Annotated Bibliographies; Conflict Resolution; Elementary Secondary Education; Higher Education; Organizations (Groups); Peace; Resource Materials; Vocabulary

This annotated bibliography of resources dealing with conflict resolution and peace studies was compiled for the use of elementary, secondary, and college educators. The listing is alphabetical by author. Included are handbooks for teachers, course outlines, anthologies of journal articles, bibliographies of curriculum materials, background readings, filmographies, student pamphlets, and instructional units. The bibliography concludes with a description of a college-level pilot peace studies course, a guide to peace studies terminology, a topography of the dimensions of conflict, and an annotated listing of organizations that deal with conflict resolution, disarmament, and peace. DEDICATION

This bulletin was prepared as a thanksgiving for the life and career of a devoted peace educator who taught Turkish youth for thirty-six years as a member of the United Church Board for World Ministries.

HARRIET YARROW
1903 1980

I look up into the sky
And am comforted
by the thought that the sky
will be there when I am gone
And simply a memory in the minds of a few people
Who will also one day
be memories.

INTRODUCTION

This bulletin on conflict resolution and peace studies has been especially compiled for the use of Connecticut educators. The children and youth of our state are daily confronting advocates of violence and militarism. Sadly, for several centuries Connecticut has earned its reputation as the "munitions state" and today our economy is heavily dependent on defense contracts. There have been violent clashes on our country roads and city streets when the Ku Klux Klan has demonstrated its brand of bigotry here. Certainly peace studies are timely in the 1980's.

As has been pointed out so persuasively by Paulo Freire, there is more than one kind of illiteracy. It is perfectly possible for students to achieve high reading and mathematics scores on their standardized proficiency tests, but remain unaware of the critical issues in the world around them. We are all illiterates of the worst kind if we have no sensitivity for the plight of the world's poor, hungry and ill. It is a dangerous ignorance not to know the threat that nuclear arms pose to every living thing. We and our students need conscientization - empathy for the interdependence of all humanity. We desperately need to acquire non-violent inter-personal, inter-group and international means of resolving our conflicts. If we fail to learn these basic lessons, life itself may not survive.

I have been a professional educator for thirty years and I fear that most people are not now receiving adequate conflict resolution and peace education. As the parent of children who were educated in the public schools of Connecticut, I know that this kind of learning wasn't emphasized in their formal schooling. This bulletin was compiled after I attended a seminar organized by the Society for Educational Reconstruction near the site of the "accident" at the Three Mile Island Nuclear Power Plant at Middletown, PA. I realized again that we need to know more about the excellent resources that are available for teaching irenics. I hope to encourage its development by showing that peace studies are already part of the instructional programs at many schools and colleges. Many reputable organizations are working in the peace field. Hopefully, the U.S. Congress will establish a national Peace Academy soon, but we need not wait for it to start functioning in order to initiate irenics into our teaching.

We would appreciate having information about conflict resolution and peace studies programs in Connecticut schools and colleges. If you are teaching in this domain, please take time to send in your course syllabus or instructional units to The I.N. Thut World Education Center. When enough of them have come in, we will issue a publication to make the information available to a wider audience. Your comments, suggestions and corrections concerning this bulletin are also welcome.

International Development Communication Logos

A new feature of this bulletin is the use of International Development Communication Logos created for the Clearinghouse on Development Communication by the Washington, D.C. designer, Timothy Bradford Ward. They were published in Development Communication Report, No. 34, June, 1981.

Logos are visible symbols that represent important ideas or concepts. They stand out from the printed page. They make a statement and help to introduce a topic graphically - a kind of visual shorthand. Logos not only enliven a page of text, but they can also guide readers quickly to subjects that are of special interest to them.

We plan to use these logos in other publications of The I.N. Thut World Education Center and invite our readers to adopt them also.

Abrams, Grace C. and Fran Contrino Schmidt, "It's Time to Teach World Peace," Learning 8(10), October, 1979, 126 f. Order from P.O. Box 2580, Boulder, CO 80322.

This handbook for teachers is geared to use in grades seven through twelve and contains instructional suggestions arranged under nine main topical headings.

