This basic Olof course consists of a series of dialogues with drills, questions and improvised situations based on the real life experiences of Peace Corps volunteers in the Gambia. The teaching method is structured around choral repetition, backward build-up for difficult sequences, individual repetition, precise explanations of vocabulary, and dictation. There are some grammatical explanations, although the major emphasis is on proficiency in oral communication. Substitution, transformation, and expansion drills follow the dictation. Students are also required to improvise situations in which they create their own dialogues and make the best use of their vocabulary. There is a concerted attempt to integrate language and cultural factors in each lesson, and this is to be reinforced by role-playing activities and field trips. The basic objectives of the course include an understanding of Gambian culture and effective use of language in accomplishing basic daily living tasks.

LANGUAGE

The language lessons are composed of dialogues with drills, questions, and improvised situations all based on the real life experiences of Peace Corps Volunteers in The Gambia. There is emphasis on the oral since it is the direct method we are using, but there are some grammatical explanations in special circumstances, although most of the grammar method is avoided. We also avoid giving rules with so many exceptions. There is some writing involved, and each student should have a pen and notebook.

A Guide to the Dialogue

I. Method:

The teacher reads each dialogue first and the students listen carefully. The first time this is done, the students won't know exactly what the teacher is talking about, but they would have a general idea of what Olof sounds like compared with their own languages. They should be prepared for the unfamiliar sounds, e.g.: "nga", "nagne", etc.

a. Choral repetition:

At the beginning of each dialogue, the teacher should go through the sentences at least one time (more than once if time is available) with choral repetition. The teacher says the sentence or phrase and the entire group repeats after him in chorus. This process is repeated right through the dialogue.

b. Backward build-up:

In certain cases, a sentence might be too long for normal repetition, in which case it has to be broken down to make it easier for the students to repeat and assimilate. Backward build-up is also used for long sentences in which the final words may be lost by trying regular choral repetition. The teacher starts from the end of the sentence and goes backwards to the beginning with students repeating after each addition. Example:

\[\text{Ndakh doh nyow sugne kerr nyu agne,} \begin{align*} &\text{nyu agne (1)} \\
&\text{sugne kerr (2)} \\
&\text{sugne kerr nyu agne (1+2)} \\
&\text{doh nyow (3)} \\
&\text{doh nyow sugne kerr nyu agne (1+2+3)} \\
&\text{Ndakh (4)} \\
&\text{Ndakh doh nyow sugne kerr nyu agne. (1+2+3+4)}
\end{align*}\]
This is only done when and where necessary for better pronunciation, intonation, and rhythm (P.I.R.). Choral repetition helps in getting everybody to participate in repeating the sentences and in getting the rhythm and should be used often.

c. Individual repetition:
After choral repetition, the teacher has the students repeat individually to find out who has not been following during the choral repetition. This is the time for individual help for better P.I.R., and a chance to test the pronunciation of each student.

d. Movements:
The teacher should move around instead of standing in one place during the lesson. Three major points where the teacher must stand are the middle, the extreme right, and the extreme left. In this way, the teacher can be at one end of the classroom and direct his questions to students at the opposite end. Students must not be questioned in the order they are sitting. For example, if the teacher starts from the right, by the time he reaches the left, the last student would probably be relaxing since he would know that he wouldn't be called on for a while. To avoid this, the teacher must ask questions at random while moving around to make the students alert and the class lively.

e. Rewards:
It is better to encourage your students rather than discourage them. The teacher should give frequent and varied encouraging words to the students for correct responses. If the teacher merely says "good" after every correct repetition, then the word will lose its meaning. However, different positive encouragements such as non-verbal communication (smiling, gestures, intonation, noises made by the tongue, etc.) would be very effective.

f. Global explanations:
At this point, the students have been merely parroting sounds. They can say quite a few phrases correctly, but do not know what they mean, and wouldn't know what the dialogue was about. This is when a global explanation can be used effectively to give students a general idea of what the dialogue is about. This way, they will know who is speaking to whom and about what in a general sense.

