This packet is designed to assist teachers and counselors of Adult Basic Education (ABE) and Graduate Equivalent Degree (GED) students to conduct practical individualized and small group workshops geared toward helping ABE students to look for a job. Each session is designed to take approximately three hours and employ the following formats: large group presentations; small group interaction and discussion; large and small group task projects; video-taped presentations; and role-playing scenarios. The five workshop sessions outlined in the guide cover the following topics: communicating with others, understanding salable skills, competing with paperwork (applications and résumés), developing effective interviewing techniques, and planning for action (the job campaign). The packet also contains learning objectives for the workshops, a list of counselors' resources, materials needed, and sample forms to be reproduced and used in the workshop sessions. (KC)

INTRODUCTION

Typically, ABE students do not move effectively within the labor market. They experience problems in locating potential jobs, identifying those that best utilize their talents, and applying successfully for those jobs. Unfortunately, culturally disadvantaged ABE students usually experience even greater job-finding difficulties since they have had even less opportunity to develop essential job-search skills. This packet, therefore, has been designed to assist ABE/GED counselors/educators in the facilitation of practical individualized and small group workshop sessions geared toward helping ABE students overcome those job-search obstacles.

Each session, as presented, takes approximately three hours and employs the following formats:

- Large group presentations;
- Small group interaction and discussion;
- Large and small group task projects;
- Video-taped presentations; and
- Role-playing scenarios.

The general outline can be adapted for use with almost any population group.
OBJECTIVES

A: To enhance and expand the participant's self-knowledge as related to career choices and job-search tasks.

B. To provide viable skills in the following areas:

1. Self-assessment of present skills and preferred job characteristics;
2. Correct completion of job application forms;
3. Preparation of resume/personal data sheet;
4. Knowledge and acquisition of good job interviewing techniques;
5. Effective utilization of local resources.
To help ensure the derivation of maximum benefits from the various workshop exercises, certain minimal background reading is suggested for the workshop facilitator:

   Includes a section on how to translate Holland Codes into Dot Codes, especially useful with The Self Directed Search and the Quick Job-Hunting Map.

Total cost for facilitator's reference materials is $20.45. ($4.95 if you borrow Parachute and Three Boxes of Life from your local library.)

Some other very good resources that will help counselors and teachers stay abreast of the latest in career-development information are:

2. Newsletter, P.O. Box 379, Walnut Creek, California, 94596. $5.00

3. Bulletin, National Center for Educational Brokering, 405 Oak Street, Syracuse, New York, 13203. $11.00
MATERIALS NEEDED TO FACILITATE SESSIONS

A. "The Basic Necessities"

1. The Beginning, Quick Job Hunting Map (Bolles, Zenoff)
2. Dictionary of Occupational Titles (U. S. Department of Labor)
4. "Woman in Interview" (Video cassette/Pennsylvania State University) and/or "Job Interviews" (Video cassette/Goldmark Communications Corporation), or any video-taped presentation of a job interview.
5. Local job application forms, newspapers, and phone books.
6. Various handouts to illustrate everything discussed during the workshop.

B. "Very Useful Extras"

1. The Self-Directed Search (Interest Survey/Holland)
2. Guide for Occupational Exploration (U. S. Department of Labor)
3. How to Write Better Resumes (Lewis)
4. Civil Service Applications, Pamphlets, and summary of Examinations (State Civil Service commission)
5. Apprenticeship and Trade School Information (NATTS)
6. Information on any of the other local educational and/or training programs (C.E.T.A., Continuing Education, Community Colleges, etc.)
7. Basic Grant Application forms and the Student Consumer's Guide (U. S. Department of HEW)
8. Career Emphasis Series (Olympus)
9. Copies of cover letters and resumes generated by participants in previous job search workshops.
SESSION OUTLINE

A. SESSION I

1. Workshop introduction based on workshop leader's interpretation of concepts presented in the "vital pages" as listed under resources (Page 3). Workshop leader should emphasize the importance of self-understanding and its relationship to job satisfaction, choosing the right job, etc. Workshop leader should also stress that "finding a job is a job", and that the ultimate responsibility of landing the best job rests with the participants - ACTIVE JOB SEARCH VERSUS PASSIVE JOB - WAIT!

2. Small group assignment and Icebreaker.

ICEBREAKER

Materials: None

Procedure:
Workshop leader asks the participants to pair-up with someone in the group that they don't know very well and spend about ten minutes getting to know as much as they can about each other. (After the first five minutes, workshop leader should announce that if both people haven't gotten a chance to speak that there are only five minutes left and it's now the other person's turn.) At the end of ten minutes, the individuals from each dyad introduce their partner to the larger group using the information they have acquired during this short exchange.