United States involvement in Cambodia and Vietnam was the issue that originally called for the development of this social studies unit, but most of the rationale could be adapted to treat more recent intervention dilemmas.

Information is given in tabloid format about United States weapons sales to less developed countries and the transnational corporations involved are identified. Order from NARMIC, American Friends Service Committee, 1501 Cherry Street, Philadelphia, PA 19102. (215) 241-7175

A listing of adult and college oriented books on irenics published in the late 1960's.

This anthology was developed for the Colgate University peace studies program. It is a multidisciplinary approach to ways of preventing war and bringing about world peace.

The program outlines for thirty peace studies courses actually being taught in American colleges and universities are given under seven topical headings.

Over a thousand entries are organized into twenty-six main categories. Copies are available at $15 from Westview Press, Inc., 5500 Central Avenue, Boulder, CO 80301.

Boyer, William H. Education for Annihilation. Honolulu: Hogarth Press - Hawaii, 1972. 149 pp. and bibliography. Boyer describes the military-educational-cultural complex that functions in the United States. He presents chapters analyzing how military behavior is conditioned, how military ideologies are indoctrinated, and military values taught in schools and colleges. He then contrasts education for survival with training for annihilation.

Buckalew, M.W. (ed.), Peace Education: Opening the Classroom Door. Evansville, IN: School of Education, Evansville University, 1979. 51 pp. ERIC, ED 175-563. This is an anthology of articles on peace education with course descriptions, examples of student writing, lists of resources and class activities, and reports of recent trends in peace research.

Chambers, John Whiteclay, (ed.), Peace Research and Its Impact on the Curriculum. Plattsburgh, N.Y.: Faculty of Social Sciences, SUNY, 1973. 129 pp. The contents of this publication were compiled by the Conference on Peace Research in History. It contains articles discussing problems of peace and peace education, views of peace research from the perspectives of various academic disciplines, and approaches to incorporating peace research into the curriculum.

Committee on Education, Jane Addams Peace Association, Education for a Global Society. Philadelphia, PA: Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, 1978. 49 pp. The first part of this bibliography is on "Peace" with sub-categories for disarmament, conflict resolution, militarism, and world organization. There are also other sections listing materials on economic equity, social justice and ecological balance.

Curriculum Materials on War, Peace, Conflict and Change: An Annotated Bibliography. New York: Center for War/Peace Studies, 1972. 33 pp. This was a very complete description of available items - including films and simulations - at the end of the previous decade.

A thorough survey of ten aspects of nuclear weapons, together with action suggestions to counter the arms race and list of organizations that work for disarmament. Order from: FOR, Box 271, Nyack, N.Y. 10960.

Appropriate books, booklets and periodicals are also listed in this special issue of this journal. Order it from: World Goodwill, 866 UN Plaza, Suite 566-7, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Many current films on war, the arms race, international economic development and related fields are listed and described. Sample film study approaches are also given. Order from: 67 East Madison Avenue, Suite 1417, Chicago, IL 60603.

This pamphlet was designed for high school use. War, peace, peace keeping systems and nuclear armaments are defined. A case study of four different models: collective security, collective force, mutual defense, and limited world government is undertaken. Students are invited to devise their own alternative models and test them by using a rating chart.
IT'S THIS WAY DOCTOR: THE AUTOMOBILES ARE GETTING BIGGER AND MORE POWERFUL, WITH MOTORS SO STRONG THAT YOU CAN DO AMAZING SPEEDS...

AND THEN WHAT?

AND THE AIRPLANES. WHAT ABOUT THEM? PARIS TO NEW YORK IN 6 HOURS! AND THEN WHAT?

AND INDUSTRY? IT CAN PRODUCE ANYTHING AND LOTS OF IT. ALL THROUGH COMPUTERS - ALL MATERIAL PROBLEMS CAN BE RESOLVED, BUT THEN, EXACTLY THOSE WHO ARE IN NEED CAN'T BUY...

AND WHEN I SAY ALL THIS, THEY CALL ME CRAZY. IF I'M CRAZY, WHAT ARE THEY? IF BEING WELL MEANS BEING LIKE THEM...