g. Precise explanations:
This is necessary for the students to understand the meanings of individual words used in the dialogue. This way, they may have notions of the grammar and structure of both phrases and sentences. Some methods the teacher can use in the explanation are:

- actions, situations
- gestures
- facial expressions
- objects
- comparison of objects
- intonation
- images: drawings, photos, carvings, etc.
- environment (e.g. sunshine)
- translation

During the precise explanation there should be some repetitions for further practice. The process should be as follows:

- repetition of the whole phrase
- fragmentation: isolate the elements
- repetition of fragments
- explanation through the context
- explanation outside the context
- creation: the use of original words
- back to the context
- repetition of the whole phrase

h. Dictation:

"Having had enough repetitions, the students now should be able to say all the sentences of the dialogue. They should also know the meaning of all the words used. The teacher then dictates the dialogue, reading slowly and pronouncing the words distinctly, and the students take them down, spelling the words exactly as they hear them. The students should learn the dialogue before going on to the next one.

II. Drills

At this stage, the students should know a reasonable number of words, phrases and sentences. It is then the duty of the teacher to help them expand their knowledge by constructing new sentences with the limited vocabulary they have. This is done in the form of drills, e.g. substitution, transformation, and expansion drills.

a. Substitution drills:

The teacher takes model sentences or phrases from the main dialogue which the students know by now. Then he suggests words or phrases to be substituted in the original sentence or phrase. This process is done right through the sentences of the dialogue, especially with the difficult ones. Example:

Makh doh nyow sugne kerr nyu agne? Teacher: "reerr"
Student: Makh doh nyow sugne kerr nyu rerr? " : "mioo"
" : Makh doh nyow sugne kerr nyu mioo? " : "leka"
b. Double substitution:
This is a little more difficult, but should be done to test the understanding of the students. Words or phrases are given by the teacher, and the students must substitute them in the right place which varies each time. The ability to do this shows that the student acquired some knowledge of sentence construction. Example:

Student: Ndakh doh nyow sugne kerr nyu leka? Teacher: "naan"
" Ndakh doh nyow sugne kerr nyu naen? etc.

Teacher: "P nyO surne kerr nyu rerr?"
Student: "Ndakh doh nyow sugne kerr nyu rerr?" " "Hanaa"
" Hanaa doh nyow sugne kerr nyu rerr? etc.

Transformation:
Here the teacher gives a model sentence and the students try to say the same thing in other words. Example:

Teacher: Kan mo la jangal Olof?
Student: Ku la jangal Olof?
Teacher: Kan mo la jangal angaleh?
Student: Ku la jangal angaleh, etc.

d. Expansion:
By this time the students should know quite a few words, phrases, and sentences and can expand a given sentence by adding words or phrases given by the teacher. Example:

Doh neka suma harit? Teacher: "maneh"
Student: "Maneh do neka suma harit?" " "Waye"
" Maneh do neka suma harit waye? etc.

Note: Gestures should be used throughout the drill because they help the teacher to know whether the students know what they are talking about.

III. Questions:
There are a number of questions at the end of each dialogue for the students to answer. These are to test the students' understanding of the dialogue.

IV. Situations:
There are improvised situations during which the students create their own dialogues making best use of their vocabulary. All the students should take part in this exercise.
V. Pronunciations:

a. Vowels:
A as in father
O as in naught
E as in rate
U as in food
I as in thin

NB: The length of the vowel sound is shown by doubling the vowel. Example:

David la tuda
David laa tuda
Sa nyaw bi dafa nyaw, etc.

b. Diphthongs:
AI as in why
OI as in boy
EI as in ray

c. Consonants:
R C
D F
G H
M N
K V
W Y

d. Special sounds:
Wollof has special sounds that most foreigners find extremely difficult to make. They are:

nga as in longer
gne or nje as in Sonia kh as in echhh! (reaction to something distasteful in Am. eng.)
ch as in chapter

Show the movement of the tongue in making this particularly difficult sound: "gne" or "nje" as in "nyun" or "nagne dem". To make these sounds, the tip of the tongue is placed at the back of the front teeth as when pronouncing the word "nine", then the tip of the tongue is removed from that position as the middle part of the tongue is placed against the palate.
CROSS-CULTURE

Language is an integral part of a culture. It is often attempted to separate them in training programs for the sake of scheduling. Here we try to integrate the two as much as possible. For every dialogue there is a cultural introduction which could be discussed. The following exercises are for "cross-cultural training".

