The objectives of this analysis were to determine the evolution of multicultural education programs and to ascertain a description of current multicultural education programs in teacher training institutions. Teacher education personnel at five colleges and universities were interviewed for data collection. The majority of programs studied were begun within the last four years in response to state mandates and multicultural education standards adopted by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education. Programs were usually initiated by individual faculty members, although committees were soon established to provide leadership. Short range goals varied from offering a course in multicultural education to establishing multicultural education centers and/or offering graduate degrees within departments of curriculum and instruction. Long range goals included expansion of short range objectives, securing financial support, and integrating multicultural processes within the schools. Recommendations for institutions desiring to establish multicultural education programs are included. Descriptions of the multicultural programs of the five schools and the interview guide are appended. (Author/MK)

INTRODUCTION

RATIONALE

There is the need for research based data on teacher preparation programs designed to enhance the desegregation process through multicultural programming. It is indicated by the literature and research that there exists a wide range of problems relating to teacher preparation in desegregated school settings. Evidence of this is indicated in the increasing suspension and drop-out rates of blacks and other minorities, their placement in special education classes, lack of teacher understanding of the contributions of blacks to the American society, the lack of consideration given to the learning styles of blacks. Thus this study proposes to contribute to the solution of these problems, (and assist black students to become productive citizens and thereby make the American dream a living reality.)

STATEMENT OF PROBLEM

The problem of this study was (1) to determine the early evolvement of multicultural education programs and (2) to ascertain a description of the current multicultural education programs.

POPULATION

The population consists of teacher education personnel at Cleveland State University, Cleveland, Ohio; South Carolina State College, Orangeburg, S. C.; University of Houston, Houston, Texas; University of South Carolina, Columbia, S. C. and Texas Southern University, Houston, Texas.

METHODOLOGY

An interview guide was designed which focused on items relating to the early evolvement of the multicultural education programs and descriptions of current multicultural education programs. The guide was used during the on-site visitations.
PART II: PRESENTATION OF FINDINGS
PRESENTATION OF FINDINGS REGARDING THE EARLY EVOLVEMENT
OF THE MULTICULTURAL EDUCATION PROGRAMS

The purpose of this section is to present significant data obtained through personal interviews with multicultural education personnel in three states representing five colleges/universities. These findings of the study were organized in these categories: (1) date of origin, (2) rationale for beginning, (3) evolvement through various stages,
(4) vehicle for providing leadership activities, (5) short range goals, (6) long range goals, (7) difficulties encountered, (8) successes achieved, (9) sources of financial support and approximate annual costs, (10) administrative and faculty support for the program, and (11) the extent of the need for faculty training in multicultural education.

WHEN DID YOUR MULTICULTURAL EDUCATION PROGRAM BEGIN?

Cleveland State University

The Multicultural Education Center at Cleveland State University was opened in September of 1977 in University Tower 1338. For the Fall Quarter there was only a secretary. A part-time secretary and graduate assistants were added during the Winter Quarter. The Center was a response to the needs of many teachers of the Cleveland Public School System who were transferred to schools which have children different backgrounds because of the court order to desegregate. Teachers expressed the need (1) to understand more about people in order to help students they teach,
(2) to become aware of their own intercultural relation, and
(3) to be more effective in their multicultural classes.

A needs assessment study had been conducted in 1976 which involved 5,811 students, parents, and staff of the Cleveland Public School System. Among relevant goals, the first ranked pertained to developing "respect for, appreci-cation of, and ability to relate to others --- families, schools, communities, and nations."

South Carolina State College

The actual operation of the Multicultural Education Program has not begun. At present there has been only a series of discussions relative to the development and implementation of the program to be initiated during the Spring Semester of 1980. The impetus for the Multicultural
Education Program came from three sources. First, the NCATE (National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education) mandate; Second, the Consortium of Southern Colleges for Teacher Education Project funding for a faculty development workshop; Third, the compatibility of the program with emerging trends and practices.

University of Houston

Multicultural education is an established program area within the Department of Curriculum and Instruction, College of Education at the University of Houston. This program in the beginning was supported by a HEW grant for developing institutions. In 1972, the Texas Education Agency mandated a multicultural emphasis. This mandate was translated into a three hour course both for graduates and undergraduates. Texas Senate Bill 121 supported the bilingual component. Of all the factors, the Texas Education Agency revised Standards for Teacher Education and Certification provided the greatest impetus for incorporation of multicultural experiences in the preservice teacher training program.

University of South Carolina

Although individual efforts had been made with multicultural education previously, the official beginning date was September 6, 1978. Several factors had a collective impact on its beginning. For instance, Dr. Johnnie McFadden had developed a course focusing on Black Cultural Perspectives. The COPE Project (Community and Occupational Program in Education) and Teacher Corps had an interest in implementing multicultural education. The Dean of the College of Education appointed a Multicultural Education Committee.

Texas Southern University

Components of the multicultural education program can be traced to such projects as Cycles 7 and 9 of Teacher Corps Multi-Ethnic Project, Desegregation Institutes for Teachers, Parents, Administrators and Counselors, and the Triple T Project (TTT Trainer of Teacher Trainers). The program's impetus was due to the institution's experience with a range of projects which focused on cultural and racial diversity, the leadership of Dr. Claudette Ligons, the international composition of its faculty and student body, international travel, and education of the faculty. Additionally, the 1972 revised Standards for Teacher Education and Certification of the Texas Education Agency mandated a multicultural emphasis.

DID IT EVOLVE THROUGH VARIOUS STAGES?

Cleveland State University

During the period September 1977 - June 1978, the Director of the Multicultural Education Center devoted 1/3 time to the Center while during the period September 1978 - June 1979 3/4 time was devoted to it. Various stages provided increased contacts with the public and activities of the Center.

Contacts with the public included (1) publicity and (2) conferences attended. Compared with the first year of operation, there was increased publicity through brochure distribution, newsletters, State and national awareness of the Center. An increased number of conferences and meetings were attended by the Director of the Center.

An expansion of Center activities included workshops, Multicultural Educaiton Day, displays, presentations, In-service Education - Faculty and School Administrators, and organization of an Advisory Board. Additionally, there has been a continuous search for fundings of proposals.

South Carolina State College

A series of discussions have been held relative to the development and implementation of a multicultural education program and a committee established.

University of Houston

The multicultural education program evolvement was marked by struggle. It involved (1) educating faculty members about multicultural education, (2) obtaining more faculty participation decision making, (3) reducing the multicultural/bilingual dichotomy, and (4) securing hard money support. Today, the undergraduate teacher preparation program is competency based. Generic competencies for multicultural education have been identified and incorporated into the total training program. Additionally, the Department of Curriculum and Instruction of the College of Education offers a Master of Education degree in multicultural/bilingual education and a Doctor of Education degree in multicultural education.

University of South Carolina

September 6, 1978 marked the official beginning date for the multicultural education program. Prior to that time, individual efforts had been made. It started with a group of interested persons. Later, consultants from other college and universities were brought in. Then there was the impact of the revised National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education standards which included a multicultural education standard. Finally, a multicultural education committee was established.