Leader's Role:
After all group members have introduced each other, the workshop leader explains how typical it is for people, in general, to describe themselves in terms of their jobs, geographic locations, and family statistics. (Note: For those individuals who have not been successful in their employment and/or some other significant area of their lives, as would typically be the case with our disadvantaged ABE/GED students, there often appears to be much to offer in terms of a self-description. Thus, their response in the dyad might be, "Well, I quit school eight years ago. My husband left me last year, and he's in jail now in Ohio or somewhere. I'm laid-off from my job at the factory. I'm broke, and I've got four little kids at home depending on me. Other than that, there's not too much to tell, except that I really need a job!")

By generalizing this exercise into an interview scenario, the workshop leader can emphasize that an employer usually makes the decision of whether or not to hire a particular job-applicant based on the impression she/he makes within the first five minutes of the interview. That's why it's so essential for an applicant to present a clear picture of his/her interests, abilities, skills, and personal characteristics, and not just to regurgitate the same "vital statistics" already presented to the interviewer via the company's job application form. The leader should once again stress that a large part of the workshop will concentrate on helping the participants understand, define, and express this broader-based self-image.
Variation:

If the large group has more than ten members, the workshop leader should have everyone count-off by twos. The "ones" will then belong to smaller group A, and the "twos" to smaller group B. This should be done before beginning the Icebreaker Exercise.

PARTY EXERCISE

Materials: None
Procedure:

After introducing the workbook, the workshop leader asks the participants to turn to page 4, "What Skills You Have and Most Enjoy Using", and to carefully examine each of the six groups of people as presented in the Party Exercise. After about five minutes, the workshop leader asks the participants to complete steps 1-4 on page 5, but not to allow anyone else in their group to see their answers. Partners are then asked to try to guess each other's choices. Note: Even if the partners can guess each other's first choices, they will almost never be able to guess the second or third choice of skill-groupings.

Leader's Role:

After all participants have had a chance to interact with each other via the Party Exercise, the workshop leader emphasizes that the most important questions on the interviewer's mind are those questions that most often go unasked, for instance: "What kind of a person are you? How well do you manage yourself in relation to those in authority and your co-workers? Are you a person who will exacerbate the company/employee problems, or who will help to provide solutions to those problems? What kind of a person are you to work with, to talk to, etc.? What are you really like?"

The Party Exercise is based on the theory that we are most attracted to groups of people and skills that we most enjoy. Since many people have hobbies and participate in activities that are never reflected on a job application form, the workshop leader should stress how important it is for participants to talk about these interests during a job interview.

4. Evaluation of Session.

Materials: Short evaluation forms*, pencils. (*See Appendix A).
Procedure:

Each participant is asked to anonymously respond to the questions on the short evaluation form before leaving the session.
B. SESSION II

1. Introduction to the idea of "functional skills" drawn from the concepts presented in The Three Boxes of Life (pages 137–155).

2. Group exercise on roles.

ROLES WE PLAY

Materials: "The Beginning Quick Job-Hunting Map", blank sheet of paper, pencils.

Procedure:
Workshop leader leads the group in a brainstorming exercise of all the different roles people play in life. For example, if you are a parent and work as a laborer, some of your roles might be: husband, teacher, athlete, cook, consumer, clockwatcher, follower, citizen, etc. Then each participant is asked to construct her/his own list of roles that she/he currently plays (or has played) in life. Everyone is encouraged to come up with at least ten roles.

Variation:
Participants are asked to make a list of all the jobs they have ever held, full or part-time, paid or unpaid. (See Quick Job-Hunting Map, page 6, for more ideas).

3. Completion of workbook.

TRANSFERABLE SKILLS INVENTORY

Materials: "The Beginning Quick Job-Hunting Map", paper, pencils, and a brightly colored pen or crayon for each student.

Procedure:
Using the list of roles generated through the previous exercise, participants choose seven major roles or past job titles and enter these at the top of the Skills Inventory (See Quick Job-Hunting Map, page 9). Participants then follow the instructions given on pages 8 and 17 (Quick Job-Hunting Map) to complete the Inventory.

Leader's Role:
Workshop leader should clarify the instructions given in the workbook to ensure that all participants understand the exercise. Since everyone will be completing the Inventory at his/her own speed, the workshop leader can help each participant access his/her Patterns and Priorities (See Quick Job-Hunting Map, page 17) individually.

Procedure:
Under the guidance of the workshop leader, participants should complete the exercises in the workbook up through page 25. Helpful Hint: To save time print-up several grids for each participant in advance. (See Appendix B).