I. Role Plays:

These are short plays by trainees and/or trainers through which a certain aspect of the culture is enforced. Role plays are most effective when trainees participate in them for situational reinforcement.

For example, a typical cultural situation would be enacted by people who understand the Gambian culture. The rest of the group would observe the proceedings and state: (a) things about the role play they liked, (b) things they disliked, and (c) things they observed and didn't understand. Next, the role play would be re-enacted, and the "actors" would be replaced one by one until they are all trainees. Finally, a discussion is held in which all aspects of the role play are covered with the aim of understanding the cultural situation represented by the role play.

II. Field Trips (Sorties):

Sorties vary from the initial discovery of a new milieu working as a group, to an individual job-related trip, live-ins, visits to institutions, etc. Sorties are most effective when trainees have specific objectives to work on. Maps are issued when necessary. The following is an example of a sortie developed by the R.T.R.O. in Senegal.

Sortie no. 1

Culture shock, feeling lost, no familiar cues - these are expressions usually associated with being in a foreign country (foreign in the sense of unfamiliar). As you explore and learn to read the signs, you may find that things are not as different as you expected, or you may find that some things are quite different after all. In order to find out, though, one thing is sure - you have to be there, and you have to use your own experience and perception.
Objectives of this sortie:

1. to discover the new milieu - working as a group to locate some of the services and things we need to satisfy our basic security needs.
2. to learn how to orient oneself.
3. to observe basic greetings — where, how, how often ...
4. to observe appearances.

Procedure

1. Working with your staff, decide as a group on some of the things you would like to locate to make you feel more comfortable in Banjul.

2. Put these things or services in a list according to your priorities and working with your guide, decide which things can be found in the immediate neighbourhood.

3. Using local transport, or walking if possible, in the company of your language teacher, locate and visit as many of the places or things mentioned in your list as possible.

4. Bring back as much of the following information as possible:
   a. how to get there — location, transportation
   b. if you purchased anything — how much did the article cost?
   c. how was your experience in finding this service or thing different from the same situation in the States — or was it the same?

5. Observe and describe the appearance of the people you see and meet:
   a. can you identify the person's function based on his appearance?

6. Comment on the greetings you observed; are they the same or different from U.S. greetings?

7. Note the things that raise questions in your mind and that you would like answers to.

8. Make a list of the new words and expressions you heard or learned during the sortie.

The following is a typical list of things or services prepared by a group of trainees:

Sortie no. 1: 1. Transportation — how to get around, maps of the city
               2. Stamps — post office, writing paper, envelopes
3. Food stores, market - cokes, cigarettes, beer
4. Reading materials - books, phrase books, American newspaper, magazines
5. Drugs - chemist
6. Film - photo stores, developing
7. Bars, cafes, restaurants
8. Bargaining or set prices
9. Clothes, shoes, etc.

* Items that could be found in the immediate neighbourhood.

This resulted in a sortie to:
1. Post Office
2. Supermarket, small boutique, African market
3. News stand
4. Drug store

Other items were covered in a subsequent sortie.

III. Critical Incidents:

These are cultural experiences from a volunteer's point of view clearly demonstrating the difference between two cultures in a brief anecdote. They are read and discussed by the group (trainee/trainer). The following are examples:

1. I had a teacher who was particularly resistant to science as a subject. She avoided it as much as possible prior to my arrival, and was very resentful of me as a science teacher. I think much of this was out of fear of failure. I praised her every effort and pretended not to be aware of her failings. She has become a very enthusiastic science teacher and she is like a child when discovering new things.