Texas Southern University

During its early development, the short range goals for multicultural education placed emphasis on problems related to desegregated school settings. Answers were sought to questions regarding: (1) specific problems of cross-over teachers in desegregated schools; (2) conditions under which these problems vary; and implications of those problems for school administration. The late Dr. Clifton M. Claye, who was a member of the Texas Southern University faculty, conducted research on teachers in desegregated school settings. Some of his findings are as follows:

1. In spite of public statements to the contrary, cross-over teachers do have problems (233 out of a possible 360).

2. The majority of the cross-over teachers are female and teach at the elementary level.

3. Those in authority tend to assign the experienced productive black teachers to formerly all-white schools and the inexperienced and certain white teachers to formerly all-black schools.

4. Prior to going on the job or as soon thereafter as possible, cross-over teachers should have some sensitivity training.

5. Experiences with multi-racial groups of children in different type neighborhood schools should be included in the pre-professional preparation of teachers.

6. Two words - fear and isolation - are the focal points around which the most pressing problems faced by cross-over teachers appear to be centered.

7. There appears to be some positive relationship between the age group to which the cross-over teachers belong and the kinds of problems faced by them.

8. Individual schools, as nearly as possible should design in-service education programs to assist cross-over teachers in the solution of their problems.

9. The most serious or pressing problems faced by white cross-over teachers, in rank order, were: (1) classroom control and discipline; (2) working with students who have less parental support, resources, and enrichment experiences than those of previous classes; (3) unfamiliarity with students' background, race, and/or language; (4) inadequate preparation for the experience; (5) fear of loss in professional and social status; (6) negative parental reactions as reflected and/or reflected in student behavior; (7) gaps in communication between teacher and teacher; (8) gaps in communication between student and teacher; (9) social isolation of cross-over teachers; (10) fear and insecurity; afraid of the unknown, the untried and the new; (11) working with teachers of the opposite race; and (12) unprepared for the prejudices and hostility encountered.

10. The most serious or pressing problems encountered by black teachers, in rank order, were: (1) social isolation of cross-over teachers; (2) classroom control and discipline; (3) negative parental reactions as reflected and/or expressed in student behavior; (4) unfamiliarity with students' background, race, and/or language; (5) working with students who have more parental support, resources, and enrichment experiences than those of previous classes; (6) gaps in communication between teacher and teacher; (7) parental and community rejection as reflected in attitudes and behavior toward cross-over teachers; (8) rejections because of parental expectation as reflected in student behavior; (9) working with students who have less parental support, resources, and enrichment experiences than those of previous classes; and (10) gaps in communication between principal and teacher.

11. The most serious or pressing problems encountered by cross-over teachers, white and black, in rank order, were: (1) classroom control and discipline; (2) unfamiliarity with students' backgrounds, race, and/or language; (3) working with students who have less parental support, resources, and enrichments than those of previous classes; (4) social isolation of cross-teachers; (5) negative parental reactions as reflected in attitudes and behavior toward the teachers; (6) gaps in communication between teacher and teacher; (7) gaps in communication between student and teacher; (8) fear of loss in social and professional status; (9) parental and community rejection as reflected in attitudes and working behavior toward the teacher; (10) working with teachers of the opposite race; and (11) inadequate preparation for the experience.
Findings Regarding Descriptions of the Current Multicultural Education Programs
An Advisory Board to the Multicultural Education Center had been established at Cleveland State University while committees were formulated at South Carolina State College, Texas Southern University, and the University of South Carolina. The University of Houston has an established Multicultural Education Program Area within the Department of Curriculum and Instruction of the College of Education.

WERE THERE SHORT RANGE GOALS FOR MULTICULTURAL EDUCATION DURING ITS EARLY DEVELOPMENT?

Cleveland State University

The College of Education opened the Multicultural Education Center, a resource center, during the Fall Quarter of 1977. It is one of a few centers in the United States and the first in the Greater Cleveland area. Current operation is supported by limited resources from the College of Education. The Center's short and long range goals include:

1. Development of a multicultural curricular model for implementation within the College of Education at the pre-service level.
2. Presentation of workshops, seminars, and courses on multicultural education at the public school in-service level as well as for community agencies.
3. Aid and encouragement to educational systems to engage in multicultural activities and exchanges.
4. Development, implementation, and evaluation of curricular materials for use by professionals, students, and community agencies and organizations.
5. Organization of an informational network of university and community resources pertaining to multicultural education.
6. Initiation and sponsorship of local, regional, and national conferences on all phases of ethnicity and offer appropriate facilities and assistance for these meetings.

South Carolina State College

The short range goals focused on the development of two distinct multicultural education courses or undergraduate and graduate level experience.
University of Houston

At the University of Houston, the short range goals included:

1. The establishment of multicultural education as a program area within the Department of Curriculum and Instruction of the College of Education.

2. Designing and awarding a Master of Education degree in multicultural/bilingual education.

3. Designing and awarding a Doctor of Education degree in multicultural education.

4. Identifying generic competencies for multicultural education and integrating them into the total undergraduate teacher preparation program.

University of South Carolina

The short range goals at the University of South Carolina focused on the following:

1. By June 1979, to have organized an international and comparative education thrust as part of the regular College program which would include on-campus courses and international education travel experiences.

2. By June 1979, to have assessed and published a report on all institutions of higher education involvement in multicultural education.

3. By March 1979, to have assessed a select sample of public school districts in South Carolina to determine the extent of their involvement in multicultural education and the extent and type of problems with which they are faced.

4. By June 1979, to have completed a survey of the many groups, agencies, and organizations involved in the same type of program in South Carolina to determine what has been done and what still remains to be done in the area of multicultural education.

5. By June 1979, to have designed at least three multicultural teaching units to assist educators in meeting the three most pressing problems identified through the assessment above (#3), with one of the units designed especially to help teachers assess their own level of awareness, involvement, and teaching practices.

6. By June 1979, to have acquainted all present College of Education faculty with current research, trends, and issues in multicultural education.

7. By June 1979, to have set up a resource center containing current materials pertaining to multicultural education for faculty, students, and community agencies.

8. By June 1979, to have established a communications network with other State agencies that will draw publicity to the program and to have identified leadership among various ethnic groups to be involved in planning, implementation, and evaluation of the program.

Texas Southern University

As the South progressed toward the elimination of the dual system, teachers often have been shifted to achieve some kind of ethnic balance. Consequently, many of them found themselves teaching students who differ from themselves racially. Educational leaders of the South labeled them the "cross-over" teachers. During the early development of the desegregation aspect of multicultural education, an investigation was conducted which specifically sought answers to the following questions regarding: (1) the specific problems of "cross-over" teachers in desegregated schools, (2) the conditions under which these problems vary; and (3) the implications of those problems for school administration. Such answers constituted short range goals for the desegregation aspect in particular and multicultural education in general.

WERE THERE LONG RANGE GOALS FOR MULTICULTURAL EDUCATION DURING ITS EVOLVEMENT?

Cleveland State University

Long range goals for multicultural education at Cleveland State University included the establishment of a Multicultural Education Center with specific goals for flexibility, expansion, and a greater degree of implementation as time progressed.

South Carolina State College

Long range goals have not been established at this time. The Multicultural Education Committee will formulate operational goals and objectives for the program.

University of Houston

The most significant long range goal will be to achieve the integration of multicultural processes as an undergirding concept of all instruction in the College of Education and the University of Houston.

University of South Carolina

Long range goals are stated in this manner:

1. By December 1979, to have developed a specific management plan with objectives, tasks, responsibilities, and completion dates for establishing a comprehensive multicultural center with adequate funding.

2. By June 1980, to have revised the total education curriculum to integrate appropriate components of multicultural education at all levels, including revision of courses or creation of new courses where appropriate.

