I. INTRODUCTION

This manual is designed to aid social workers and other staff of institutions in dealing with the problems of Social Security beneficiaries who receive their benefits through representative payees. The proper use of these funds is necessary to insure that institution residents receive every possible advantage that they are entitled to.

This manual contains information about the different types of benefits available to residents of institutions and proper use of the benefits by representative payees. In addition, it contains advice on how to deal with "outside" representative payees who may appear to be misusing benefits and with the procedures established by the Social Security Administration (SSA) in such cases.

II. SSA AND SSI BENEFITS

A. What is a disability?

A disabled person is someone who has a severe mental or physical condition which (1) prevents him from working and (2) is expected to last at least twelve months, or is expected to result in death.

B. SSA benefits

Persons over 18 years of age who became disabled before the age of 22 are eligible for SSA Dependent Disabled Child benefits on the account of either of their parents. Also eligible for these benefits are: (1) disabled children under age 18 of disabled or retired workers who are themselves collecting SSA benefits, and (2) disabled children of a deceased wage earner, regardless of the age of the deceased parent or the surviving child. Finally, a working person who becomes disabled before he reaches age 65 is eligible for disability benefits on his own account.

C. Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits

A second type of benefit is available to disabled individuals who are not eligible for SSA benefits. SSI benefits assure a basic cash income for persons who have little or no regular cash income of their own, who have few other financial resources, and who are either blind, aged, or disabled. The amount of the benefit for institutionalized persons is often less than what the person would be eligible for if he lived outside an institution. The type of institution determines how much the SSI payment will be:

The benefits - both SSA and SSI - are to be sent directly to the beneficiary unless he has been deemed incapable of managing and spending all of his own funds. If he is found incapable, the benefits are sent to the representative payee selected by the Social Security District Office, to be used in the "best interests" of the beneficiary.

III. REPRESENTATIVE PAYEES - GENERAL

A. What is a representative payee?

A representative payee is a person or organization selected by the SSA District Office to receive and manage payments for a beneficiary who is deemed incapable of doing so.

B. How to apply to become a representative payee

To apply to become a representative payee, one must complete forms SSA-11, Applicant to be Selected as Payee (Appendix A), and SSA-780, Certificate of Applicant for Benefits of Another (Appendix B). Provided that the applicant exhibits care and concern for the welfare of the recipient, the following hierarchy of preference is usually followed by SSA in selecting a payee:

1. a legal guardian; spouse (or other relative) who has actual custody or who demonstrates a strong interest in the personal welfare of the beneficiary;
2. a friend who has custody or who demonstrates strong interest in the personal welfare of the beneficiary;
3. the superintendent of a public or non-profit agency or institution having actual custody;
4. a private, profit-making institution having actual custody, if licensed under state law.

(SSA Claims manual transmittal sheet no. 675, Sec. 984, January, 1959)

C. Basic responsibilities of representative payees

In managing the beneficiary's funds, the payee is first responsible for meeting the basic needs of the beneficiary, including food, clothing, shelter, and personal needs such as pocket money if the beneficiary is able to use it. After that, the payee should see to the beneficiary's special needs such as school expenses, rehabilitation and medical expenses, and for other purposes that are in the beneficiary's best interest.

The representative payee is legally required, upon request of the District Office, to account for what he has done with the benefits paid to him on behalf of the beneficiary. (20 CFR 404.1609).

D. Appeal rights and procedures

Drug addicts, alcoholics, and persons legally determined to be incompetent by a probate court, may not appeal the decision to appoint a representative payee, since representative payment on their behalf is legislatively mandated. (20 CFR 416.601) For all other beneficiaries, the decision to appoint a representative payee is made solely at the discretion of the District Office, as is the selection of the particular representative payee. SSA regulations have no provision for the right to a prior hearing before a representative payee is appointed. This decision is classified as an "initial determination" and is therefore appealable after it has been made. New regulations include the identity of the representative payee as an initial determination. However, only the beneficiary, not the institution staff, has the right to make an appeal.