2. Upon my arrival at my job as teacher, I found a dilapidated school with buildings which needed repair. Perfectly good equipment was unused, and the staff, and needed and wanted help. For two weeks, I investigated all aspects of the situation; poking into every nook and asking a thousand questions, and listing everything that needed to be repaired, replaced, cleaned, or altered. I knew the staff wouldn't be much help, so I was personally able to solve most of them.
IV. Discrepant events:

These are similar to critical incidents except that they may not be "critical", but reflect purely a difference in culture. For example:

a. I was on my way to a new village. Every time I would come to a fork in the road, I would ask in perfect Creole, "Is this the right road?", and they would always say yes. I got incredibly lost, was running out of gas and gave up and went back home.

Why didn't I get the right directions?

V. Force field analysis:

This is a brainstorming of a goal, stating cultural forces for and against, and means of achieving the goal. For example:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>FORCE FIELD ANALYSIS</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>What are the factors that can help or hinder me in achieving the following goal?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;I want to be fully accepted by my village as a native Gambian.&quot;</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Forces for:</th>
<th>Forces against:</th>
</tr>
</thead>

DIALOGUE BENNA

Greetings

Introduction

"Salamalekum" is the key word to any social and/or business dealings with Gambians. "Salamalekum" (Arabic) means "Peace be on you", and the appropriate response "Malekum Salaam" "may peace return to you".

Islam lays emphasis on greetings and about 90% of the Gambian population, being Muslims, are influenced by Islam.

This initial exchange of greetings is used by all tribes including the non-Muslims. The intonation might sound slightly different from tribe to tribe. The exchange of greetings often goes with handshakes especially among men. It has been practiced among men and women because of outside influences and is now common among most people in the Banjul area. Another common gesture is the putting of hands on the chest after the handshake. This is a sign of respect especially to elders.

Different gestures can be used when greeting including shaking hands, waving, cupping hands together, etc., and may last very long among people that have not seen each other for a long time.

Without greeting people, one can hardly accomplish anything so I can hardly over-emphasise the importance of greetings in this culture.

Note: In exchanging greetings with someone you are meeting for the first time, questions like "Fan nga joge?" are asked for information.
to use in greetings. Another possible question would be "Naka nga Santa" for the 'last name' because it is used a lot in greeting. "Tubaab" was originally used for people from "Tougal" (France) who were white men. Through generations, the word has been used by many people and now has about seven different meanings as follows:

1. White man
2. Educated person
3. Someone in Western dress and/or Western behavior
4. Language (Tuwado language)
5. An immediate boss in an office
6. European
7. Rich person

Introduction

Foreigners with Gambian names, especially tubaabs, seem funny to Gambians. Namesakes, family relationships and clan relationships often indicated by the last names makes someone accepted within the family and/or clan irrespective of color, race or citizenship.

Jokes are common between certain families, e.g. the N'Jie's call the Joof's their slaves, etc. If as a foreigner one happens to get the last name "Joof" a N'Jie can call you a slave of his. Another common joke is "Joof's eat too much one can hardly get enough food for them". The response to these statements is often reciprocating with a similar joke.

Introduction

Taxis in The Gambia have yellow number plates. Taxis within the city of Banjul are mostly Renaults taxis, three passengers each paying 12 bututs to any place within the city. Seven-passenger Peugeot taxis and minibuses are used for long journeys upriver.

The counting system in Wolof is base five. Since The Gambia changed over to decimal currency, most people have continued using shillings and pence, especially in the markets and shops. You will therefore hear people use shillings and pence, but insist on dalasis and bututs as it is easier to bargain in.

Butut (Wolof) means "the small one" and Burai "the old one", which is two bututs.

Dalasi ('andinka) "100 bututs" is equal to four shillings in the old currency.

Likely old currency to be used and its equivalent:

- Burai: D0.02
- Nyataa: D0.06
- Tanka: D0.12
- Taransu: D0.25
- Tualibarr: D0.50
- Taransu ar Tanka: D0.75

O: SITUATION

An American takes a taxi, greets the passengers and finally asks for the fare. A woman nearby wants to hear him speak Wolof and asks him questions:

Naka nga tuda?
Fan nga jogeh?
Dega nga Olof?
Am nga turi Olof? etc.