3. To establish a multicultural center which develops programs, activities, conferences, workshops, and provides technical assistance and training in the following areas:
   A. Curriculum guides, resource and research material, and assessment instruments
   B. Ethnic Studies
   C. Bilingual teacher education
   D. International and comparative education
   E. Leadership training
   F. Linguistics
   G. Oral history
   H. Community involvement
   I. Funding sources

Texas Southern University

Long range goals included: (1) working toward endorsement (certification); (2) offering courses in multicultural education; (3) developing international aspects since 2000 of its 8000 student population are from fifty countries and over 40 per cent of the faculty and administrative personnel have had international experiences which include: Asia,
WHAT DIFFICULTIES DID YOU ENCOUNTER?

Cleveland State University

The greatest difficulty encountered was lack of financial support for the full time service of the Director of the Multicultural Education Center and the secretary although partial support was given by the University.

South Carolina State College

The multicultural education program at South Carolina State College is in the planning stage.

University of Houston

Among the problems encountered at the University of Houston were the following: (1) lip service support from some faculty who were reluctant when requests were made for faculty positions, office and development facilities, secretarial support, etc., (2) a questioning of the legitimacy of multicultural education to exist as a program area simultaneously with social studies, science education, mathematics, and other traditional areas, (3) undermining techniques such as challenging graduate students as to why they want to major in multicultural education, and (4) questioning of professors in multicultural education about their role and reasons for wanting to be involved in the program.

University of South Carolina

Some of the difficulties encountered consisted of the following: (1) resistance to change by some members of the College of Education Faculty, (2) tendency of some faculty members to view multicultural education as a "black-white thing," (3) inadequate funds to support the program, and (4) lack of in-service education for the total College of Education faculty.

Texas Southern University

Difficulties at Texas Southern University included: (1) inadequate support materials and equipment, (2) tendency for some faculty members to view multicultural education as being "for blacks only," and (3) lack of a core of persons who had released time for collection of support materials.
WHAT SUCCESSES HAVE BEEN ACHIEVED?

Cleveland State University

The two years which the Multicultural Education Center has been in operation has been a period of great activity. More people are calling for assistance. An advisory Board has been formed. As a result of a Cultural Awareness Workshop, there are now teaching units on cultural awareness in operation in the various schools in the Greater Cleveland area. There has been a successful Multicultural Education Day, and multicultural processes are being incorporated in the undergraduate teacher preparation program.

South Carolina State

Plans have been made for the implementation of one undergraduate and one graduate course in multicultural education during the 1980 Spring Semester.

University of Houston

Successes are as follows: (1) a Department of Multicultural Education had been established; (2) A Master of Education degree is offered in the Multicultural/Bilingual Education Program; (3) A Doctor of Education degree is offered in multicultural education; and (4) Generic competencies for multicultural education have been identified and incorporated into the competency based undergraduate teacher program.

University of South Carolina

Whereas there had been some resistance to change related to multicultural education, a degree of success manifested itself in attitudinal modifications. For instance, there was an increased willingness on the part of some faculty members to incorporate multicultural concepts in their courses. Another manifestation was seen in the "seeking-out" of assistance regarding sources of information which relate to various disciplines.

Texas Southern University

There have been five major successes. First, teacher education students have been taught skills in incorporating multicultural concepts in the various school subjects offered in the public schools of Texas. Second, prospective teachers have been taught the skills of working with a wide range of people from diverse ethnic and cultural backgrounds. Three, food of various ethnic and cultural groups have been served in the campus cafeteria. Four, there have been many informal linkages with faculty in colleges and schools outside the College of Education. Five, there has been emphasis on the international component of multicultural education.

WHAT WERE THE SOURCES OF FINANCIAL SUPPORT AND APPROXIMATE ANNUAL COSTS?

Cleveland State University

The University budget provides funds to support a 3/4 time position of the Director of the Multicultural Education Center and a 1/2 time position of secretary to the Center. Additional support was made available through the funding of a Teacher Institute Proposal which generated monies from the Ohio State Department of Education. The purpose of conducting approved Teacher Institute Programs was to supplement but not supplant budgeting for teacher education at the University. The total amount of funds received was $19,250. The Institute involved twenty-five different teachers from the Bedford School System. If teachers are to create and maintain an atmosphere conducive to teaching and learning basic skills in a multicultural classroom, an understanding of the various cultures is essential. Many teachers have been transferred to schools that have children of different ethnic backgrounds in the Cleveland School System. The ethnic composition of the classrooms in the Bedford System has changed due to ethnic flight because of the court order to desegregate the schools in Cleveland, and redistricting. A major goal of the Institute is to assist teachers in acquiring adequate ways of looking at various cultures, investigate the misinformation which promotes negative attitudes, and to provide experiences in various cultural lifestyles.

Products developed from the Institute included a teaching unit that can be utilized in the classroom, assurance of potential teacher educator who will serve as a building resource person to help other teachers. A University grant supported an additional In-service education workshop.

South Carolina State College

As has been previously stated, the multicultural education program is still in the planning stage and will be implemented during the Spring Semester of 1980.

University of Houston

"Soft" monies such as grants, short term contracts, and legislative funds were vital in the initiating efforts for acquiring faculty, support staff, office space, supplies and materials, etc. These were judiciously linked with "hard" monies from the university with objective of facilitating the institutionalization of the Multicultural Education Program.

University of South Carolina

Some financial support came from Teacher Corp Project at the University of South Carolina. The College of Education contributed $2000 to the effort during one academic year.

Texas Southern University

Partial financial support came from Teacher Corps and Peace Corps projects at the University.

TO WHAT EXTENT DID THE ADMINISTRATION AND FACULTY SUPPORT THE PROGRAM?

Cleveland State University

In addition to providing funds to support a Director of the Multicultural Education Center at 3/4 time and a secretary at 1/2 time, the following sources provided during the 1978-79 year:

- Dr. Richard McArdle
  Dean

- Dr. Annie Clement
  Associate Dean

- Dr. Diana Jordan
  Department of Specialized Instructional Programs

- Mrs. Barbara Hertzing
  Graduate Assistant

- Mrs. Rose Achacki
  Secretary

- Mrs. Shirley Seaton
  Cleveland Board of Education

South Carolina State College

The program is still in the planning state. However, it is anticipated that the administration and faculty will lend full support to the development and implementation of a series of courses and/or experiences in multicultural education. The support will come through planning conferences, the development of protocol materials, etc.

University of Houston

Numerous meetings were held with the departmental chairperson, College of Education Dean and the Associate Dean of graduate and undergraduate education. The meetings provided for the establishment of a broader university-wide support for multicultural education. Conducting in-service programs which focus on various aspects of multicultural education were prioritized. Further, the excellent performance on the part of doctoral students in other classes led to a more positive response of the faculty toward multicultural education.

University of South Carolina

The College of Education gave moral support and some financial support. While there was some resistance by some members of the faculty, other members were amenable.

Texas Southern University

The administration and faculty gave full support and some leadership to multicultural education. The Dean of the College of Education taught a multicultural education course.

TO WHAT EXTENT DID THE FACULTY NEED TRAINING IN MULTICULTURAL EDUCATION?

Cleveland State University

There was a great need for faculty training in multicultural education. On April 5-6, 1979, a national team was invited to the campus to give in-service training on multicultural education to the faculty of the College of Education and the superintendents of the various school systems in the Greater Cleveland area. The in-service training was made possible through a university grant.

