Bernard J. Dodge is a doctoral student in the Area of Instructional Technology, School of Education, Syracuse University.

The material in this publication was prepared pursuant to a contract with the National Institute of Education, United States Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Contractors undertaking such projects under government sponsorship are encouraged to express freely their judgement in professional and technical matters. Prior to publication, this document was submitted to faculty members from the Area of Instructional Technology, School of Education, Syracuse University, Syracuse, N.Y., for critical review and determination of professional competence. This publication has met such standards. Points of view or opinions, however, do not necessarily represent the official view or opinions of either the reviewers or the National Institute of Education.

Prepared under Grant No. NRA-R-76-0027.
PREFACE

When a publication reaches a fourth edition, it can be considered a tradition. The first edition, entitled Instructional Materials for Teaching Audiovisual Courses, appeared in 1961 and was followed by revised, updated editions in 1968 and 1971. Changes in title and content have reflected the changing nature of the field over the years—e.g., there are significantly fewer references in the current edition to the "things" of education, and more on the processes of teaching and learning.

This publication is intended for professors of instructional technology in colleges and universities, for media professionals in schools and libraries who organize and conduct workshops for teachers and librarians, and for individuals who are seeking information about educational media and technology in non-print formats.

Your comments and suggestions regarding the utility and completeness of this reference will be gratefully received for consideration in planning the next edition.

INTRODUCTION

This directory is a compilation of audiovisual resources which might be useful for teachers of instructional technology. Because I.T. is a broad and eclectic field, many different subject areas are covered, including media production, communications, research, evaluation, instructional development, educational innovation, and the psychology of learning and motivation. Most of the resources listed are designed for college/adult audiences, and, with the exception of a few "classics," were produced within the last ten years.

Entries are listed alphabetically by title within each of 29 subject categories. A title index (with a few subject headings in italics for ambiguous titles) is provided on pages 63-70. The format of each listing is as follows:

availability title medium
```

*MEDIA SELECTION (slides/audio cassette)
20 min, 50 slides, color

description
Gives an overview of the process of selecting a medium based on audience characteristics, context of use, content, and economy.

producer/distributor
EDUTRON 1975
Rental $10.00
Purchase 45.00

year of release
priced (as of 12/1/77)

The producers and distributors of the materials listed were contacted before publication to ensure the accuracy of this directory. The sources of those entries marked with an asterisk (*) did not respond before our deadline to confirm the availability and accuracy of the entry; all other entries are up to date as of December 1977. Prices, of course, are subject to change and the user should always check before placing an order.

The listings in this directory were gleaned from promotional literature, instructional technology journals, and direct contact with the distributors. It is likely that a number of worthy items have been omitted by oversight, and it is certain that new resources are constantly being developed. We would welcome new listings for the next edition; please send information to:

PROJECT THE RIGHT IMAGE (16mm film)
14 min, color

An enthusiastic but ill-prepared amateur projectionist and a well-meaning vicar attempt to "Project the Right Image" at a film show for the parishioners at St. Matthew's. In the first half of this hilarious training film, the pair break every rule in the book and the show is abandoned in rip-splitting chaos.

But in the second half of the CTVC-produced film, the clock is turned back and they try again—with the help of the ten basic commandments of projectionship. Satisfaction is almost complete. Winner, "Silver Screen Award," 1976 U. S. Industrial Film Festival.

TELEVISION PRODUCTION

"BASIC LIGHTING TECHNIQUES (videotape - 1/2", videocassette - 3/"
20 min, b w

Television is the translation of light to electrical energy and back to light. VTR allows us to store light in magnetic form. Light—the lack of it—is critical to the success or failure of our tapes. This program deals with "normal" lighting, lighting and camera point of view, simple "free-light" setups, and portable lighting. It is not, nor is it intended to be, a treatise on broadcast studio lighting.
