Meant to study postsecondary educational and vocational activities, the National Longitudinal Survey of the High School Class of 1972 (NLS) is reported to have consistently succeeded in overcoming diminishing response rates and sample attrition found in other longitudinal surveys. The purpose of understanding the focus and experiences affecting plans and attainments of young adults is discussed with the secondary purpose of extending scientific knowledge of human development in transition years. In a brief history of the NLS, the origins and goals are discussed. With the design and content of the sample, the summary also covers the NLS questionnaire design through the fourth instrument, the administration of the pretests, base year and followup surveys, data preparation and quality, and the use of data by federal agencies, social scientists and others. Material extracted from key NLS documents is provided. Tables illustrate statistical and variables data, and the appendices include complete survey instruments with an NLS bibliography. (CM)
The National Longitudinal Study of the High School Class of 1972 (NLS) was designed to provide an ongoing and updated data base for a nationally representative sample of high school seniors as they moved out of the American high school system into the critical years of early adulthood. The study began with a group-administered survey of these young adults conducted in spring 1972 prior to their leaving high school. This was followed by a series of periodic mail and personal interview follow-up surveys. The first follow-up survey was conducted from October 1973 to April 1974, the second from October 1974 to April 1975, the third from October 1976 to April 1977, and the fourth from October 1979 to May 1980. A second longitudinal study, the High School and Beyond (HS&B) study, subsequently has been initiated, beginning with a survey of 1980 high school sophomores and seniors.

The purpose of these surveys was to obtain information about the basic educational and vocational activities of young adults and their continuing or revised plans, aspirations, and attitudes, and both studies should contribute to an understanding of early adult development and of factors determining individual educational and career outcomes. Such information is useful as a basis for review and reformulation of Federal, state, and local policies affecting the transition of youth from school to adult life.

The NLS data collected from the in-school and follow-up surveys have been merged and processed, and the availability of this longitudinal data base encourages in-depth research for meeting educational policy needs at local, state, and Federal levels. This report summarizes historic details of the purposes and methods underlying NLS operation, as well as some relevant outcomes from the study.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This document is the result of compiling, abstracting, and editing material from a large number of existing sources. A first draft compilation was accomplished for the greater part by Kathy McAdams and Mary Ellen Taylor of RTI. Subsequently several RTI staff members familiar with the NLS history have provided additional substantive editorial input to the report, principal among whom were G. J. Burkheimer, J. A. Davis, G. H. Dunteman, J. A. Riccobono, and I. R. Weiss. Guidance and editorial input were also received from Bill Fetters of NCES and from Andrew Kolstad, the NCES project officer. Typing, proofing, and assembling of the final report were accomplished by Pam Mikels and Barbara Elliott of RTI.

A final word of acknowledgement and an expression of gratitude is due to the many persons in the Federal government and at RTI who assisted in planning and implementing the National Longitudinal Study of the High School Class of 1972; to the more than 20,000 young adults who took the time and effort to provide comprehensive, detailed information about their lives; and to the participating high schools that made it possible to initiate the study in 1972.

The National Longitudinal Study of the High School Class of 1972:
A Brief History

I. OVERVIEW

The National Longitudinal Study of the High School Class of 1972 (NLS) is a Federally sponsored longitudinal study tracking the educational and educationally relevant progress of a representative national sample of more than 23,000 young people. Respondents were first surveyed in 1972 when they were seniors in high school. Now, 9 years and four follow-up surveys later, NLS has come to be unique among social research efforts in at least three significant ways. First, it focuses on the critical period of transition from youth to adulthood, from dependence to independence, from exploration to establishment. Second, in the more than 7-year span of contact with the cohort, the study has consistently succeeded in overcoming the diminishing response rates and sample attrition that have plagued other longitudinal inquiries. Third, the essential focus of the inquiry is on the significant and sequential events in the lives of young people; on their progressive educational, vocational, and social attainment. The study is in a form general enough to assess a variety of kinds of developmental forces of interest to different Federal agencies, social institutions, or disciplines, yet detailed and specific enough to permit in-depth and complex analyses involving those variables frequently found to moderate development in today's society.

The basic purpose of the NLS is to provide a better understanding, through sequential observation of the forces and experiences that affect the development and adult level attainment of a current generation of young people. Such knowledge can be used to refine educational policy, programs and practices, and in this way, the study aims to improve the likelihood that intervention agencies and institutions may enhance their contribution to the assumption of productive and satisfying roles in American society by the young people they serve. A secondary purpose of the study is to extend scientific knowledge of human development in the years of transition from high school to college and beyond.

Following the brief history of the project presented in this chapter, this report presents a summary of the design and content of the sample; the instrumentation; the conduct of the pretests and base year and follow-up surveys; data preparation and data quality; and uses made of the data thus far by Federal agencies, contractors, social scientists in general, and others. Much of this material has been extracted from key NLS documents to provide a general overview of the NLS. Interested researchers may wish to consult these more detailed and specific study reports, which are listed by title in Appendix B and are annotated separately (Taylor et al., 1981).

II. ORIGINS AND GOALS OF THE NLS

Plans for the NLS began in the late 1960s when several agencies within the U.S. Office of Education expressed the need for similar information relating educational experiences of high school students to later educational attainment and career outcomes. Their purposes seemed best served by longitudinal, rather than the more conventional cross-sectional, studies. This more expensive form of inquiry could be supported if offices or departments with overlapping interests pooled their resources, a notion now attributed to a number of key individuals, but probably most directly attributable to the influence of John Gardiner as Secretary of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare (DHEW) in the middle 1960's. Accordingly, there was early involvement and/or financial support of the Office of Planning, Budgeting, and Evaluation, the Bureaus of Postsecondary Education and of Occupational and Adult Education, the National Center for Educational Research and Development, all in the DHEW sector; and by the Departments of Labor and Defense.

Responsibility for this cooperative undertaking was assigned to and has remained with the National Center for Education Statistics (NCES), then a part of DHEW and now a unit of the Department of Education, under the Assistant Secretary for Research and Dissemination. NCES operates under a basic congressional mandate to "collect, collate, and from time to time report full and complete statistics on the condition of education in the United States."

Once operational authority and funding capability were established, NCES convened a number of prominent educational administrators and researchers in April 1970 to discuss formally the idea of a "school output study." After 1 Names of this agency and other Federal agencies referenced subsequently have changed as a result of several intervening reorganizations.

this meeting, referred to as the Mayflower Conference, and after subsequent planning sessions, the high school class of 1972 was selected to be the first cohort of an intended series of national longitudinal studies. These initial planning conferences established a central objective for the program: to assess experience of individuals beyond high school in reference to their high school educational experiences. Planning for the actual surveys began with the following specific study objectives, summarized below.

- To obtain profile data on potential users of postsecondary education and to organize these data in a file suitable for extensive analysis and for the addition of future follow-up data.
- To determine what types of students make what educational and occupational choices and why.
- To assess the educational development, influences and attitudes which led students to their status as high school seniors, and to assess the relationship of these prior circumstances to decisions about postsecondary pursuits, including occupational choice, military service, and vocational, technical, and higher education.
- To determine the influence of student ability on postsecondary choices.
- To relate low aspiration choices for postsecondary education to the principal obstacles perceived by the student—especially financial obstacles—and to determine student knowledge of programs of financial aid and intent to take advantage of them.
- To examine the educational progress of students who terminate education early, and to see how high school experiences and curricula, financial considerations, and other factors are associated with various postsecondary career choices and with perseverance and success in them.
- To provide a vehicle whereby certain subpopulations may be identified from the cohort and followed up more intensively.
- To assemble data on a continuing basis on the extent of student knowledge of and participation in financial aid programs.
- To see if patterns of individual characteristics which become apparent in the first sample of high school seniors remain constant in future cohorts.
To investigate the consistency from one cohort to another of group characteristics portrayed by frequency distributions, and of probabilities of different paths of development observed.

This first advisory and planning group represented largely key public school educational specialists. Subsequent advisory or planning groups have become more diversified, representing more frequently not only leaders in higher education as well as the secondary school, but also specialists in human development, survey and analysis methodologies, and in policy studies. NCES has also made frequent use of consultants or relatively small and specialized design contracts, for formulation of issues, pursuit of a particular problem, or review and advice.