South Carolina State College

The faculty is in need of training that relates to education which is multicultural. A faculty awareness workshop will be conducted as a part of the faculty development program prior to the beginning of the 1979-80 academic year.

University of Houston

The faculty of the multicultural education program area within the Department of Curriculum and Instruction hold appropriate degrees and consequently did not need very much in-service education. However, multicultural education awareness experiences were held with other faculty members.

University of South Carolina

Three types of in-service training in multicultural education were held. They were: (1) self training, (2) peer training, and (3) workshops open to all.

Texas Southern University

Although more than two thirds of the faculty had international experiences, some additional training was needed. Efforts were made to build on the experience of black faculty and the positive relations among the faculty.
PRESENTATION OF FINDINGS CONCERNING DESCRIPTIONS OF THE CURRENT MULTICULTURAL EDUCATION PROGRAMS

The organization of these findings consists of the following: (1) objectives of the teacher preparation programs, (2) the philosophy for multicultural education, (3) multicultural education competencies sought for development by teacher education programs, (4) program design, (5) courses which include components, mini-courses, field experiences, etc., (6) impact of State Departments of Education Certification Division or other appropriate bodies on multicultural education in the teacher preparation program, (7) majors of students who are involved in the multicultural education programs, (8) undergraduate teacher education enrollment, (9) number of undergraduate students who were Mexican-Americans, Indians, Blacks, other minorities, and (10) the future of multicultural education at the institutions included in this study.

WHAT ARE THE OBJECTIVES OF THE TEACHER PREPARATION PROGRAM?

Cleveland State University

The major objective of the teacher preparation program at Cleveland State University is as follows:

To educate men and women who desire to serve as teachers or as other professional school personnel. Its program serves principally the needs of metropolitan Cleveland. The College of Education presently offers a variety of undergraduate programs for the advancement and enrichment of persons active in the education profession.

South Carolina State College

Included in the objectives of the Department of Education are the following:

1. The Department of Education will help students identify their personal goals, develop a sense of self worth, self-confidence, and achieve deeper levels of self-understanding as measured by providing course offerings with the above outcome being specific objectives.

2 Cleveland State University Bulletin, Undergraduate Issue, June 1979, p. 85.
3 South Carolina State College, Catalog Number 1977-78, pps. 243-45.
2. The Department of Education will help students acquire depth of knowledge in the area of elementary education, prepare students for advanced academic work at four-year institutions, graduate and professional schools and will aid students in acquiring high standards of intellectual performance as measured by (1) providing a series of required course offerings with the above outcomes being specific objectives, and (2) an evaluation instrument to be administered to each elementary education student prior to graduation.

3. In order to maintain open admissions and develop meaningful education experiences for all admitted, the Department of Education will offer developmental programs in basic reading skills as measured by the above course offering being published in required college publications.

4. The Department of Education will increase the students' ability to undertake self-directed learning, to synthesize knowledge from a variety of sources, to use methods of scholarly inquiry, scientific research and problem-solving as measured by providing course offerings with the above experiences being specific objectives.

5. The Department of Education will facilitate a climate whereby continuous educational innovation is accepted as an institutional way of life by experimenting with different methods of evaluating and grading student performance, by experimenting with new ways of individualized instruction and by creating procedures whereby curricular and instructional innovations may be readily initiated. Acceptable level of attainment will be recognized by accreditation of the program by state, regional, and national organizations.

6. The Department of Education will provide evidence that the department is actually achieving its stated objectives and is accountable to its funding sources for the effectiveness of its program, as measured by its year-end reports to the college administration and funding agencies.

7. The Department of Education will improve the quality of course offerings and teaching skills as measured by (1) providing a department level professional development program each academic year, and (2) providing for each student to evaluate his respective classes within the Department of Education each semester.

University of Houston

The mission and purpose of the College of Education at the University of Houston is as follows:

The College of Education of the University of Houston Central Campus promotes the development of an educational system adequate for and responsive to the changing conditions of the times. The College has committed itself to innovative approaches in the preparation of teachers and other professional personnel. Within its own programs, the College offers prospective teachers and teachers-in-service the opportunity to experience frontiers of educational practice and thought.

The faculty of the College share the belief that teaching is a profession and that teacher education represents the training arm of that profession. In collaboration with the teaching profession, state and local government agencies, and other units of UHCC, the College seeks to:

1. Prepare well-qualified personnel for service in educational systems and agencies through both pre-service and in-service programs.

2. Contribute, through scholarly activities including basic and applied research, to the knowledge base upon which the practice of that profession rests.

3. Provide leadership and expertise in collaborative efforts with schools and other educational units to solve educational problems and to disseminate effective educational practices.

4. Exemplify in its own programs the practices and behaviors which it explicates and advocates.

5. Enhance the capacity of the teaching profession to provide equal educational opportunity for all segments of the culture.

The University of South Carolina

The objective of the teacher preparation program are as follows:

The College of Education is a professional school whose chief responsibility is the preparation of teachers, administrators, supervisors and specialists for elementary schools, secondary schools, and higher education. Its programs of professional training are accredited by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education. Because of the Council's exacting standards, more than half of the states in the United States now recognize graduation from a Council-accredited institution as the basis for issuing licenses to out-of-state persons who wish to teach in their schools.

In addition to its basic task of providing professional education at the undergraduate and graduate levels, the College of Education regularly undertakes research projects contributing to improvement in the teaching process and to increased effectiveness of public education in general. It publishes a bulletin (The University of South Carolina Education Report), monographs, and conferences planned specifically for the staffs of elementary and secondary schools; often these are cooperative efforts with the State Department of Education and other educational agencies.

The College also operates a number of bureaus and clinics developed to augment its academic programs and to provide specialized services to the educational community.

Texas Southern University

The specific objectives of the School of Education of Texas Southern University are to prepare and/or develop teachers and other school personnel who have:

1. A knowledge of major field and related fields of inquiry and the ability to use this knowledge in explaining the realities of life today.

University of South Carolina Bulletin, 1978-79 Undergraduate and Graduate Studies, p. 68 U.

2. A knowledge of instructional materials, new technology, and skill in recognizing and utilizing instructional tools most suitable for specific purposes.

3. A knowledge of the social issues relevant to education and living in a pluralistic and international society with the competence necessary to translate these into instructional action as teacher-citizens as well as teacher-scholars.

4. An understanding of the learner and the learning process and the ability to translate these into appropriate teaching behavior in acting and interacting with students.

5. An appreciation of the values and feelings essential for working with young people and with colleagues and the capacity to develop empathetic relationships in a wide variety of professional and social roles in the school and community.

6. The necessary skills required of the positions and roles for which they are preparing.

7. The necessary skills and abilities for researching, designing, and conducting educational programs; both of a theoretical and applied nature that will bear significantly upon education for the present and the future.

8. An understanding of the knowledge and skills necessary to evaluate and assess educational programs.

9. An awareness of the need to be alert to and critical of the existing and expanding programs and activities in the School of Education and in teacher education.

10. The preparation in knowledge, skills, understandings, and appreciations that renders the teacher capable of effectively teaching students from various ethnic and cultural backgrounds.

WHAT IS THE PHILOSOPHY FOR MULTICULTURAL EDUCATION?

