This counselor's guide is part of the HAVE (Homemaking and Volunteer Experience) Skills materials designed to help women identify the job-relevant skills they have learned as homemakers and volunteers and to match those skills with paid jobs. The main purpose of this is to help counselors work with women who are entering paid work after spending time as homemakers or volunteers. Materials in this guide, the accompanying Women's Workbook, and the employer's guide can also be used to help working women use their unpaid work skills for job changes or advancement. The introductory chapter discusses the rationale for recognizing homemaking and volunteer skills and explains the design of the model HAVE Skills program. The remainder of the guide is divided into 12 sections; each section outlines a HAVE Skills Counseling Program session. The sessions concentrate on identifying skills, reviewing experiences, matching skills to occupations, identifying job values and needs, exploring occupations, writing resumes, searching for jobs, and conducting a final wrap-up and evaluation. The appendices contain participant worksheets that are also found in the Women's Workbook along with other supplemental materials. A selected bibliography of career counseling materials for use with adult women is also included. (NRB)

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Many individuals have had a part in the development of the Project HAVE Skills materials. The project staff wishes to thank:

- the women who responded to the survey about homemaking and volunteer work;
- the employers and personnel specialists who responded to the questionnaire about the job-relevance of skills learned in homemaking and volunteer work;
- the counselors who reviewed our first attempt at producing the HAVE Skills Job Chart; and
- the women, counselors, employers, and personnel specialists who helped us by reviewing and field-testing these materials.

We also wish to acknowledge the substantial contributions made to the development of these materials by the members of the Project HAVE Skills Advisory Committee: Winifred Borden, Laura Lee Geraghty, Alex Kassel, Vicki Kramer, Herta Loeser, Lourdes Miranda-King, Joseph Quaranta, Gloria Scott, Tish Sommers, and Marilyn Wiener.

Ruth Sugerman, an intern from Creative Alternatives for Women, Jenkintown, Pennsylvania, was especially helpful in assisting with the final revisions of these materials and drafting portions of the Counselor's Guide.

Finally, we wish to thank Doris Shakin of the Women's Program Staff for her assistance as project officer.

INTRODUCTION

The main purpose of this guide is to help counselors who work with women who are entering or returning to paid work after spending a period of time as homemakers and volunteers. HAVE Skills stands for Homemaking And Volunteer Experience Skills.

This Counselor's Guide is designed to accompany the Project HAVE Skills Women's Workbook. The main purpose of these materials is to help women identify the job-relevant skills they have learned as homemakers and volunteers and to match those skills with paid jobs. An employer's guide is also available. These materials were developed under a grant from the Women's Educational Equity Act Program. The HAVE Skills materials can also be used to help women currently in the labor force use their unpaid work skills in job changing or advancement.

This guide is not intended to cover all aspects of career counseling for adult women who are entering or returning to paid work. It is intended to be used by individuals experienced in working with re-entry women. If you are not experienced in counseling such women, we recommend that you obtain a copy of How Women Find Jobs: A Guide for Workshop Leaders that is available from Education Development Center, 55 Chapel Street, Newton, Massachusetts 02160 (toll-free phone: 800/225-3088).

Why It Is Important to Recognize Women's Homemaking and Volunteer Work Skills. Most counselors are aware that improved recognition, by employers, of the skills that women learn in homemaking, community service, volunteer work, and other unpaid work would significantly improve the self-concept of adult women returning to the labor force. Fewer counselors are aware that failure to recognize women's experiential learning may be contrary to equal employment opportunity goals.

A leaflet on Equal Employment Opportunity for State and Local Governments, published by the United States Civil Service Commission, says:

Many State and local governments do not permit consideration of volunteer or other unpaid work when they evaluate the experience of applicants for employment. This policy impacts adversely on minorities and women. Minorities and women have been excluded from jobs which might give the experience necessary to qualify for better jobs. In addition, women more than any other group of employees interrupt their careers for a period of time to assume the responsibilities of having children and raising them. Nevertheless they have engaged in productive volunteer activity from which they have developed knowledge and skills. This experience enhances their value as prospective employees and ought to be recognized.

A recent paper by Dr. Lorraine Eyde, of the Personnel Research and Development Center, U.S. Office of Personnel Management, points out that the use of traditional credentials, such as diplomas, to determine who should be hired or promoted frequently eliminates a large proportion of the members of some groups.

Legal review articles also support the elimination of credential requirements and their replacement with job related skills. For example, an article by White and Francis in Georgetown Law Review, states that "credential requirements are inherently discriminatory because minorities, women, and older workers have less time and money to spend on schooling than white males." They continue by noting that "credential requirements undervalue experience and overvalue educational achievement" and say that use of credential requirements means that job applicants must have acquired their knowledge and skills in a certain way.

Understanding the Re-Entry Woman's Paid Work Decisions. Both the decision to return to paid employment and the job choice are based on complex factors. These decisions are affected by the individual woman's current situation, her past experiences, and her psychological makeup. The woman's decisions are also affected by external factors over which she has no control, such as job opportunities at the time and place she begins her search and the extent to which sex role stereotypes affect these opportunities. A diagram, showing the many factors that go into women's paid work decisions and showing how these factors interact, is shown on the next page.
Model of the Factors Involved in Adult Women's Paid Work Choices

Situational Factors
- Age
- Health
- Income
- Marital Status
- Mobility
- Number and Age of Children
- Race
- Residence
- Social Class

Psychological Factors
- Abilities
- Attitudes
- Expectations
- Fear of Failure/Success
- Interests
- Need for Achievement
- Need for Independence
- Self-Concept
- Sex Role Conflicts
- Work Values

Paid Work Choice

Experiential Factors
- Education
- Nonschool Learning
- Paid Work
- Role Models
- Sex Role Socialization
- Unpaid Work, such as Homemaking, Volunteer Work, and Community Service

Societal Factors
- Attitudes of Family, Peers, and Social Group
- Mass Media Influences
- Sex Discrimination
- Sex Role Stereotypes

Opportunity Factors
- Types of Jobs Available
- Supply/Demand for Workers
- Chance (finding out about job, etc.)
The first part of this diagram shows the situational factors which describe a woman currently. These include her age, race, health, marital status and other "givens" which, for the most part, cannot be changed by the woman or the counselor working with her. (Mobility, or ability to relocate to another city to find employment, is listed as a situational factor since most re-entry women are not able or willing to move to increase their employment possibilities.) These situational factors affect the work decisions directly (e.g., health may prohibit taking a job or certain kinds of jobs). The situational factors also interact with the experiential factors and with the psychological factors.

The next part of this diagram shows the experiential factors which describe the woman. These factors are central to the idea behind Project HAVE Skills: to consider all of the learning experiences in a woman's life, not only formal education and paid employment, when assessing her potential for re-entering paid employment. Thus, the experiential factors include nonschool learning and unpaid work, such as homemaking, volunteer work, and community service. The experiential factors also include sex role socialization (such as whether or not the woman was taught by her parents that certain kinds of jobs were inappropriate for women) and informed learning from role models (such as a working mother). One of the major goals of Project HAVE Skills is to help women be aware of all aspects of their life experience learning and to understand how this experience relates to their work choices. As the diagram shows, experience can directly affect the work choice. It also affects the situational factors (e.g., limited education may result in lower income) and the psychological factors (e.g., sex role socialization may have affected self-concept).

The next part of the diagram shows the psychological factors affecting women's work decisions. These include attitudes, expectations, interests, self-concept, and work values. These psychological factors are affected by both the situational and experiential factors. The counselor may find that by improving a woman's understanding of the extent and job-relevance of her experience, some of these psychological factors will be modified and the woman's job opportunities increased.

Societal factors, shown in the fourth part of the diagram, may have affected the woman's experience and her psychological makeup. These societal factors include the attitudes of others, mass media influences, sex discrimination and sex role stereotyping. When a woman finds that many of her friends and a large portion of society believe that "a woman's place is in the home," she may feel that it is "wrong" to seek employment.

The final part of the diagram shows the opportunity factors affecting a woman's work choice. These include the types of jobs available in her area, the supply and demand for workers in these jobs, and the chance element that enters into so many job decisions. It is important that every job counseling program for re-entry women have accurate and appropriate information about local job opportunities. Your state employment offices and your state occupational information coordinating committee can help you with this. The publication Occupations in Demand at Job Service Offices provides monthly information about jobs seeking workers.
Every program working with re-entry women must deal with all of the factors shown in this diagram if it is to be successful in helping women make good work choices.

A Model HAVE Skills Program. The diagram on page 6 shows how a model HAVE Skills Program for Re-Entry Women might be designed.

There is initial screening at the intake or registration stage. This allows the counselor to direct women who would be more appropriately served by other types of help to other agencies or services. It also allows the counselor to arrange for additional supportive services, for women who may need them, concurrent with the HAVE Skills counseling program.

The counseling program itself is designed around the 12 sessions outlined in this guide. Some programs may wish to add other sessions, such as role model speakers or work site visits.

Depending on the needs and interests of the program participants, counselors may want to design or hold specific skill training courses after or in conjunction with the HAVE Skills counseling sessions. We know of one program in New Jersey which teaches a basic electronics course providing the participants with the knowledge and skills necessary to pass the screening test for entrance into a company-sponsored training program for business machine repairers. A counseling center in Maryland runs a small fleet of vans and uses their maintenance as a way to teach automobile mechanics to re-entry women.

Another way in which counselors can help the participants acquire skills needed to re-enter the work force is through internships. Three of the more successful internship programs for re-entry women are: Project Re-Entry in Boston, Massachusetts; the Women's Management Development Project at Goucher College, Towson, Maryland; and Creative Alternatives for Women, Jenkintown, Pennsylvania. A book which describes a variety of such programs is Internship Programs for Women, available from the National Society for Internships and Experiential Education, 1735 Eye Street, NW., Washington, DC 20006, $3.00.

We are not recommending job development work be done by counselors. One purpose of the HAVE Skills program, or any job counseling program, is to give the participants the skills they need to develop their own jobs, both now and in the future. Counselors should try to establish and maintain good relationships with employers in their areas as part of collecting information about the local labor market, arranging for site visits to work places, obtaining speakers from local businesses, etc. Job openings information from employers flows spontaneously in conjunction with such activities.

One counseling center in Kansas has developed a job information form for local businesses. Each business was interviewed by program participants to obtain a description of the nature of their work, the kinds and number of jobs available, salary range, etc. This information is filed at the center and updated annually. Collecting and updating this information gives the participants experience similar to an information interview. The idea has been well received by the local businesses because they are now not being asked by many individuals throughout the year for the same kind of job information.

After the counseling program, we suggest a program of ongoing services. One of these might be a Job Club. In such a club the members of the counseling group meet each week to report on their job hunting activities and to share job leads with the other members. Such clubs help to keep the participants actively working on job finding and provide general peer-group support. Information on job openings which has been obtained by the counselor or the participants should be posted on a bulletin board. The purpose of the hotline is to enable the Job Club members to phone with questions, such as "Are there any new job postings?" or "Can someone go over my resume with me to see if I've featured the right things for this new job lead?"

You may wish to work with community groups and volunteer organizations in your area to encourage them to provide better descriptions of the work performed by volunteers and to provide reference forms which their volunteers can take to employers. A brochure with forms for this purpose has been developed and distributed by the California Office for Citizen Initiative and Voluntary Action in cooperation with other groups and businesses. Copies of these forms are given on pages 10 and 11. For more information about how volunteer organizations and businesses can cooperate, write to Volunteer: National Center for Citizen Involvement, P.O. Box 4179, Boulder, Colorado 80306.

Group Leadership Skills. Here are some suggestions for leading a counseling or employment training group which were prepared by the staff at Glassboro (New Jersey) State College.

GROUP LEADERSHIP SKILLS

LISTEN ACTIVELY

1. Look interested and maintain eye contact with the person who is speaking. Smile, nod and use gestures appropriately.

2. Concentrate on what the speaker is saying, not on what you are going to say next.

3. Avoid unnecessary interruptions. Give the speaker a chance to talk it out.

4. Do not be afraid of brief silences. The speaker may need time to think a little before s/he continues.

INCLUDE ALL GROUP MEMBERS

1. Be aware of other member's reactions. Some may be eager to react to the discussion but may show some hesitation. When an opportunity arises, without cutting someone else off, you may ask the hesitant member, "Mary, would you like to share something with the group?"

2. On the other hand, some may want to dominate the discussion and may need to be encouraged to let everyone have a chance to speak.
3. Always give group members a chance to pass on an activity. No one should be forced to participate. But be aware of isolates, those who seldom participate in activities and discussions, and attempt to include them by occasionally inviting them to take part. If they are not ready, do not be too insistent but continue to let them know that you are aware of their presence and that you would like them to become more active. When they do speak, make some encouraging statement like, "Thanks, Mary, for sharing that with us" or "That sounds like a wonderful experience," etc.

4. Use group members' names as often as possible to give them a feeling of recognition and belonging.

ENCOURAGE RECOGNITION OF FEELINGS

1. Observe the feelings being expressed by speakers as well as the content of their communication.

2. Acknowledge your awareness of group members' feelings in your comments. For example, after someone has spoken, you might say, "You really looked angry when you said that." If you have correctly interpreted the feeling, the group member might confirm your statement by responding, "I sure was mad and really lost my cool."

3. Reinforce feelings of success and achievement whenever possible.

4. Every group participant, including the leader(s), has a right to their own opinions and should be encouraged to share them with the group. They should, however, be identified as opinion. For example, one might say, "Some of you may not agree with me, but I feel this way..." Be sure to distinguish between opinions and facts.

5. Avoid judgmental interpretations such as "You're too lazy to make anything out of yourself." Encourage group members to concentrate on helping others in the group to feel better about themselves and not worse.

6. When the group is not moving along, be honest and say, "I wonder why we seem to be having trouble with this exercise," etc. Encourage honest discussion about how group members feel at the moment. Be ready to respond to feelings of group members with regard to suggested changes in the agenda, etc.

RESPOND TO GROUP PROGRESS

1. Summarize goals and objectives regularly. Help group members to establish their own goals and to discuss how successful they feel the group has been thus far in achieving its purpose. Try to keep the group moving toward the achievement of specific goals which are preferably related to the project's overall purpose.

2. Ask for clarification of group members' comments, if you are not sure of their meaning, by attempting to paraphrase or repeat a statement in your own words. For example, "Betty, correct me if I'm wrong, but I think I hear you saying you didn't like being an only child because you never could enjoy being close to other kids in your own home, and that you felt pretty isolated at times. Is that correct?

3. Draw connections between similarities of what group members are saying to help them realize that they do share ideas and experiences in common with their peer group and that some of their ideas and experiences are not so strange and unique as they may have thought. This will encourage a sense of self-acceptance and belonging. For example, you might say, "Jane shared her feeling about quitting school because she wasn't getting much out of the experience. Mary said that she was often tempted to quit school but that her mother wouldn't let her. Joan said that she wanted to finish school in order to get a better job later on, but she wasn't sure she could make it. All of you are expressing a common concern about what role school is really going to play in your lives."

Plan of This Guide. This guide is divided into sections. Each section outlines a HAVE Skills Counseling Program session. The sessions are: (1) How Can I Get a Job When All I've Done Is Homemaking and Volunteer Work? (2) Reviewing My Experiences, (3) Grouping Related Experiences, (4) Things I Can Do, (5) Finding Groups of Occupations That Use My Skills, (6) Selecting Occupations to Explore, (7) What Are My Job Needs and Values? (8) Exploring Occupations (this can be expanded into more than one session), (9) How Do I Find a Job? (10) Resume Writing and Job Search Planning, (11) Interviewing, and (12) Wrap-Up and Evaluation. Most of these sessions have homework assignments using the work sheets in the Women's Workbook. Copies of these work sheets are included in Appendix A of this guide. Copies of the "I Can" lists from the Women's Workbook are given in Appendix B. The Work Group Descriptions are in Appendix C. The HAVE Skills Work Groups Chart and Table appear in Appendix D. The HAVE Skills Job Exploration Table is in Appendix E. A table relating the D.O.T. Groups to the "I Can" lists is in Appendix F.

The material in this guide can be used, if desired, without the Women's Workbook by making photocopies of the Work Sheets and the Appendices.

SESSION 1

HOW CAN I GET A JOB WHEN ALL I'VE DONE IS HOMEMAKING AND VOLUNTEER WORK?

OBJECTIVES: The participants will become aware of the common concerns of other women returning to work; the participants will be more aware of how beliefs about women's roles may affect their job choices.

INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNIQUES: Lecture, Group Discussion.

MATERIALS: Project HAVE Skills Survey, pencils.

Flip chart and crayon/marking pen or blackboard and chalk.

ACTIVITIES:

A. Introductions

Purpose: To have the participants become acquainted and to feel at ease with each other.

1. The leader should stand at the door and greet each participant as she comes into the room. Introduce yourself and welcome the woman by name. For example, you might say:

   "Hello, I'm __________________. I'll be leading these sessions for women entering or returning to work." (Let the woman volunteer her name. If she does not, probe by asking, "And you are __________?"") Shake hands if you wish and say "woman's name, I'm happy to have you here" (or something similar).

2. When the entire group has assembled, ask the participants to introduce themselves and give a short statement of how they feel as they begin this course, i.e., "I am excited," "I am hopeful but wary," "I am enthusiastic." The leader should begin this by reintroducing herself/himself and making her/his statement.

3. Explanation of program. The leader should explain the purpose of the program. A schedule of meetings should be provided with a brief description of the content of each meeting. Introduce the Project HAVE Skills Women's Workbook at this time if you will be using it. However, you should not distribute the Project HAVE Skills Women's Workbook until the end of this session.

4. Getting acquainted. Use one or more of the following exercises to help the women become acquainted with each other:
a. "I'd Like You to Meet My Friend"

Have the women pair off. Give each woman 3 to 5 minutes to talk to her partner. (You may want to use a kitchen timer to control the time.) After each pair has gotten acquainted, have the group reassemble. Ask each woman to introduce her new friend and tell the others three interesting things about her.

b. "Who Are You?" (Best used with women who are at ease with written materials.)