III. NLS ACCOMPLISHMENTS IN THE FIRST DECADE

Following relatively detailed establishment of basic strategies for the survey by NCES, completion of survey planning was contracted by NCES in 1970 to the Research Triangle Institute (RTI) and the completion of sample planning and design to WESTAT, Inc. After extensive planning, including the design and field test of questionnaires and procedures, the first NLS survey was initiated in the spring of 1972 under a contract with Educational Testing Service (ETS).

In 1973, a contract was awarded to RTI for the conduct of the first follow-up, with amendments providing for the conduct of the second, third, and fourth follow-ups. To date, over 8 million dollars has been spent to collect and process NLS data through the basic contracts to ETS and RTI.

Responsibility for this study at NCES has been as follows: for the survey and sample design for the base-year survey, Bruce Thompson; for the follow-ups, Kenneth A. Tabler and (later) Elmer Collins and Andrew Kolstad. Among major contractors, Daniel Horvitz was in charge of planning at RTI and Edward Bryant for sample design at WESTAT; Thomas Hilton of ETS directed the base-year survey, and Junius A. Davis, John C. Bailey, Jr., Jacob Levinsohn, and John A. Riccobono have had responsibility, successively, at RTI for follow-up surveys.

Ten years of survey activity, in which the overall sample retention rate has exceeded 80-percent, have resulted thus far in an NLS data archive containing some 3,000 items of information on each of the more than 20,000 sample members. As specified in the study objectives, these records describe the background, progressive life plans, aspirations, and educational and personal histories of these individuals over the 97-year period since high school graduation. Now, nearly 10 years after those ambitious objectives were stated, many have been met and others are in the process of being met. Several hundred studies have been reported from analyses of the NLS data collected in the 1972 base-year survey and the subsequent follow-up surveys in 1973, 1974, 1976, and 1979.

The more than 300 reports drawn from these data are listed in Appendix B and have been catalogued elsewhere according to the original study objectives they address (Taylor et al., 1981). In general, the greatest research emphasis thus far has been on that portion of the sample attending postsecondary institutions; with focus on access, financial aid, and persistence. Potential of the data for studies of psychological development is limited by the lack of emphasis on measures of personality traits and constructs. Other areas which have received only limited attention from researchers have to do with groups moving directly into work or family responsibilities (rather than postsecondary study), vocational and career development studies, and patterns of labor force participation. But with fourth follow-up data now available, new information will enable researchers to explore these areas and to examine graduate school entrance and attainment. Highlights of NLS findings may be found in capsule reports which have been published after each survey (Fetters, 1974; Peng and Dunteman, 1976; Eckland and Bailey, 1977; Eckland and Wisenbaker, February 1979; and Burkheimer and Novak, 1981).

Though the scope of this report does not permit extensive discussion of any comprehensive summary of the NLS findings, the following are illustrative:

- Proportions of minority students and female students entering 2- and 4-year colleges have increased and past disparities between these groups and white males have diminished. Comparisons of NLS data to 1961 Project TALENT data revealed that college entry rates are now more nearly equal for males, females and racial/ethnic minorities (Peng, 1977).
- The 4-year college entry rate for high ability black students is more than 12 percent greater than that for high ability whites (Thomas, 1975; Thornton, 1976).
- There has been a recent significant reduction of college entry rates among what was the most common pool of 4-year college entrants--high ability students. At all income levels and for both sexes, a decrease in college attendance of above average students has occurred (Peng and Fetters, 1978; Burkheimer et al., 1981).

Indications are that 4 years of uninterrupted progress toward a college degree may not be the norm. The number of sample members still enrolled in college four and one-half years after high school graduation was greater than the number who had obtained degrees (Eckland and Wisenbaker, 1979).

Other findings of interest are revealed in tabular summaries of NLS descriptive data for the several surveys (Thompson, 1974; Tabler, 1976; Peng and Holt, 1977; Peng et al., 1978; Larsen et al., 1981) and in the capsule reports referenced earlier. For example:

- Sample members named the goal of "finding the right person to marry and having a happy family life" as the most important of 12 options for life goals. Over time, this goal has become increasingly important to sample members.
- Women gave higher priority than men to family-related goals in all surveys, such as "living close to parents and relatives," and "finding the right person to marry and having a happy family life." Also, women's interest in "finding steady work" has declined as they have become older.
- Men and women in the sample appear to lose interest in working toward "correcting social and economic inequalities" over time. More women than men appear to lose interest in working toward this goal.

In addition to such substantive findings, the NLS has made major contributions to social research in the area of survey methodology. The success of the massive NLS data collection, file construction, and analysis efforts have many implications for future longitudinal studies. Many of these innovations were in response to technical problems in maintaining the study sample that occurred over the 10 years of tracking and surveying this large and mobile group; such problems and solutions that now appear in the NLS research literature are discussed in the next section.
A critical measure of the success and value of any survey is its response rate. High response rates are not unheard of in social research, but the consistent response of some 90 percent of the large NLS sample to five successive waves of survey activity is quite remarkable—particularly considering the length of the study questionnaires, each of which exceeded 25 pages in length. Survey operations, including the administration of the surveys, with their complex series of mailings, incentive payments, personal field interviews and telephone follow-ups, were the major expense of the NLS, but as Eckland (1980) comments, "Money and the capability of following through with personal interviews do make a big difference [p. 116]."

Mail returns of NLS questionnaires, in general, have increased from survey to survey, alleviating some of the cost of personal interviews by survey field staff. The increase in mail returns is probably explained by two factors. One is the likelihood that reluctant respondents who had to be personally interviewed in the early follow-ups realized that if they did not respond by mail, a field interviewer would come to call within a month or two. Frequent prompting postcards and mailgrams reminded them of this possibility. Thus, they may have been effectively impressed with the importance of their contribution to the effort, or they may have preferred the more convenient personal completion of the questionnaire (Wisenbaker, 1981a). Also, incentive payments were tested in a field trial and found to be effective, and incentive payment checks in the first mailing of third follow-up questionnaires did appear to prompt higher mail returns (King and Thorne, 1977; King, 1979).

Another activity found to be essential in the maintenance of high response rates consisted of an effort to maintain and update a file of current addresses of respondents. In the year between the second and third follow-up surveys (1973), a strategy to increase respondent interest in the survey while at the same time updating addresses was proposed and adopted. A newsletter describing the study, its personnel, goals and tentative findings was sent to each respondent, along with a return postcard on which each respondent wrote his current address and the address of a friend or relative. Newsletters returned because of incorrect addresses identified those respondents requiring tracing by other means. This approach was successful, and the newsletter strategy for between-survey years has been continued (Levinsohn and McAdams, 1978).
In addition to these approaches to maintaining high response rates, handling the mass of returned questionnaires became another area where problems were encountered and solutions found (cf. Riccobono et al., January 1981; Henderson and Allen, 1981). At the same time, there are some problems inherent in the longitudinal data set that have presented obstacles of some consequence for many data analysts and users. These relate mostly to the size and complexity of the data files, and are discussed briefly in the next section.

V. PROBLEMS FOR NLS USERS

In 1975 the first NLS Public Release Files and supporting Users Manual, containing the base-year and first follow-up data, were released by NCES to the general research community. Updated files have been released after each follow-up; the Fourth Follow-Up Public Release File and Users Manual (Riccobono et al., January 1981) were made available for purchase from NCES in early 1981. This file is a compilation of literally millions of items of information. The very size of the data base makes it inaccessible to the casual user because of the time, cost, and level of technical sophistication required even to extract a working file therefrom.

The NLS files are not only large; they are also complex. This is a necessary condition in part because questionnaires from which the data are taken are themselves complex; each contains many routing items as well as information items. Other complexities of the data base include the need for, and provision of, a large number of sample weights appropriate for various combinations of the variables, and the use of a sophisticated system of representing suspect responses and missing data.

A major concern for some users has been the question of properly employing the sample weights. The NLS sample was drawn using a complex multistage sampling process; calculations that ignore the weights inherent in the sample design may produce biased results. There is a sizable literature available on the use of weights, including: WESTAT, Inc. (1972); Fetters, (1977); Folsom (1975); Folsom and Weber (1976a, 1976b); Moore (1975); Moore and Shah (1974, 1975a, 1975b, 1976, 1977); and Shah and Marnell (1976).