Cleveland State University

According to the Director of the Multicultural Education Center:

-21-
"Multicultural education is to endorse the principle that there is no one model American. To endorse cultural pluralism is to understand and appreciate the differences that exist among the nation's citizens. It is to see these differences as a positive force in the continuing development of a society which professes a wholesome respect for intrinsic worth of every individual." (Excerpts from "A Statement on Multicultural Education by the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education.)

South Carolina State College

There is no written statement of a philosophy for multicultural education at this time.

University of Houston

The Multicultural Education Program at the University of Houston attempts to operationalize the following quoted excerpts from the AACTE statement, "No One Model American":

...Multicultural Education recognizes cultural diversity as a fact of life in American Society, and it affirms that this cultural diversity is valuable resource that should be preserved and extended. It affirms that major education institutions should strive to preserve and enhance cultural pluralism. Multicultural education programs for teachers are more than special courses or special learning experiences grafted onto the standard program. The commitment to cultural pluralism must permeate all areas of the educational experience provided for prospective teachers...

University of South Carolina

The College of Education of the University of South Carolina has formulated a position statement on multicultural education which includes the following:

Multicultural education is an attempt to establish a balanced, fair, and unbiased representation of America's culturally pluralistic society. The myths surrounding the concept of multicultural education need to be dispelled among educators and the public. It is not an attempt to teach or promote ethnic, racial, or cultural superiority; neither is it an attempt to teach dominance.

In school settings, multicultural education promotes a mutual respect and awareness for differences in ethnic, racial, and cultural backgrounds of Americans. It is a process in which both the teacher and learner are assisted in the identification and clarification of values relating to all people. Through multicultural education, teacher and learner develop respect and appreciation for individuals whose ethnic, racial, or cultural backgrounds may differ from their own.

Multicultural education provides both teacher and learner with the necessary skills, according to James A. Banks, "...to function more effectively within their own ethnic culture, within the wider common culture, and within their ethnic communities." As a teaching-learning process which recognizes and values cultural pluralism, multicultural education honors the diversity of culture and promotes the philosophy that the school curriculum should reflect and respond accordingly.

Texas Southern University

While Texas Southern University had no formal statement of philosophy for multicultural education, its central focus was on the urban population, multicultural and multiracial, and Global Outreach.

WHAT MULTICULTURAL EDUCATION COMPETENCIES DO THE TEACHER EDUCATION PROGRAM SEEK TO DEVELOP?

Cleveland State University

Included in the multicultural education competencies which the teacher education program at Cleveland State University seeks to develop are the following:

1. To become aware of the concept of a Pluralistic Society.

2. To become aware of the ethnic composition in the city of Cleveland.

3. To participate in a cultural tour of the city of Cleveland that involves visiting the religious, cultural, and food establishments of the ethnic neighborhoods.

4. To understand the role of an Ethnic Heritage and Language School by becoming familiar with the purpose of its program.

5. To identify the various cultural groups within the participant's own classroom.

6. To explore attitudes and feelings about the participants' own ethnicity as well as others.

7. To identify stereotypes that promote negative attitudes towards persons of various cultural groups.

8. To discuss the effects of stereotypes on teacher behavior, relationships, and expectations in the classroom.

9. To examine classroom materials for stereotypes.

10. To become acquainted with the Anthropologist's view of culture and techniques for studying a culture.

11. To receive correct information about and exposure to four specific cultures.

12. To discuss classroom strategies for looking at a culture.

13. To become acquainted with materials and resources available for multicultural understanding.

14. To develop a unit on any culture(s) that can be utilized in the classroom based upon the insights gained in the institute.

South Carolina State College

The program is still in the planning stage. A course in multicultural education is planned at the undergraduate level and another one is planned for the graduate level. The Spring Semester 1980 is the scheduled date of implementation.

University of Houston

According to Dr. H. Prentice Baptiste, Jr., Chairperson, Multicultural Education Program at the University of Houston, "the teacher for multicultural education should demonstrate the ability to:"

1. develop a rationale or model for the development/implementation of a culturally pluralistic curriculum within the K-12 school and be able to defend it on a psychological, sociological, and cultural basis.

2. demonstrate a basic knowledge of the contributions minority groups in America to all mankind.

3. demonstrate a knowledge of the cultural experience in both a contemporary and historical settings (i.e. life styles, customs, institutions, etc.) of any two groups (Afro American, Mexican-American, Native-American, or Oriental.)

4. identify current biases and deficiencies in existing curriculum and in both commercial and teacher-prepared materials of instruction.

5. acquire, evaluate, adapt, and develop materials appropriate to the multiculture classroom.

6. critique an educational environment to the extent of the measurable evidence of the environment representing a multicultural approach to education.

7. develop and implement an instructional module using strategies and materials that are multicultural/multiethnic/multiracial in character.

8. Assess relevance and feasibility of existing models that afford groups a way of gaining inclusion into today's society.

9. recognize potential linguistic and cultural biases of existing assessment instruments and procedures when prescribing a program of testing for the learner.

10. demonstrate a thorough knowledge of the philosophy and theory concerning bilingual-bicultural education and its application.

University of South Carolina

The University of South Carolina sought to develop three broad types of multicultural competencies: (1) awareness, (2) understanding and (3) respect for cultural differences.

H. Prentice Baptiste, Jr.; Multicultural Education Evolve-ment at the University of Houston: A Case Study in Pluralism and the American Teacher; Edited by Frank H. Klassen and Donna M. Gollnick, Ethnic Heritage Center for Teacher Education of the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education; 1977.

32
Texas Southern University

The teacher education program at Texas Southern University sought to develop the following multicultural education competencies:

1. Share the responsibility for development of a productive social and academic climate as the semester progresses.

2. Define the curriculum process and build a rationale for the obligation to incorporate multicultural components into curricula experiences/content in a democratic and culturally pluralistic society.

3. Articulate your philosophy related to a) the learner; b) the ideal climate for learning; c) societal expectations of schools; d) the sources of curriculum; and e) your role in curriculum decision-making.

4. Indicate how Competency-Based Education can serve to enhance or inhibit the processes of multiculturalizing curriculum.

5. Articulate definition of selected concepts central to an adequate understanding of multicultural and multi-ethnic phenomena.

6. Generate basic assumptions in multicultural programs that are congruent with basic assumptions in a democratic society.

7. Identify some of the major issues in cultural and ethnic patterns of communication that impact of learning. These include verbal, non-verbal, and transracial dimensions of communication.

8. Delineate a set of criteria for selection and use of multicultural resources for teaching.

9. Develop awareness of the need to use consciously established criteria in the conceptualization and designing of multicultural teaching aids.

10. Articulate a knowledge of the indices that contribute to success/failure of students in our multicultural society. These include teacher... attitude, cultural bias in testing, teacher knowledge and knowledge and responsiveness to the diversity in life styles, communication patterns, income levels, values among other variables.

11. Generate ideas for the use of Roots as an intercultural set of learning experiences that may be incorporated into particular segments of the established curriculum.

12. Develop a multicultural resource folder to be used on an on-going basis in your class. These may be newspaper clippings, magazine articles, pictures, small scale bulletin boards, etc.

13. Design a multicultural teaching aid to be used as an introduction, complement, support of culminating part of given lesson.

14. Complete a community analysis field study of the school community in which you serve and present a summary of findings to the class.

WHAT IS THE PROGRAM DESIGN FOR MULTICULTURAL EDUCATION?

All of the institutions used at least one or some combination of the following: courses, components, modules, field experiences, workshops, and institutes.