P: EXERCISES

1. What is "tanka tanka"?
2. Do the "open page" exercise using a big book

   Example: Bob (in Wolof) Open page 187
            - rest of class try to open the page
            - Bob asks students to read to see if they opened the page.
The most interesting part of the Wolof culture is bargaining. Outsiders not used to bargaining find it boring and a waste of time. "Why not fix a price?" one of them said. "Then the necessary human relations are lost" replied a Gambian.

Almost everything is bargained for. Only in supermarkets and some big stores are there fixed prices, and even in these places some people attempt to bargain and are at times successful.

In bargaining, the more information you give to the vendor about yourself, e.g. name, nationality, reason for buying the object, etc. the more likely he will give you a better price. Another technique is to pretend to walk away after being told the first price. (The gesture means that the price is so exorbitant that I don't have to waste time bargaining for it) In most cases you are called back and a better price often follows.

"Nyaata nga am" (how much do you have) is a common question in bargaining. The vendor in this case wants to know how much you can offer and not how much money you have.

J. CROSS-CULTURAL EXPERIENCES

Read and discuss the following cross-cultural experiences:

I went to the Banjul market to buy grapefruit from my favorite vegetable vendor. Another man was there buying grapefruit, and when my turn came the vendor tried to overcharge me. This irritated me as I had bought grapefruit from him before at a lower price, but my arguments went for naught. Finally, because I really wanted grapefruit, I bought a few and walked away angrily. I had walked about 10 yards when the vendor came running up with several more grapefruit, apologizing profusely. He told me that he had just overcharged the man in front of me and as long as the other man was in hearing distance, he could not give me a lower price. He then gave me the extra grapefruit.

I went back to the same vendor and found another PCV there buying tomatoes. The PCV asked the price and the vendor gave him a high price. I looked at me anxiously, and I looked away and said nothing. After the volunteer had paid the high price and left, I paid the correct price for my tomatoes and left.

My wife and I went to Brikama to buy strip cloth. We argued with one storekeeper until we agreed upon a price. Thinking he might lower his price even more, we told him that we would like to look some more, but would return. When we returned, he was no longer there. The regular shopkeeper, who happened to be the real owner, had returned. He told him about the price we had agreed upon, but he said it was too small. I was angry about this since I had come to an agreement with the other man, so we left. The owner then sent another boy to call me back. The boy then offered me a chair, and using interpreters, we each explained our positions and began bargaining again. We finally agreed on a price. I offered the owner a cigarette at one time, and even though he did not accept it, he was very impressed.
When I arrived in The Gambia I decided I needed a pair of thongs (rubber sandals), but I really did not feel like taking a taxi to Banjul because it was so hot, and I wanted to go swimming instead. So naturally I was very happy to have a boy "just drop by" and offer to go and get them for me. Not yet fully understanding the value of Gambian currency, I handed my "friend" five dalasis, as did my roommate who also needed some thongs. When he returned some time later with the thongs (which, by the way, were not the sizes requested) we asked for the change. His reply was "Oh, those cost a lot of money, and besides, I had to pay for a taxi".
Introduction

The rigidity in observance of strict discipline at mealtimes is rapidly giving way to more flexible situations. Parents today are not as strict in the observance of too many restrictions at meals as before. This is partly because parents today are younger than before, and because of outside influence.

Today things have changed tremendously. Children enjoy liberty at meals and parents are far less rigid.

In the past, at the beginning of meals, each child under the age of maturity (generally under 15 years of age) was given some meat or fish instead of being left to take it from the bowl as the elders did. Also, children of this age held the bowl with their left hands to prevent it from rocking.

Eating with the left hand is considered evil. The main reasons for this are because of Islam's objection to the use of the left hand and it is used with water as "toilet paper".

Never refuse food! At least taste it even when you are not hungry.