Another problem inherent in this large multipurpose data bank is the number of individual items that may be required to establish a particular theoretical construct or condition of the respondent. The longitudinal nature of the NLS adds to this problem, which may involve checking all waves of available data and, potentially, resolution of conflicting answers. Another aspect of this problem is the fact that when a number of items must be examined or combined to arrive at a particular activity state or condition, the probability of missing (or inconsistent) data on one or more components increases, forcing the researcher to decide whether to tolerate attrition or to develop imputation procedures or decision rules.

Still another problem is that sometimes the wording of similar questionnaire items is changed from one follow-up to the next (toward removing difficulties found with a former phrasing, or toward making the item applicable at the new point in time) although, in general, considerable effort has been invested in keeping successive items of a particular kind congruent. This problem will be further complicated by any lack of consistency between key NLS questionnaire items and those used in future cohort studies.

Finally, despite high sample retention rates, the NLS also has a problem with the small size of certain important subgroups within the sample, such as subgroups of minority respondents. A major reason for sampling such a large group was to ensure that subgroups of major research interest would be adequately represented for separate or comparative study. For example, even though minority predominant school districts were sampled at twice the rate of other districts in the NLS sample design, the base-year survey contains only about 130 black respondents from the south who attended traditionally black colleges, and about 150 southern blacks who attended other colleges (Eckland, 1980). This problem of shrinkage of effective subgroup sample size is exacerbated when the subgroup of interest becomes more and more specific (particularly so when dealing with characteristics having low population base rates).

VI. PLANS FOR THE FUTURE OF NLS

During 1980, a fifth follow-up of the 1972 cohort was discussed and planned by officials at NCES; however, all further surveys depend on the usual contingencies in Federal funding: availability of funds and priorities. Nonetheless, members of the current planning committee (working principally with the replication study described below), as well as a number of social scientists who have worked with the data, have pointed to the increasing value and potential of the data base with later follow-ups. Even though no additional follow-up survey is currently anticipated prior to 1983; the possibility exists that a minimum contact and address update may be maintained with the sample, to permit later follow-ups as the later lives of the respondents unfold and as the enduring value of the initial investment is more widely recognized.

An important and significant extension of the NLS idea and promise was initiated in 1978, with the award of a contract by NCES to the National Opinion Research Center for a replication and expansion of the NLS. This effort, the "High School and Beyond" study, was initiated to detect important trends over time, and thus has many items and events in parallel with the NLS. It was also designed to expand the period of observation down to the 10th grade, toward illuminating factors affecting later choice and development that occur in this critical period, as well as permitting follow-up of high school dropouts, a majority of whom leave school after entering the 10th grade. This study involves some 28,000 individuals who were high school seniors in the spring of 1980 as well as over 30,000 who were high school sophomores at that time, from over 1,000 public and private schools in the United States. Data from the base-year survey are now available from NCES and a number of analyses are already in process. Plans call for collection of data from subsamples of base-year participants at 2-year intervals.

VII. CONTENTS OF THIS REPORT

The brief account provided thus far in this chapter is designed only to acquaint researchers with the most basic descriptive history of the NLS. The following chapters contain summaries of NLS procedures for sampling, instrumentation, data collection, data preparation and quality control, and a discussion of NLS users and uses. Copies of all instruments used in the various NLS surveys are included as Appendix A, and a complete list of references is provided in Appendix B to guide interested researchers to more detailed technical sources of information and reports of findings.
Chapter 2
Sample Design and Weighting

I. BASIC SAMPLE DESIGN

The sample design for the NLS is a stratified, multistage probability sample of students from all schools, public and private, in the 50 states and the District of Columbia, which contained twelfth graders during the 1971-1972 school year. The design excluded students from schools for the physically or mentally handicapped, schools for legally confined students and special schools (such as area vocational schools) where students were also enrolled in other high schools in the sampling frame.

The first-stage school sampling frame, constructed from computerized school files maintained by the Office of Education and the National Catholic Education Association, was divided into 600 final strata based upon partial crossings of the following variables:

- Type of control (public or nonpublic);
- Geographic region (Northeast, North Central, South, and West);
- Grade 12 enrollment (3 size categories);
- Proximity to institutions of higher learning (3 distance categories);
- Percent minority group enrollment (8 categories, public schools only);
- Income level of the community (11 categories, public schools; 8 categories, Catholic schools); and
- Degree of urbanization (10 categories).

In the smallest school size strata (schools with fewer than 300 seniors), schools were selected with probabilities proportional to the estimated number of senior students; in the remaining size strata, schools were selected with equal probabilities. All selections were without replacement. The potential for including disadvantaged students in the sample was increased by sampling schools in low-income areas and schools with a high proportion of minority group enrollment at twice the rate used for the remaining schools. Within each final stratum, four schools were selected. Two of the four were randomly designated as the primary selections and the other two schools were retained as backup or substitute selections for use only if one or both of the primary schools did not cooperate. This resulted in a final school sample size of 1,200 (600 strata x 2 schools).

The second stage of the sampling procedure consisted of first drawing a simple random sample of 18 twelfth graders per school (or all if fewer than 18 were available) and then selecting 5 additional students (if available) as possible replacements for nonparticipants. In both cases, the students within a school were sampled with equal probabilities and without replacement. Early (i.e., mid-year) graduates and those attending adult education classes were excluded from the sampling.

II. SAMPLE REDEFINITIONS AND AUGMENTATIONS

Of the 1,200 primary sample schools, 948 (79 percent) participated in the base-year survey, 21 had no senior students enrolled, and 231 either refused to participate or could not participate because the request was received too late in the school year. Due to this large school nonresponse, further attempts were made to secure participation of the 231 nonparticipant primary sample schools and replacements for the 21 schools with no twelfth-grade enrollment. This resurvey activity, initiated by NCES in the period prior to the first follow-up survey, involved securing school cooperation and selecting random samples of up to 18 former students (1972 seniors) per school. The resurvey activities were successful in 205 of the 231 primary sample schools; thus, students from 1,153 of the 1,179 eligible primary sample schools were included in the first follow-up and subsequent surveys for a school participation rate of 98 percent.

Students selected from backup or substitute schools also were included in the base-year and follow-up surveys. In the base-year survey, 121 backup schools participated, yielding a total of 1,070 base-year participating schools. In 26 cases, school-level data were collected from backup schools on the basis of a preliminary refusal of a primary sample school that later agreed to participate in the base year. These 26 cases, of which 18 also provided student-level data, thus represent "extra" schools within a stratum (i.e., more than the required 2 schools per stratum).

Since the resurvey effort was successful in obtaining the participation of 205 additional primary sample schools and 35 additional backup schools, school representation was inflated beyond the originally planned figure of 1,200. This resulted in representation by more than two schools in some strata, but by at least two schools in all strata. Due to the expense involved in collecting student data, however, a post hoc sample redefinition was implemented rather than discarding data already collected (cf., Moore and Shah, 1975a, 1975b; Moore, 1975; Shah and Marnell, 1976). Consequently, 1,302 schools from the original frame were included in the final school sample: 1,153 primary sample schools, and 149 backup schools (discarding the 8 base-year "extra" schools for which no student data were available).

Samples of former 1972 senior students also were selected from 16 augmentation schools; these schools had been selected from those identified in 200 sample school districts canvassed to identify public schools not included in the original school sampling frame. The augmentation schools defined eight additional strata. Samples of students selected from the 16 augmentation schools were not included in the base-year survey but were included in subsequent surveys. Table 1 summarizes the school representation. The final column presents the school representation used in the second, third, and fourth follow-up surveys.

III. SUBSAMPLING PROCEDURES

Subsampling was performed only in the fourth follow-up survey and was related to the retesting of a subsample of 1,016 NLS participants who had been administered the test battery during the base-year. The 14,628 NLS respondents who satisfied the following criteria were eligible to participate in the Retest Study:

1. eligible for the NLS fourth follow-up,
2. base-year student questionnaire available, and
3. base-year test battery available.