AND WEAPONS? THEY ARE ALWAYS MORE TERRIBLE THAN THE YEAR BEFORE. ATOMIC BOMBS, H BOMBS, SUPER-BOMBS. IT'S NO LONGER POSSIBLE TO MAKE WAR WITHOUT BLOWING YOURSELF UP - BUT EVERYBODY KEEPS GETTING BETTER AND BETTER ARMED.. UNTIL ONE DAY...

PUT HIM IN A STRAIGHT-JACKET, GIVE HIM MASSIVE DOSE OF TRANQUILIZERS AND SEE THAT HE GETS A Padded cell!

This guide for advanced students introduces various methods for analyzing terrorism. It contains study activities and an extensive bibliography.

The causes and patterns of behavior that led to United States involvement in ten wars are analyzed and interpreted.

Martin Buber advocated a type of existential phenomenology in which dialogue among peoples of differing perspectives is stressed. This concept became the basis of the "ehud" movement to bring together Israeli Arabs and Jews, and it is this idea applied to education that Gordon presents.

Peace education programs in Roman Catholic schools are described.

A discussion of the rationale for peace studies developed by the National Catholic Education Association.

Thirty articles written by educators from twenty countries are included concerning the cognitive and methodological aspects of peace education. Four questions are addressed: (1) What is peace education? (2) Why is it needed? (3) How should it be done? (4) Where is it needed most?

Haavelsrud, Magnus. Principles of Peace Education. Oslo, Norway: Chair of Conflict and Peace Research, University of Oslo (Paper No. 18), 1975. 21 pp. and notes.

The author gives a rationale and conceptual framework for peace oriented learning.

Thirteen key disarmament policy issues are identified and interpreted. There are also discussions of their feasibility, desireability and potential for education and mobilization.

Aspects of disarmament and development are investigated from British perspectives by fourteen writers.

This is a very comprehensive collection of approaches and materials for developing peace studies with young children. It includes directions for cooperative games for children and adults.

Explains how peace studies relate to continuing education programs.

A pioneer in social studies for global understanding discusses peace studies and makes recommendations for developing programs that include this domain.

Links between past and contemporary terrorist movements are explored. The actual political gains made by terrorists are assessed along with warnings about terrorism as a form for violent activism. Required reading for all potential terrorists. Adult level.

The present feeble arms control efforts are described and the problems of disarming the United States, the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China are recognized.

Ten essays by peace studies theorists explore aspects of conflict resolution and war prevention. Order from: Peace Research Laboratory, 6251 San Bonita, St. Louis, MO 63105.
Lentz, Theodore F. Towards a Technology of Peace. St. Louis, MO: Peace Research Laboratory, 1972. 75 pp., bibliography. See previous entry for ordering address.

Lentz, a father of peace education and activism, discusses how to initiate movements toward peace, including developing the necessary tools, techniques and measurements. He recognizes that education, motivation and politics are all involved.

Tabloid articles give the facts about our exporting nuclear power plants and demonstrate their links to obtaining nuclear arms capability. Actions, resources and organizations are suggested.

Order print copies from: 3700 West Pine Street, St. Louis, MO 63108, $6 paper cover.

This is a revision and update of an earlier curriculum guide. It gives goals for an EPJ program, outlines processes for planning and initiating one, gives case studies of successful programs, and lists guidelines for making a curriculum evaluation of a peace studies program. Resources are listed in an appendix.

Planned for middle or high school use, this book suggests futuristic scenarios and involvement activities to teach the causes of war, its consequences, and means of war prevention. Its five sections are: (1) War and Its Effects, (2) The Human Causes of War, (3) The Structural Causes of War, (4) Ways of Preventing War, (5) You and War.

An overview of war is given from the perspectives of economics, history, psychology and sociology. There are case studies, a scenario, and other involvement methods are suggested.

A simulation is described to accompany the guide on "The July 1914 Crisis: A Case Study in Misperception and Escalation."

This is an instructional unit concerning a particular historic international crisis. It helps students to better understand the types of confrontations that can lead to war.

Although it is now somewhat old, this was a thorough survey of instructional resources and materials organized under twenty-five topical classifications.