Leader’s Role:
After all the participants have filled in the diagram on pages 24 and 25, the leader, once again, divides the group into its original dyads (Session I). The partners will again be allowed five minutes each to talk about themselves to their partners, incorporating the new “self image” phrases and ideas gleaned from the exercises.

4. Evaluation of Session.

Materials: Short evaluation forms, pencils.

Procedure:
Each participant is asked to respond anonymously to the questions on the short evaluation form before leaving the session.
C. SESSION III

1. Introduction covering the purpose of job application forms and emphasizing the importance of completing the forms accurately and neatly.

2. Review of the information being sought on job application forms.

PROJECT "IMAGE"

Materials: Blank job application forms; one per student, handouts of samples of "good" and "bad" completions of job applications (See Appendix C), The Dictionary of Occupational Titles.

Procedure:

After participants have had enough time to examine the handouts, they are led through the completion of the blank application form, step-by-step by the workshop leader.

Leader's Role:

The workshop leader should emphasize that people are often picked for an interview on the basis of their "paperwork" — the job application form. This may be the only contact that a job-applicant has with a prospective employer! The workshop leader discusses the meaning and importance of each section, explains precisely how each item is to be filled in, and responds to questions that are the particular concerns of the workshop participants.

3. Group discussion on resumes — information being sought on job application forms versus information being presented on resumes/personal data sheets, functional versus chronological resumes, etc.

4. Individualized resume/personal data sheet preparation, using resumes and cover letters prepared by former workshop participants to stimulate ideas (See Appendix D).

Note: The Dictionary of Occupational Titles is a valuable resource to use in helping workshop participants translate a one-word job title into a descriptive phrase or paragraph that will depict the various duties performed on the job, presenting a clearer picture of their work-related skills.

5. Evaluation of session.

Materials: Short evaluation forms, pencils.

Procedure:

Each participant is asked to respond anonymously to the questions on the short evaluation form before leaving the session.
D. SESSION IV

1. Large group lecture and discussion of the interviewing process from the employer's point of view.

2. "Job Interview" (or any video-taped interview of a job applicant), followed by a group discussion of whether or not participants would hire this particular job applicant.

3. Distribution of the job application form and resume of the video-taped interviewee for group's perusal as her prospective employers.

4. "Woman in Interview" (or any video-taped interview of a job applicant with corresponding completed job application form and resume as presented above), followed by the completion of the interview analysis form and a discussion of the varied results. (See Appendix E).

   Note: Analysis of a video-taped job interview is especially helpful and non-threatening way to allow workshop participants to experience first-hand how quickly they (as the prospective employers) form positive/negative impressions of the interviewee, to help them realize the myriad of factors that determines the outcome of the interview, and to introduce a role-playing situation.

5. Role-play of job interview — optional, depending on time available, group size, etc.

Materials: Short evaluation forms, pencils.

Procedure:

Each participant is asked to respond anonymously to the questions on the short evaluation form before leaving session.
E. SESSION V

1. Discussion of the effective utilization of local job-search resources.

2. Explanation and presentation of available job-search/career decision-making aids.

3. Time for workshop participants to acquaint themselves with the different resources and materials that are available and to get some "hands-on" experience.

JOB SEARCH TECHNIQUES

Materials: Various handouts, props, and aids provided and/or designed by the workshop leader; paper, pencils.

Procedure:
Under the direction of the workshop leader, the workshop participants use worksheets, aids, and props to "try-out" each of the suggested job-search methods. Example: YELLOW PAGES (See Appendix F).

Leader's Role:
Using a resource guide such as "Emphasis: Change I!", pages 18-36, from the Career Emphasis Series (Olympus), the workshop leader reviews each job-search technique and designs exercises that will not only demonstrate the practical application of the various methods, but will also provide the participants with the opportunity to experience several of these techniques before leaving the supportive atmosphere of the group. The workshop leader must be apprised of current local resources in order to design worksheets and exercises relevant to the geographic location of his/her workshop participants. General information is not nearly as effective for this particular exercise.

4. Wrap up discussion of all the workshop sessions.

5. Evaluation of workshop.

Materials: Long evaluation forms*, pencils. *(See Appendix G)

Procedure:
Each participant is asked to respond anonymously to the questions on the long evaluation form before leaving the session.

Dear Sir:

Enclosed you will find my resume in response to your advertisement for a clerk-typist. I have taken night classes in Typing (50 wpm) and in General Office Practice, which included learning to use the various office machines.

I feel if given a chance I could be an asset to your company. I learn very easily, get along very well with the public and have never had any problems with my fellow workers. I have an excellent employment record.

My phone number is (814) 355-9138. I can be reached every day until 3:30 p.m. I am looking forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Betty D. Benner