Because a self-weighting retest subsample would have yielded an inadequate number of black subsample members, a design option which oversampled blacks was adopted. Specifically, two strata (a non-black stratum and a black stratum) were formed, and a self-weighting subsample was chosen within each of these explicit strata. Retest sample members were selected from the eligibles within a stratum with probability inversely proportional to their probability of being in the full NLS sample. This sampling procedure resulted in equal probabilities of selection and, thus, in equal weights within a given stratum.

In addition to the explicit stratification by race/ethnicity, the sample was also controlled, within strata, on three factors (base-year ability, SES, and postsecondary educational achievement) believed to be highly correlated with retest ability scores. This control was achieved by applying an implicit stratification procedure.

IV. WEIGHTING PROCEDURES

For all students sampled, both eventual respondents and nonrespondents, unadjusted sampling weights were calculated as the inverses of the probabilities of being included in the sample, to allow unbiased estimates of population parameters. To adjust for potential estimation bias due to nonresponse of some sample members, the responding sample members' weights were adjusted using a weighting class procedure. The procedure used allocates the weights of nonrespondents to groups of respondents who are similar to the nonrespondents in significant respects. Since there are many possible patterns of nonresponse depending upon how the data from the various questionnaires are combined, a number of adjusted weight sets were calculated to be used in analyzing particular data elements or composites.
A. Unadjusted Student Weights

The first step in calculating the unadjusted student weights was to determine school selection probabilities for the sets of schools participating in the several surveys. As indicated previously, the use of backup schools in the base-year and subsequent follow-up surveys, augmentations, and the resurvey work to obtain responses from all of the primary sample schools, resulted in 3 or 4 schools rather than the 2 originally planned being represented in many final strata, and probabilities were needed for all of the 1,318 schools classified as "in the final NLS sample."

For each school in the final school sample, the appropriate sample inclusion probability for school-i in stratum-h, \( p_{hi} \) was calculated to account for differential sampling procedures within different school size strata (e.g., simple random sampling or probability proportional to twelfth grade enrollment), differential sampling rates, and nonresponse among the augmentation sample schools. Details of these computations are presented elsewhere (cf., Benrud and Williams, 1981).

The number of students in the sample from each sample school was taken as the number of students who were offered a chance to be in the sample and who also were eligible. This included all sample eligibles, both respondents and nonrespondents. Selected students who were not eligible for the study included dropouts, early graduates, and adult education students. Each student within a school was selected with an equal probability of \( \frac{n_{hi}}{N_{hi}} \) where \( n_{hi} \) is the number of sampled students in school-hi and \( N_{hi} \) is the number of senior students in school-hi. The probability of a student being in the sample therefore may be represented as the product of the probability of the student's school being selected and the conditional probability of any student being selected given the school selection. Consequently, the probability of the jth student in school-hi being selected was determined as \( \frac{n_{hi}}{N_{hi}} \).

Unadjusted student weights, the inverse of the student inclusion probability, were calculated for each sample student. The sum of the unadjusted student weights (3,043,599) is an estimate of the total number of 1972 high school seniors in the United States.
B. Adjusted Student Weights

Nonresponse adjustments were used in an attempt to reduce the potential for estimate bias due to nonresponse. While there are no methods of adjusting for nonresponse that are known to be unbiased or even consistent, various methods of imputing or attempting to correct for both item nonresponse and for total questionnaire nonresponse are available and have been summarized by Chapman.²

The procedure used for NLS was a weighting class adjustment for questionnaire nonresponse.³ The adjustment involves partitioning the entire student sample of respondents and nonrespondents into weighting classes, which are homogeneous groups of students with respect to the important classification variables, and then apportioning the unadjusted weights of nonrespondents to the respondents within each weighting class. Differential response rates for students in different weighting classes are reflected in the adjustment.

The five classifier variables used to define weighting classes were:
- Race/ethnicity—majority white or minority;
- Sex—male or female;
- High school curriculum—general, academic, or vocational-technical;
- High school grades—B or better, or C or below; and
- Parents’ education—less than high school graduate, high school graduate, some beyond high school, or college graduate.

In the case of missing values for a classifier, the most frequent value of the classifier variable was imputed. The actual procedures used in forming specific weighting classes and in the computation of adjusted weights differed only slightly for various surveys, and these procedures are defined elsewhere (cf., Westat, 1972; Moore, 1975; Shah and Marnell, 1976).

After the completion of the Fourth Follow-Up Questionnaire, a total of 28 adjusted weights had been computed. Each adjusted weight is appropriate for a particular data set defined by the response to the various combinations of the base-year and the four follow-up questionnaires. Additionally, a special set of adjusted weights was also calculated for the retest subsample to adjust for test nonresponse. Greater detail on the various adjusted weights is provided elsewhere (Riccobono et al., January 1981).

Chapter 3
Design of the NLS Questionnaires

I. OVERVIEW

The NLS survey instrumentation began with the construction of a developmental model, or framework, within which items, or variables, could be generated. It was decided that the overall structure and content of the instruments should conform to the idea of the educational process as an input-output system and the schools or colleges as the environment in which the system operates. The basic conceptual model of the NLS, as shown in Figure 1, represents a modification of the General Educational Development Model developed under contract with NCES by UCLA's Center for the Study of Evaluation (Trent et al., 1972).

The model shows students entering high school with a set of existing characteristics, including race/ethnicity, sex, and socioeconomic status. During their high school years, experiences and interactions with various "significant others" come into play. These high school experiences, in conjunction with the predetermined variables, have important effects on the base-year outcomes, including self-esteem, grade performance, and college plans. In the second stage of the model (corresponding to the first follow-up), high school outputs, along with their antecedents, now become "inputs" or determinants of postsecondary schooling and work careers and constitute a variety of intervening variables which are similar in form and function to the school process variables in the first stage. The third stage of the diagram (labeled Future Follow-Ups) essentially is a replication and extension of the same developmental process, except that several new measures of "satisfaction" are indicated among the final outcome variables and were included in the second, third, and fourth follow-up surveys.

The model served as the principal framework for developing the several base-year instruments and those for subsequent surveys. Also, considerable input was received from NCES and other interested Federal agencies as well as an NCES-sponsored national advisory panel of educators and researchers. For each successive follow-up, the data collection effort was, for the most part, confined to a single questionnaire drawing heavily on the prior questionnaire but also soliciting information about the range of educational and vocational experiences in the period since the previous survey. Items in the follow-up questionnaires are organized into the following major topical sections: General Information, Work Experience, Education and Training, Military Service, Family Status, Experiences and Opinions, and Background Information. The particular content areas assessed in the several surveys are given in Table 2; copies of all NLS questionnaires are included as Appendix A of this report.

Collectively, the individual histories yielded by the successive survey instruments provide quantitative data for policymakers, planners, and researchers about such issues as the following:

- The demands for postsecondary education and training, including vocational/technical education.
- The abilities and characteristics of actual and potential users of postsecondary education.
- The extent to which earlier plans and aspirations persist over time and are eventually fulfilled—the reasons why young adults change their plans and fail to accomplish earlier objectives.
- The impacts of Federally funded postsecondary programs on initial choices and later activities and plans.
- The factors influencing young people in choosing their life work and in determining success and satisfaction in this work.
- The extent to which educational experiences have prepared them for their work.
- The characteristics and abilities of those making occupational choices and the reasons why choices are made.
- The impacts of high school experiences, curricula, peer-group aspirations, guidance counseling, and so forth, on initial educational and occupational plans and on perseverance and success in achieving them.
- Young adults' awareness of educational and occupational alternatives, their perceptions of options open to them, and the extent to which they have been limited by lack of information.
- Patterns of postsecondary institution attendance and work, including transfer, drop-out, and "stop-out" patterns.
- Financial and other considerations in setting low-aspiration goals and in failing to meet high-aspiration goals.

II. BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF INSTRUMENTS

A. Base-Year Instruments

The base-year data were collected through five separate instruments: the Student Questionnaire, Test Book, School Questionnaire, Counselor Questionnaire and School Record Information Form. The Student Questionnaire contained items dealing with factors related to education and work experience, future plans, aspirations and opinions. The questionnaire was designed in a format to allow students to route themselves through only the relevant sections of the questionnaire, as it was anticipated that many students would not complete the questionnaire if they had to answer all items. Students could exercise the alternative of taking the booklet home and answering items with the assistance of their parents.