IN WHAT COURSES ARE COMPONENTS, MINI-COURSES, OR FIELD EXPERIENCES USED?

In general, the institutions used components, mini-courses or field experience or some combination in a particular course on multicultural education and/or professional courses in the teacher preparation program.

DID THE STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION CERTIFICATION DIVISION OR OTHER APPROPRIATE BODIES HAVE A POLICY ON MULTICULTURAL EDUCATION WHICH HAD AN IMPACT ON YOUR TEACHER PREPARATION PROGRAM?

The Ohio State Department of Education had mandated human relations training for teacher certification, effective 1980. Such mandate has impacted teacher training in the State of Ohio. The 1972 revised Standards for Teacher Education and Certification of the Texas Education Agency provided an impetus for a multicultural emphasis in the preparation of teachers by institutions of higher learning in Texas. Other institutions such as the University of South Carolina and South Carolina State College are affected by the

WHAT ARE THE MAJORS OF STUDENTS WHO ARE INVOLVED IN THE MULTICULTURAL EDUCATION PROGRAM?

In general, students who are preparing to be teachers are enrolled in multicultural education courses.

WHAT IS THE UNDERGRADUATE TEACHER EDUCATION ENROLLMENT?

Cleveland State University

The undergraduate teacher education enrollment was not available at Cleveland State University. However the total student body enrollment is as follows:

118 non-resident alien (Foreign Students)
1,819 Blacks
14 American Indians
67 Asians or Pacific Islanders
15,230 Caucasians

South Carolina State College

The undergraduate teacher education enrollment is 1,025. Of this number, 98% are Blacks and 2% are other minorities. There are no Indians nor Mexican Americans.

University of Houston

The estimated enrollment of the University of Houston is 30,000. Of this number, it is estimated that the undergraduate teacher education enrollment ranges from 3-4000 with Mexican Americans constituting from 10-15%: Indians, less than 1% and Blacks from 15-20%.

University of South Carolina

The University of South Carolina System had an enrollment of 34,000 students for the 1978-79 year. Of these, there are 22,000 enrolled at the Columbia Campus. The College of Education had 1200 undergraduate and 1500 graduate full time students. The College of Education faculty consists of 120. The student population consists of some Mexican Americans, some Indians, some Blacks, and some Asian Americans.
Texas Southern University

Texas Southern University has a student enrollment of 8000. Of this number 2000 are students from 50 different countries. There are 6000 black students. Also, there are some Mexican-Americans.

WHAT IS THE FUTURE OF MULTICULTURAL EDUCATION AT YOUR INSTITUTION?

Cleveland State University

The future of multicultural education at Cleveland State University is one of growth and development. There is the need to continue to expand the network through personal contact (telephone, site-visits, publicity) and research. It is planned to make Multicultural Education Day an annual event. Other projections include the initiation of a conference on multicultural education, increase involvement in cooperative efforts with those groups desiring help in developing various projects dealing with multicultural education, and continued efforts in faculty development. Future needs consist of funding for expanded services, additional staff, larger quarters, additional telephone lines, and a full-time director for the Multicultural Education Center.

South Carolina State College

The future is excellent. Through phases of unfoldment, the multicultural education program should be able to move into the area of Multicultural/International Education at both the undergraduate levels. Additionally, inservice training will be provided for experienced teachers.

University of Houston

At the University of Houston, the future of multicultural education appears very promising. Future goals include the following: (1) more effective monitoring system for determining the pervasiveness of the philosophy of cultural pluralism in the undergraduate competency based teacher education program, (2) greater emphasis on "domestic cross-cultural research," and (3) development of an evaluation system which will assist in determining the effectiveness of the undergraduate multicultural programs. In spite of several basic problems which continually plague multicultural education programs it is here to stay.

University of South Carolina

Multicultural education at the University of South Carolina is alive and well. Its future is one of expansion. The basic approach is to integrate multicultural education into the existing professional courses in the teacher preparation program. Additionally, a special course on multicultural education is in the developmental stage. The Early Childhood Education Laboratory provides a meaningful experience for prospective teachers to work with children and families of various ethnic and cultural backgrounds. Other innovative practices are in the planning stage in the Department of Early Childhood Education.

Texas Southern University

At Texas Southern University, multicultural education will continue to grow and develop. One of the goals is to seek endorsement (certification). Continual administrative and faculty support is anticipated. Some funding from Teacher Corp projects will enable the University to achieve its excellence in multicultural education.
PART III: CONCLUSIONS, IMPLICATIONS, AND RECOMMENDATIONS
CONCLUSIONS, IMPLICATIONS, AND RECOMMENDATIONS

An analysis of the data reveals the following conclusions and implications relative to the selected institutions with outstanding teacher preparation programs designed to enhance the desegregation process through multicultural programming.

CONCLUSIONS RELATED TO THE EARLY EVOLVEMENT OF THE MULTICULTURAL EDUCATION PROGRAMS WERE:

1. Generally, the majority of the programs were begun within the last four years.

2. The programs were in response to mandates from the State Department of Education Certification Division and the recently adopted multicultural education standard by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education.

3. In general the programs struggled through various stages after initiation by individual faculty members.

4. A committee, council or advisory board was established to provide leadership.

5. Short range goals ranged from offering a course on multicultural education to the establishment of a Multicultural Education Center and/or offering of Masters' and Doctors' degrees in multicultural education, within a Department of Curriculum and Instruction in a College of Education.

6. Long range goals included the offering of more courses on multicultural education, the expansion of the Multicultural Education Center, securing more financial support and the total integration of multicultural processes within the College of Education in particular and the University in general.

7. Difficulties encountered included some faculty resistance to change, racism, negative attitudes, and inadequate financial support.

8. Successes consisted of the establishment of a multicultural education program area, a Multicultural Education Center, course offerings in multicultural education, some integration of multicultural processes in existing courses, and the formation of some linkage among the faculty of the Colleges of Education and faculty in other disciplines.
9. Financial support generally came from "soft money" such as Teacher Corp, grants, and some hard money from the universities. Data on the approximate annual costs were not available.

10. Generally, there was administrative and faculty support although inadequate at times.

CONCLUSIONS RELATED TO DESCRIPTIONS OF THE CURRENT MULTICULTURAL EDUCATION PROGRAM:

1. The majority of the institutions had a wide variety of objectives for the teacher preparation program focusing on mission and purpose.

2. Generally, the philosophy of multicultural education was based on the American Association of College of Teacher Education statement of "No One Model American."

3. There was considerable commonality among the multicultural education competencies which the teacher education programs sought to develop.

4. The program design for multicultural education included courses, components, modules, units, mini-courses, field experiences, workshops, and institutes.

5. In general, components, modules, units, mini-courses, and field experiences were incorporated into existing courses. Workshops and institutes were used for the inservice education of experienced teachers.

6. State Department of Education Certification Division and the National Council For Accreditation of Teacher Education provided impetus for the initiation and expansion of multicultural education.

7. Generally, the students enrolled in multicultural education programs were those enrolled in the teacher preparation program.

8. Data for undergraduate teacher education program enrollments was not available for most of the institutions. However, the institutional total enrollment ranged from 4,000 to 30,000 with a wide diversity of ethnic and cultural diversity in the general university student population.