Give each woman a piece of paper and a pencil. Ask her to write down ten different things that she might say in answer to the question, "Who Are You?" Have each woman read her first three answers. (Note that most women will answer in terms of their roles, e.g., I am a housewife, I am a widow, I am a mother, etc.)

c. Count Off

(First count the group silently to yourself. You want to create several small groups of similar or equal size.) Then count off by threes, fives or whatever other number will work best. Have all the "ones" regroup in one area, all the "twos" in another, etc. After they have assembled in these groups, ask each woman to introduce herself to the others in her group.

B. Sharing Hopes and Worries

Purpose: This session is to help women realize that others have many of the same hopes and worries which they have. It will also help women to see how some beliefs about women's roles may limit their job opportunities.

1. Distribute the Project HAVE Skills Survey (see Appendix A for a copy of this survey) and a pencil to each woman. Have the group complete the first three questions (Page 1) only. (Allow 5 minutes.) Using the flip chart or blackboard, ask each woman to tell what job she expects to get (Question 1). Next ask each woman to tell her "dream job" (Question 2). List these jobs in a separate column or on a different sheet of paper. Ask the women why these lists are different. In some groups women will have poor self-concepts and low expectations. In other groups expectations may be unrealistically high. Discuss possible solutions. (Allow 10 minutes.)

2. Next ask for a show of hands for each of the three possible responses to Question 3. Record these numbers on the blackboard or flip chart. Discuss why women often feel they have few skills and will have trouble finding a job. (Allow 10 minutes.) At the end of this discussion be sure to mention that the next two sessions of the program will help them learn about their own skills.

3. Now ask the women to complete the remainder of the Project HAVE Skills Survey (Questions 4 and 5 on pages 2-4; allow 10 minutes).
Introduce this exercise by saying: "People have different views about the kinds of things that women should do. The questions on pages 79 and 80 are to help me learn more about what you think. There is no one 'right' answer to these questions. You should check the answer that agrees with your own values and beliefs, not what you think someone else might want you to answer. Question 4 lists ten statements. For each, check if you agree or disagree with the statement. Question 5 lists over 40 different jobs. For each job, check if you think it can be done by women like you (point to first column) or if it cannot or should not be done by women like you (point to second column). Some of these jobs are ones you have heard of; some may be jobs that you have never heard of before. If you do not know what a job is, check this in the last column (point to column)."

After these questions have been completed, ask for a show of hands for responses about each job in Question 5. Call attention to the number of jobs eliminated because some people think that women cannot or should not do them. Provide information about the number of women going into nontraditional jobs. (You may also want to use these results in Session 7, What Are My Job Needs and Values?)

HOMEWORK

If you will be using the Project HAVE Skills Women's Workbook, distribute it now and ask the women to read Chapters 1 and 2 as their homework.
SESSION 2
REVIEWING MY EXPERIENCES

OBJECTIVES: To help women recognize that they have had a wide variety of experiences; to help women recognize that homemaking, community service, volunteer work, and similar activities have been valuable learning experiences.

At the end of this session, the participant should be able to list her homemaking, volunteer work, and other life experiences in which she has learned new skills.

INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNIQUES: Group discussion with completion of Work Sheet #1 as homework.

MATERIALS: Flip chart and marking pen/crayon.

Begin the session by reminding the group of how they felt in the last session when they talked about their skills and job expectations. Tell them that this session will help them see that they have many more skills than they realized. Many re-entry women will tell counselors that they have "done nothing." This activity will improve self-concepts in such women.

ACTIVITY: Developing a List of Life Experiences

1. Purpose of the activity

The purpose of this activity is to develop a list of the life experiences which women have, especially their homemaking, volunteer work, community service and other unpaid work.

Begin by saying:

"Today I want to talk with you about the many things you have done in your life. We will make a list of these things. Later we will go back over this list and talk about the skills you have learned while doing these things."

2. Review of experiences

Choose one person for an example (someone in the group who enjoys talking and being the center of attention). Ask the others to add items from their experiences.

a. "What kinds of things do you do in a typical day?" (List on flip chart.)

b. "What about other things you do less often—once a week or once a month?"

c. "Now think back to last year. Are there things that you did then that you no longer do? What are they?" (List on flip chart.)
d. "Now, how about before that? Were there different things that you did when your children were younger or when you lived somewhere else? What were they?" (List on flip chart.)

e. "Have we covered everything? What about school? What kinds of courses have you taken?" (List on flip chart.) "And what about paid work? What kinds of paid jobs have you done?" (List on flip chart.)

3. Analysis of experiences for scope and type

"Now, let's look over this list. Have we listed everything that is important? Do other people in this group have different experiences?"

a. "Are there any other Homemaking activities that we should list?"

Probe, as necessary, for:

- Cooking
- Cleaning
- Home financial management and budgeting
- Home maintenance and repair
- Home decorating
- Locating and utilizing neighborhood and community services
- Caring for aged, ill, or handicapped adults
- Shopping
- Providing transportation

b. "Are there any other Parenting activities that we should list?"

Probe, as necessary, for:

- Care of physically handicapped child
- Care of mentally retarded child
- Care of emotionally disturbed child
- Care of infant
- Care of preschoolers
- Care of school-age child
- Care of adolescent child

c. "Are there any other kinds of Volunteer Work that we should list?"

Probe, as necessary, for:

- Holding office; serving on board
- Managing money; serving as treasurer
- Managing people; selecting, assigning, and monitoring work
- Raising money
- Handling publicity
- Arranging for programs, speakers, etc.
- Helping others obtain their rights
Developing agenda or goals for the group
Trying to create social change; lobbying Counseling those who have problems
Teaching, tutoring, or training others (adults)
Selling things; running a sale, shop, or service for pay
Doing clerical or secretarial work
Providing health care assistance
Writing a newsletter
Researching Recreation
Providing adult guidance for children (Girl Scouts, Head Start)
Membership recruiting
Serving on advisory councils for community services, organizations, or agencies

"Are there any other kinds of Hobbies and Recreation that we should list?"

Probe, as necessary, for:

Sports
Arts and crafts, painting, ceramics, sculpture
Cooking
Needlework, such as knitting, crocheting, and sewing
Games, cards, puzzles
Gardening, plant care, flower arranging Designing and building home improvements
Photography
Building and constructing things (e.g., toys, stereo from kit, intercom, etc.)
Travel
Reading
Watching television
Listening to radio, stereo, etc.
Going to movies

"Are there any other kinds of Courses or Educational Programs that we should list?"

Probe, as necessary, for both credit and noncredit:

High school
Continuing education (noncredit courses)
4-year college
Junior or community college
Vocational, technical school
Business, secretarial school
Adult school
Correspondence or extension course
Other short-term courses or training programs
Job training program
Volunteer work training course/program
Instruction in art, music, and hobbies
f. "Are there any kinds of Paid Work that others have done that we haven't listed?"

Probe, as necessary, for:

- Industrial production (such as in a machine shop, in a printing plant, or on an assembly or production line)
- Office work (such as clerk, receptionist, or secretary, computer programmer, bank teller, insurance worker, administrator)
- Service work (such as a cook or waitress, beautician, household worker, guard, or police officer)
- Education (such as a teacher or a teacher's aide, librarian, or library aide)
- Sales (such as selling door-to-door, in a shop or department store, modeling, real estate agent, travel agent)
- Construction work (such as a builder, carpenter, mason, electrician, paperhanger, plumber, or roofer)
- Transportation work (such as an airline flight attendant, ticket agent, railroad conductor, or truck driver)
- Scientific and technical work (such as an engineer, drafter, physical or biological scientist, statistician, or science technician)
- Mechanic or Repairer (such as telephone repair, business machine repair, TV and radio repair, or locksmith)
- Health work (such as a dental assistant, medical technician, or laboratory worker, nurse or nurse's aide, occupational or physical therapist, or medical record administrator)
- Social Science work (such as an economist, geographer, historian, political scientist, or psychologist)
- Social Service work (such as counseling, homemaker or home health aide, park or recreation worker, social worker or social service aide)
- Art, Design, and Communications (such as artist, musician, dancer, designer, florist, radio or TV announcer)

Be sure that the group lists any part-time work. Be sure that work prior to marriage and while in high school is included. If necessary, go back over the entire list. Condense similar items, as appropriate.

HOMEWORK

Ask the participants to complete Work Sheet #1. If you have a group for whom writing autobiographic material may be a problem, you may wish to use this modified homework assignment task instead.

Give the participants the lists of homemaking activities (page 9 in the Women's Workbook) and volunteer work experiences (pages 10 to 13 in the Women's Workbook). They should then put a check (✓) beside each thing they have done and put a star (*) beside those things that they feel they did well, that they especially enjoyed, and/or that they would like to do in paid employment. The experiences, with both a check and a star, should be listed on a blank sheet of paper and used instead of Work Sheet #1.

If you are using the Women's Workbook, ask the participants to read pages 9 to 20 of Chapter 3.
SESSION 3

GROUPING RELATED EXPERIENCES

OBJECTIVES: To help women understand that their experiences have involved similar functional skills; to enable women to identify experiences in which they used related skills.

At the end of this session, the participant should be able to group her experiences into related activities and to describe her experiences in terms of functional skills.

INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNIQUES: Group discussion with completion of Work Sheet #2 as homework.

MATERIALS: Flip chart and marking pen/crayon.
If you are not using the Women's Workbook, enough pencils and copies of Work Sheet #2 for all participants.

The experience lists developed in Session 2 should be displayed where they can be read.

ACTIVITY 1: Reviewing Life Experiences

1. Purpose of this activity

This activity is to remind the participants of the experiences they discussed in Session 2. This review is necessary to prepare them for the main activity, grouping related experiences.

2. Begin by calling attention to the experience lists from the last session. Ask for one or two volunteers to read their experiences from Work Sheet #1, which they did as homework. Tell the group to list, as these are read, other new experiences that should be added to these lists. After the volunteer(s) has finished, add any new experiences to the list. Then ask the other members of the group if they listed any experiences on their work sheet which need to be added to these lists. Make any additions that are necessary.

ACTIVITY 2: Grouping Related Experiences

1. Purpose of this activity

The purpose of this activity is to help women group their experiences into related activities which involved learning or using similar skills and to describe their experiences in terms of functional skills.
Most adult women tend to describe their volunteer work and community service experiences by naming the organizations or groups they have worked with. This often creates problems when they seek employment. The employer may not know the volunteer organization and the kind of work that it does. Or the employer may make an incorrect inference about what the woman has done. For example, if a woman says "I've done a lot of work for the hospital," the employer may have the image of her as a nurse's aide. There is a wide range of other volunteer functions in hospitals: operating a bookmobile for patients, arranging flowers, assisting in the pharmacy, providing counseling under the supervision of a chaplain or psychiatrist, teaching crafts or games, providing emergency medical treatment, fund raising, photographing infants, greeting and directing visitors, and operating a gift shop—to name just a few. This activity will teach the participant to describe their experiences in a functional way. Remind the participants of this exercise when they begin to prepare functional resumes.

As most counselors know, Sidney Fine has developed a theory of three kinds of work-content skills. These are: (1) functional skills, rooted in aptitudes and refined by education or experience, which can be transferred from one kind of work to another; (2) specific-content skills, related to a particular job and learned through education or job experience; and (3) self-management skills, rooted in temperament, which determine individuals' adaptability to work environment and which affect their job values. We believe that women's homemaking and volunteer work experiences provide the opportunity for learning many functional skills and a few specific-content skills. In this activity we are dealing primarily with functional skills. The next session will help the participants to identify specific-content skills.

2. Begin by saying: "Now we are ready to go back over our list of experiences. We want to put these experiences into groups that are related because they involve similar skills. For example, you may have coped with the family budget, done bookkeeping and tax returns for the hospital gift shop, served as treasurer of your Parent-Teacher Organization, and maintained sales records for the Girl Scout cookie sale. These activities all involve skill in financial management."

"When we group your activities, we want to think about what you did, not the organization or place where you did the work. For example, you might also have written a newspaper article about the Girl Scout cookie sale and edited a newsletter for the Parent-Teacher Organization. Both of these activities involve communication skills. They should be grouped together; they should not be included with your financial skills." If necessary, add, "You should not group experiences as 'things I did for the Girl Scouts' or 'things I did for the hospital'."

Point to the list and say: "Here is a list of some of the titles that other women have used."

Write Administration/Management on the flip chart or blackboard. Then say: "Which of the experiences you have told me about today involve Administration or Management?"

(Probe as necessary, to elicit home management, holding office in a volunteer or community organization, leading youth groups, etc.)

List the experiences under the title.

Repeat for the other groups on the list as time allows.

HOMEWORK

End the session by telling the women that each of them will now make their own, personal list of experiences and groups of related experiences. Tell them to complete Work Sheet #2. If you are using the Women's Workbook, ask the women to read pages 21 to 24 of Chapter 3.
SESSION 4

THINGS I CAN DO

OBJECTIVE: To help women identify the skills they have learned from homemaking, volunteer work, community service, and other life experiences.

INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNIQUE: Group discussion with the completion of Work Sheet #3 as homework.

MATERIALS: Copies of Work Sheet #2 for review.
- Flip chart and marking pen or blackboard and chalk.
- If you are not using the Women's Workbook, enough copies of the "I Can" lists and Work Sheet #3 for all participants.

The table on the next page gives examples to help counselors relate the functional skills listed on page 21 of the Women's Workbook to the "I Can" lists.

ACTIVITIES:

1. Introduction of the Project HAVE Skills "I Can" Lists

   Be sure that each participant has a copy of the Women's Workbook or a set of the "I Can" lists. Then say: "Today we are going to use the 'I Can' lists. These are lists of some of the skills that other women, like you, learned through homemaking, volunteer work, community service, and other experiences. Remember that last time we talked about your experiences and then grouped together those experiences which used the same skill." If you are using the Women's Workbook, say, "Now turn to Appendix A of the Women's Workbook. Here are the titles of the 'I Can' lists." Call attention to the fact that some of the "I Can" lists have titles similar to the groups which were made in the last session.

2. Identifying Relevant "I Can" Lists

   Purpose: To assist the women in selecting the "I Can" lists most relevant to their experiences.

   Begin by having the women turn to Work Sheet #2 in their workbook.

   Say: "I am going to read the name of each of the 'I Can' lists. If you have a group on your work sheet with this name, or a similar name, raise your hand." Start with Administrator/Manager. Count the hands. Record the name of the "I Can" list and the number of women with this group on the flip chart or blackboard. Continue until all lists have been tallied.

   Then ask: "Do you have any other groups on your work sheet which we do not have on this list?" Elicit responses and determine if these groups are similar to one of the "I Can" lists (e.g., Supervision is similar to Administrator/Manager; Writing is included in the Public

3. Developing an "I Can" List

Purpose: To show women that there are many specific skills in each "I Can" list; to point out the range of individual differences in a given area of experiential learning.

Select one of the "I Can" areas which has a moderately high tally (e.g., Home Maintenance Technician). Have the group turn to the "I Can" list and read through it (allow 5 minutes). Write the name of the list at the top of a fresh page on the flip chart or on the blackboard. Ask for a volunteer. Have her read each item that she can do from the selected "I Can" list. Write these items on the flip chart or blackboard. Ask the woman if she has other skills in this area that are not on the "I Can" list; add them to the list you are making.

Now ask for a second volunteer and repeat this process to make a second "I Can" list using the responses of this person. Ask the volunteer to read the items she can do and to add any other related skills she has. Point out that, although these two women have experience in the same area, each has learned a somewhat different set of skills.

Have the group pair off or divide into smaller units based on similar experience areas. One person should serve as the "secretary"; she will need several large sheets of paper and a marker. The other person (or one of the others) in each group should select another experience area from Work Sheet #2 and indicate the "I Can" list to which it relates. Have her read the items from this "I Can" list that describe her skills. Then have her add any other skills related to this area. The secretary should write down all of these items to form an individual "I Can" list. The counselor should circulate among the group to answer any questions. Have the group reassemble after 15-20 minutes. Mount the charts on the wall and discuss feelings and questions concerning this activity.

HOMEWORK

Ask the participants to complete Work Sheet #3. If you are using the Women's Workbook, ask the participants to read Chapter 4.
SESSION 5
FINDING GROUPS OF OCCUPATIONS THAT USE MY SKILLS

OBJECTIVES: To show the participants that occupations can be organized into groups which involve similar skills; to teach the participants how to identify work groups using their homemaking and volunteer experience skills.

At the end of this session participants should be able to use the Work Groups Chart and/or Table to identify groups and subgroups of jobs which use their skills.

INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNIQUES: Lecture and demonstration. Counselor instructs group in use of Work Groups Chart and Table.

MATERIALS: Copies of Work Sheet #3 for review.
Flip chart and marking pen/crayon or blackboard and chalk.
Rulers to facilitate reading of the Work Groups Chart.
If you are not using the Women’s Workbook, enough copies of the HAVE Skills Chart and Table, Work Group Descriptions, and Work Sheet #4 for all participants.

ACTIVITIES:

1. Review of the "I Can" lists

Purpose: To record and tally the titles of the "I Can" lists used by the participants.

Ask the members of the group to give the titles of their "I Can" lists. Record and tally these on the flip chart or blackboard. Explain that the skills in these lists are used in many kinds of occupations.

2. Introduction of Work Groups

Purpose: To familiarize the participants with the concept of work groups; to introduce the Guide for Occupational Exploration.

Begin by explaining that occupations can be grouped together into activities that use similar skills. Explain that these are called work groups. Have the participants turn to Appendix B of the Women’s Workbook (or Guide for Occupational Exploration) and read the descriptions of one or two groups. If you are using the Women’s Workbook, tell the participants that these descriptions come from the Guide for Occupational Exploration. Show the participants the Guide and explain that copies will be available for their use.
3. Use of the HAVE Skills Work Groups Chart

Purpose: To teach the participants how to use the chart to find work groups that use their skills.