In addition to the questionnaire, each student was asked to take a 69-minute test battery measuring both verbal and nonverbal ability. The Test Book, designed by ETS, consisted of six brief subtests: (1) vocabulary; (2) picture number; (3) reading; (4) letter groups; (5) mathematics; and (6) mosaic comparisons. Further, field staff members completed School Record Information Forms for each sample member, from school records. Information collected on this form was related to high school curriculum, grade point average, credit hours in major courses and (if applicable) ability groupings, remedial instruction records, involvement in Federally supported programs, and scores on standardized tests. Also, school staff were asked to complete a School Questionnaire and a Counselor Questionnaire designed to collect detailed data on teacher, school, and counselor characteristics.

B. First Follow-Up Questionnaire

The First Follow-Up Questionnaire was designed to provide continuity over time in measurements of the educational and vocational plans of the base-year respondents and to identify sociocultural variables which may have had impacts on 1972-1973 educational-occupational decisions. Against these objectives, questionnaire items were designed to describe the flow pattern between an individual's activity states in October 1972 and October 1973 and the future plans, aspirations, opinions and attitudes relevant to educational-vocational outcomes.
Two self-administering forms (A and B) of the First Follow-Up Questionnaire were utilized. Form A was used for sample members who responded to the base-year Student Questionnaire; Form B was used for the 1972 high school seniors added to the sample through resurvey activity and others who were unable to participate in the base-year survey (usually because of time and scheduling considerations). Form B contained all the items in Form A plus an additional 14 questions to supplement, retrospectively, missing base-year key information. Questions dealt with information concerning the respondent's activity state (education, work, etc.) in October 1972 and October 1973; socioeconomic status; work and educational experiences since leaving high school; and future educational and career plans, aspirations, and expectations. Most items were cast in forced-choice format. Open-ended, or free-response, questions were limited to questions involving dates, income, number of hours or weeks worked, and the like.

C. Second Follow-Up Instruments

The Second Follow-Up Questionnaire was designed to provide additional information about activity status of sample members at still another time point: two and a half years after high school. This was considered to be a particularly critical time in the career decision process. Consequently, in addition to the basic items maintained for consistency with prior data, other items were added to tap the transition of respondents from vocational/technical programs and from 2-year academic programs into either the labor force or further training. Other items were added as suggested in the conceptual model (Figure 1) or to meet specific data needs of various Federal agencies at that time to assist in policy decisions. Format of the questionnaire was similar to that of previous questionnaires.

A brief Activity State Questionnaire, containing 15 items relating to activity states in October 1972 and 1973 and background information about high school program and parents' education and occupation, was developed during this time to collect information retrospectively from those individuals who had not provided it previously. Although this questionnaire was administered as a special survey operation, its administration was concurrent with the second follow-up data collection.
D. Third Follow-Up Questionnaire

The Third Follow-Up Questionnaire was designed to gather information about the sample members' activities in 1975 and 1976 to be added to the previous data points. The period considered also represented an important time in the career decision process. Those who had entered college in the fall of 1973 and had progressed conventionally would be in transition from school to work or to postgraduate education, and those who had attended post-high school vocational or trade schools or who worked immediately after high school were likely to have become relatively well established in the labor force. Also, this time sample members would have had sufficient time to evaluate their education needs and occupational opportunities as well as to become involved in family and community life. Items related to those issues were included in addition to the basic longitudinal item set. The questionnaire also contained specific items on the effectiveness of education and training in preparing students to find a job and to perform well in their work and other factors related to educational and occupational attainment such as racial/ethnic discrimination and sex-role attitudes.

E. Fourth Follow-Up Instruments

The Fourth Follow-Up Questionnaire was designed to collect information seven and one-half years after high school graduation. At that time, most sample members could be expected to have entered an adult work and/or family role. The time points covered were 1977, 1978, and 1979, and items were related to these important early adult years. In addition to the basic study items, which remained basically unchanged to ensure continuity with previous follow-up questionnaires, and the general development model, new questionnaire items were added that would collect information appropriate to the respondents' more advanced stage of life and social development. Since the survey reviewed a longer period (3 years) than prior surveys, unusual care was exercised in choosing and, if necessary, modifying some questionnaire items.

In addition to the student questionnaire, the fourth follow-up survey included two additional instruments: (1) the Retest Booklet; and (2) the Supplemental Questionnaire. The Retest Booklet consisted of the vocabulary and mathematics sections of the base-year test battery. The purpose of the Supplemental Questionnaire was to collect missing critical data items from active sample members, to fill in significant gaps in sample members' histories.
since one of the most important resources in a longitudinal file is a complete data record for each individual. Eleven different forms were developed. Five of these forms were related to postsecondary enrollment status at the five time points 1972-1976, five were related to work status at the same time points, and one was related to highest educational attainment in 1976. The set of forms provided to a particular sample member was specifically tailored to that sample member's pattern of missing responses.

III: CHANGES AND CONTINUITIES IN THE QUESTIONNAIRE

Throughout all four follow-up surveys the questionnaires were designed so that the basic longitudinal study items found in the base-year survey remained unchanged in order to insure comparability in cross-time analyses. Most of the items measuring work and educational goals, performance, satisfaction, plans, and aspirations are exactly the same on each follow-up questionnaire, changing only dates as appropriate or, if necessary, directions for answering. Most items were consistently referenced to what the respondent was doing the first week of October of each year, including any intermediate years between follow-ups.

Changes did exist in regard to other items that were included in the various questionnaires. The various reasons for these changes can be subsumed under four major headings:

- Item revisions to improve clarity. Based on empirically determined rates of inconsistent or otherwise indeterminate responses to particular items or sets of items, the wording of item stems and/or alternative response options were changed in an attempt to improve respondents' understanding of the intended meaning of the item.

- Item additions or revisions to obtain measures of subsequent constructs in the general educational development model. The model presented above in Figure 1 introduces constructs in later stages that are not present in earlier stages. Consequently, items to measure these constructs were added in later follow-up instruments and items measuring earlier no-longer-applicable constructs were dropped.

- Item additions or revisions to focus on critical developmental time periods. The various surveys corresponded to different periods of potential transition of individuals within the postsecondary education system or from postsecondary education to the labor force. Items related to these transition points were typically added or appropriately revised for the survey instrument corresponding to such time points.

Item additions to meet immediate information needs of Federal agencies. The dynamic nature of changing Federal foci, priorities, and policies leads to differing information needs on policy planners over time. Items requesting information relevant to needs at a particular point in time were included in questionnaires as appropriate.
Chapter 4

Administration of the NLS Surveys: The Design Study, Base-Year and Follow-Ups

I. DESIGN STUDY

During the 1970-1971 school year, questionnaires and procedures planned for use in the NLS base-year survey were tested by RTI on a group of students who were seniors in the spring of 1971. This same field trial sample was used to evaluate all instruments, from 1971 through the fourth follow-up, for testing monetary and other incentives to increase response rates, for determining the effectiveness of various formats, and for evaluating various tracking devices. Also, the field trials provided some approximate estimates of cost and variance components for the design of a national sample.

The field test sample consisted of 900 students from a sample of 96 schools in 9 states designated by NCES. These 96 schools were the schools of primary interest and study; however, 8 special schools with a high percentage of students from 2 minority groups were also selected for study: 4 schools in New York City with a high percentage of Puerto Rican students and 4 schools in Los Angeles with a high percentage of Mexican American students.

The initial design study, employing the field test sample, permitted tryouts of initial draft instrumentation and procedures. A careful effort was made to enlist fully the advice of the teachers and administrators in the sample schools. The proposed base-year questionnaires and record forms were mailed, with instructions, to each participating school in the field trial sample. In order to determine the content and availability of school records across schools, and in order to compare data collected by mail with data collected by personal visit, 16 of the regular sample schools and 4 of the special schools were visited.

Based on the Design Study pretest, a number of recommendations were made. Some had to do with the time and schedule required for sample selection and data collection, as necessary to permit the schools to assemble the requested data, and with improving the clarity and specificity of the administrator manual. Others involved the identification of information requiring special effort to collect, or that appeared unduly sensitive.
A large number of recommendations, in areas of sampling, questionnaire content, and survey administration and procedures, arose from the initial field study (Horvitz et al., 1972) and from subsequent experience with this sample. Not all recommendations were followed, of course, due to later contingencies of scheduling and budget. Nevertheless, the relatively extensive design study and pretest provided many useful and necessary parameters for the larger and more complex activities that followed.