After an initial determination has been made, there is a five step procedure which persons can use in attempting to change the representative payee. First, a letter must be sent to the local District Office requesting a change of payee. Ordinarily, such a request is ruled upon in six to eight weeks, according to SSA. Second, if this request is denied, a beneficiary or the beneficiary's representative may appeal for a reconsideration of the initial determination under 20 CFR 404.909 and 416.1410. This appeal must be made within six months of the initial determination for SSA benefits or within thirty days for SSI funds. Third, if the reconsideration judgment is adverse, a hearing before an administrative law judge on the reconsideration may be requested under 20 CFR 404.917 and 416.1425. This request must be made within six months of notice of the reconsidered determination for SSA benefits or within thirty days of such notice for SSI benefits. Fourth, if the hearing results in an adverse decision, an individual may request a review of the decision by the SSA Appeals Council under 20 CFR 404.945 and 416.1461. This request must be made within sixty days of notice of the Administrative Law Judge's decision for SSA recipients or within thirty days of such notice for SSI recipients. Fifth, after these administrative steps have been exhausted, the appeal may be brought to the United States District Court.
IV. REPRESENTATIVE PAYEES - INSTITUTIONAL

A. Procedure for appointment

When the superintendent of an institution is applying to be representative payee, Forms SSA-11 and SSA-780 must be completed and sent to the local SSA District Office. An institution should not apply for a resident if the resident knows the value of money and is capable of managing and spending his own funds.

B. Responsibilities

The superintendent of an institution who becomes representative payee has several unique responsibilities. First, the institution is required to notify the SSA District Office in the case of a resident beneficiary's discharge, death, or any change of custody when it reasonably appears that the change is more than temporary in nature. (DMH Regulations Title IV, Chap. 1, 1416)

Second, the institution is required to notify the District Office when the beneficiary is employed in other than therapeutic work. If the work is therapeutic, and the beneficiary is receiving wages under the Fair Labor Standards Act, this should also be reported to the SSA. This responsibility continues as long as the superintendent is payee, regardless of whether or not the beneficiary continues to be a resident of that institution.

Third, it is important that the superintendent establish lines of communication between administrative and ward level personnel, to determine what funds are available for the resident and to ascertain the personal needs of the resident.

Fourth, as with all representative payees, the beneficiary's personal needs must be met. The following list includes examples as to how the resident's benefits may be used to enrich his life at the institution. These are only suggestions: the unique circumstances, needs, desires, and resources of the residents should determine priority and importance and appropriateness of each expenditure. The list is by no means exhaustive.
(1) Draperies, pictures, and furnishings for the resident's living area;
(2) Games, books, magazines, cigarettes, tobacco, writing paper, and envelopes;
(3) Insurance premiums;
(4) Legal services;
(5) Living expenses of the resident (e.g., canteen, laundry, or shopping money);
(6) Living expenses of the beneficiary when he is residing away from the institution;
(7) Medical and dental services and supplies which the Commonwealth is not obligated to provide the beneficiary;
(8) Personal clothing;
(9) Radios, televisions, and record players;
(10) Special trips and vacations, including travel expenses;
(11) Storage boxes;
(12) Supplies and articles for personal grooming and care;
(13) Supplies and equipment for occupational therapy such as materials for metal or leather working, needleworking, or furniture-making;
(14) Tutoring or other instruction or counseling;
(15) Group purchases, provided that all clients benefited by them contribute a fair amount towards the purchase and if all clients contributing towards the purchase receive a fair benefit in return;
(16) Supplies, therapy, etc., that facilitate the resident's earliest possible habilitation or rehabilitation and that help the resident lead as normal and comfortable a life as possible; and
(17) Other necessities and personal extravagances which benefit the resident and are consistent with his desires, resources, and obligations.

(DMH Regulations, Title IV, Chap. 1, Sect. 14.08)

C. Evaluation

Unless a guardian or conservator has been appointed prior to admission, the resident must be evaluated within thirty days of admission to determine his ability to manage and spend his own funds. He should be evaluated at least once thereafter during the first six months after admission and at least once every twelve months throughout his stay in the institution (or upon specific request of the resident). (DMH Regulations, Title IV, Chap. 1, Sect. 14.05)

D. How to handle patient funds

If the resident has been evaluated and determined to be competent to handle his own funds, then no representative payee should be appointed and the benefits should be sent directly to the resident. If the evaluation finds the resident to be fiscally incompetent, and the superintendent has been appointed as representative payee, then the following procedures should be observed:

(1) The superintendent of the institution bears the ultimate responsibility for the management and spending of these funds. He should designate a staff member of the institution, usually a social worker, who has first-hand knowledge of the resident's day-to-day needs, to be directly responsible to the superintendent and to determine how best to manage and spend the resident's funds. (DMH Regulations, Title IV, Chap. 1, Sect. 14.08)

(2) If the resident's funds at any time exceed $250, no more than $200 of the resident's funds should be kept in a group bank account. The balance must be kept in an individual, interest-bearing account and any interest which accrues belongs to the resident. The account shall be in the resident's name but under the control of the superintendent. (DMH Regulations, Title IV, Chap. 1, Sect. 14.08)

(3) The superintendent should designate one or more persons, called "shoppers," to make purchases for residents who are unable to leave the institution. Shoppers are responsible for purchasing items efficiently and economically. They are accountable for all expenditures they make. Shoppers must make every effort to understand and be responsive to the individual needs and tastes of the resident. They should be aware of contemporary tastes and trends in clothing and furniture. They should maintain catalogues to enable residents to participate in shopping through the selection of individual items, styles and colors. It is very important that the resident's funds do not merely accumulate in his account. The designated staff member should take a common sense approach to these expenditures;
no reasonable purchases will be questioned by the SSA. (DMH Regulations, Title IV, Chap. 1, Sect. 14.13)

(4) A high priority should be given to the training of residents in the management and use of their money. With such training, residents with representative payees may become able to undertake the management and control of their funds. If so, these residents should begin to receive their SSA and SSI benefits directly, relieving the institution of this task and realizing an important habilitation goal. (DMH Regulations, Title IV, Chap. 1, Sect. 14.14)

V. REPRESENTATIVE PAYEE - OUTSIDE

A. Communications with outside payees

Many SSA beneficiaries have representative payees who live outside the institution. It is with these payees that many problems arise concerning non-payment or abuse of benefits. To minimize the risk of representative payee abuse, the staff of the institution should keep in close contact with the outside payee. The representative payee is required, as noted above, to pay whatever care and support that a resident needs which is not covered under the normal institutional budget.

Under SSA regulations, the representative payee is supposed to keep in close contact with the institution to ascertain the beneficiary's personal needs. Oftentimes, this does not happen. Therefore, it is best for the social worker to contact the representative payee to discuss what the beneficiary's needs are. A social worker should develop a plan with the representative payee based on the beneficiary's needs. For example, the social worker might request a $25 allowance to be deposited in the resident's account at the institution each month for personal needs. Also, a regular list of clothing needs should be sent to the representative payee. Clothing may be purchased by the payee, or the payee can arrange to send funds sufficient to pay for the needed clothing.

In addition to routine expenditures, the payee is required to pay for any special needs the beneficiary might have. For example, special wheelchairs for the multiply-handicapped can and should be purchased from these funds. It is the obligation of the institutional staff to inform the representative payee whenever payments to compensate for special needs are required.

The social worker should encourage the representative payee to visit the beneficiary as often as possible to boost his morale and to help determine what his needs are. A representative payee may use the benefits he receives for reasonable transportation costs involved in visiting the beneficiary.

B. Non-cooperation of outside payees

Where an outside payee ignores the requests for funds or refuses to cooperate with the requests, the SSA District Office should be contacted. If non-cooperation continues after contact with the SSA office or if no response is received from SSA, then a change in the representative payee should be requested. The new payee can be another "outside" individual concerned with the beneficiary's welfare or the superintendent of the institution in which the beneficiary resides.

If the District Office determines for themselves that there has been a misuse of funds, the case will be forwarded to the recovery section of the SSA for restitution of the funds. If the payee who misused the funds refuses to comply with the demands for restitution of these funds, the case will be considered for possible court action. (SSA Claims Manual, Sect. 8452)

VI. HOW TO CHANGE THE REPRESENTATIVE PAYEE

A. It can be done

The first thing that a social worker should know about the changing of a representative payee is that it can be done. Often this process entails contending with SSA District Office personnel who feel overburdened already with other demands on their time. Do not give up because of apparent disinterest or delay: your clients are counting on you.
When a representative payee refuses to cooperate with requests from a social worker of an institution for increased financial support of a resident, the local SSA District Office should be notified. Often, a complaint will rectify the situation: SSA will contact the representative payee, inform him of his duties as payee, and thereby cause a more favorable response from the payee.