Have the participants turn to the Work Groups Chart (page 35 of the Women's Workbook). Then say:

"Today we are going to learn how to use this chart. This chart will help you find work groups that use the skills you have learned through homemaking, community service, and volunteer work."

Distribute rulers. Explain that this will help the participants read across the chart in a straight line. Then say:

"Look at the chart. The left-hand column (POINT) has the names of the 'I Can' lists. The numbers across the top (POINT) are the numbers of the work groups in the Guide for Occupational Exploration. A mark opposite the name of each 'I Can' list and under the number of a work group (DEMONSTRATE) shows you that this work group includes jobs that use skills from this 'I Can' list. There are three kinds of marks on this chart. A black dot (o) means that the work group has many occupations using these 'I Can' skills. A white dot (o) means that the work group has a subgroup with occupations using these skills. A star (*) means that the work group or subgroup has only a few occupations using these skills."

Pick an "I Can" list that most members of the group used (refer to the tallies in Activity 1). Write its name on the flip chart or blackboard. Ask a volunteer to read the numbers of the work groups which have black dots. Write these numbers on the flip chart. Then ask another member to read, from Appendix C, the names of these work groups. Write these names beside the numbers. Pick one or two of these work group titles and ask the participants to read the descriptions of these work groups. (If you prefer, you may have a volunteer read these aloud.)

Repeat this process with another "I Can" list if there is any confusion.

Next ask for a volunteer to read the numbers of the work groups which white dot (o). Write these numbers on the flip chart or have a blackboard (leave a space to add the subgroup portion of the number). Then have another volunteer read the name of each work group. Write these on the flip chart or blackboard (leave space to add the subgroup description). Remind the participants that a white dot means that only one subgroup of the work group has jobs using the skills from this "I Can" list.

4. Use of the Work Groups Table

Purpose: To teach the participants how to identify the subgroups and specific occupations indicated by the white dots (o) and stars (*) on the Work Groups Table.
Have the participants turn to the Work Groups Table (Appendix C of the Women's Workbook). Tell them that this table has the same information as the Work Groups Chart but in more detail. Show that the "I Can" list titles are in the left-hand column and the work group names are in the right-hand column. Demonstrate how, for the "I Can" list you are using, the groups listed in CAPITAL letters correspond to the groups marked on the chart with a black dot.

Then turn to the list of groups that were marked with a white dot. Point to the section of the table that shows these in regular type. Point out that after the name of the work group there is a comma, then the name of the subgroup. Point out, too, that there is a four digit number for work groups. Explain that the subgroups have two more numbers (following the dash) to identify the subgroup; thus subgroups have a total of six digits.

Have a volunteer read the names and numbers of the subgroups represented by the white dots.

Repeat this process with another "I Can" list if there is any confusion.

Repeat this process for occupations marked with a star (*).

HOMEWORK

Have the participants complete Work Sheet #4. If you are using the Women's Workbook, have the participants read pages 33 to 39 of Chapter 5.
SESSION 6
SELECTING OCCUPATIONS TO EXPLORE

OBJECTIVE: To have the participants identify occupations which may utilize their homemaking and volunteer work skills.

At the end of the session the participants should have a list of occupations which are related to their skills.

INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNIQUES: Lecture and workshop.

MATERIALS: Copies of Work Sheet #4 for review.
            Flip chart and marking pen/crayon or blackboard and chalk.
            Copies of the Guide for Occupational Exploration; Dictionary of Occupational Titles; and the Occupational Outlook Handbook (one for each participant or small group of participants).
            If you are not using the Women's Workbook, enough copies of the Job Exploration Chart and Work Sheet #5 for each participant.

ACTIVITIES:

1. Review of the Work Groups Lists (Work Sheet #4)
   Purpose: To record and tally the names of the work groups identified by the participants.

   Make a list of the titles of the Work Groups on the flip chart or blackboard where it can be seen by the participants. Ask for a show of hands to indicate how many people had each work group, or one of its subgroups, on their list for Work Sheet #4.

   Record these numbers.

2. Use of the Guide for Occupational Exploration
   Purpose: To teach the participants how to use this resource to identify occupations in each work group.

   Now that the women understand how the work groups and subgroups can be matched with their skills, it is time to move on to learning more about each group.

   Distribute copies of the Guide for Occupational Exploration. Have the women turn to the Table of Contents (pages v and vi). Point out that these are the same work groups and subgroups that were used in the Work Groups Chart and Table.

   Pick one of the work groups that was used by a large number of the participants. Have the women turn to the pages in the Guide which describe this work group. Point out that the material about each work group answers the following questions (you might want to write them on a blackboard or flip chart):
- What kind of work would I do in these jobs?
- What skills and abilities do I need for this work?
- How can I tell if I would like and could learn to do this kind of work?
- How can I prepare for and enter this kind of work?
- What special things should I consider before choosing a job in this group?

At the end of each work group there is a list, by subgroups, of the jobs which belong to each group. The Dictionary of Occupational Titles number is given for each job to help the women when they do further research about jobs that interest them.

Explain to the participants that, after they have read carefully about each work group and thought about the above questions, they will be ready to pick the groups they wish to explore further.

3. Use of the Job Exploration Table

Purpose: To teach the participants how to identify representative occupations in each work group.

Have the participants turn to the Job Exploration Table (Appendix D of the Women's Workbook).

Select a work group that many of the group are interested in. Write its name on the flip chart or blackboard.

Then point to the left-hand column of the table. Show the women that these are the names of the work groups. Ask for volunteers to read, from the right-hand column, the names of representative jobs for this work group. Write these names on the flip chart or blackboard.

Repeat this with another work group if there is any confusion.

Stress that the purpose of this table is to help them get an idea of some of the jobs in each work group. Be sure that the women understand that this is not a list of all possible jobs.

Purpose: To teach the participants how to find additional information about jobs related to the work groups.

Distribute copies of the Occupational Outlook Handbook. Then call the women's attention to the center column of the Job Exploration Table. Tell them that this column lists, for each work group, the related section(s) of the Occupational Outlook Handbook. Select a work group. Have a volunteer identify the related section in the Occupational Outlook Handbook.
Select an occupation, listed in the Occupational Outlook Handbook, that is representative of one of the work groups your participants have utilized. Have the women turn to the description of this occupation. Call their attention to the section on related occupations. Stress that the occupations listed there involve aptitudes, interests, education and training similar to the job described in more detail. Explain other occupations, similar to the representative occupations in the Job Exploration Table.

5. Introduction of the Dictionary of Occupational Titles

Purpose: To teach the participants how to use this resource to locate job descriptions.

Have the participants turn to a work group description in the Guide for Occupational Exploration. Point out the section, at the end of the descriptions, which lists all the job titles for this work group, by subgroup.

Point to the numbers after the job titles. Explain that these numbers can be used to find a description of each job in the Dictionary of Occupational Titles.

Distribute copies of the Dictionary of Occupational Titles. Select several titles from the work group. Write their names and numbers on the flip chart or blackboard. Ask for a volunteer to look up each job in the Dictionary and to read its description.

Repeat, if necessary, until all participants can use the Dictionary.

6. Workshop

Purpose: To allow the participants to practice, in small groups, their skills in using the Job Exploration Table, the Occupational Outlook Handbook, and the Dictionary of Occupational Titles.

Have each woman indicate three work groups she would like to study further. Use this information to divide the class into several small workshops with all members of each workshop interested in the same work group. Assign one member of each workshop to be the secretary. Have the members of each workshop use the Chart, Occupational Outlook Handbook, Guide for Occupational Exploration and Dictionary of Occupational Titles to compile a list of jobs related to its work.

Reassemble and review the lists.

HOMEWORK

Ask the women to complete Work Sheet #5. If you are using the Women's Workbook, have the participants finish reading Chapter 5 (pages 40-46).
SESSION 7

WHAT ARE MY JOB NEEDS AND VALUES?

OBJECTIVE: To make the participants aware that more than skill and ability affect their job choices. To have the participants understand that an individual's needs and values must be taken into serious consideration in job planning.

At the end of this session each woman should be aware of her own needs as she prepares for the job search. These would include: financial, family, transportation, educational and personal needs, among others. Each woman should be able to picture her own needs in relation to the jobs she explores.

INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNIQUES: Lecture, small group discussion.

MATERIALS: Large sheets of paper and markers.

If you are not using the Women's Workbook, enough copies of the Salary Needs Estimator and Work Sheet #6 for each participant.

ACTIVITIES:

1. Exploring Job Needs and Values

   Purpose: To develop a list of job needs and values for group discussion.

   Explain to the participants that they now have a list of jobs that are related to their skills and are ready to learn more about each of them. Before they do this, however, they need to look at their personal job needs and values. Tell them that although skills are necessary to achieve in a job, the individual's needs and values also play an important role in choosing a job in which she will be happy. Everything from "being paid enough" to "being able to work in a windowless office" is important.

   After reminding the participants of the above, have them divide into smaller groups of four or five. Choose a "secretary" who should be supplied with a large sheet of paper and a marker. Then ask the group members to describe conditions under which they would like to work, while the secretary makes note of them. Direct that any comment, no matter how silly it seems, be taken down. After approximately ten minutes, direct the groups to do the same exercise for conditions under which they could not work. After another ten minutes, call a halt to the exercise. Call the entire group together and place the papers on the walls, asking each "secretary" to read off the comments of her group. Discussion on some of the "conditions" should be allowed. This exercise should be an eye-opener to many of the women who might never have considered some of the ideas pertinent to them in a working situation.
The concept of trade-offs should be discussed at this point: an unattractive office may have to be traded off for a job with a good future; a lower salaried job may have to be taken if it is more accessible to home, etc.

Put the following headings on the blackboard or flip chart:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Must Have</th>
<th>Can't Have</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Salary</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Benefits</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Location</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hours</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Other</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>

Group the working conditions from the women's discussion on this chart.

This is a good time to explain different types of salaries (such as those based on sales volume or productivity, drawn against commission, etc.). Have the women discuss the things they feel they "can't have" or would "dislike" in a job. Correct any erroneous beliefs, especially those based on stereotypic views of women's work.

2. Determining Salary Needs

Purpose: To help each woman determine her salary requirements.

Explain that salary is one of the important parts of any paid job. Point out that each person needs to determine what level of salary is necessary for her to earn. This can be determined by completing the Salary Needs Estimator (see Appendix A in the Guide of the Women's Workbook on pages 47-48). Point out that this estimator includes both current financial responsibilities and the cost of working. Point out that the estimator adds 20% to these costs to cover taxes but, for some women, a larger amount of taxes may be taken from their salary (this is usually the two-wage-earner family).

Help each woman compute the minimum salary she will need to earn. This is a good time to display typical salaries for jobs in your area. Point out to the women that many of the occupations which have traditionally hired large numbers of women, such as secretary, have lower salaries than some other jobs they may want to consider.

Have each woman enter her minimum salary need at the top of Work Sheet #6.

Homework

Ask the women to complete Work Sheet #6. If you are using the Women's Workbook, ask the participants to read pages 47-52 of Chapter 6.
NOTE: This may be expanded to several sessions, depending on the amount of time needed by the participants to research occupations.

OBJECTIVE: To gather further information concerning the occupations which are possibilities for the participants.

At the end of this session the women should have an understanding of where and how to look for information about any occupation. They should also have the ability to evaluate this information concerning occupations in relation to their needs and values.

INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNIQUES: Lecture and demonstration.

MATERIALS: Copies of the Occupational Outlook Handbook and Dictionary of Occupational Titles for each participant or group of participants; copies of other occupational information sources, as available.
If you are not using the Women's Workbook, enough copies of Work Sheet #7 for each participant.

ACTIVITIES:

1. Use of the Occupational Outlook Handbook

Distribute copies of the Occupational Outlook Handbook and say:
"One of the best places to begin learning about a job is to read the section about it in the Occupational Outlook Handbook. For each job, the Handbook describes all or most of the following:

- Nature of the Work
- Working Conditions
- Place of Employment
- Training, Other Qualifications, and Advancement
- Employment Outlook
- Earnings
- Related Occupations
- Sources of Additional Information

The section about the nature of the work tells what people do in this kind of job and how they do this work. The section about working conditions tells if the work is outdoors, in a factory, in an office, or in another kind of setting. This section will also tell you if the job involves activities that might present health or safety problems and if the job frequently requires overtime, shift work or frequent travel. The section about places of employment tells whether the jobs are found primarily in certain areas of the country, and if they are found chiefly in cities. This section also tells if part-time jobs are frequently available in this occupation.

"The section on training, other qualifications, and advancement is especially important. It describes the kind and amount of education you need to enter a particular occupation. It also lists the kinds of courses that are most useful to people in this job. In addition, this section tells about alternative ways to enter the same occupation. For example, jobs in personnel and labor relations usually require a college degree. However, people also can enter personnel jobs from a clerical job in a personnel office. Many occupations have different steps or levels. The level that you start at and can advance to is often related to the education or training you have.

"The section on advancement will tell you about the steps in an occupation, such as in drafting which has a career ladder going from tracer, to experienced drafter, to senior drafter. This section will also tell you how one occupation can lead to another. For example, many people who are systems analysts started out in jobs as computer programmers. If you are interested in starting in one kind of job to get the experience to move on to another, try to discuss this with employers when you go for a job interview; some companies may not have the job steps that other companies have.

"It is especially important to find out if the job requires a certificate or license in addition to special education or training. Most jobs in the health profession require licenses as do the jobs like teaching, and jobs in construction. Some licenses or certificates can be used only in one state, and you must apply for a new license if you move. Many apprenticeship jobs provide a certificate that can be used anywhere in the country.

"The job outlook information is based on estimates of how rapidly the number of jobs is expected to grow in the next ten years and the amount of competition there will be for these job openings. Remember, when you look at the job outlook information, these are only estimates. No one can be sure what the job outlook will be in the future. Changes in economic conditions or new methods or machines can affect job availability. New estimates of job outlook are published every two years by the U.S. Department of Labor.

"Remember, also, that these estimates are based on the job outlook for the entire United States. Conditions may not be the same in this area. Have available information about the local job market. Most state employment offices have a list of jobs in demand and can help you with this.

"Remember, too, that some occupations that did not have many women workers in the past are now actively seeking women even if they are hiring relatively few workers. For example, although telephone craft occupations will have relatively few openings, opportunities are good for women who wish to become telephone installers and repairers."

Point out that job outlook may also differ from one kind of work setting to another. For example, opportunities for women who wish to be automobile mechanics are especially good in companies or businesses that own and operate fleets of cars (car rental agencies, city government, etc.).

Then continue by saying:

"The section on earnings gives average salaries in a recent year. Remember that salaries have probably risen since then. Remember, too, that salaries differ from city to city and with the amount of experience the person has in the job. Beginners will probably make less than the average salary for the occupation." (Supply sample local data on salaries. Call attention to higher salaries in many nontraditional jobs.)

"Some jobs pay an hourly or weekly wage. In others the pay depends on the amount of work produced or the amount sold. Many women like sales jobs that give them more money when they are highly productive workers. Other women worry about not knowing for sure, from week to week, how much they will be paid. Some sales jobs have salaries based strictly on what has been sold (commissions). Other sales jobs provide a weekly salary which can be 'drawn against commission.' If your commissions are less than your salary week after week, you can end up owing money to the company.

"Remember that we discussed the section on related occupations earlier. This section will tell you about other jobs that involve similar aptitudes, interests, education and training. You may want to add the names of some of these related occupations to your list on Work Sheet #5 and then read about them."

Tell the women, that as homework, they will be completing work sheets on which they will record this information for jobs that they liked on Work Sheet #5.

2. Other Sources of Occupation Information

Purpose: To supplement the sources of occupation information previously introduced.

It is possible to spend several sessions providing additional occupational information to the participants. The content and extent of this activity will depend on the resources and the time available. Many counseling centers will use their own occupational information files. This is especially important for new, emerging occupations that are not, as yet, well covered elsewhere.

Some centers may have access to computerized occupational information systems. We encourage counselors to have re-entry women try computerized systems, if possible, even though many of them are designed for younger clients. The experience with a computer can be a boost to self-confidence. It may also be used to encourage women to consider jobs which involve the use of computers or other technical devices.

A list of Computer Guidance Systems is available in the Directory of Educational and Career Information Services for Adults. This directory, which is a valuable guide for all counselors working with re-entry women, is available for $3.00 from the National Center for Educational Brokering, 1211 Connecticut Avenue, NW., Washington, D.C. 20036.

Other supplemental activities which can help the participants learn more about occupations include:

a. Meetings with other women who now are working.

This is a good opportunity to bring to the group meeting one or more women working in the kinds of jobs available in your area. The participants should use the questions on Work Sheet #7 as the basis of an information interview about each job. The women being interviewed should also be asked about possible job openings in their companies. If possible, select women who returned to paid work after a period as homemakers. Try to include some women who hold nontraditional jobs.

b. Site visits to possible work places.

Contact the personnel office in one or more local businesses which you know have previously hired re-entry women or which you think would be likely employers. Ask permission to bring a small group of women, who are interested in job opportunities there, to visit. Tell the personnel officer that you would like to watch people working in one or two specific jobs and then, if possible, have an informal conversation with some of the women who hold these jobs. Be sure that your group has done its "homework" about the company you are visiting and the job(s) they will see. You may want to ask the personnel officer to meet with your group at the end of the visit to provide information about possible job openings and about the procedure to use when applying for these jobs.

Homework

Ask the women to complete Work Sheet #7. (This can be started in class if time allows.) You may wish to hold a supplemental session to allow the participants more time to complete the Job Information work sheets.

If you are using the Women's Workbook, have the participants read pages 53 to 86 in Chapter 6.
SESSION 9

HOW DO I FIND A JOB?

OBJECTIVE: To introduce participants to sources of information about local jobs.

At the end of this session participants should be aware of institutions, agencies and other sources from which to gather information and to know how to develop job contacts. Each woman should be able to develop her own job search plan.

INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNIQUES: Lecture and discussion. Role playing of information interview.