9. The future of multicultural education has been described as "promising," "excellent," "up and coming," and "it's her to stay."
IMPLICATIONS

The conclusions of this study should serve as a frame-of-reference for institutions which plan to initiate or expand a multicultural education program. Since the desegregation process is an integral part of multicultural education programming, a continuous effort must be made to disseminate the findings and conclusions of this investigation and to conduct further research of problems related to teacher preparation for desegregated settings.
RECOMMENDATIONS

For those institutions desiring to establish teacher preparation programs designed to enhance the desegregation process through multicultural programming, it is recommended that:

1. An examination be made of any multicultural education standards mandated by State Departments of Education Certification Division and/or National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education.

2. A philosophy of multicultural education be formulated.

3. A review be made of existing teacher education program objectives.

4. Multicultural processes be incorporated into teacher education program objectives.

5. A committee, council, or advisory board be established to provide leadership for multicultural education.

6. Short and long range goals be identified.

7. Creative strategies be designed for overcoming difficulties encountered such as faculty resistance to change, negative attitudes, racism, and inadequate administrative and financial support.

8. Education College faculties establish linkages with faculties in other disciplines.

9. Exploration be made of possible sources of financial support such as Teacher Corps, grants, etc. and "hard money" from the university/college.

10. A review be made of the listing of multicultural education competencies for teacher preparation programs.

11. In program designing, consideration be given to the following: courses, components, modules, units, minicourses, field experiences, workshops, and institutes.

12. Multicultural education be made available for all students enrolled in teacher preparation programs.

13. A Learning Resource Center be established for multicultural education materials or that such materials be placed in existing instructional resource centers.

What is the Multicultural Education Center at Cleveland State University?

The Multicultural Education Center, a resource center, was opened in the Fall Quarter of 1977 by the College of Education. One of a few Centers in the United States, it is the first in the Greater Cleveland area. Currently, it is operating on limited resources from the College of Education.

The Center plans the following:

- To organize an informational network of university and community resources pertaining to multicultural education. An opportunity to initiate dialogue through participation by individuals from various ethnic communities will be provided. These individuals will be able to serve as advisors, consultants, and resource personnel.

- To present workshops, seminars, and courses on multicultural education at the public school in-service level as well as for community agencies.

- To develop a multicultural curricular model for implementation within the College of Education at the pre-service level.

- To develop, implement, and evaluate curricular materials for use by professionals, students, and community agencies and organizations.

- To aid and encourage educational systems to engage in multicultural activities and exchanges.

- To sponsor and initiate local, regional, and national conferences on all phases of ethnicity and offer appropriate facilities and assistance for these meetings.

What influence will it have?

The Multicultural Education Center will be a valuable asset in promoting multicultural awareness at the local, regional, and state levels. Locally, in-service training on multicultural education could be provided for teachers, administrators, paraprofessionals, college educators, and community personnel. Also, multicultural educational experiences for area students could be arranged in the form of field trips, classroom speakers, and in-class activities. Various ethnic communities would be served through workshops specifically designed to meet their particular needs.

At the regional and state levels, the Multicultural Education Center will act as a clearinghouse for multicultural materials received. It will also design and organize periodic conferences and workshops dealing with general and specific topics on cultural pluralism.

How can we help you?

The Multicultural Education Center:

- can provide information about multicultural resources and offerings here at the University and in the Greater Cleveland area.

- can provide specialized bibliographies on various cultural groups.

- can provide names of speakers, consultants, community resource people, agencies, and organizations related to multicultural concerns.

- can provide information about multicultural tours.

- can develop workshops, seminars, and courses to fit the needs of school systems or communities.

- can provide facilities and assistance for school or community initiated meetings, conferences, etc. on multicultural education.

- can provide current information about new trends and materials in multicultural education.

LITERATURE DEALING WITH THE ITALIAN-AMERICAN EXPERIENCE

FICTION, DRAMA, AND POETRY

Play in three acts with obvious allusions to the Sacco-Vanzetti case of the 1920's.

Set in Bleecker Street, New York City. An account of the early years of Nino (actually the author) in America. This novel-biography shows the gradual adaptation of the customs and traditions of Valenti Angelo's home country to American ways. Recommended for junior high school.

Angelo, Valenti. HILL OF LITTLE MIRACLES. New York, Viking Press, 1942.

Set in San Francisco, this story recounts the experiences of Ricco Santo, his friends and family, as he lives the daily joys and sorrows of Telegraph Hill, the "hill of little miracles." Recommended for junior high school.

Play in two acts. An account of the Casales, an immigrant family. Father Casale, self-made, rich and self-centered, rules his family with a will of iron. Because he is their father and they see him subjectively, the sons and daughters of Angelo Casale submit to his patriarchal ways from both habit and custom— until, one day, Anna and Joey realize the self-destructiveness of his tyranny. At this point the conflict that is the basis of the play emerges.

Giunio Bruno, Seminarian, is ordained in Italy. He emigrates to America, where he marries a Polish Jew. Story told from the son's viewpoint.

Mangione, Jerre. THE WORLD AROUND DANilo DOLCI. New York, Harper, 1972. $3.95

A factual account of the Gandhi of Sicily, Danilo Dolci, who visited the United States in 1972.

Musical drama in three acts (five scenes) about Annina, the "saint" of Bleecker Street, and Michele, the rebel, and their tempestuous brother-sister relationship which impels them to tragedy.

Miller, Arthur. A VIEW FROM THE BRIDGE. New York, Bantam, 1972. 95¢

A one-act play set near the New York City waterfront. Protagonist, Eddie Carbone, endangers and, finally, loses his life.

A three-act play about a young Italian-American boy, Joe Bonaparte, who had hope of becoming a great violinist before inordinate ambition led him to the prize ring, where his talent as a fighter cut him off from music forever.

Pagano, Joseph. THE PAESANOS. Boston, Little, Brown, 1940.

An excellent series of family sketches about the struggles, sorrows, and antics of several generations of Maccaluccis—all paesanos.

Warm, intimate account of an Italian-American couple celebrating their fiftieth anniversary after a lifetime in America.

Play in three acts. Humorous account of what happens to Jimmy Potts when he gets a haircut and doesn't get hit by a truck. Set against the background of the LaGuardia administration. Fiorello, the man of the comic strips, is the inspiration for the play.

Comedy in two acts. Mama Caparuta, the power behind the throne, compromises to make peace with her Jewish daughter-in-law.

Puzo, Mario. THE FORTUNATE PILGRIM. New York, Lancer Books, 1965. $1.25

This is a powerful and persuasive story of life in the Italian-American community of Chelsea, New York City.

Doctor of Education in Multicultural Education

This program will prepare educators and others as multicultural specialists who are primarily concerned with the (1) development, implementation and evaluation of pluralistic teaching strategies and curriculum materials, (2) development, implementation and evaluation of bilingual teaching strategies, and (3) development of research designs applicable to multicultural situations in education.

DEGREE REQUIREMENTS

Degree requirements will consist of: (1) those specified as general degree requirements in the Graduate Studies Bulletin in force at the time of student's enrollment; (2) those specified in the Procedures and Policies Regulating the Doctor of Education Programs, published by the College of Education; and (3) those specified as specific requirements in this document. The program will require the completion of fifty-one to sixty semester hours of course work and a dissertation. The course work is distributed as follows:

1. A minimum of eighteen semester hours of course work in the major multicultural area as approved by the advisor.

2. The student is required to complete fifteen semester hours of course work in the three core areas: (a) disciplines supporting education; (b) research skills; and (c) contemporary education issues, including a minimum of three hours in each area. A list of approved core courses may be obtained at the Records Office.