II. BASE-YEAR STUDY

In the spring of 1972, the base-year survey of the NLS was conducted by the Educational Testing Service (cf., Hilton and Rhett, 1973). A total of 19,001 seniors from 1,062 public, private, and church-affiliated high schools participated. Each student was asked to complete a Student Questionnaire and to take a 69-minute test battery. Survey Administrators were asked to fill out a school record information form for each student, as well as the School Questionnaire which provided information about the school's programs, resources, and grading system. In addition, school counselors were asked to complete a special questionnaire designed to provide data about their training and experience.

Prior to the administration of the survey, ETS used the following sequential process to secure cooperation and participation from the schools. In each of the 50 States and the District of Columbia, NCES requested the Chief State School Officer (CSSO) to name a state coordinator (typically a staff member in the state education department); ETS then worked through each state coordinator in contacting the superintendents of school districts in which sample schools were located. With the approval of the appropriate superintendent, the principal of each school selected in the sample was contacted. Principals were then informed of the prior approval of the state coordinator and of the district superintendent, invited to participate, and asked to designate a survey administrator to oversee data collection in their schools. The administrator then secured the voluntary participation of students selected, called the students together for the administration of the instruments and returned completed questionnaires and record forms to ETS. Numerous receipt control checks were performed at ETS, and survey administrators cooperated with ETS staff in follow-up operations to complete missing data. An honorarium of $50 was paid to the school or to the administrator at the discretion of the school, unless other procedures were arranged by the state coordinator or district superintendent.

Roman Catholic schools were contacted through the National Catholic Education Association in Washington rather than through diocesan channels. Parallel permission paths were constructed for other denominational schools; private nonsectarian schools were usually contacted directly.

Several problems arose as the work progressed. In some states, the state coordinators requested that all materials be sent directly to them for further distribution and communication with the schools. Modest delays had been expected in those states; however, materials forwarded through state coordinators often took six weeks longer than the direct shipments. Problems were also encountered in several large city school districts. First, the probability sample of schools within such districts appeared arbitrary and raised questions about why the sample was not representative within the district itself. Second, several large cities had prior regulations of which ETS staff were unaware. Los Angeles, for instance, had required parental signed permission for student participation in previous studies, and the Chicago Board of Education had recently ruled that no test batteries were to be given in connection with any study in the city schools. Other exceptions to the planned procedure included states in which no honoraria were to be paid, as well as two states which had accepted the offer to construct supplementary samples within the state so that state data would be comparable with national data.

The overwhelming problem was time: since the study had started in the beginning of February, materials to send to schools along with requests for their permission to participate had to be prepared very quickly. Even less time was available for preparation and transmission of the informational materials for state coordinators and district superintendents. If a school refused to participate, or could not participate within the time frame afforded, a backup, or secondary, sample school had to be drawn from the sampling frame. Communications to gain participation began again through various levels. Thus, if the state coordinator, district superintendent, and principal of a selected primary sample school took some time to make a negative decision, very little time was left while schools were still in session to contact the backup school.
Six weeks after the start of the study, over 900 district superintendents and over 1,100 school principals had been contacted, and 61 schools had agreed to participate. To increase school participation, telephone calls to superintendents and principals were made in an attempt to solve problems and answer questions. Additionally, mailgrams were sent to those school officials who had not yet reached a decision regarding participation. During this time, the sampling team had selected and contacted 40 backup schools as replacements for primary schools that could not participate. ETS staff began to seek approval by telephone from State coordinators and district superintendents so that the principal might be contacted directly with survey materials.

About nine weeks after the study began, ETS recontacted superintendents or principals who had refused to participate to ascertain the reasons for refusal. ETS offered by telephone to send ETS or NCES staff to the school to give whatever assistance might be necessary for participation; however, this offer was never accepted. It was believed that one reason for the refusal was that familiarity with school records was a necessary prerequisite to giving aid; thus, schools may have been reluctant to spend the time orienting ETS personnel. Negotiations with several of the large districts resulted in some local modifications to procedures (e.g., the exclusion of the NLS test battery). Procedures for data collection were also shifted so schools could collect data any time up to four weeks before their closing date, and thus provide time for followup of missing data while students were still in school.

By the end of June, over 1,100 schools had contributed data to the base-year study. This group consisted of about 83 percent of the schools contacted in the primary sample. Telephone follow-up activity continued to assure that all student data collected during the school year, and any missing school or counselor data that could be provided, were returned to ETS. These efforts, however, proved not to be particularly fruitful.

III. FOLLOW-UP SURVEYS

The important problem of sample attrition must be considered with all longitudinal studies; the fact that the NLS sample was a cross-section of the general population of high school seniors, young, and highly mobile, compounded the difficulties of follow-ups. Accordingly, special attention and effort was invested in keeping in touch with, motivating, and developing rapport with the individuals in the survey sample to insure their continued participation. Among the methods used by RTI and NCES to prompt a high response rate included incentive payments, mailing of additional questionnaires, mailgrams, reminder postcards, and follow-up telephone calls and personal interviews. Procedures to maintain rapport and interest in the study included thank-you letters, newsletters, and wallet-size cards (that also served as change of address cards) for each respondent indicating NLS involvement.

The process involved in conducting the four follow-up surveys was very similar; however, there were some additional unique activities during the first, second and fourth follow-ups. At the time of the first follow-up, additional students and schools were added to the study sample through the resurvey effort. Concurrent with second follow-up data collection activities, a special survey operation was initiated to obtain from some respondents missing activity state information. The additional activities during the fourth follow-up were administration of the Supplemental Questionnaire to collect key work and educational history information that had not been obtained in previous follow-ups, and the retesting of sample members with a subset of the base-year test battery. Other than these special data collection activities, the follow-ups were generally carried out in the manner described in the following sections.

A. Use of Newsletters

NLS newsletters were mailed to study participants in the late summer, approximately two months before the questionnaires for each follow-up were to be mailed. The newsletters, which were designed to serve several functions, reviewed the purposes of NLS, described participation levels, summarized major findings, announced that the follow-up was beginning, stated that a questionnaire would be mailed shortly, stressed the importance of continued participation, and requested that the respondent return an enclosed postcard verifying current address or showing the needed corrections. The newsletters encouraged the respondents to continue their participation in the study by stressing the importance of each individual's contribution. In addition, the newsletters allowed RTI valuable lead time in locating respondents for whom addresses had changed and permitting the updating of addresses prior to the questionnaire mailout (cf., King, 1981).
B. Tracing Activities

In preparation for activities to track NLS nonrespondents, RTI established a Telephone Tracing Department. RTI survey specialists recruited and trained staff, installed special telephone equipment, and prepared a detailed procedural manual on tracing. Sample members for whom newsletters were returned as undeliverable were traced by this department before each follow-up to secure correct addresses. Tracing continued through the fall and winter as undeliverable questionnaires were returned. For tracing purposes, information types and sources (gleaned from previous questionnaires and school records) were:

- Name, address, and telephone of parents, guardians, or relatives.
- Names, addresses, and telephone numbers of two people who would always know how to get in touch with the individual.
- Name and location of postsecondary school the individual attended or planned to attend.
- Name and location of the individual's employer.
- Neighbors of the individual or his parents.
- Principal or other contact at the secondary school attended.
- State or registration and identification number of driver's license.
- Local government agencies.
- Armed forces locator services or DOD rosters.
- Institutional records (i.e., prison, police, mental).
- Local credit bureau or a similar organization.

As new addresses were obtained from the tracing activities, returned mail, or other sources, the computer file of names and addresses was updated.

C. Mail Survey and Follow-Up Procedures

Using the continuously updated name and address file, questionnaires for each follow-up were mailed in the early fall. When necessary, second questionnaires were mailed as a result of tracing activities. The events following the mailing of the questionnaire that were designed to increase the response rate included: (a) mailing of a thank-you/reminder postcard; (b) mailing of a prompting postcard; (c) second questionnaire mailout; and (d) mailing of a second prompting postcard; and (e) mailgram requests to complete the questionnaire. It should be noted that $3.00 incentive checks were mailed with the questionnaires to respondents in the third and fourth follow-up surveys to increase the participation rate (cf., Wisenbaker, 1981a; King, 1979).
As stated earlier, all regular follow-up student questionnaires were designed for self-administration. A mail response rate of over 60 percent was achieved in each follow-up wave. To improve data quality, telephone follow-up interviews were initiated to individuals for whom responses to key items were incomplete or inconsistent.