MATERIALS: Flip chart and marker or blackboard and chalk.
Samples of materials such as Yellow Pages, annual reports, newspaper want ads, etc. List of local job information sources. List of job training and educational opportunities. If you are not using the Women's Workbook, enough copies of Work Sheet #8 for all participants.

Researching the Local Job Market. Before beginning this session to help re-entry women or displaced homemakers understand the job market, you, as a counselor, should have surveyed your geographic area to get information about the job market.

Do you live in an industrial area? A farming area? What is the availability of jobs within various areas of work? Your state employment offices can be helpful in letting you know the realistic status of job openings. You should also talk with your state occupational information coordinating committee to see what data they have available. These committees work to improve and coordinate the efforts of agencies, such as the state vocational education board, state employment security agency, state manpower services council, and others producing career and labor market data. They can provide such data to planners, trainers and counselors. A list of these committees is given in the Directory of Educational and Career Information Services for Adults.

Newspaper ads can also give you an indication of the felt job needs in your community.

Another important aspect of guiding the women would be your awareness, as a counselor, of on-the-job training and internship possibilities in your area. Many private industries and public agencies have on-the-job training during which time the trainee will be paid minimum wage. Increasingly, there are internships available within many businesses and corporations where women can observe and learn. These may be on a voluntary basis or for an agreed upon stipend, and may be part-time or full-time dependent upon the negotiated arrangements between employer and intern.

The important point is knowing what is available in your geographic area, since most re-entry women and displaced homemakers are often not in a position to relocate, nor do they have the psychological set to do so.
ACTIVITIES

1. Sources of Job Information

Purpose: To familiarize the participants with local sources of job availability information.

Begin the session by telling the participants they are now ready to select one or more jobs that seem best for them, and to begin their job search in earnest. Suggest to the women that they can either decide on one kind of job they hope to get or that they can choose two or three different kinds of jobs to look into more thoroughly. The next step is for the women to use sources of job information to find out about area employers who might be interested in hiring them.

Explain that there is a need to collect accurate, up-to-date information about state and local job opportunities because few re-entry women are able to relocate to obtain a job.

Here is a list of some of the places where you can get information about the local job market and about specific job possibilities:

- State and local agencies, such as Employment and Training Administration, Apprenticeship Councils, State Departments of Vocational Education, Civil Service Commission, Chamber of Commerce, State or Community Development Offices, City or County Government, Small Business Administration, etc.

- Private companies, private employment agencies

How Women Find Jobs includes, on pages 9-20, a helpful guide to surveying local employment.

Distribute to the women a local list of resources for job finding. This might include publications, such as:

- Career Information Services

A Directory of Educational and Career Information Services for Adults is available from the National Center for Educational Brokering, 1211 Connecticut Avenue, NW., Washington, D.C. 20036 ($3.00).

- Displaced Homemaker Centers

A directory of Displaced Homemaker Programs, which offers help to women who have been widowed, divorced, or separated, is available from the Displaced Homemakers Network, 755 8th Street, NW., Washington, D.C. 20001 ($3.00).

- Unions, Apprenticeship Programs, and Professional Organizations
A list of Apprenticeship Information Centers is given in A Woman's Guide to Apprenticeship, which is available from the Women's Bureau, U.S. Department of Labor, Washington, D.C. 20213.

- Women's Employment Programs
  b. A list of the Catalyst National Network of Local Resource Centers which have employment services is available from Catalyst, 14 East 60th Street, New York, New York 10022.

Make certain that the women realize that many of the publications and others like them are available in libraries, counseling centers and state employment offices. Tell them that they are not only learning how to find this job but also how to find jobs in the future.

This list should also include the local and state sources of job information. Be sure to include State, County or City Employment Service Offices, local school and college placement offices, private employment agencies, newspaper job ads, and friends and relatives. Discuss the advantages and disadvantages of obtaining job leads from each source (e.g., private employment agencies may charge a fee).

2. Collecting Information about Job Openings

Purpose: To help the participants organize a set of activities to collect job information.

Explain to the group the importance of setting aside time on a regular basis to work on their job search. This is important in keeping the search moving and in keeping the women at the tasks required if they are to be successful.

List on the flip chart or blackboard and discuss each of the following tasks to be accomplished on a regular basis:

- Clipping want ads and articles from newspapers.

  When job hunting through the newspapers, each woman should clip out and keep in a folder the jobs which sound most interesting to her, even if all the parts of the job are not the "ideal." She will be able to look through them and see similarities and differences in the type of job she wants and which job best suits her. She should also try to obtain copies of job postings from employment offices.

- Keeping a card file on "Who You Know."
Point out to the participants that people they know, even slightly, may be in positions to be of assistance to them in the job search through job openings they know of or through other people to whom they can direct the women. Emphasize that it is important, once she has begun her job search, for the participant to make anyone and everyone aware that she is looking for employment. Many women find work because someone hears they are job hunting, and people will then often ask more about the woman's interests and abilities, then "just happen" to know of an available job. Tell the women that they should list on separate 3 x 5 cards, the name, address, phone, job, name of person referring them, the kind of job involved, etc. Tell the women that they can make this file by going through their Christmas card list, membership lists from community groups and volunteer organization, and just by thinking of the people with whom they have contact--insurance salesperson, travel agent, dentist, doctor, lawyer, etc. Suggest that they keep cards handy and add to their file as they meet and hear about new sources. Encourage them by saying that most people are willing to have their names used as job contacts.

- Doing "homework" on their field or fields of interest.
  a. Reading: the Yellow Pages, the Guide to American Directories, the Encyclopedia of Associations, Chamber of Commerce Directory, Special Trade Magazines.
  b. Gathering materials, such as annual reports from local industries and businesses.
  c. Information interviews. (See Activity 3, below.)

3. Information Interviews

Purpose: To teach women how to obtain information about the nature of a job and to explore the "hidden job market."

Explain that these interviews can be helpful both as a way of gathering more information about a particular kind of job and in finding out about jobs that may be available but unadvertised or about jobs which are likely to become available shortly. Information interviews also help many women become more self-confident and thus prepare them for the job interview.

Suggest to the participants that they can use the information interview to obtain answers to some of the questions on Work Sheet #7 that could not be answered from published sources. Explain that, in the interview, the woman should use only those questions which are appropriate to the situation, then add any questions of her own. Suggest that when the participant phones to make an appointment with the appropriate person, she should explain that she is gathering information and would need only fifteen to twenty minutes. Remind her to confirm the appointment the day before going to make certain of the correct time. She should also be sure that she can find the location easily.

Explain that the woman should remain alert to the answers given to her questions to see if further questions develop from them. She should ask if she may take brief notes during the interview.

Be sure that the participants understand that, at the close of the interview, if the job area sounds interesting, they can ask if the person being interviewed happens to know of any job openings in the field. Explain that this should be done without pressing too hard.
Remind the women that upon leaving, they should thank the person for the time and information. Tell them that most people also like to write a note, once again thanking the person for giving of their time and knowledge. Besides being courteous, this serves to place the woman's name more firmly in the mind of the potential employer.

Using role playing, select women to be a "boss" and an "interviewee."
Have them run through a sample information interview. If time allows, this can be done several times to permit more people to practice this technique for collecting job information.

4. Exploring "Make-Your-Own Job" Possibilities

Purpose: To have the participants consider creating their own job rather than seeking a job designed by someone else.

Tell the women that they can create their own job in two ways:
(1) find out what services a company or business needs that it does not now have and suggest to the company that they do this for them, or (2) work for themselves and develop their own business.

Some women may prefer to create a job for themselves rather than to work for someone else. The advantage of this is that one can design the job to match one's skills rather than taking a job that may be a poor fit. The disadvantage of this is that it usually takes several years to get a new business developed to the point where one will receive a good, regular income from it; in addition, starting one's own business can be expensive.

Ask if any of the women know of other women who are in business for themselves and what they might know about how they got started.

There can be further discussion about the kinds of jobs women do on their own: catering; making and selling craft products; providing services, such as secretarial work, publicity or telephoning/answering; lawn and plant care; pricing household goods for people who are moving or can no longer use them and then running "tag sales" from which income is derived through commission.

Emphasize to anyone interested in starting her own business that there is free help available through the Small Business Administration. Courses to help women who are starting their own businesses are available at many community and junior colleges. Find out if such courses are available in your area and, if so, tell the participants about them. A book, Establishing Your Own Business: A Handbook for Women, is available for $5.00 from Resources for Women, 104 Walnut Avenue, Suite 212, Santa Cruz, California 95060.

ADDITIONAL OPTIONAL ACTIVITIES

5. Exploring Job Training and Educational Opportunities

Although these counseling sessions are designed primarily to help women find paid jobs, there may be some women in the group who, after collecting job information, decide they need specific training or further education before they enter the job market. If there are several such women, you may wish to hold a special session on job training and educational opportunities for them. If only one or two women need this kind of help, you should provide them with basic information and/or refer them to another source of help.

You should have available a list of programs which:

- lead to a high school equivalency certificate (GED);
- provide paid, on-the-job training in local businesses and industries;
- provide unpaid internships where women can "test" an occupation and learn or renew the skills they need (a booklet entitled Internship Programs for Women is available from the National Society for Internships and Experiential Education, 173 Eye Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20006);
- provide short-term vocational training leading to a certification;
- provide two- and four-year college training leading to a degree;
- provide subsistence funds for eligible women while they are in job training programs.

You should also try to maintain an information file about local vocational training programs and colleges.

You may also want to spend a few minutes telling the women about local educational programs which can teach them skills which will improve their chances for job advancement once they are employed. Remind the women that many employers provide money for employees to receive such training.

Some counseling centers also offer specific training to help women enter jobs which are in high demand in their area. If you decide to do this, you should first talk with local employers who would hire these women to find out exactly what skills are required to enter these positions. Employers may be able to assign a staff member to help you design or operate the training program, provide equipment to use in training, or even provide financial support for the training program.

HOMEWORK.

Ask the women to complete Work Sheet #6. If you are using the Women's Workbook, have the participants read pages 87 to 94 of Chapter 7.
SESSION 10

RESUME WRITING AND JOB SEARCH PLANNING

OBJECTIVE: To show women how to express their skills in the form of a resume; to help the women prepare a record of their job search.

INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNIQUES: Lecture, discussion, and workshop.

MATERIALS: Flip chart and marker or blackboard and chalk.

Sample resumes and covering letter if you are not using the Women's Guide. (You may also wish to add other resumes to those supplied here.)

Paper and pencils.

If you are not using the Women's Workbook, enough copies of Work Sheet #1 for all participants.

Begin the session by stating that a resume is a picture of you—your skills, interests and abilities. Tell the women that there are numerous ways of putting their skills down on paper. No one way is better than another. Tell them that they can look over sample resumes, choose the one with which they feel most comfortable, and adopt that form to their own needs. Explain that resume writing will take a lot of time and work.

ACTIVITIES:

1. Basic Rules of Resume Writing

Purpose: To teach the various forms of resume style.

Explain that there are two basic forms of resumes:

a. Chronological: This kind of resume lists work experience by date. It is usually best for people whose careers have progressed without gaps.

b. Functional: This kind of resume stresses skills and experiences. It relates these to the skills, knowledge and abilities required for the job.

List on the flip chart or blackboard the content of the typical resume:

a. Objective: This is a sentence describing the kind of work you are looking for and your major skills for this kind of work (e.g., an administrative position in which I can use my skills in planning and financial management).

b. Skills: Described using "action" words such as those on the list of functional skills (page 25).

c. Experiences in which you learned or used these skills.
d. Additional facts, such as education.

Remind the participants of the materials they prepared for Work Sheets #2 and #3. Tell them that they can take a functional skill from the groups on Work Sheet #2, then add to it the "I Can" specific skills from Work Sheet #3, and finish with the description of the experience where they acquired or used the skill. Some women find the line "I can __________________________ because I did __________________________" helps them to compose resume statements.

2. Resume Preparation Hints (Discuss these with the participants.)

a. Resume should be one or two pages in length, typed well and reproduced on good paper.

b. Have the resume specific to the kind of job you are applying for or to the particular job advertised. Do not list skills which have no relationship to the job.

c. Have the resume read by someone who knows you well and who can help with corrections and clarifications.

d. Have it typed neatly. Since this is an employer's introduction to you, you want it letter-perfect.

(1) Single spaced with double spaces between paragraphs.

(2) At least one-inch margins all around.

e. References need not be listed on the resume. If you wish, write "references available on request" at the end of your resume.

f. Personal data should not appear on the resume: your age, marital status, number of children, etc., do not have anything to do with how well you can do a job.

3. Sample Resumes

Purpose: To learn what makes a good resume.

a. Distribute sample Resume #1 (Mary Volunteer) and Resume #2 (Marie Smith) or refer the women to these resumes in the Guide.

Point out how these resumes stress skills, such as the women identified in the "I Can" lists.

b. Distribute copies of Daphne Goodwife's Resume (#3) or refer to this resume in the Women's Workbook.

Ask the group to discuss what is wrong with this resume. Point out the unnecessary personal information and lack of information about skills learned in volunteer work and homemaking.
c. Then distribute copies of Daphne's Resume (#4) or refer to this in the Women's Workbook.

Ask the group in what ways this resume is better, and how it might be improved even more. (Note that it still contains personal information and uses a chronological format. If time allows, the group can be asked to rewrite this in functional form.)

4. Writing a Resume

Purpose: To begin work on a skills-based resume.

Tell the women that they are going to begin writing a basic resume. Tell them that this resume will cover all their skills and experiences. Stress the fact that, when they apply for a job, they will prepare a shorter resume that includes only those skills and experiences from this resume that match the job requirements.

Distribute paper and pencil. Have each woman work independently for about 20 minutes writing her resume. Be available to help the women who may need assistance. Then have the women pair off, critique each other's resume, and revise their own.

Have the group reassemble. Ask for two or three volunteers to read their resumes aloud to the group. Elicit positive support and suggestions for further improvement.

Remind them that the finished product must be made up of skills based on experiences which can be described during a job interview. If a woman has written that she is a fund raiser, she must be able to describe just what she did and how she did that task successfully.

SAMPLE RESUME #2

MARIE SMITH
78 Maple Street
Middletown, New Jersey
(123) 456-7890

Objective: A job in marketing or sales in which I can use financial, management, and selling skills.

Finance

I can: Set up and maintain sales and inventory records.
Analyze financial records to monitor cash flow.
Determine, from sales information, when to have a sale, what items to discount, and how much to reduce prices.
Set retail prices on the basis of wholesale costs and overhead.
Keep books and prepare a trial balance.
Prepare tax returns, including state sales tax reports.
Prepare and defend a budget.

Management

I can: Schedule sales workers and keep records of their performance.
Supervise and train sales workers.
Write and place advertisements to promote a business or special sale.

Sales

I can: Deal effectively with customers, including listening carefully to their requests, asking questions to identify their needs, and suggesting items that they may not know about.
Handle merchandise exchanges and returns.
Select merchandise, considering previous sales, customer tastes and preferences, quality and supplier reliability, and cost of similar items.

Experience:

Manager, Middletown Hospital Gift Shop, 1977-79
During this period the sales of the shop increased by over 20% each year. The board of the hospital gave me a special award for outstanding work as shop manager.
Supervised 17 workers. Trained 4 new workers.

Sales worker, Middletown Hospital Gift Shop, 1976-77
Voted outstanding volunteer of the year because of highest sales record.
Fund raiser, Middletown Hospital, 1980-81
Did door-to-door fund raising for hospital building fund.
Obtained gifts from a larger percentage of households than any other fund raiser.

Organizer, Parent-Teacher Organization Bake Sale, 1973
Obtained contributions from other parents, developed and placed ads for the sale, priced items, and kept financial records.
Sale raised over $900 and has become an annual event.

Sales worker, Bamberger's Department Store, 1953-55.

Education:

Graduated from Middletown High School, 1953.
SAMPLE RESUME #3

Daphne Goodwife
302 Lavender Avenue
Ourtown, Wisconsin

I am a widowed housewife, age 50, and the mother of three children (one still at home). My work history is limited. I am willing to do any kind of work.

Employment Experience:

1946-48: Dime store clerk

SAMPLE RESUME #4

Daphne Goodwife
302 Lavender Avenue
Ourtown, Wisconsin

Family head (one child still at home). In good health.

Responsibilities successfully completed:

1977  Citizen member of a special school committee to study the costs and benefits from closing several Ourtown schools.

1976  Organized a series of 6 public lectures at the YWCA. Invited the speakers and did the public relations work involved (two press-releases attached). The lectures served a total of approximately 650 people.

1975  Coordinated the special June Young Women's Day hosted at the YWCA and attended by 900 persons. Shared responsibility for the planning through the execution of the event (over a 6-month period) including liaison with all seven Ourtown Girl Scout Troops and assignment of 27 spaces for booths. This event raised $1,747 for YWCA scholarships.

1971- 1975  Member of the 7-person board governing the YWCA of Ourtown.

1971  Treasurer for the successful campaign to elect Mrs. Goodbar to Ourtown School Board.

1970  Acted as one of three group leaders to 24 Girl Scouts on a 10-day wilderness canoe expedition. Qualities and skills demanded: resourcefulness, organizing ability, patience, and stamina.

1969  Having had 3 earlier years experience in helping with Ourtown Red Cross Spring Blood Drive, chaired the committee for two years that launched and carried through the effort. More blood was donated in those years than ever before.

1966- 1969  Den Mother for the Cub Scouts and coordinator of a total of 29 volunteers who helped staff the annual one-week wilderness camp for Ourtown Cub Scouts for 3 consecutive years.

1951- 1956  Managed the office and provided all clerical support services for a group of four biochemists in the Neighborstown combined university and hospital research unit. Had complete responsibility for scheduling appointments, periodic mailings to research associates and subjects. Ordered supplies as needed and kept books.

1948- 1951  Three years of liberal arts studies at Ourstate University (grade-point average: 3.00). Left school to get married.

1946- 1948  Clerked in a dime store to save money for college education.
5. Covering Letters

Purpose: To provide experience in preparing letters to accompany resumes.