3. The remaining fifteen semester hours of course work relevant to degree objectives in a field or fields within the College as approved by the advisor.

4. Nine to twelve semester hours of course work relevant to degree objectives in a field or fields outside of the College as approved by the advisor.

"The dissertation may receive a credit of 6-15 semester hours.

Multicultural/Bilingual Education Program
Master of Education (M.Ed.)
The Program Area

Bilingual education is a field with great opportunities for teachers who can speak Spanish and English. Bilingual education at the University of Houston Central Campus is part of the Multicultural/Bilingual Education Program Area, Department of Curriculum and Instruction.

Courses in the program area are offered during each semester and summer session. Rotation of offerings ensures that students can meet their degree plans.

Students already endorsed in bilingual education who wish to study for an M.Ed. with specialization in multicultural/bilingual education follow a degree plan similar to the one included here but flexible enough for adaptation to each student's needs and interests.

Students who are interested in the education of Mexican Americans but who are not bilingual are encouraged to study in this program area by following a degree plan similar to the one shown here but taking electives in the Department of English.

Admission to Program

To be endorsed in bilingual education, students must have Texas certification elementary or secondary, and must be able to comprehend, speak, read, and write both Spanish and English.

Prospective students should first talk with professors of bilingual education regarding their career plans. Next, they should follow admissions procedures outlined by the University of Houston Central Campus Graduate Admissions Office and the College of Education Graduate Records Office (Room 8 FH).

Once they have been accepted into the program, students may begin their coursework. A degree plan, worked out with the advisor, should be filed in the first semester of study.

Dear ________________:

We need your help! Please take a moment and think about the various aspects of our curriculum and how we involve your child in multicultural experiences outside of your home. Your responses will aid us in future curriculum planning.

The following questionnaire is designed to find out how you perceive your child's experiences here at the center regarding his/her exposure and involvement with persons of other cultures. No names are required on your response!

Thank you for your help and cooperation. It would be greatly appreciated if you would return these forms or send them by Wednesday, April 18, 1979.

Dr. Claudette Merrell Ligons, Facilitator

General Objective

This course was designed to illuminate the positive aspects of ethnic, racial, cultural, sexual, and individual differences among people. Emphasis will be given to both affective and cognitive dimensions of teacher/parent competencies essential for successful interaction with people in our multicultural, multi-linguistic world community.

Competency Expectations

1. Share the responsibility for development of a productive social and academic climate as the semester progresses.

2. Define the curriculum process and build a rationale for the obligation to incorporate multicultural components into curricula experiences/content in a democratic and culturally pluralistic society.

3. Articulate your philosophy related to: a) the learner; b) the ideal climate for learning; c) societal expectations of schools; d) the sources of curriculum; and e) your role in curriculum decision-making.

4. Indicate how Competency-Based Education can serve to enhance or inhibit the processes of multiculturalizing curriculum.

5. Articulate definition of selected concepts central to an adequate understanding of multicultural and multi-ethnic phenomena.

6. Generate basic assumptions in multicultural programs that are congruent with basic assumptions in a democratic society.

7. Identify some of the major issues in cultural and ethnic patterns of communication that impact learning. These include verbal, nonverbal, and transracial dimensions of communication.

8. Delineate a set of criteria for selection and use of multicultural resources for teaching.
9. Develop awareness of the need to use consciously established criteria in the conceptualization and designing of multicultural teaching aids.

10. Articulate a knowledge of the indices that contribute to success/failure of students in our multicultural society. These include teacher attitude, cultural bias in testing, teacher knowledge and responsiveness to the diversity in life styles, communication patterns, income levels, values among other variables.

11. Generate ideas for the use of Roots as an intercultural set of learning experiences that may be incorporated into particular segments of the established curriculum.

12. Develop a multicultural resource folder to be used on an on-going basis in your class. These may be newspaper clippings, magazine articles, pictures, small scale bulletin boards, etc.

13. Design a multicultural teaching aid to be used as an introduction, complement, support of culminating part of a given lesson.

14. Complete a community analysis field study of the school community in which you serve and present a summary of findings to the class.

Learning Experiences

Note: The numbers of the learning routes correspond to the respective objectives stated above. For instance, 1.1 etc. are designed to assist students to attain objective 1.

1.1 Participate in interpersonal relations experiences

1.2 Assume responsibility for making the small and large group discussions interesting and productive related to stated objectives

1.3 Complete assigned and suggested readings and other assignments PROMPTLY

2.1 Review some curriculum books and generate selected definitions of the curriculum process.

2.2 Define curriculum as you view it. Share these views with others in a small group

2.3 Attend the lecture on curriculum, some definitions, a rationale, etc.
3.1 Write your philosophy of education as it relates to the variables (a-e) identified in stated objective.

3.2 Participate in class discussion on "My Philosophy of Education." Give thought to assumptions that promote the goals of multicultural education.

4.1 View slide-tape presentation: Wilford Weber. "An Introduction to Competency-Based Teacher Education"

4.2 Participate in small group interaction.

4.3 Incorporate ideas from selected readings and film; participate in summary and synthesis session.

5.1 Read definitions of selected terms on hand-out.

5.2 Generate additional definitions of selected terms from readings.

6.1 Identify your assumptions of multicultural programs.

6.2 Attend lecture on Congruent Assumptions in Multicultural and CBTE Programs.

7.1 Read assigned articles in texts, journals, etc.

7.2 Select articles from your resource file that will facilitate discussion of stated issues in small groups.

8.1 Attend lecture-demonstration on Conceptualizing and Designing Multicultural resources.

8.2 Read selected research articles.

9.1 Design a multicultural teaching aid and define (in written form) the learning objective/objectives, how it would be used as a resource etc.

9.2 Based on professional experiences, define factors that contribute to student success/failure in the schooling process.

10.1 Attend symposium on selected topic.

11.1 Small group discussion and sharing on how Roots can be utilized for incorporating multicultural/intercultural ideas into curriculum.

11.2 Attend summary and synthesis session on "Roots" in the curriculum.
12.1 Collect clippings from newspapers, magazines, etc. as they relate to differences and similarities in sex, age, ethnicity, culture, etc.

12.2 Display resource file during a given class session; share ideas for use

13.1 Demonstrate the use of the teaching aid during designated class session

14.1 Attend lecture-discussion on "A Rationale for Community Research"

14.2 Present a summary of findings

Students are expected to participate consistently during scheduled instructional sessions. Other supportive learning experiences may be completed individually or in small groups. Each student is responsible for demonstration of each competency delineated on preceding pages. The assigned grade at the end of the semester will reflect demonstration of mastery. Completion of assignments will not in itself guarantee a passing grade.

EDAS 755
Second Summer
1979

The goals and objectives of this course are to develop skills in rationale thinking, decision making, and problem solving as they relate to Multicultural Education. Due to the nature of the course our schedule will remain flexible. However, we will meet Thursday, July 12 and Friday, July 13 at the regularly assigned time. During Hotline we will meet daily (July 16-20) and from 9-3 July 23-27.

You will make a presentation on one of the topics listed or you may invite an appropriate person to talk to the class. These presentations should address aspects of the culture, what we can do in schools to make education more attainable, their food, arts, and music. If you invite a speaker you must provide the speaker with a suggested outline and be a moderator for the discussion that follows. Introduce your speaker in a professional manner and provide them with any assistance.