D. Field Interviews

Following the mail survey and telephone calls in the first follow-up data collection activity, the names and addresses of those sample members who failed to mail back their questionnaires were then turned over to the Bureau of the Census for personal interviews in accordance with a Bureau arrangement with the U.S. Office of Education. For each of the subsequent follow-up surveys, RTI coordinated the activities to locate and conduct personal interviews with mail nonrespondents. RTI central staff developed the training manuals for the national network of survey specialist interviewers in the field who served as field supervisors and field interviewers. They were provided with names and addresses of nonrespondents in their area and directed to administer the questionnaire in person (or by phone in third and fourth follow-up surveys).

IV. QUESTIONNAIRE RESPONSE RATES AND PATTERNS

Due to the extraordinary efforts in maintaining contact with individuals, tracing activities, and intensive data collection activities, the response rates to the various student questionnaires have remained quite high over the approximately 10-year period of NLS operation. Response rates based on total sample size for each of the questionnaire surveys are provided in Table 3. In practice, not all members of the total sample were eligible for survey in the several follow-up surveys, due to death, incapacitation, institutionalization, prior refusal, etc.; consequently, the follow-up response rates for the eligible target population, toward which actual data collection efforts were directed, were considerably higher than those indicated in Table 3 (such rates were never lower than 89 percent).

The patterns of responses for all possible combination of questionnaire returns for base-year and follow-up surveys are given in Table 4. Of those who were in the sample during the base year, 68 percent responded to all of... the student questionnaires. Considering the resurvey and augmentation additions, who were added prior to the first follow-up, 74 percent of the final sample returned all follow-up questionnaires.

NOTE. --Actual response rates to data collection are somewhat higher, since only subsequently eligible sample members were surveyed in each survey (e.g., prior refusals and sample members known to be deceased were not surveyed); thus reducing the denominator from the reported value of 23,451.

Data Preparation and Data Quality

I. AVAILABLE NLS DATA FILES

Several years of NLS survey and analysis effort went into the first NLS public release file and a supporting User's Manual (Levinsohn, et al., 1975), prepared in 1975 for utilizing the base-year and first follow-up survey data. The following year, the 1976 public release file was prepared and released, containing an additional year of survey data from the second follow-up as well as updates to portions of the base-year and first follow-up data (cf., Levinsohn, et al., 1976). These updates included additional data obtained during the special activity state survey and from base-year-administered School Record Information Forms and School Questionnaires which were not completely processed until after the 1975 data base was released. Also in 1976, a master file and a school file were prepared and documented (Lewis and Levinsohn, 1976). The 1976 master file contained all the information in the 1976 public release file, plus a set of restricted items not available to the general public because of confidentiality restrictions, and the 1976 NLS school file contained a base-year School Questionnaire for each NLS high school and served as a companion file for the other student-oriented files. Following the third follow-up survey, all information contained in the 1975 and 1976 release files was supplemented and released as the 1978 public release file (cf., Levinsohn, et al., 1979). Following the fourth follow-up, a merged NLS data file was created. Information included in the previous release files, containing base-year through third follow-up data, was supplemented with data collected during fourth follow-up operations on three instruments: the Fourth Follow-Up Questionnaire, the Supplemental Questionnaire, and the Retest. An updated school file containing appropriately adjusted weights for analysis of school-level data was also produced during the fourth follow-up. These files and their documentation (Riccobono, et al., January 1981; Henderson and Levinsohn, 1981) are the archival records of the NLS surveys and represent the basic analytic resource of the NLS.
II. PROCESSING THE BASE-YEAR DATA

Educational Testing Service produced two computer files containing the data from the five base-year data collection instruments. The major phases for preparing the base-year NLS data (detailed in Hilton and Rhett, 1973) were: (a) the data scan-edit phase; (b) the data follow-up phase; (c) the data transcription phase; and (d) the data editing computer phase. Following the receipt and check-in of materials, the manual scan-edit phase was implemented. During this phase, all survey documents (including testing documents) were scanned to insure that the individuals who completed the questionnaires were indeed the people chosen from particular schools as sample members. The student and counselor questionnaires were reviewed to determine that key items had been answered and that skip patterns in the Student Questionnaire (SQ) had been correctly followed. All errors, omissions or problems were noted and questionnaires requiring follow-up were set aside. Completed documents were batched together and sent to be keytaped and verified, except for the answer sheets of the students' test books, which were prepared for machine scoring.

The data follow-up phase was another manual/clerical activity in which all materials needing follow-up as a result of the scan-edit operation were examined and decisions were made for the appropriate follow-up action. Where appropriate and feasible responses to previously indeterminate data were obtained and transferred to the original documents.

After the scan-edit phase and any necessary follow-up operations, the data transcription phase was initiated. During this phase, the following documents were keytaped and verified: (a) student questionnaire; (b) student questionnaire cover pages; (c) School Record Information Form; (d) counselor questionnaire; (e) school questionnaire; and (f) Batch Header Sheets. The answer sheets of the test book were transcribed to tape by optical scan equipment; staff members hand-scored approximately 100 answer sheets to verify scoring accuracy.

The final phase of processing the base-year data involved a machine edit through a computer system. The edit program involved checks for consistency, out-of-range responses, and omissions for each document type (Student Questionnaire, Counselor Questionnaire, etc.) and verified counts across schools and students. Two files were produced: one contained all records that passed edit, the other contained all rejected records. The program applied corrections to both the clean file and the reject file; the corrections were, for example, changes of school code and ID number or deletions of records. Once the corrections were applied, the reject file and the clean file were merged or sorted. The files were then recycled through the edit program along with any new raw data. This process was continued until there were no rejects.

III. PROCESSING THE FOLLOW-UP DATA

Data preparation activities for the several instruments collected during each of the four follow-ups were quite similar, with some minor exceptions. At each phase of processing, appropriate event entries were made to the automated survey support system so that there could be constant monitoring of the location of all questionnaires in the document flow and subsequent machine processing steps.

Returned questionnaires were processed through a central check-in point. Each respondent's ID number and the batch number of the questionnaire were noted and transmitted to the data processing section for entry into an automated survey support system. Batches were then processed by pre-machine (manual) editing, in which certain checks were made to ascertain if each questionnaire contained a minimum set of critical data; any necessary manual coding of responses to certain items was performed at this stage. Questionnaires that passed this manual edit were then transmitted for direct data entry. Those questionnaires that failed the manual edit were assigned for telephone follow-up contact with the respondent to resolve problems uncovered in manual edit. After resolution, these questionnaires were also transmitted for direct data entry. After data entry operations, questionnaires were placed in temporary secure storage prior to microfilming and eventual destruction.

Following the data entry process, all NLS data were extensively edited by computer prior to releasing files for public use. This machine edit process involved rigorous checking of all routing patterns within an instrument as well as range checks for all items and inconsistency checks for appropriate items. "Hard copy" or source document checks were required in some cases for error resolution. During these edits, specific codes were entered in the file to account for various types of indeterminate data and, where possible, "logically recoded values" were computed including, in each case, an indicator for the reasons for such a recode.
Several data quality indices were also developed during file preparation and have been included in the NLS data file. The quality indices indicated for each individual and each instrument the amount and quality of information present in that individual's record. Four basic types of indices were computed: consistency indices, out-of-range indices, routing indices, and completeness indices (cf., Riccobono, Burkheimer, and Place, 1981). Also during file preparation, a number of composite variables were constructed. Each composite (e.g., SES, ability level, educational attainment) was constructed from several variables and required a number of steps in its derivation. A complete list of composites derived from NLS survey data is available (Riccobono, et al., January 1981) along with detailed documentation regarding their derivation.