Current nuclear arms are described. We are told what they cost and the holocaust they can produce is explained. Suggestions of practical actions to stop the nuclear arms race are made.

This publication gives background and guidelines for establishing interdisciplinary peace education programs. Three sections describe: (1) the NCEA peace studies program, (2) data from national surveys, and (3) suggestions for planning a peace studies program in a local school. Resources and evaluation strategies are suggested.

This handbook is now old, but it is inclusive and one of the best materials available for surveying peace studies concepts and listing resources related to teaching them.

The materials in this handbook are designed for fourth, fifth and sixth grade public school children. The booklet contains many tools and techniques for building community and cooperation, affirming personal identity and increasing communicative skills. It seeks to teach non-violent means of resolving inter-personal and inter-group conflicts by exploring alternative roles in situations of confrontation.

This is a very useful handbook for teachers who use the annual publication containing statistics compiled by Ruth Leger Sivard, to which it is related. Additional resources are listed.

Sivard, Ruth Leger World Military and Social Expenditures. Leesburg, VA: WMSE Publications, 1980. $2.50 Order from: Box 1003, Leesburg, VA 22075

Each annual issue gives precise data about how much we are spending for armaments and militarism globally, and how much we are spending on social programs.

Smith, Raymond E. A Syllabus for a Proposed Course on Holocaust Awareness. West Hartford, CT: Committee on Holocaust Awareness, 1980. 47 pp. and bibliography.

A multidisciplinary undergraduate level course on the Jewish Holocaust during World War II is described in detail.

So You Want to Teach About Conflict? New York: Center for War/Peace Studies, 1974. 6 pp., bibliography.

This is a short teaching unit for which objectives are suggested, approaches described, and learning activities and materials presented. It would be appropriate for secondary level use.

Advocates ESL as an opportunity for developing cross-cultural awareness and understanding.

The assumptions of individual and group nonviolent resistance are analyzed and techniques described.

Six twentieth century armed conflicts are analyzed and the various common denominators of war are identified.

This is the syllabus for a college level course for external (correspondence) students in Australia. The rationale, readings and assignments are all described.

This was a special issue featuring curricular insights and teaching suggestions.

Teaching Genocide Awareness in Multicultural Education. Storrs, CT: The I.N. Thut World Education Center, 1980. 24 pp., $1.50 plus postage.

The concept of genocide and the provisions of the UN Convention to prevent it are explained. The rationale and aims of genocide awareness education are presented, terms defined, and six instructional approaches are suggested. Data about the Armenian Genocide of 1915-22, and the Jewish Holocaust in the 1930's and 1940's is given. Bibliography and list of relevant organizations.

Twenty-six learning activities focus on the morality of war and explore a number of specific case studies.

The authors interpret the aims and history of Peace and World Order Studies. They provide guidelines for establishing instructional programs of this type, and suggest teaching approaches and action research projects in this field. The appendices include a list of peace organizations and some sample lesson plans.

Contains many outlines of actual high school and college courses in the field, as well as descriptions of thirty learning packages.

Facts about the arms race along with means for understanding and reversing it.
A PILOT PEACE STUDIES COURSE

International Baccalaureate Subsidiary Level
Department of Peace Studies
Bradford University, England, U.K.

Devised by Professor Adam Curle

1. The Nature of Human Aggression
   Anthropological, psychological and sociological perspectives.

2. The Concepts of Peace and Justice
   A discussion of alternatives presented in the political, religious and social traditions of Europe and Asia.

3. The Theories and Functions of Social Conflict
   An introduction to various approaches.

4. The Nature, Causes and Results of Violence
   The history of warfare in relation to technology and social changes.
   Varieties of contemporary warfare.
   Communal, racial and class conflicts.
   Major power relationships.
   The colonial revolution.

5. Examples of Conflicts within Societies
   Two out of: Community Relations - the case of Northern Ireland.
   Race Relations - in Britain.
   - in South Africa.
   Industrial Relations - topics drawn from two societies.

6. Examples of Conflicts between Nations
   Two out of: The Arab-Israeli conflict.
   The conflict between rich and poor nations over world development.
   Super-power conflicts since 1945.

7. Peace-making in the World Today