Note: In Wolof, obvious questions like "are you eating?" when you see someone eating are asked for politeness and not for information. Another common question is "Wacha nga?" as in the above dialogue. It is considered impolite to walk past someone you know without telling him something, or acknowledging his presence. If you have nothing to tell him, ask him if he is doing whatever he is doing, e.g. "Are you sitting?, standing?, etc."

Introduction

Banjul is the capital and only city in The Gambia. When the Portuguese first came to The Gambia, they met some Mandingoes on this island (Banjul) and asked them the name of the place. Thinking they were asked what they were doing, the Mandingoes said they were looking for "Bang julo" (bamboo ropes). The Portuguese had this down as the name of the place.

This island today is inhabited by 40,000 people. It is the main commercial and administrative area in the country.

There are two local divisions: "Halfdie" and "Soldier Town". In the first division, half the people died of some disease and in the latter, soldiers camped during the First World War. This is how their names came to be. But, presently, there are three political divisions: Banjul North, South and Central.

1. Play a hide and seek game.
2. Organise a treasure hunt.
In rural areas, houses are generally round or square huts. They are made either of mud, reeds or millet stalks. The roof is conical and thatched with grass or rhun palm leaves. Most houses have two doors and a couple of windows.

In the towns and most villages now, houses are a different style. They are made either of mud bricks or cement bricks and have a verandah and at least two main rooms; the bedroom and the sitting room. The roofs are made of corrugated sheeting.

Furniture generally consists of beds, stools, chairs with cushions, and a deck-chair for the old men. Cupboards and/or sideboards are also widely used on which a collection of glasses and enamel pots and basins are displayed. Curtains are hung at the windows and doors.

Rentage is common in the urban areas of Banjul and its environs, but is gradually spreading up-country as up to date houses are being built. Cost of rentage varies from house to house depending upon the number of rooms and fixtures/appliances in the house. Generally it ranges from D10.00 to a maximum of D100.00.

Houses are always furnished by the occupants and not the owners.

The landlord-tenant relationship is often strong and friendly, but difference in culture often destroys this relationship.

G. SITUATION

Describe your house to the rest of the class giving color, size, kinds of rooms.
Introduction

In The Gambia almost all people are related because of the extended family system. People of different families living in the same compound for a long time often end up calling one another brother and sister. People with the same last name can find out if they are related by tracing back to their grandparents. Families can trace their grandparents through their last name (santa). Also, most people name their children after great-grandparents, grandparents, and even parents.

The traditional nuclear family consists of the following:

- mamat = great-grandparents
- mam = grandparents
- bai = father
- yai (máai) = mother
- raka = sibling
- mag = elder

Note: "Bu ndau" (small), and "bu mag" (elder or big), are added to the appropriate term to indicate younger and elder brothers, sisters, father, etc. Also, "bu gorr" (male), and "bu jigeen" (female), are used to distinguish the sex. For example: "Nagbu gorr" (elder brother), "raka bu jigeen" (younger sister).

The extended family includes the following:

- bájen = father's sister
- ni jai = mother's brother
  note: father's brother is called "small father".
- seiit = grandchild
- jarbaat = brother's or sister's child
- yumagne = mother's brother's wife
- jekerr = husband
- jabarr = wife
- wuja = co-wife
- goro = in-law

People often say "We are of one father and one mother" to indicate that they are real brothers in the Western sense. "Máii", "bai", and "mam" are used in addressing elders of the same age as one's parents. "Pa" from the word "papa", is commonly used now because of Western influence. One hardly calls elders by their names - "ya" or "pa" are always used before the names, e.g. "ya Fatou" or "pa Momodou". People named after their grandparents are called Pap/Máii by their family.

Momodou: Mustapha la tua.
Bob: Nyowon na fi deimba.

Note: "Mboka" (noun) is the word for "relative". "Boka" (verb) is "to be related". In order to indicate whether it is the maternal or paternal line, "i" is added to the noun and "a" dropped, e.g. my father's relative: "suma mboki papa"; my mother's relative: "suma mboki yai".

