatives of inmates in state institutions. This has been implemented with the belief that inmates must maintain relationship with family members as an essential ingredient for successful return to the community.

Great Falls, Montana 59401
Telephone: 406/761-6538

Contact Person: Larry Burton

Purpose:
To initiate positive changes in local community's attitudes concerning mental retardation. Harnessing the massive local volunteer power yet to be utilized will enhance the community's acceptance and its sense of responsibility for the mentally retarded individuals currently residing in Great Falls, Montana.

Current advocacy activities:
Our local program is presently a part of the Easter Seal Adult Training Center. To avoid any conflict of interest from our alliance with a service delivery agency, the program will "spin off" on its own on July 1, 1975. When appropriate funding is found, the program will expand to encompass the North Central Region of Montana. One year later, the program will be state-wide. Funding and construction of materials, structures, and public communication strategies are our present activities.

Family Advocacy
Sunbeam Family Services
616 NW 21st
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 73103
Contact Person: Suzanna Rider
Telephone: 405/528-7721

Purpose:
Family Advocacy is designed to improve life conditions for people, particularly poor people. It is based on the day-to-day work with troubled families whose ability to function is hindered by inadequacies of institutional systems of welfare, housing, health, education and employment. A part of this is to promote legislation to improve the general well being of individuals, families and the community.

Current advocacy activities:
The primary emphases at this point are legislation, health care, and welfare. This agency has actively supported legislation dealing with minors health services, social work licensing, pharmaceuticals, and child welfare concerns. Successful work has been done with local health departments to provide free immunizations to all children in day care at the day care center locations. Involved in coalition, this agency has sought to speed up emergency food stamp orders and to educate the community as to possible eligibility for food stamps. In addition to work on issues, work with the local welfare office is done frequently on a case basis, seeking specific services for specific individuals.

PENNSYLVANIA

Family Advocacy
Family and Children's Service
630 Janet Avenue
Lancaster, Pennsylvania 17601

Contact Person: Eleanor Taylor
Telephone: 717/397-5241

Purpose:
Advocacy is a service of this agency whose goal is to fulfill human potential by improving life conditions of people. Arising primarily from case experience of unmet needs, advocacy moves from case to cause, to change dysfunctional community institutions and systems to insure that they work for people, rather than against them.

Current advocacy activities:
Class issues arising from a diverse caseload are chosen for study-action. Current study-action teams are working on the establishment of a prescriptive learning center for underachievers (those who are of low I.Q. but test too high for special education classes, those who are turned off from school, etc.); advocating for adequate funding locally for day care. We are also doing a study of whether our agency is, in fact, meeting the needs of men, women and children "in transition." (divorced or separated)

For Research on Education and Human Development:
Institute on Youth and Social Development
Campus Box 43, Peabody College
Nashville, Tennessee 37203
Telephone: 615/327-8290

Contact Person: Dr. Floyd Dennis

Purpose:
To work with local child service systems in an effort to identify the unfulfilled needs of children in the county and to procure the satisfaction of those needs by increasing the knowledge and understanding of child development by parents, families, civic organizations and agencies in a manner similar to that used by County Agricultural Agents.

Current advocacy activities:
County Agents are involved in a program of dissemination of information regarding child development via radio spots, talk shows, news articles, literature racks, and public addresses. They are serving as catalysts in seeing that children with special needs are served by the appropriate child service systems in the community. And they are charged with the responsibility of developing a one-to-one citizen advocate volunteer program for children with unmet needs in the county. Emphasis is given to helping local communities develop appropriate programs to serve handicapped and mentally retarded children who are either not receiving services or having to leave the community for services.
Purpose:
To identify unmet needs of children and to initiate and/or support action, including legislation, to change and improve institutions and agencies and their services or policies, or to initiate new programs and services in order that children's rights be guaranteed (as stated in the children's bill of rights).

Current advocacy activities:

Governor's Committee on Children and Youth
Agency of Human Services
79 River Street
Montpelier, Vermont 05602

Contact Person: Sally Smith

Telephone: 802/828-2816

Purpose:
§458. Creation and purpose -
The Committee shall serve to identify problems, needs and opportunities for children and youth in the state of Vermont. It shall be an advisory body to promote the creation and extension of new and continuing programs and services for children and youth in both the public and private sectors of Vermont Life.

Current advocacy activities:
GCCY's legislative mandate covers ten areas of activities (planning, advisory, studying problems, publicizing, etc.), which give great latitude to its endeavors. This fact, combined with limited staff capability, makes it imperative that the Committee tightly focus its goals and activities. In the past year it has distributed state-wide a pamphlet on Vermont's Child Abuse Reporting Law, participated in drafting a students' rights manual, studied problems at Vermont's juvenile correctional facility (with recommendations), analyzed state budgetary needs for children, and produced legislative recommendations regarding Family Courts, corporal punishment, and child abuse.