Explain that when resumes are mailed to a prospective employer, they should be accompanied by a letter indicating that the woman is applying for a specific job. (Remind the women to give the title or kind of job they are seeking and, if they are answering an advertisement, to be sure to refer to the ad.) The letter should also indicate why they are interested in the job and in working for this company, and indicate the skills and experience they have for this job. Tell the women to be sure to indicate that they will telephone to arrange for an appointment or interview.

Distribute copies of a sample covering letter, such as the one below, or refer to the letter on page 107 of the Women's Workbook.

Middletown, New Jersey
(Date)

Ms. Elizabeth Wilson
Director of Personnel
International Sales Associates
New York, New York 10038

Dear Ms. Wilson:

I am interested in the position of marketing assistant that your company advertised in the March 1 issue of The New York Times.

As manager of the Middletown Hospital Gift Shop, I have become increasingly aware of the importance of advertising and promotion in increasing sales. I believe that my experience in writing advertising and developing promotional materials would make me a valuable addition to your staff.

A copy of my resume is enclosed. I will be telephoning you soon to arrange for an appointment.

Sincerely yours,

Marie Smith

6. Developing a Job Search Plan

Purpose: To prepare the women to organize and keep records of their job search.

Tell the women that job hunting is itself, a job. It requires time, attention, and good record keeping. To do this job well, they need to make careful plans and to keep a record of what they have done.

Encourage the women, as they begin to contact employers, to keep a record of their job interviews and outcomes. Refer them to Work Sheet #9, Job Search Plans. Explain that this work sheet will help them make and keep a record of their job searches.

7. Homework

Ask the women to complete their resume and to begin keeping a record of their job search, using Work Sheet #9. If you are using the Women's Workbook, have the participants read pages 95 to 107 of Chapter 7.
SESSION 11
INTERVIEWING

OBJECTIVE: To provide preparation for job interviews.

INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNIQUES: Lecture, discussion and role playing.

MATERIALS: If you are not using the Women's Workbook, distribute the handout on Federal Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Employment.

ACTIVITIES:

1. Review of Resumes
   Ask for two or three volunteers to read the resumes they completed as homework. Elicit comments and suggestions for further improvement.
   If time allows, you may wish to have the women pair off and critique each other's resumes.

2. Review of Job Search Plans
   Ask for a show of hands to determine if any members of the group have job leads or have begun contacting prospective employers. Remind the participants that this information should be recorded on Work Sheet #9, Job Search Plans.

3. Interviewing
   Purpose: To introduce the job interview.
   Explain to the group that interviews are a necessary part of getting a job. Point out that the job interview serves two purposes: (1) it helps the woman decide if this is the job she really wants; and (2) it helps the employer decide if the woman is the right person for the job.
   Tell the women that in order to be sure that the job is really what they want to do, they need to do some "homework" in advance. They need to find out as much as possible about the company. They also should try to talk with other people who work in this company or in similar jobs in other companies. This information should help them answer questions about why they want this particular job and how their skills relate to the job. It will also give them a list of questions that they want to ask the prospective employer.
   Point out that the interviewer will be concerned with several things:
   a. Appearance: Suggest that the participants have a neat and well-groomed appearance. Discuss the appropriate "business-type" clothing. Tell the participants that it is inappropriate to chew gum and suggest that they do not smoke during an interview (unless they are invited to do so).

b. Manner: Stress that it is poor manners to be late for an interview. Suggest that the women try to appear relaxed but alert during the interview. Remind the women that politeness, a good handshake, and appearing positive, enthusiastic and well-organized (with resume, recommendations, etc.) will help create a good impression. The ability to handle difficult questions with tact and without getting upset may be important; tell the women that you will practice handling some of these questions.

c. Skills and experience: Suggest that the women should be prepared to describe their skills and experiences that are important for the job. They should also be prepared with questions to show their interest in the position. Remind the women to stress their maturity as an asset. Tell them that they can remind the interviewer that they are stable, familiar with the community, and less likely to move away after receiving on-the-job training than are younger workers.

4. Handling Difficult Questions

Purpose: To help the women prepare answers to "catch" or illegal questions.

Tell the women that some interviewers may ask the difficult or illegal questions, such as questions based on stereotypic views of women and work. Read to them some of the following difficult or illegal questions and possible answers.

- Q. Who will take care of your children while you work?
  A. I've made all the necessary arrangements so I can do my job.

- Q. Who will take care of your children when they get sick?
  A. Same as above.

- Q. Does your husband object to your working?
  A. No, he thinks it's great for me to bring home a check.

- Q. Why do you want to take a job away from a man?
  A. Why is a man more entitled to this job than a woman?
    or As a head of household, I need this job just as much as a male breadwinner.
    or I have to support myself and my children.
Q. How do I know you won't quit in a year or two to get married or to have a baby?

A. I plan to have a career.

or My husband and I have completed our family.

Have the group discuss other possible questions and answers.

5. Your Legal Rights

Purpose: To familiarize the participants with the major laws relating to employment discrimination.

Distribute copies of Federal Laws Prohibiting Discrimination in Employment or have the women turn to this material (page 110 in the Women's Workbook). Discuss briefly.

6. Role Playing of Interview

Purpose: To give the women practice in interviewing.

Ask the women to imagine a specific job interview. This should be for a job familiar to everyone. Ask three women to be applicants. You should play the interviewer's role.

Role-play a brief interview with each of these three women. Ask each to describe her skills and how they relate to the job. Ask each, also, some of the difficult or illegal questions that employers may raise (e.g., How are you going to manage both your home and this job?).

Ask the group to comment on the three interviews. Which woman would they hire if they were the interviewer? Why? Discuss with the group the problem of handling difficult or illegal questions. Suggest positive responses for such questions.

Divide the women into small groups of three or four. Ask one person in each group to be the interviewer, one the job applicant, and the other(s) to serve as observer(s). Circulate around to help the women practice their interviewing skills.

7. Job Applications and Tests (OPTIONAL)

Many women who are returning to work feel unsure of themselves in completing job application forms or in taking employment tests.

If your group has these problems, you may want to obtain copies of application forms from local businesses to provide practice in dealing with applications. You may also want to provide some sample tests for the group to use. If some of the women are especially uneasy in dealing with mathematical material, you may want to suggest that they read Sheila Tobias' book, Overcoming Math Anxiety (hardcover, Norton $10.95; paperback, Houghton Mifflin $5.95).
HOMEWORK

Have the woman continue their Job Search Plan (Work Sheet #9). If you are using the Women’s Workbook, have the participants finish reading Chapter 7 (pages 107 to 111).

SESSION 12
WRAP-UP AND EVALUATION

OBJECTIVE: To conclude and evaluate the program.

INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNIQUES: Lecture, discussion, completion of evaluation survey.

MATERIALS: Evaluation survey and pencils.
Flip chart and marking pen/crayon.
Data from survey used in Session 1.

ACTIVITIES:

1. Review of Job Search Plans
   Purpose: To determine the status of the participants' job search.
   Ask each participant to report on her job search plans. This should include:
   a. the occupation(s) in which she is seeking employment;
   b. the number of job leads she has and how those were obtained (ads, friends, etc.);
   c. if resumes have been prepared and sent;
   d. if interviews have been scheduled; and
   e. any plans for further education or training.

2. Ongoing Activities (OPTIONAL)
   Purpose: To provide ongoing support.
   If you will be providing ongoing activities, such as a hot line or job club, announce this and describe them or distribute printed information about these activities.
   We especially recommend that the women form a "Job Search Club" and meet informally each week for a month after the last counseling session. At these "club" meetings each woman should report on her job search activities: letters sent, phone calls made, interviews arranged or held, and outcomes. Encourage the group to share job information with each other.

3. Evaluation
   Purpose: To obtain information about the sessions for review and improvement.
Distribute the Program Evaluation Forms (see Appendix A). Be sure that the women understand that these are anonymous and that the answers to the questions can help you improve future sessions for other women. Allow 20 minutes for the completion of the evaluation.

If time allows, you may want to tally the responses to question 5 (Which of these best describes how you feel about your chances of finding a job?) and compare them with the tally for the same topic (question 3 on the HAVE Skills Survey).

End the session stressing the women's improved awareness of their skills and their self-confidence about finding a job.
SECTION I.

The items in this section of the bibliography include those low cost materials that were rated, in a survey conducted by the Oregon Educational Research Center, as the "best sources" available for occupational information, career and life planning information, or job seeking skills information. This bibliography also lists highly rated resources that were considered particularly useful for women re-entering the labor force.

A. Career and Life Planning Information

B. Occupational Information

C. Job Seeking Skills Information

SECTION II

This section lists additional items which we consider especially useful in counseling adult women who are returning to work.

Other books of interest to re-entry women are listed in the Women's Workbook.

4. Check whether you agree or disagree with each of the following statements.

a. Women should stick to "wr 'n's jobs" (such as teaching, nursing and secretarial work) and not compete with men.

   Agree  Disagree

b. Most jobs can be done as well by a woman as by a man.

   Agree  Disagree

c. It is ridiculous for a woman to run a locomotive and for a man to darn socks.

   Agree  Disagree

d. Things would be better if more women stayed home and tried to do a better job with their families.

   Agree  Disagree

e. A woman's place is in the home, not the office or shop.

   Agree  Disagree

f. Having a challenging job or career is as important for women as being a wife and mother.

   Agree  Disagree

g. It is difficult for a woman to have a career and still keep her femininity.

   Agree  Disagree

h. Men have more respect for women who have careers.

   Agree  Disagree

i. Most women work in order to provide the basic needs for themselves and their families.

   Agree  Disagree

j. Since most girls grow up to be housewives, it is not important for them to plan for career.

   Agree  Disagree
5. Read the following list of jobs. Then check whether this is a job you think women like you might do or if it is a job that women like you cannot or should not do.

ADMINISTRATOR/MANAGER

The administrator/manager is concerned with the development and/or implementation of program(s) involving paid and/or volunteer staff. This involves the utilization of people, material, money and time. There are two types of administrator/managers: those concerned with the total functioning of an organization, and those concerned with the functioning of a particular project within the program.

In carrying out my responsibility as an administrator/manager, I can:

- Develop long-range goals and objectives that foster organizational growth and continuity.
- Develop specific goals and plans for a specific project.
- Identify the method of evaluating effectiveness in meeting the goals and objectives.
- Identify the resources in personnel, money, materials, time and authority needed to accomplish the established objectives.
- Establish priorities based on the importance of each objective to goal attainment and on the resources available.
- Identify needs and opportunities for volunteer service.
- Enlist the support of the governing body and staff in the utilization of volunteers.
- Interpret the organization and its systems for the delivery of services to the public and to people in need of assistance (see Public Relations/Communications Worker).
- Work creatively within the structure of relationships and the setting of the organization, i.e., local agency to national office, etc.
- Be aware of the effects of changing socioeconomic conditions, cultural patterns, and knowledge about the helping professions and their effects upon volunteer resources and services.
- Organize the program or project into its component parts and determine the sequence in which these activities need to be performed.
- Develop and utilize flowcharts, PERT charts, and other visual materials to describe the program's or project's work flow.
- Articulate the philosophy of the organization.
- Use problem solving and decision making skills.
- Develop and work within an agenda.
- Identify channels to change (see Advocate/Change Agent).
- Determine the need for and develop alternative plans to meet emergencies.
- Delegate responsibility and establish accountability methods to determine if these responsibilities have been met.
- Describe and use techniques which will elicit new ideas and proposals.
- Solicit and make constructive use of negative and positive feedback.
- Manage effectively in high pressure situations.
- Use techniques for crisis management and describe why different types of crises require different techniques.
- Use methods of conflict resolution and describe when they are appropriate.
- Establish effective communications throughout the organization.
- Coordinate the execution of simultaneous projects:
  - Establish mechanisms for coordination.
  - Determine when coordination is needed.
- Serve as a spokesperson for the organization (see Public Relations/Communications Worker).
- Meet accountability demands of others by preparing reports which include:
  - Evaluation of success in meeting objectives.
  - Records of financial status.
  - Data on time and personnel utilization.
- Prepare written summaries of project and organizational accomplishments (see Public Relations/Communications Worker).
- Develop staffing plans (see Human Resources Specialist).
- Prepare and use a budget (see Financial Manager).
ADVOCATE/CHANGE AGENT

Advocacy is an activity on behalf of an individual, a group, or an issue which is designed to improve conditions, programs, or services. Advocates work in areas such as legal rights, housing, education, environment, and social welfare and attempt to change or improve existing conditions.

In carrying out my work as an advocate/change agent, I can:

- Identify areas where change is needed (see Problem Analyst/Researcher for related skills).
- Select methods and data which will document the need for change (see Problem Analyst/Researcher for related skills).
- Define and delimit the basic issues in a problem area.
- Demonstrate knowledge of the basic concepts relevant to an issue in fields such as:
  - Legal rights (civil and criminal).
  - Housing and community planning.
  - Education.
  - Environment.
  - Welfare and social services.
- Describe the public policy issues relevant to a problem.
- Demonstrate knowledge of the processes of change using:
  - Theoretical model(s).
  - Real-life examples.

- Conserve energy in food preparation and storage.
- Plan and prepare nutritious snacks.
- Compare the cost and nutritional value of convenience food, "junk" food, and home prepared equivalents (see Consumer Economics Specialist).
- Prepare and utilize garnishes to make a meal more appealing.
- Demonstrate knowledge and understanding of the basic elements of nutrition by:
  - Assessing the nutritional needs of the people and/or animals for whom I am responsible.
  - Describing the variations of nutritional needs relative to age, exercise, body weight, metabolism, and special conditions like pregnancy or nutritional deficiencies.
  - Describing alternative sources for meeting various nutritional requirements (vitamins, milk substitutes, etc.).
  - Describing symptoms of various nutritional deficiencies or excesses and their remedies (such as poor night vision from lack of vitamin A).
  - Describing the ramifications of the special diets of which I am familiar.
  - Describing the basic nutrients (fats, carbohydrates, proteins, vitamins, and minerals) and how they are digested and used by the body.
- Demonstrate skills related to cost effective nutritional planning by:
  - Using effectively the resources available to me, or potentially available to me, i.e., available time (mine and other's), abilities, supplies (freezer, refrigerator, oven, mixers, utensils, storage space, etc.), information, and money and how they influence my ability to be effective.
  - Dealing with a sudden change in resources.
  - Obtaining help from social service agencies if my resources are limited, suddenly reduced, or changed by an emergency.
  - Buying in bulk or in smaller quantities, depending upon the appropriateness of each to the situation.
  - Obtaining food from various sources (growing one's own, co-ops, farmers' markets, specialty stores, large chain grocery stores).
  - Selecting foods at various stages of the preparation process (i.e., "raw" form, semi-prepared, prepared, etc.).
Demonstrate skills associated with food preparation and storage by:

- Describing the methods I have used to store various kinds of foods (canning, freezing, etc.).
- Describing the unique properties of various food products, i.e., leavening agents, preservatives, etc.
- Describing the health and safety precautions needed during food preparation and methods of dealing with emergencies which may occur.
- Describing methods of determining the nature of various cooking conditions or problems and what corrective procedures can be taken.
- Properly using various food preparation appliances, utensils, etc.
- Describing the meaning of terms used in cookbooks.
- Describing the characteristics of measurement and converting quantities from one measurement system to another.
- Describing special food preparation techniques for serving large numbers of people or for unusual nutritional needs such as ethnic, gourmet, fat-free or food allergy diets.
- Describing differences in food selection and preparation in various cultures.

Demonstrate skills in meeting nutritional needs outside the home by:

- Describing the advantages and disadvantages of food sources which might be considered while traveling.
- Describing sources of food, other than restaurants, for use while traveling or camping (dehydrated foods, wild foods, etc.).
- Demonstrate knowledge of food poisoning by discussing its causes.
- Demonstrate knowledge of laws related to nutrition including content and labeling laws, health and cleanliness laws, etc.
- Teach others good nutritional practices (see Teacher/Trainer).
COUNSELOR

Counselors advise people who are seeking assistance with a problem. Informal counseling often occurs in conjunction with other activities, such as managing personnel or serving as an advocate/change agent. Formal counseling programs frequently require training prior to beginning work; paraprofessionals and volunteers in these programs typically work under the supervision of a professional.

In my work as a counselor, I can:

- Establish rapport with the person seeking advice.
- Use techniques which help people to talk spontaneously by:
  - Selecting an appropriate physical setting for counseling.
  - Showing receptiveness by giving attention and by listening carefully.
  - Using reinforcements (both verbal and nonverbal) for encouragement and support.

  - Traffic flow in area.
- Install linoleum, vinyl tile, or similar floor coverings (see Home Maintenance Technician).
- Install wall-to-wall carpeting or carpet tiles (see Home Maintenance Technician).
- Determine wall treatments.
- Select paint, wallpaper, or other wall treatments, taking into consideration:
  - Cost.
  - Existing condition of the walls.
  - Durability.
  - Ease of maintenance.
  - Color, texture, and style.
- Noise levels and need for noise control.
- Paint a room (see Home Maintenance Technician).
- Wallpaper a room (see Home Maintenance Technician).
- Panel a room (see Home Maintenance Technician).
- Select ceiling treatment taking into consideration:
  - Cost.
  - Existing condition of the ceiling.
  - Ease of maintenance.
  - Color, texture, and style.
  - Noise levels and need for noise control.
- Install ceiling tiles (see Home Maintenance Technician).
- Manage yard and garden care (see Horticulturist/Floral Designer).
- Manage the redecoration of a room or home:
  - Determine which tasks I can do.
  - Select people to do the work.
  - Negotiate contracts with workers or suppliers.
  - Read and interpret contracts and warranties (see Civil/Legal Rights Worker).
  - Explain my legal recourse if the work is improperly done, if furniture or goods are faulty, etc. (see Consumer Economics Specialist, and Civil/Legal Rights Worker).
  - Prepare cost estimates for work to be done.
  - Determine the best means of financing the redecoration (see Consumer Economics Specialist, and Financial Manager).
  - Keep accurate records of work and payments.
- Identify and correct conditions in the home which are fire or safety hazards.
- Prevent home conditions which increase the potential for fire (worn wiring, spilled flammable liquids, etc.).
- Select household goods and products that do not present hazards.
HORTICULTURIST/FLORAL DESIGNER

A horticulturist/floral designer is concerned with the practical aspects of growing (i.e., caring, planting, maintenance, etc.) trees, fruits, vegetables, flowers, and ornamental plants.