B. Courses of action

If a complaint to the SSA brings no acceptable response, three courses of action are available to the social worker:

(1) Request that the beneficiary be appointed as his own payee. This option would apply, of course, only to those beneficiaries who can manage their own funds. To request that an institutionalized beneficiary receive his own checks, Forms SSA-11, Application to be Selected as Payee (Appendix A), and SSA-787, Medical Officer's Statement (Patient's Capability to Manage Benefits) (Appendix C) must be completed, with the necessary signatures and submitted. If a beneficiary is not institutionalized, Forms SSA-11 and SSA-786, Physician's Statement (Patient's Capability to Manage Benefits) (Appendix D), must be completed, signed, and submitted. Form SSA-780A, Statement of Person with Whom Beneficiary Is Living, (Appendix E) will normally be requested by SSA after receipt of the other forms. Hence, the application may be expedited if this form is sent along with the other forms.

(2) Request that the superintendent of the institution be appointed payee. This is a common procedure for institutionalized beneficiaries and can be very efficient if the institutional staff is sensitive to the resident's needs. Forms SSA-11 and SSA-780, Certificate of Applicant for Benefits on Behalf of Another, (Appendix B) must be completed, signed, usually by the superintendent, and submitted. Again, it is a good idea to also include SSA-780A.

(3) Request that another outside payee be appointed. Despite the problems that may have precipitated the change of payee request, the social worker should consider whether another outside payee may be appointed. An outside payee who is truly concerned with a resident's welfare can be a tremendous asset for an institutionalized person. To follow this route, Forms SSA-ll and SSA-780 must be completed, signed, and submitted by the person who is requesting the appointment. Form SSA-780A should still be filled out by the institution.

All of the forms are available from the SSA District Office. For convenience sake, it is advisable that the institution keep an inventory of the above-mentioned forms on hand. Also, the local District Office should be able to answer any questions regarding problems concerning the change of payee.

VII. HOW TO DEAL WITH THE SSA

A. Know your local office

In dealing with the SSA, it is quite helpful to get to know the local District Office associated with your institution (Appendices F & G). In some institutions, field representatives have regularly scheduled visits. Otherwise, the social worker should cultivate a working relationship with the local office.

B. The Privacy Act and SSA

The information available to institutional staff from the SSA is limited by the Privacy Act of 1974 (5 USC 552a). Under this law, the identity of the representative payee and any other information from a beneficiary's file is not normally available to institutional social workers. However, a beneficiary may appoint a social worker, or anyone else, as his representative to have access to his SSA file. A sample of a form which may be used by a competent resident to give permission for access to his file is included as Appendix H. Of course, a guardian or conservator may also grant similar access for his ward.

In the future, information about representative payees may be available from SSA as a "routine use" under the Privacy Act. SSA has the power to release information from beneficiary's files for a purpose compatible with the purpose for which it was collected. This avenue of information is not available currently.
C. Other sources of information

The SSA is supposed to send the institution a letter of notification whenever a representative payee is appointed for one of its residents. In addition, they are supposed to periodically send an "audit sheet", SSA-780A, for each resident-beneficiary. This form can serve two useful purposes: (1) it lets the institution know that someone is receiving the resident's benefits and what his name is, and (2) it gives the institution the opportunity to advise SSA as to whether or not the staff feel that the representative payee has misused funds.

Another source of information is Form SSA-827b, General Authorization for Medical Information, (Appendix I). The name of the person on the top line (the signature of claimant or person acting on his behalf) should be noted as it is most certainly the name of the representative payee. This form is received when someone such as a parent initially applies for benefits for a resident.

D. Legal help

This manual has been just a brief summary of the rights of SSA and SSI beneficiaries. Further information may be obtained from the SSI Center, 2 Park Square, Boston, (617) 482-2307.

In some cases, it may be advisable to hire an individual attorney for a resident. Remember that paying lawyers' fees is a legitimate use of SSA or SSI funds. Referral to lawyers interested in these issues may be obtained from your local legal aid organization, the Massachusetts Bar Association Referral Service, (617) 523-0595, or the Mental Health Legal Advisors Committee, (617) 723-2876.