   Make a family tree of the extended family system indicating maternal and paternal lines. Use Gambian name.
Introduction

There are two main seasons in The Gambia. The rainy season lasts from June to September. This is the farming season. The dry season is often called "the rest season" for farmers.

Wollof (lunar) months of the year are hardly used by people in the urban area because civil servants are paid by the English months, and most people are more interested in the end of the month than the appearance of the moon. Nevertheless, Wollof months are used to determine religious holidays.

In Wollof, "Pangku" (east), "Kharfu" (west) are common directions used by everyone. "Pengku" is facing the "ka-aba" in Mecca, and "kharfu" is the opposite direction. The other two directions depend on the location of the individual. If the sea is in the north, you say "Bot Dekh" ("bot" - eye, "dekh" - sea) for north. If land is in the south, you say "Bot jeiry" ("jwiry" - land). Other prominent landmarks are used instead of land and sea, for example: "Ganarr" (Mauritania) is used in the term "Bot Ganarr" for north.

Groundnut is Gambia's chief cash crop. The growing season begins in May when farmers clear their farms. Then in June, when the first rains come, the farmers sow their seeds. The rest of the rainy season is spent weeding. In early October, farmers begin harvesting. They thrash, winnow, and bag their groundnuts in preparation for the trade season which begins around December. The trade season is the busiest time in The Gambia. There is always a lot of buying and selling between farmers and traders. Some of the groundnut crop is exported to Europe. Some oil is extracted for local consumption and some for exportation.

Introduction

In Banjul, most people have maids who are usually cooks and wash-ladies. Caretakers and gardeners are also hired for their respective functions. One doesn't have to be rich to have a maid. Salaries for maids range from D500 to D5000 depending on the age, amount of work, punctuality, appearance and attitude towards the job.

Most servants don't speak English. Your ability to speak Wolof makes things easier. All arrangements and financial transactions are done verbally. There are no written documents.

J. SITUATIONS

Trainees instruct one another as maids to cook an American dish; to do the laundry; and/or other domestic work.
Introduction

Very observant elders can often tell if someone has had home training in this culture by his physical comportment.

With elders, one is supposed to sit or stand straight with hands controlled; in other words, no fluttering of hands or putting hands in pockets. Also, legs must not be placed high on a table, bed, or chair.

It is a superstition among Wollofs that one must not raise his/her legs when lying down. This will cause an individual to die in a foreign land.

J. SITUATION

Have the students each pray like a muslim but only stating the physical positions instead of reading verses from the Quran.
In the past, clothing typical of The Gambia was the "kulembeng" and the "simbong". Both men and women wore the "kulembeng" which was a two-strip type of skirt about knee length. One strip covered the front and the other the back. On the sides were short strips a quarter of each of the long ones in front and behind. "Simbong", still worn by men today, is a type of trousers just like a pair of shorts but bigger, and is usually knee length.

Arabs brought the Islamic religion which required long dress for both men and women. The men had "kaftans" (long half-gowns), and women had something similar to the dress of the Elizabethan era. Elders, however, still retain this style, having made only a few changes. For head dress, the elderly and middle-aged women used "kala" and "puff". The "puff" looked very much like the present day Afro, but was made of wool. "Kala" is still used by some Catholic elderly women when they have important occasions to celebrate.

As late as the mid-fifties, youths still wore "kulembengs" while elders used "simbong" and frocks and gowns (waramba). Old "simbons" were used when working on the farm. Up to date farmers, especially in the Wolof areas, still have simbons for working on the farm.

European influence brought about changes in the traditional dress. This influence was first noticed in the educated Gambians. Today many Gambians wear European dress, such as shorts, skirts, and pants.

During the last two decades, fashions in dress have undergone a lot of changes, especially on the side of women and youths. For conventional dress, men put on a suit (coat, trousers, shirt, tie, etc.). The Wolof women still retain their pride in putting on big gowns on important occasions. For teenage girls and young women, there are blouses and skirts, mini-, maxi-, and micro-mini skirts, hot pants, "get down", and patches that are presently in fashion. Boys have shorts, pants, "tip" (pants with bell bottoms), get down and also patches.