As a horticulturist/floral designer, I can:

- Demonstrate my knowledge of the environmental influences which affect plant growth by:
  - Describing the properties of various kinds of soil including:
    - How to test the soil.
    - How to change soil properties.
    - How to identify plants which need or provide various soil properties.
    - How to improve soil drainage or prevent erosion.
    - How to get assistance with soil problems.
    - How to mix fertilizers appropriately.
    - How to prepare compost or alter the soil properties organically.
    - How to prepare soil prior to planting.
    - How to maintain soil after the growing season— if outdoors.
    - How to use the tools frequently needed in all soil work.
  - Describing methods of providing an optimum environment for the various kinds of plants I grow (moisture in the air, lighting, temperature, etc.).
  - Describing methods of protecting plants from the adverse effects of environmental influences which I can't alter.
- Demonstrate my knowledge of the biological functioning of plants by:
  - Naming all the parts of various kinds of plants and the function they serve for the plant.
  - Describing the process by which a plant gets its nourishment.
  - Describing the process of regeneration for various kinds of plants.
  - Describing the classification system used in ordering plants into groups.
- Demonstrate my knowledge of planting and transplanting procedures by:
  - Identifying the special care to be taken while transporting and transplanting a tree, shrub, or plant.
  - Describing the qualities of a plant to be considered prior to purchasing or transplanting.
  - Describing the growing season of various plants and how to determine when and where to plant seeds or seedlings.
  - Selecting appropriately between the varieties of plants or seeds available to me.
  - Demonstrating planting techniques.
  - Selecting containers appropriate for various types of ornamental and/or indoor plants.
Demonstrate my knowledge of hazards affecting plants and how to remedy them by:

- Describing the differences between animals and insects which are harmful to the plants I grow and those which directly or indirectly help the plants (bees and cross-pollination, lady bugs which eat aphids that eat leaves, etc.).
- Detecting and diagnosing plant damage effectively.
- Preventing damage to plants from insects and animals by using organic and/or inorganic methods.
- Using various methods of weed control.
- Describing the cost/effectiveness aspects of the various methods of insect and weed control described above.
- Describing the resources available to me to obtain assistance with these kinds of problems.
- Using and explaining any tools or materials used in pest or weed control.

Demonstrate my knowledge of plant maintenance by:

- Arranging my resources to allow for optimum plant maintenance.
- Diagnosing a need for a change in maintenance procedures and proceeding to test my diagnosis.
- Providing the care that different plants need for optimum growth.
- Harvesting effectively.

Demonstrate my knowledge of a particular method, or part of a method, for growing or caring for plants (organic gardening, creating hybrids, etc.).

Demonstrate my in-depth knowledge of a particular kind of plant and its care.

Demonstrate my knowledge of harvesting vegetables, fruits, and flowers.

Demonstrate my knowledge of proper care for plant products (flowers once they have been cut; vegetables once they have been harvested).

Demonstrate knowledge and techniques of plant pruning to facilitate growth and/or flowering under the following circumstances:

- During the different seasons.
- After transplanting.
- For ornamental effects.

Demonstrate my knowledge and skills as a landscape architect, including:

- Evaluating and planning growing space based on needs and use.
- Selecting trees, plants, paving, etc., appropriate to the site and use.
- Changing outdoor areas in accordance with changing capabilities for care and maintenance.
- Changing outdoor areas in accordance with changing use.
- Evaluating plants, trees, shrubs, etc., before purchase, for their suitability to climate, location, growing conditions, etc.
- Determining the cost of implementing and maintaining a given landscape plan.

- Apply principles of color, texture and design in floral arranging.
- Identify the aesthetic guidelines for planning floral arrangements (balance, proportion, etc.).
- Identify common plants and flowers and give their correct names.
HUMAN RESOURCES SPECIALIST

Human resource management involves allocating and monitoring the utilization of people, their time and their talents, within an organization, program, or activity.

As a human resources specialist, can:

- Determine the number and type of individuals and the amount of time needed to accomplish a given task or activity.
- Prepare a staffing plan and present the rationale for it.
- Prepare staffing need projections on the basis of historical data and analysis.
- Prepare staffing need projections on the basis of problem survey data (see Problem Analyst/Researcher).
- Explain the relationship between a particular job and organization/agency/program mission (see Teacher/Trainer).
- Prepare cost estimates for the use of personnel and their time (see Financial Manager).
- Determine the cost/effectiveness of alternative plans for personnel allocation.
- Select and/or recruit individuals for a variety of jobs.
- Prepare job descriptions.
- Prepare advertisements to recruit personnel (see Public Relations/Communications Worker).
- Target advertisements toward paid and/or volunteer workers.
- Demonstrate an understanding of the needs and motives which lead people to take part in volunteer work.
- Arrange for and/or conduct the organizational socialization of personnel (see Teacher/Trainer).
- Arrange for and monitor the job training of personnel (see Teacher/Trainer).
- Demonstrate a knowledge of the psychological principles which govern people's behavior in work situations.
- Establish and maintain procedures to monitor work quality and quantity.
- Monitor the quality and quantity of work performed by individuals and/or task groups.
- Counsel with workers who are not performing up to organizational standards.

- Develop and use techniques which will minimize conflicts between paid and volunteer workers.

- Demonstrate the ability to use appropriate techniques to solve interpersonal problems (see Counselor).

- Use recognition or other psychic rewards to keep volunteer workers involved and productive.

- Help volunteers see the relevance of their organization/agency experience to their long-range career goals and/or personal development.

- Develop and maintain a system of evaluative records of job performance.

- Help supervisors deal with personnel problems.

- Maintain time and salary records for paid workers.

- Conduct salary administration and performance reviews for paid workers (see Financial Manager).

- Conduct performance reviews for volunteer workers.

- Handle outplacements and terminations.

- Train others in personnel management (see Teacher/Trainer).

- Understand and keep informed about labor laws (such as Taft-Hartley).

- Review and keep up-to-date on changes in state and federal laws for employee compensation and benefits.

- Develop an affirmative action program and monitor compliance.

- Plan and implement programs for staff development.

- Plan and monitor a retirement program.

- Deal with employee relations problems and develop programs to meet employee relations needs.

- Plan and implement personnel policies and review them regularly for needed changes.
LIBRARY ASSISTANT

A library assistant helps library users and assists the library staff in technical services.

As a library assistant, I can:

- Develop and/or maintain current files of special materials, such as:
  - Newspaper clippings.
  - Magazine articles.
  - Pictures.
  - Informal reports of local and community groups.

- Use and maintain audiovisual equipment, such as:
  - Slide projector.
  - Film projector.
  - Tape recorder.
  - Record player.
  - Microfiche/microfilm reader/printer.
  - Videotape machine.

- Direct others in the use of audiovisual equipment, such as:
  - Slide projector.
  - Film projector.
  - Tape recorder.
  - Record player.
  - Microfiche/microfilm reader/printer.
  - Videotape machine.

- Use data processing equipment to check out/check in materials, identify overdue materials, etc.

- Assist librarian in purchasing and processing library materials, such as:
  - Typing purchase orders, catalogue cards, etc.
  - Checking invoices on new orders.
  - Processing incoming orders.
  - Reproducing (photocopying) catalogue cards, orders, etc.
  - Alphabetizing, sorting and filing catalogue cards, orders, etc.
  - Putting library plate, card pockets, etc., in new materials.

- Assist with the circulation of library materials, including:
  - Checking out materials.
  - Locating special materials and placing them on reserve.
  - Issuing and/or checking library users' cards.
  - Preparing overdue notices.
  - Sorting and shelving books.
  - "Reading the shelves" to see that materials are in proper location.
  - Reviewing the circulation record of materials to help in decisions about "weeding out" the collection.
- Making an inventory of materials to identify items that may be missing or misfiled.
- Inspecting books for wear/damage/need of replacement.

Help with user services, including:

- Providing information on library services, facilities and rules.
- Answering questions that involve fact-finding in standard reference sources.
- Helping users locate materials by use of the card catalogue.

Work with preschool-age children, by:

- Storytelling.
- Using puppets.
- Using audiovisual materials.
- Reading aloud.

Work with school-age children, including:

- Helping them to differentiate between materials which promote learning and those which provide enjoyment only.
- Helping them learn how to carry out library research.
- Helping them learn how to select materials appropriate for their age, reading ability, and interests.

Develop displays and special exhibits, including:

- Seasonal/holiday.
- Community events.
- Ethnic/cultural heritage.
- Special interests (arts, crafts, hobbies, travel, etc.).
- Library programs, activities, services.

Develop posters, leaflets and other brochures about library programs and services.

Organize and maintain materials by:

- Indexing local newspapers.
- Repairing/re-covering books.
- Filing newspapers and periodicals.
- Recording books, articles, etc., on tape.

Demonstrate knowledge in the use of office equipment, such as:

- Typewriter.
- Xerox.
- Mimeograph.
- Duplicating machine.

Determine the needs of library users and refer them to the appropriate materials:
- Reference books.
- Books on specific subjects.
- Children's books.
- Periodicals.
- Audiovisual materials.
- Vertical file materials.
- Special collections.

- Analyze the appropriateness of library materials for:
  - Children of different ages.
  - Individuals with handicaps:
    - Visual.
    - Hearing.
    - Physical.
    - Mental.
    - Individuals with limited ability to read/speak English.

- Evaluate the appropriateness of nonprint materials (films, records, etc.) for specific groups and/or activities.

- Demonstrate my sensitivity to and awareness of community attitudes and concerns when planning.

- Assist parents, teachers and others working with children in selecting appropriate materials.

- Assist individuals with handicaps (e.g., visual) in locating and using special library materials which will meet their needs.

- Assist with programs and workshops for library volunteer programs:
  - Reading Is Fundamental.
  - Literacy volunteers.
  - Friends of the library.

- Assist with the development of bibliographies or other lists of library materials on selected topics.
MUSEUM ASSISTANT

Museum assistants describe and discuss museum exhibits with groups of individuals to improve understanding of what is being seen. They may work in art galleries or museums; in historical buildings, museums, reconstructions, or parks; in science or natural history museums; or in zoos. Other types of museum staff assistants may work in preparing, preserving, or restoring materials for display, in caring for plants or animals, in performing tasks or activities as part of the museum's demonstrations, or in conducting research.

As a museum assistant, I can:

- Plan and prepare a lecture-tour for children and/or adults.
- Translate information and facts to a level of understanding appropriate to the background and experience of the audience.
- Deliver a lecture-tour without notes but following a suggested outline.
- Modify the information given in a lecture-tour to suit children of various ages.
- Develop and use techniques which arouse curiosity and provide discussion during the lecture-tour.
- Demonstrate a knowledge of and the ability to use a library and other reference resources.
- "Read the nature" of a group during the first ten minutes of a lecture-tour and modify the remainder of the lecture-tour as appropriate.
- Know the criteria on which to judge a work of art.
- Plan a lecture-tour to meet specified educational objectives.
- Know the criteria on which to judge other lectures.
- Speak in public with confidence.
- Understand and be able to use techniques of group dynamics.
- Understand and be able to explain the policies of the organization or institution.
- Demonstrate my knowledge of:
  - Art history.
  - Art techniques (see Artist/Craftsperson).
  - World and/or national history.
  - State and/or local history.
- Plants (see Horticulturist/Floral Designer).
- Animals (see Animal Care Specialist).
- Science.
- Other areas. (Specify) ________________________________

- Describe methods of research and investigation (see Problem Analyst/Researcher).
- Prepare museum support materials (see Public Relations/Communications Worker).
- Demonstrate my knowledge of teaching methods and materials.
- Develop written materials for use in lecture-tours.
- Use audiovisual materials in conjunction with lecture-tours.
- Demonstrate craft techniques.
- Take part in "living history" depictions/demonstrations.
- Explain the reasons and purposes for museums, zoos, etc.
- Know how to care for living plants and/or animals which are part of the collection.
- Know how to care for and maintain the materials and equipment in the collection.
- Develop and maintain a library of materials relevant to my lecture-tour specialty.
- Train others to work as staff assistants (see Teacher/Trainer).
- Work with members of the professional staff and/or with members of the supervising board.
PERFORMING ARTS SPECIALIST

A performing arts specialist uses skills related to drama, music, or dance to produce or take part in plays, concerts, films, broadcasts and similar events.

As a performing arts specialist, I can:

- Perform before an audience with poise and self-confidence.
- Speak clearly and distinctly.
- Memorize a script, composition, or dance routine and respond to cues from others.
- Express feelings and emotions through body movement, voice inflection, or instrumental style and interpretation.
- Understand the ideas and feelings that an author, composer or choreographer is trying to convey and make them clear to others.
- Instruct others in the basic techniques of drama, dance, or musical performance (see Teacher/Trainer).
- Direct actors and other workers in producing a play, broadcast, or film.
- Select scripts, dances or musical compositions that are appropriate for my ability, the abilities of those performing with me, and/or the nature of the audience.
- Direct and conduct other musicians in a choir, band, orchestra, or dance group.
- Recognize, explain, and follow the symbols involved in musical interpretation.
- Explain the special characteristics of different musical instruments and consider their effects when composing or arranging.
- Apply musical theory in performing in or composing, arranging, or conducting for instrumental or vocal groups.
- Sight-read music.
- Create dance routines for myself or others.
- Move with rhythm and grace and in coordination with other performers.
- Demonstrate the basic steps or routines in one or more types of dancing (ballet, tap, etc.).
A problem analyst/researcher systematically assesses a topic or the current status and/or needs related to a problem, program or service to identify causal factors and possible solutions. The problem analyst/researcher usually collects original data; sometimes the problem analyst/researcher uses or reanalyzes data collected by others.

As a problem analyst/researcher, I can:

- Develop plan(s) for investigating the problem area.
- Identify and obtain information about:
  - The target populations affected by the problem.
  - The sources of power which can facilitate or block the implementation of change (see Advocate/Change Agent for related activities).
  - The existing programs, resources, and other factors which impact on the problem.
- Assess the impact of the preceding factors on the problem area by various data collection techniques such as interviewing, surveying, public discussions, etc.
- Compile a list of specific needs or problems within the problem area.
- Give priority to those needs and problems which are most important and practical to pursue.
- Define potential actions in terms of cost/effectiveness.
- Describe the problem area(s) for purposes of program, development by:
  - Summarizing data for ease in interpretation.
  - Keeping records of contacts and resources.
- Describe the nature of organizational and community structures as they relate to the problem area and its potential solutions.
- Select problem area(s) relevant to organizational needs.
- Limit the research focus by:
  - Conceptualizing issues.
  - Defining variables.
  - Making operational relevant measures.
  - Identifying the unit of analysis.
  - Generating hypotheses.
- Collect background information by:
Locating information sources such as:
- Written materials.
- Data banks.
- Interviews.
- Surveys.

Summarizing past experience with problems.
- Evaluating the utility of past efforts.

Design research, by:
- Selecting research design.
- Selecting sampling techniques.
- Selecting survey techniques.
- Developing practical plans of identifying:
  - Needs.
  - Time.
  - Costs.
  - Personnel.

Manage proposal development, by:
- Locating potential sources of funding (see Fund Raiser).
- Writing a proposal to include:
  - Background.
  - Design.
  - Time and cost estimates.
  - Expected outcomes.
  - Utility of research to the organization and to the larger society.

Meeting with funding agencies to promote the proposal.
- Adapting proposal to meet requirements of funding source.

Obtain data to:
- Foster cooperation with community groups, and/or relevant institutions and agencies to gain their support for the research.
- Recruit and train data collectors.
- Select appropriate data collecting instruments.
- Design and validate new data collecting instruments.
- Use appropriate sampling and survey techniques.
- Monitor data collected for quality control.

- Obtain the informed consent of participants.
- Obtain data from existing information banks.
- Process data to:
- Develop coding procedures.
- Train coders.
- Supervise coders for quality control.
- Select and implement other data reduction procedures.
- Develop computer programs appropriate for the research design.

- Analyze and summarize data by using:
  - Averages or other measures of central tendency.
  - Measures of dispersion or deviation.
  - Measures describing relations (correlations).
  - Other techniques of bivariate or multivariate analysis.
  - Tables or other means of categorical aggregation.
  - Graphs and charts.
  - Tests of significance.
  - Experimental effects analysis.
  - Nonexperimental causal analysis.

- Make inferences from data.

- Make conclusions and recommendations from data to:
  - Formulate planning recommendations.
  - Make recommendations for further study.
  - Develop policy recommendations.

- Write research report(s).
- Disseminate research results to appropriate groups.
PUBLIC RELATIONS/COMMUNICATIONS WORKER

Public relations and communications are used to increase knowledge and understanding of an organization, its products, and/or its program. Public relations/communications workers disseminate information to individuals and groups outside of the organization or agency. They also process information received from outside the organization.

In carrying out my work in public relations and communications, I can:

- Conceptualize communications and public relations programs which interpret the goals of the organization.
- Plan and develop a public relations program.
- Identify target audiences.
- Determine the communications technique(s) appropriate to each audience.
- Gather information by:
  - Conducting interviews.
  - Confirming facts.
  - Identifying trends.
  - Locating background data.
  (See Problem Analyst/Researcher.)
- Identify representatives of other organizations and of local, state and federal governments to receive information about organizational activities.
- Establish an interchange with appropriate representatives from:
  - Members of the target group.
  - Volunteer coordinating agencies.
  - Private and civic organizations.
  - Business, industry and professional groups.
  - Foundations.
  - Local government.
  - State government.
  - Federal government.
  (See Fund Raiser and Advocate/Change Agent.)
- Write the following:
  - News stories.
  - Feature stories.
  - Fact-sheets for editorial background.
  - Reports.
  - Speeches.
  - Scripts for radio/television.
Prepare audiovisual materials, videotapes, and/or films by:
- Utilizing audiotape and/or videotape equipment.
- Utilizing photographic equipment.
- Directing acting, speaking, and filming.

Prepare visual materials, such as:
- Photographing events for news media or other publications.
- Designing and preparing art work.
- Designing displays and/or posters.

Coordinate development of materials for production, such as:
- Edit publications.
- Edit films and/or tapes.
- Design layouts.

Work with printers, publishers, and/or producers.

Work with mass media (press, radio, television) to:
- Select optimum outlets for placement of material and identify contacts.
- Adapt and edit materials according to mass media standards.
- Conduct press conferences.
- Maintain good relations to facilitate placement of material.

Speak publicly, such as:
- Deliver speeches.
- Promote an organization, program, or service (see Advocate/Change Agent).
- Participate as a member of a panel or debate group.
- Give interviews.
- Conduct or moderate interviews, panel discussions, debates.
  (See Fund Raiser and Teacher/Trainer.)

Publicize and promote organizational materials.

Plan distribution of publications and other materials.
RECREATION WORKER

A recreation worker leads or assists a leader of recreational activities for specified groups in the setting of a school, community, social, or church-related organization.

As a recreation worker, I can:

- Develop recreational programs and activities that foster individual and group development.
- Develop specific goals and plans for particular recreational activities.
- Identify resources in personnel, money, materials, time, and authority needed to implement a recreational program.
- Develop and use techniques which will enhance relations among people.
- Demonstrate ability to use appropriate techniques to solve interpersonal problems.
- Demonstrate knowledge of teaching methods and materials (see Teacher/Trainer).
- Develop and maintain a library or collection of relevant materials, games, and other recreational equipment and supplies.
- Plan and organize cooperative and competitive activities and know when each is appropriate.
- Teach one or more of the following:
  - Games.
  - Crafts.
  - Music.
  - Dance.
  - Dramatics.
  - Art.
  - Outdoor skills.
  - Conservation.
  - Cooking.
  - Sports.
  - Camping.
- Demonstrate knowledge of the use and care of audiovisual equipment, gymnastic and sports equipment, tools, crafts equipment, and camping equipment.
- Speak publicly, including:
  - Articulating rules and procedures to participants.
  - Promoting the organization and its activities to potential sponsors.
  - Publicizing special events.
- Establish rapport with individuals of diverse backgrounds.

- Raise funds for a recreational program (see Fund Raiser).

- Demonstrate techniques to prevent or limit conflict between individuals.

- Demonstrate knowledge of safety precautions required by potentially hazardous activities in sports, crafts, camping, etc.

- Determine the urgency of a problem and handle it appropriately.

- Demonstrate a knowledge of individual growth and development.

- Select recreational activities that will help individuals learn desired skills and attitudes.

- Keep records of individual and group progress.

- Understand and use techniques of group dynamics.

- Plan and carry out field trips to sporting events, dramatic presentations, concerts, recreation areas, museums, zoos, etc.

- Develop positive participant attitudes by:
  - Selecting appropriate activities.
  - Providing positive feedback.

- Provide advice and informal counseling to participants.

- Determine participant interests and plan activities around them.

- Demonstrate knowledge of capacities and needs of special groups:
  - Preschool children.
  - Children during early school years.
  - Adolescents.
  - Boys/Girls.
  - The elderly.
  - The physically handicapped.
  - The mentally handicapped.
  - Single parents.

- Budget existing funds (see Financial Manager).

- Recognize and deal with medical emergencies (see Health Care Worker).

- Interact appropriately and adaptively with personnel and goals of the sponsoring agency.
SALES WORKER/ORGANIZER

A sales worker/organizer operates or supervises the operations of a store or sale or the selling of an item or service.

As a sales worker/organizer, I can:

- Assess potential markets for products or services that might be offered.
- Select items or services to sell that are appropriate for the organization/group image and goals.
- Select sites, neighborhoods, or locations for a sale or store on the basis of information about potential customers, costs, etc.
- Determine if sales permits, leases, etc., will be needed and obtain them.
- Identify or select the intended clientele or target population for a store or sale.
- Determine the prices of items or services on the basis of cost and overhead factors.
- Establish and maintain quality control procedures.
- Demonstrate knowledge and understanding of the regulations—tax laws, sales permits, leases, etc.—which apply to stores or to fund-raising sales (see Fund Raiser).
- Purchase, obtain, or create items for sale.
- Survey and choose among suppliers of products and services on the basis of quality, appropriateness, cost, and reliability.
- Determine the cost/benefit factors for different types of products and services, or for different kinds of stores and sales.
- Perform, arrange for, or supervise the performance of sales related functions, such as advertising, publicity (see Public Relations/Communications Worker), pricing, selling, delivery, banking, record keeping (see Financial Manager), and janitorial work.
- Design and prepare displays for store interiors or windows (see Artist/Craftsperson).
- Recruit and select sales personnel (see Human Resources Specialist).
- Establish procedures to monitor personnel, money, and inventory (see Financial Manager).
- Train others in established sales procedures (see Teacher/Trainer).
- Develop methods and procedures for return of products, repayment for unsold goods, sale of slow-moving or leftover items, etc.
- Develop specific goals for a sales activity within the constraints of available time, space, and personnel.
- Evaluate buyer behavior and consumption patterns.
- Maintain correspondence with suppliers and sale/store clientele.
- Organize a sale into its component parts and determine the sequence in which these activities must be performed.
- Develop and maintain store/sale budgets and financial records (see Financial Manager).
- Make appropriate use of business records, such as purchase orders, receipts, and sales slips.
- Demonstrate the use of bookkeeping techniques and accounting procedures used in store or sales records (see Financial Manager).
- Coordinate the execution of simultaneous sales activities (see Administrator/Manager).
- Demonstrate the use of business machines, such as a typewriter, photocopier, cash register, adding machine, and sand calculator.
- Make or maintain an inventory record of items on hand and/or sold to determine what and when to reorder.
- Deal effectively with customers, including:
  - Providing information about products or services.
  - Explaining pricing policies.
  - Establishing procedures for customer returns or repayment for items or services.
  - Handling complaints.
- Establish and maintain sales/store records, including:
  - Profit/loss statements.
  - Expenditure/income statements.
  - Periodic reports to sponsoring agencies and/or other involved groups.
  - Records to help others develop similar sales programs or stores.
TEACHER/TRAINER

A teacher helps individuals or groups of individuals to learn facts or skills or to improve their learning techniques. A trainer teaches specific jobs, skills, and/or tasks; training also involves the organizational socialization of other workers.

In my work as a teacher/trainer, I can:

- Establish a good working relationship with a learner or group of learners.

- Develop positive student attitudes toward learning by:
  - Selecting tasks of appropriate difficulty.
  - Telling the learner when a job is well done.

- Encourage and support the learner and help the learner to develop a positive self-concept by:
  - Complimenting the learner for good work and good thinking.
  - Showing acceptance of the learner by giving attention and by listening carefully.
  - Helping the learner respond to increasingly difficult materials.

- Work cooperatively with the learner's teacher and/or school by:
  - Abiding by school rules relating to tutors or aides.
  - Being positive about the teacher and school in discussions with the learner.
  - Following the teacher's plan of instruction.
  - Providing the teacher with information on learner progress.

- Provide advice and informal counseling to the learner, when appropriate (see Counselor).

- Identify learner needs and difficulties:
  - By direct observation of and/or interaction with the learner.
  - From test data or other diagnostic devices.
  - Through discussion with the teacher(s) who regularly instruct(s) this learner.
  - Through discussion with other school personnel (counselors, psychologists, etc.).

- Determine learner interests and plan instructional activities around them.

- Plan a lesson or series of lessons including:
  - Objectives.
  - Teaching methods and techniques.
  - Instructional materials (both written and audiovisual).
- Evaluation techniques.
  - Pace instruction at a speed appropriate to the learner.
  - Set and monitor instructional objectives.
  - Select instructional material and techniques appropriate to learner background and experience.
  - Demonstrate knowledge of learning theories and their application.
  - Demonstrate knowledge of teaching methods and materials.
  - Develop written materials for use in teaching or training.
  - Develop audiovisual materials for use in teaching or training.
  - Develop and maintain a library of materials for use in teaching or training. (Specify subject and/or level) ______________________

- Demonstrate knowledge of the subject (which I teach.
(Specify) ______________________

- Evaluate learner progress by:
  - Observation.
  - Oral questioning.
  - Use of tests or other evaluative devices.
  - Use questioning techniques appropriate to instructional objectives.
  - Make an effective oral presentation to a group.
  - Demonstrate a knowledge of group interaction techniques and of their use.
  - Train others to be teachers or trainers.
  - Articulate the philosophy of the organization.
  - Explain the relationship between a particular job and organization/agency/program mission.
  - Identify training needs (see Problem Analyst/Researcher).
  - Make an overall training plan which includes:
- General learning objectives.
- Overall teaching strategies.
- Teaching method.
- Budget for training costs.
- Schedule and site consideration.
- Materials, both written and audiovisual.
- Evaluation techniques and instruments.

- Determine the cost/effectiveness of various training approaches.
- Determine the suitability of various training approaches for individuals with different backgrounds and experiences.
- Develop training manuals for other trainers to use.
- Administer a training program, including:
  - Selecting and recruiting training personnel.
  - Selecting training methods and materials which are both appropriate to the group and cost/effective.
  - Setting training goals.
  - Conducting the training of those who will train others.
  - Monitoring the progress of those being trained.
  - Monitoring the progress of those doing the training.
  - Modifying training programs and techniques if the goals of the program are not being achieved.
  - Evaluating the effectiveness of the training program.
  - Preparing and evaluating reports on training programs.
  - Monitoring and evaluating the job performance of those who were trained.

- Conduct a training session.
- Train others to do specific job(s) or task(s).
  (Specify)

- Know how and when to use different role-playing techniques in training.
- Help those being trained to see the relevance of their training experience to their long-range career goals and/or personal development.
- Evaluate the training programs of others.
TRANSPORTATION SPECIALIST

A transportation specialist plans and schedules the transfer of people and/or materials from one location to another, provides for this transfer, and/or cares for the vehicles used.

As a transportation specialist, I can:

- Survey the transportation needs of people, including obtaining information about the special needs of groups, such as children, the handicapped or the aged.
- Identify the requirements for transporting the materials used by an organization or program.
- Design transportation plans for people or materials to meet identified needs and requirements.
- Schedule the individuals and vehicles needed to implement a transportation plan.
- Monitor and keep records for a transportation program to maintain the quality of service and to identify when changes are needed.
- Serve as the dispatcher for a transportation program.
- Coordinate a number of pick ups or deliveries.
- Plan or select a transportation route that will be most efficient in terms of time involved and fuel consumption.
- Read and use maps to plan a route.
- Identify and use alternative routes when unexpected conditions affect the routes planned.
- Select the type of vehicle to be used in a transportation program on the basis of analysis of the vehicle characteristics and the needs and requirements of the program.
- Decide among the various forms of finance for vehicles (purchase, long-term leasing, short-term rental).
- Select appropriate insurance for vehicles and drivers and for the passengers, and/or materials being transported.
- Keep records of vehicle insurance, registration, and/or operators' licenses.
- Read and interpret the leases, contracts, warranties and insurance policies involved in vehicle rental or purchase.
- Describe the process involved in registering and inspecting automobiles and/or other vehicles.
- Describe the process involved in obtaining a license to operate various types of vehicles (automobile, bus, taxi, etc.).
- Monitor the condition of vehicles to determine when maintenance and/or replacement is needed.
- Supervise and keep a record of vehicle maintenance.
- Identify the best person to make repairs, on the basis of costs, quality of work, and warranties.
- Compare the costs of repairing and replacing a vehicle when deciding the more cost effective action.
- Determine if a vehicle needs, and provide:
  - Additional oil
  - Water added to the battery
  - Water or antifreeze added to the radiator
  - More air in the tires
- Provide routine automobile maintenance, such as:
  - Changing the air filter
  - Changing the oil and oil filter
  - Check and, adding, if necessary, automatic transmission fluid
  - Flushing and refilling the cooling system
  - Replacing radiator or heater hoses
  - Lubricating chassis and/or wheel bearings
  - Changing tires
- Explain what recourse is available if a vehicle cannot be made to function adequately while under guarantee.
- Teach others how to drive a car, bus, or other vehicle (see Teacher/Trainer).
- Plan and make the arrangements (reservations, tickets, etc.) for group travel.
- Negotiate with transportation and accommodation representatives to obtain the lowest possible costs for a group travel package.

WORK GROUP DESCRIPTIONS

Group               Description.                                                                                      Subgroups
01     ARTISTIC

01.01 Literary Arts

Workers in this group write, edit, or direct the publication of prose or poetry. They find employment on newspapers or magazines, in radio and television studios, and in the theater and motion picture industries. Some writers are self-employed and sell stories, plays, and other forms of literary composition to publishers.

01.02 Visual Arts

Workers in this group create original works of art or do commercial art work, using such techniques as drawing, painting, photographing, and sculpturing to express or interpret ideas or to illustrate various written materials. Some visual artists design products, settings, or graphics (such as advertisements or book covers), and oversee the work of other artists or craftspersons who produce or install them. Others teach art, or appraise or restore paintings and other fine art objects. Advertising agencies, printing and publishing firms, television and motion picture studios, museums and restoration laboratories employ visual artists. They also work for manufacturers and in retail and wholesale trade. Many are self-employed, operating their own commercial art studios or doing free-lance work.

01.03 Performing Arts: Drama

Workers in this group produce, direct, and perform in dramatic productions and similar forms of entertainment. They also teach acting, choose performers for particular roles, and perform other 'behind-the-scenes' work to make productions run smoothly. They are employed by motion picture, television, and radio studios, and by stock companies, theaters, and other places where plays or floor shows are presented. Schools and colleges hire performing artists both to teach drama and to produce and direct student productions. Full-time employment in this field is found at educational institutions, at studios which have staff announcers, disc jockeys, and regularly scheduled 'talk shows' or dramatic presentations. However, most performing artists are not permanently employed and must audition for roles in both short-term and long-run productions.

01.04 Performing Arts: Music

Workers in this group sing or play instruments, teach, or direct cvocal or instrumental music. They compose, arrange, or orchestrate musical compositions, and plan the presentation of concerts. They work for motion picture studios, television and radio networks or local stations, recording studios, nightclubs, and other places where musical entertainment is provided regularly. They may be employed by orchestras, bands, or choral groups which give scheduled performances or are hired for special events. Composers, arrangers, and orchestrators work for music publishing companies and firms in the recording and entertainment fields. Schools and colleges hire musicians to teach and direct vocal and instrumental music.
Many musicians are self-employed and, like all performing artists, must audition for parts in musical productions or for employment with an orchestra or other performing group.

01.05 Performing Arts: Dance

Workers in this group compose, perform, or teach dance routines or techniques. Performing dancers and composers (choreographers) work for motion picture and television studios, nightclubs and theaters, and other places where this kind of entertainment is regularly presented. Dance teachers are employed by schools and studios. Although some dancers work full time as performers or teachers, most must audition for both chorus and solo work in theatrical productions of all kinds. Many dancers are self-employed as teachers who give private lessons to children and adults, specializing in ballroom or ballet instruction.

01.06 Craft Arts

Workers in this group apply artistic techniques, fabricate, decorate or repair a variety of products, and reproduce photographs and graphic or printed materials. They use engraving and etching precision equipment, knives and chisels, paintbrushes and power tools to work wood, stone, clay, metal, and gemstones, or to embellish objects made from all of these materials. They are employed by manufacturing firms, printing and publishing companies, and motion picture and television studios. They also work for advertising agencies and other firms which provide specialized services, museums, and retail stores. Some craft artists are self-employed selling items they have made, or providing their services on a free-lance basis to businesses and individuals.

01.07 Elemental Arts

Workers in this group entertain or divert people by announcing features or performing acts at carnivals or amusement parks, or by conducting person-to-person consultations with people to predict their future or to tell them other things about themselves. They work with traveling carnivals or circuses, or at permanently located amusement parks. Some are self-employed, conducting interviews in their homes or giving consultations by mail.

01.08 Modeling

Workers in this group appear before a camera or live audience in nonspeaking capacities. They stand in for actors and take part in crowd scenes in television or motion picture productions. They show clothing, hairstyles and other products, appear in fashion shows and other public or private product exhibitions, and pose for artists and photographers. They work for manufacturers, or wholesale, and retail establishments. Some are employed by motion picture and television studios, nightclubs, and other entertainment facilities. Modeling instructors work for public or private schools. Many of these workers are self-employed, or obtain job assignments through model agencies or unions which represent persons in the entertainment industry.

02 SCIENTIFIC

02.01 Physical Sciences

Workers in this group are concerned mostly with nonliving things, such as chemicals, rocks, metals, mathematics, movements of the earth and the stars, etc. They conduct scientific studies and perform other activities requiring a knowledge of math, physics, or chemistry. Some workers investigate, discover, and test new theories. Some look for ways to develop new or improved materials or processes for use in production and construction. Others do research in such fields as geology, astronomy, oceanography, and computer science. Workers base their conclusions on information that can be measured or proved. Industries, government agencies, or large universities employ most of these workers in their research facilities.

02.02 Life Sciences

Workers in this group are concerned mostly with living things, such as plants and animals. They conduct research and do experiments to expand man’s knowledge of living things. Some may work on problems related to how the environment affects plant and animal life. Others may study causes of disease and ways to control disease. These workers are usually employed in the research facilities of hospitals, government agencies, industries or universities.

02.03 Medical Sciences

Workers in this group are involved in the prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of human and animal diseases, disorders, or injuries. It is common to specialize in specific kinds of illnesses, or special areas or organs of the body. Workers who prefer to be more general may become general practitioners, family practitioners, or may learn to deal with groups of related medical problems. A wide variety of work environments is available to medical workers ranging from large city hospitals and clinics, to home offices in rural areas, to field clinics in the military or in underdeveloped countries.