For every occasion there is a particular type of dress. In all Muslim functions, the gown is very important, especially the white ones. The dress for going to a funeral service is different from that of a wedding only by the additional strip of cloth hung on the shoulder or on the head, and the sorrowful facial expression in the case of a funeral. Widows, during the period of mourning, are either in complete white or complete black with a head tie, frock and pagne.

Those who are just from circumcision also have their own special dress which they put on for about two weeks.

Introduction

Dancing: More than all other Senegambian peoples one finds in the Wolof a marked sense of rhythm which constantly pervades their actions. When pounding, a woman will beat out a rhythm on the mortar with her pestle; a smith blowing the bellows proceeds to play a tune on it; a girl sitting idly begins to tap with her fingers on a nearby basin, and so on.

Dancing normally takes place in the evening at the pencha or dat. The spectators form a ring, with the drummers at one side. A fire is lit nearby at which the covers of the drums are heated from time to time. The sabar player walks about in the ring, the drummers who accompany him remain seated. The women accompany the dancing by clapping. A woman or girl enters the circle, dances for a few moments, and then returns to her place. If she is considered to have performed a particularly good dance, or is a popular girl, the women congratulate her by throwing their headties in the ring, or placing them round her neck, the men by giving her kola nuts or small coins. The dancer should then reward the drummer.

Aristocratic women who do not normally dance may stand in the ring with small coins in their hands to give to the drummer formally and in small amounts at regular intervals. The men may present them with further money to pass on to the drummers.

Wolof dancing is renowned for its lack of grace and the indecent actions and postures adopted by the dancers. Men — those of slave or low-caste status — dance only on special occasions such as circumcision or weddings or when rain and fertility dances are performed. On such occasions particularly lewd dances take place, to the great entertainment of all.

Drumming: Various types of drums (ndenda) are distinguished. The chief types are: (a) junjun — used only to accompany chiefs. Played with a curved stick, one hand only being used. (b) lamba — a drum 70-75 cm high, covered with bullock skin, beaten by the two hands. (c) goron — similar to the lamba, but smaller, 60-65 cm high. The lamba and goron are played for minor chiefs. (d) sabar — a long drum, lm. 72 long, of hollowed-out wood, narrow in the centre, and with one end larger than the other. The end is covered with skin which is held in place by pegs. Hung round the neck of the player on the left side, played with fingers of the left hand, and a stick held in the right hand. (e) tama — an hour-glass shaped drum, 50 cm. long, with cords joining each end. It is held under the left arm, and is played by being struck with the fingers of the left hand, and with a curved stick held in the right hand, pressure on the cords varying the tone. When playing, the drummer generally squats down on his heels.
Tabala - this drum is used for summoning people to prayer on Friday afternoon, at religious festivals, to announce a death, or give a fire alarm. Water drum - consists of a calabash inverted in a large tin basin of water, and beaten with the two hands or two sticks. It is used only by women. Usually played when a girl is having her lips tattooed.

Lamba and sabar are used for wrestling matches and circumcision dances. Alarms - niin - notice of invasions, etc. were given by a combination of the jurjur, lamba, and koron. Jurjur, tana, lamba, and koron were played for royal festivals.

Singing: Singing and drumming are employed in co-operative working groups setting the pace of the work, and providing distraction from the dust and the heat. On some evenings the girls hold sessions of singing, accompanied by drumming, but without dancing. The songs are led by the chief drummer (sabarkat), the girls joining in the chorus. Children have numerous rhy songs, little songs form part of children's stories; while mothers and girls sing lullabies for their babies. Examples of these can be found in Peart.

Other musical instruments: Instruments used by the Wolof include guitars (halam), and flutes made by boys from millet stalks. As they are living in close association with the Fulbe they are also familiar with the one stringed fiddle (riti) and with instruments played by wandering players from other tribes - the bolombato, a guitar with a skin-covered calabash as a sound box, played by the Tilibonko; the xylophone (balo) played by Mandinka and Susu; the musical bow played by Jola and Futa Toro Fulbe.