02.04 Laboratory Technology

Workers in this group use special laboratory techniques and equipment to perform tests in the fields of chemistry, biology, or physics. They record information that results from their experiments and tests. They help scientists, medical doctors, researchers, and engineers in their work. Hospitals, government agencies, universities, and private industries employ these workers in their laboratories and research facilities.
3.01 Managerial Work: Plants and Animals

Workers in this group operate or manage farming, fishing, forestry, and horticultural service businesses of many kinds. Some of them breed specialty plants and animals. Others provide services to increase production or beautify land areas. Many of them work in rural or woodland areas, on farms, ranches, and forest preserves. Others find employment with commercial nurseries, landscaping firms, business services, or government agencies located in large and small communities all over the country. Many are self-employed, operating their own large or small businesses.

3.02 General Supervision: Plants and Animals

Workers in this group supervise others and often work right along with them on farms or ranches, fish hatcheries or forests, plant nurseries or parks. Most of them work in rural or forest locations, but some jobs are located in city or suburban areas. Some of these workers travel throughout an area to inspect or treat croplands for insects or disease, or supervise workers performing agricultural or lawn care services.

3.03 Animal Training and Service

Workers in this group take care of animals of many kinds, and train them for a variety of purposes. They work in pet shops, testing laboratories, animal shelters, and veterinarians' offices. Some are employed by zoos, aquariums, circuses, and at other places where animals are exhibited or used in entertainment acts. Others work for animal training or obedience schools, or in stables or kennels maintained by individuals or such facilities as race tracks or riding academies. These workers are not employed on farms, ranches, or other places where animals are raised as crops.

04 PROTECTIVE

04.01 Safety and Law Enforcement

Workers in this group are in charge of enforcing laws and regulations. Some investigate crimes, while others supervise workers who stop or arrest lawbreakers. Others make inspections to be sure that the laws are not broken. Most jobs are found in the federal, state, or local governments, such as the Police and Fire Departments. Some are found in private businesses such as factories, stores, and similar places.

04.02 Security Services

Workers in this group protect people and animals from injury or danger. They enforce laws, investigate suspicious persons or acts, prevent crime, and fight fires. Some of the jobs are found in federal, state, or local governments. Some workers are hired by railroads, hotels, lumberyards, industrial plants, and amusement establishments. Some work on their own, acting as bodyguards, or private detectives.

05 MECHANICAL

05.01 Engineering

Workers in this group plan, design, and direct the construction or development of buildings, bridges, roads, airports, dams, sewage systems, air-conditioning systems, mining machinery, and other structures and equipment. They also develop processes and/or techniques for generating and transmitting electrical power, manufacturing chemicals, extracting metals from ore, and controlling the quality of products being made. Workers specialize in one or more kinds of engineering, such as civil, electrical, mechanical, mining, and safety. Some are hired by industrial plants, petroleum and mining companies, research laboratories, and construction companies. Others find employment with federal, state, and local governments. Some have their own engineering firms and accept work from various individuals or companies.

05.02 Managerial Work: Mechanical

Workers in this group manage industrial plants or systems where technical work is being performed. Jobs are found in oil fields, power plants, transportation companies, radio and television networks, and telephone and related communications systems.

05.03 Engineering Technology

Workers in this group collect, record, and coordinate technical information in such activities as surveying, drafting, petroleum production, communications control, and materials scheduling. Workers find jobs in construction, factories, engineering and architectural firms, airports, and research laboratories.

05.04 Air and Water Vehicle Operation

Workers in this group pilot airplanes or ships, or supervise others who do. Some instruct other persons in flying. Most of these workers are hired by shipping companies and commercial airlines. Some find jobs piloting planes or ships for private companies or for individuals.

05.05 Craft Technology

Workers in this group perform highly skilled hand and/or machine work requiring special techniques, training, and experience. Work occurs in a variety of non-factory settings. Some workers own their own shops.
05.06 Systems Operation

Workers in this group operate and maintain equipment in an overall system, or a section of a system, for such purposes as generating and distributing electricity; treating and providing water to customers; pumping oil from oil fields to storage tanks; making ice in an ice plant; and providing telephone service to users. These jobs are found in utility companies, refineries, construction projects, large apartment houses and industrial establishments, and with city and county governments.

05.07 Quality Control

Workers in this group inspect and/or test materials and products to be sure they meet standards. The work is carried out in a non-factory setting and includes such activities as grading logs at a lumberyard, inspecting bridges to be sure they are safe, inspecting gas lines for leaks, and grading gravel for use in building roads. Jobs may be found with construction companies, sawmills, petroleum refineries, and utility companies.

05.08 Land and Water Vehicle Operation

Workers in this group drive large or small trucks, delivery vans, or locomotives to move materials or deliver products. Some drive ambulances; others operate small boats. Most of these jobs are found with trucking companies, railroads and water transportation companies.
Wholesale and retail companies hire delivery drivers; ambulance drivers are hired by hospitals, fire departments, and other establishments concerned with moving the sick or injured.

05.09 Material Control

Workers in this group receive, store, and/or ship materials and products. Some estimate and order the quantities and kinds of materials needed. Others regulate and control the flow of materials to places in the plant where they are to be used. Most have to keep records.
Jobs are found in institutions, industrial plants, and government agencies.

05.10 Crafts

Workers in this group use hands and hand tools skillfully to fabricate, process, install, and/or repair materials, products, and/or structural parts. They follow established procedures and techniques.
The jobs are not found in factories, but are in repair shops, garages, wholesale and retail stores, and hotels. Some are found on construction projects, and others with utilities such as telephone and power systems.

05.11 Equipment Operation

Workers in this group operate heavy machines and equipment to dig, drill, dredge, hoist, or move substances and materials. They also operate machines to pave roads. These jobs are found at mining, logging, and construction sites; docks; receiving and shipping areas of industrial plants; and large storage buildings and warehouses.

05.12 Elemental Work: Mechanical

Workers in this group perform a variety of unskilled tasks, such as moving materials, cleaning work areas, operating simple machines, or helping skilled workers. These jobs are found in a variety of non-factory settings.

06 INDUSTRIAL

06.01 Production Technology

Workers in this group use their skill and knowledge of machines and processes to perform one or more demanding or complex activities. Some set up machines for others to operate or set up and perform a number of different activities.

06.02-14 Equipment Operation, Paper and Paper Products Processing
06.02-15 Equipment Operation, Food Processing
06.02-16 Equipment Operation, Textile, Fabric, and Leather Processing
Quality Control

Workers in this group check the quality and quantity of products and materials being manufactured. They inspect, test, weigh, sort, and grade specific items to be sure that they meet certain standards. Some may also keep inspection records of the number or kind of defects and flaws they find. They work in factories and other large plants that process materials and manufacture products.
06.04 Elemental Work: Industrial

Workers in this group feed or tend machines and equipment, or do manual work. They perform routine, uncomplicated work that requires little training or experience. They also assist other, more skilled workers. They work in a factory setting.

07 BUSINESS DETAIL

07.01 Administrative Detail

Workers in this group perform clerical work which requires special skills and knowledge. They perform management activities according to established regulations and procedures. Jobs in this group are found in the offices of businesses, industries, courts of law, and government agencies, as well as in offices of doctors, lawyers, and other professionals.

07.02 Mathematical Detail

Workers in this group use clerical and math skills to gather, organize, compute, and record, with or without machines, the numerical information used in business or in financial transactions. Jobs in this group are found wherever numerical record keeping is important. Banks, finance companies, accounting firms, or the payroll and inventory control departments in business and government are typical of places where this work is done.

07.03 Financial Detail

Workers in this group use basic math skills as they deal with the public. Keeping records, answering customers' questions, and supervising others is often part of the job. Jobs in this group are found where money is paid to or received from the public. Banks, grocery check-out counters, and ticket booths are typical places of employment.
07.04 Oral Communications

Workers in this group give and receive information verbally. They may deal with people in person by telephone, telegraph, or radio. Recording of information in an organized way is frequently required. Private businesses, institutions such as schools and hospitals, and government agencies hire these workers in their offices, reception areas, registration desks, and other areas of information exchange.

07.05 Records Processing

Workers in this group prepare, review, maintain, route, distribute, and coordinate recorded information. They check records and schedules for accuracy. They may schedule the activities of people or the use of equipment. Jobs in this group are found in most businesses, institutions, and government agencies.

07.06 Clerical Machine Operation

Workers in this group use business machines to record or process data. They operate machines that type, print, sort, compute, send, or receive information. Their jobs are found in businesses, industries, government agencies, or wherever large amounts of data are processed, sent, or received.

07.07 Clerical Handling

Workers in this group perform clerical duties that require little special training or skill. Workers routinely file, sort, copy, route, or deliver things like letters, packages, or messages. Most large businesses, industries, and government agencies employ these workers.
08  SELLING

08.01 Sales Technology

Workers in this group sell products such as industrial machinery, data processing equipment, and pharmaceuticals; services such as industrial shipping, insurance, and advertising. They advise customers of capabilities, uses, and other important features of these products and services, and help them choose those best suited to their needs. They work for manufacturers, wholesalers, and insurance, financial, and business service institutions. Also included in this group are workers who buy products, materials, securities and properties for resale. Some work for themselves.

08.02 General Sales

Workers in this group sell, demonstrate, and solicit orders for products and services of many kinds. They are employed by retail and wholesale firms, manufacturers and distributors, business services, and nonprofit organizations. Some spend all their time in a single location, such as a department store or automobile agency. Others call on businesses or individuals to sell products or services, or follow up on earlier sales.

08.03 Vending

Workers in this group sell novelties, snacks and other inexpensive items. They work at stadiums and street fairs, in nightclubs or restaurants, or wherever crowds gather for entertainment or recreation. Some of them sell products on the street, staying in one location or moving through commercial and residential areas.

09  ACCOMMODATING

09.01 Hospitality Services

Workers in this group help persons, such as visitors, travelers, and customers, get acquainted with and feel at ease in an unfamiliar setting; provide escort and guide services; and plan and direct social activities.
They may also be concerned with the safety and comfort of people when they are traveling or vacationing. These workers find employment with air, rail, and water transportation companies; radio and television broadcasting stations; hotels and restaurants; museums; retirement homes, and related establishments.

09.02 Barber and Beauty Services

Workers in this group provide people with a variety of barbering and beauty services. These services involve care of the hair, skin, and nails. These workers find employment in barber and beauty shops, department stores, hotels, and retirement homes. A few workers find jobs on passenger ships. Some are self-employed and work in their own home or go to the customer.

09.03 Passenger Services

Workers in this group drive buses, taxis, limousines or other vehicles to transport people. Workers who teach driving are also included in this group. Taxi, bus, and street railway companies hire most of the workers in this group, but they can also find employment with government agencies.

09.04 Customer Services

Workers in this group provide customers in commercial settings with various services ranging from delivering newspapers to serving food. Their duties usually include receiving payment and making change. Most of these workers find employment in hotels, restaurants, stores, and concessions. However, some do work on board trains and ships and at amusement parks and resorts.

09.05 Attendant Services

Workers in this group perform services that make life easier and more pleasant for people. They do things that people can't or don't want to do for themselves, like opening doors, delivering messages, carrying luggage and packages, and dishing up food. They find employment in a variety of settings, such as hotels, airports, golf courses, theaters, reducing salons, and gymnasiums.
10 HUMANITARIAN

10.01 Social Services

Workers in this group help people deal with their problems. They may work with one person at a time or with groups of people. Workers sometimes specialize in problems that are personal, social, vocational, physical, educational, or spiritual in nature. Schools, rehabilitation centers, mental health clinics, guidance centers, and churches employ these workers. Jobs are also found in public and private welfare and employment services, juvenile courts and vocational rehabilitation programs.

10.02 Nursing, Therapy, and Specialized Teaching Services

Workers in this group care for, treat, or train people to improve their physical and emotional well-being. Most workers in this group deal with sick, injured, or handicapped people. Some workers are involved in health education and sickness prevention. Hospitals, nursing homes, and rehabilitation centers hire workers in this group, as do schools, industrial plants, doctors’ offices, and private homes. Some sports also have need for workers in this group.

10.03 Child and Adult Care

Workers in this group are concerned with the physical needs and the welfare of others. They assist professionals in treating the sick or injured. They care for the elderly, the very young, or the handicapped. Frequently these workers help people do the things they cannot do for themselves. Jobs are found in hospitals, clinics, day-care centers, nurseries, schools, private homes, and centers for helping the handicapped.

11 LEADING-INFLUENCING

11.01 Mathematics and Statistics

Workers in this group use advanced math and statistics to solve problems and conduct research. They analyze and interpret numerical data for planning and decision making. Some of these workers may first study and then determine how computers may best be used to solve problems or process information. Colleges, large businesses and industries, research organizations, and government agencies use these workers.

11.02 Educational and Library Services

Workers in this group do general and specialized teaching, vocational training, advising in agriculture and home economics, and library work of various kinds. Jobs are found in schools, colleges, libraries, and other educational facilities.

11.03 Social Research

Workers in this group gather, study, and analyze information about individuals, specific groups, or entire societies. They conduct research, both historical and current, into all aspects of human behavior, including abnormal behavior, language, work, politics, lifestyle, and cultural expression. They are employed by museums, schools and colleges, government agencies, and private research foundations.

11.04 Law

Workers in this group advise and represent others in legal matters. Those in small towns and cities conduct criminal or civil cases in court, draw up wills and other legal papers, abstract real estate, and perform related activities. Those in large cities usually specialize in one kind of law, such as criminal, civil, tax, labor, or patent. They work in law firms, unions, government agencies, and commercial and industrial establishments. Some are self-employed and have their own offices. Lawyers are frequently elected to public office, particularly as legislators. Many state governors and U.S. presidents have been lawyers.

11.05 Business Administration

Workers in this group are top level administrators and managers who work through lower level supervisors to direct all or part of the activities in private establishments or government agencies. They set policies, make important decisions, and set priorities. These jobs are found in large businesses, industry, and government. Labor unions and associations will also hire these workers.

11.06 Finance

Workers in this group use mathematical and analytical skills to design financial systems and examine and interpret financial records. They are concerned with accounting and auditing activities, records systems analysis, risk and profit analyses, brokering, and budget and financial control. They find employment in banks, loan companies, investment firms, colleges, government agencies, and miscellaneous business firms. Some workers, like accountants and appraisers, are self-employed.

11.07 Services Administration

Workers in this group manage programs and projects in agencies that provide people with services in such areas as health, education, welfare, and recreation. They are in charge of program planning, policymaking, and other managerial activities. The jobs are found in welfare and rehabilitation agencies and organizations, hospitals, schools, churches, libraries, and museums.

11.08 Communications

Workers in this group write, edit, report and translate factual information. They find employment with radio and television broadcasting stations, newspapers, and publishing firms. Government agencies and professional groups provide some opportunities as do large firms which publish company newspapers and brochures.

11.09 Promotion

Workers in this group raise money, advertise products and services, and influence people in their actions or thoughts. They find employment in business and industry, with advertising agencies, professional groups, unions, colleges, and government agencies.
11.10 Regulations Enforcement

Workers in this group enforce government regulations and company policies that affect peoples' rights, health, safety, and finances. They examine records, inspect products, and investigate services, but do not engage in police work. Most workers find employment with government agencies, licensing departments, and health departments. Some are employed by retail establishments, mines, transportation companies, and nonprofit organizations.

11.11 Business Management

Workers in this group manage a business, such as a store or cemetery, a branch of a large company, such as a local office for a credit corporation, or a department within a company, such as a warehouse. They usually carry out operating policies and procedures determined by administrative workers, such as presidents, vice presidents and directors. Some managers own their own businesses and are considered self-employed. Managers find employment in all kinds of businesses as well as government agencies.

11.12 Contracts and Claims

Workers in this group negotiate contracts and settle claims for companies and individuals. Some make arrangements for agreements between buyers and sellers. Others investigate claims involving damage, injury, and losses. Jobs are found in insurance and transportation companies; businesses; construction companies; and government agencies. Some are found in booking agencies. These agents are frequently self-employed.

12 PHYSICAL PERFORMING

12.01 Sports

Workers in this group compete in professional athletic or sporting events, coach players, and officiate at games. They also give individual and group instruction, recruit players, and regulate various aspects of sporting events. Jobs in this group are found in all types of professional sports, such as football, baseball, hockey, golf, tennis, and horse racing. Some jobs are also available with private recreational facilities, including ski resorts, skating rinks, athletic clubs, and gymnasiums.

12.02 Physical Feats

Workers in this group perform unusual or daring acts of physical strength or skill to entertain people. They may perform alone or with others. Circuses, carnivals, theaters, and amusement parks hire these people.

THE PROJECT HAVE SKILLS WORK GROUPS CHART

Directions: In the left-hand column, find the name of an "I Can" list like one of your own. Then look across the chart. A black dot (•) will appear under the number of each work group that has many paid jobs using these homemaking and volunteer experience skills. A white dot (○) will appear under the number of each work group which has one or two subgroups using these skills. A star (*) will appear under the number of each work group that has a few jobs using these skills. Write down the numbers of the work groups that use your skills. Then turn to Appendix B (or the Guide forOccupation: Vocation Exploration) to read about each group. (Note: This same information can be found in more detail in the HAVE Skills Work Groups Table in Appendix C. Use this table to find the names of the subgroups or the jobs.)

THE HAVE SKILLS WORK GROUPS TABLE

Directions: In the left-hand column, find the name of an "I Can" list with skills like yours. Then look across to the right-hand column. The names of work groups that have many jobs using these skills will appear in CAPITAL LETTERS. The names of subgroups or parts of subgroups with some jobs using these skills will appear in regular letters. Write down the numbers of the work groups and subgroups that have jobs using your skills. Then turn to Appendix C (or the Guide for Occupational Exploration) to read about each of these work groups. (Note that this table gives the same information, but in more detail, as does the HAVE SKILLS WORK GROUPS CHART on page 217.)