IV. DATA QUALITY

As suggested by the brief description of the careful and extensive data processing procedures, the quality of data in NLS release files has been a major concern during the operation of the study. To the extent possible within recognizable boundaries of time and budget, every effort has been made to ensure both complete data and a true representation of data provided. For uncorrectable response quality, the probable reasons for nonresponse have been directly indicated and potential inconsistencies in responses have been identified and also directly indicated on the data file (cf., Riccobono, et al., January 1981).

Quality control has taken place at each of the three basic stages of data processing: initial manual processing, data entry, and machine editing. A major quality control feature is available through the survey control system, which virtually eliminated the potential for mismatching of the several instruments and for multiple entry of instruments. The entire manual edit procedure was instituted to ensure completeness and consistency among key items of the questionnaire; if these key items were unanswered or inconsistently answered and could not be resolved by recourse to other provided responses, then attempted resolution by telephone contact with the respondent was initiated. A 10 percent spot check of all such telephone contacts was implemented through "silent phone monitors" to ensure that procedures were correctly carried out and responses appropriately recorded (cf., King, 1981). Manual coding of alphabetic information into numeric form was another step in ensuring the accuracy and completeness of NLS data (although some alphabetic information not suitable for numeric coding was entered directly onto the file). Easily usable conversion tables were initiated to ensure that this coding was performed correctly and a 5 percent check of all work was implemented (cf., King, 1981).

Quality control at the data entry stage was facilitated by the use of programmable direct data entry terminals. Not only do direct data entry display units allow the operator to easily detect and correct errors at time of initial keying; but also the programmable nature of the entry terminal allows machine checks for out-of-range values and certain inconsistencies. Consequently, this procedure typically results in considerably lower keying error rates than standard keypunch procedures (as well as early detection of actual response indeterminacies). For keying of directory data (required for contacting and/or tracing individuals), 100 percent verification of initial keying was performed. For other data, error rates were determined by rekeying a 5 percent sampling of data for each operator and batch; batches with greater than 1 percent keystroke error rates were completely rekeyed. The keystroke error rate maintained for NLS data was less than two-tenths of 1 percent (cf., Henderson and Allen, 1981).

The principal purpose of the machine edit procedures was to identify and document errors rather than to reduce them, since at that stage of processing the only available resolution process was logical or statistical imputation. The philosophy adopted was to leave such imputation procedures to users of the file rather than to force a particular procedure on all users. Nonetheless, the identification of specific types of nonresponse, flagging of certain inconsistency types, and computation of the several data quality indices provides an unusually complete documentation of the types and the extent of error remaining in the NLS data (cf., Wisenbaker, 1981b).
Chapter 6

Use of the NLS Data

The overall purpose of the NLS is to provide a better understanding of the development of students as they pass through the American educational system and of the complex factors associated with individual educational and career outcomes. It is not surprising, then, that the specific topic most often addressed by researchers utilizing NLS data has been, thus far, issues related to postsecondary education. As illustrated in Table 5, which presents the number of NLS-based studies known to be in existence through January 1981, the postsecondary education studies have focused on access, aid and persistence. The table also shows that a substantial number of the studies have dealt with various methodological considerations. This is due, in part, to NCES tradition to assure knowledge of data quality and the fact that many reports were produced by RTI as a result of contractual commitments. Also, since studies like the NLS that contain repeated measures on the same subjects over time are somewhat unusual, several reports were written to document and develop the analytical tools for dealing with such data. A smaller number of studies exist that investigate secondary education, vocational/technical education, psychological development, and other issues.

Now that the fourth follow-up data have been released to the public, the primary focus of NLS research may shift toward studies of labor force participation, career development patterns, and family/lifestyle activities. The data were gathered seven and one-half years after the respondents left high school and should reveal the sample members' adult life patterns believed to be strongly influenced by the educational experience.

As to the frequency of the use of NLS data, Table 6 provides information about the number of reports issued each year since the study began in 1972. After 1974, when the second follow-up data became available, the number of reports issued per year has been consistently high. It is expected that the number of studies in the next few years will remain high; 41 studies were known to be in progress in January of 1981.

The NLS was designed for use by the general research community including social science graduate students embarking on their first piece of empirical research as well as established scientists working on Federally funded contracts. For more information regarding NLS data users, the reader is referred to Levinsohn and McAdams (1978).

NOTE.--The date of one study is unavailable.

The document reports the results of an informal survey of over 120 NLS data base users. The users' names, addresses, and their universities or institutions are listed as well as user reports of several topical areas. These include: (1) dissemination of data tapes and documentation; (2) reaction to general tape format; (3) user reaction to coding of the data base; (4) user reaction to documentation; (5) data processing of the NLS data base; (6) additional data bases for the NLS; and (7) summary and conclusions.

NLS-based reports have appeared in a variety of publications as illustrated by Table 7. The majority of study reports thus far are products of grant or contract research, with NCES as the primary sponsor. There have been 51 papers presented at professional meetings and conferences, primarily those sponsored by the American Educational Research Association and the American Psychological Association. The number of articles appearing in professional journals has increased notably in recent years. In 1977, only 7 journal articles based on NLS data were identified; by the end of 1980, the number had grown to 32.

NLS Survey Instruments

This appendix contains the following NLS survey instruments:

- Student Questionnaire
- Student Test Book
- School Questionnaire
- Counselor Questionnaire
- Student's School Record Information Form
- First Follow-up Questionnaire
- Second Follow-up Questionnaire
- Third Follow-up Questionnaire
- Activity State Questionnaire
- Fourth Follow-up Questionnaire

Dear High School Senior:

Thank you for accepting the invitation to participate in the National Longitudinal Study of the High School Class of 1972. The answers you and other students provide will help in the continuing effort to plan new and better school programs for future students across the United States.
DIRECTIONS

- This questionnaire is divided into sections of questions. All students are asked to start by answering questions in the sections lettered A, B, and C. Then you will be asked to follow the directions to answer questions in the sections that apply to your particular plans for the year after you leave high school.

- Read carefully all directions for each question you answer. It is important that you follow these directions carefully.

- When you are asked to circle a number, please make a heavy black circle. Here is an example.

  What grade are you in? (Circle one.)

  Grade 9 ......................................................... 1
  Grade 10 ......................................................... 2
  Grade 11 ......................................................... 3
  Grade 12 ......................................................... 4

- Circle as many numbers as the directions indicate for each question you answer.

- Completely erase any answers you wish to change.

- When you have completed the questionnaire, put it in the envelope that has been given to you and seal the envelope. No one at your school will see or read your answers.

  This questionnaire is not a test. You may omit any question that you or your parents would consider objectionable.
Please complete the information above.

SECTION

Your high school experiences...

Please answer every question unless you are asked to skip to another one. You may omit any question that you or your parents would consider objectionable.

1. When do you expect to graduate from high school? (Circle one.)

GENERAL DIRECTIONS

This test has six sections. Some sections have more than one part. During the time allowed for each section or part, you are to work only on it. The time limit for each section or separately timed part is printed at the beginning of each section or part, and the supervisor will tell you when to begin and when to stop. If you finish a section or part before time is called, go back and check your work on that section or part only.

Your score on each section will be the number of correct answers minus a percentage of the number of incorrect answers. Therefore, it will not be to your advantage to guess unless you are able to eliminate one or more of the answer choices.

Mark all of your answers on the separate answer sheet, as no credit will be given for anything written in the test book. Make your marks on the answer sheet heavy and black, as in the examples below.

Sample Answers

Be sure that the entire box is blackened.

If you wish to change an answer, erase your first mark completely.

SECTION 1
VOCABULARY
Time—5 minutes

Directions: Each of the questions below consists of one word followed by five words or phrases. You are to select the one word or phrase whose meaning is closest to that of the word in capital letters.

Sample Question

CHILLY:

A) lazy
B) nice
C) dry
D) cold
E) sunny

Sample Answer: A

In order to find the correct answer you look at the word chilly and then look for a word below it that has the same or almost the same meaning. When you do this, you see that cold is the answer because cold is closest in meaning to the word chilly.

(This section of the test contained 15 items similar to the sample above.)

STOP

IF YOU FINISH BEFORE TIME IS CALLED, CHECK YOUR WORK ON THIS SECTION ONLY. DO NOT WORK ON ANY OTHER SECTION IN THE BOOK.
PICTURE—NUMBER

Directions: This is a test of your ability to remember picture-number combinations. The section has two parts. In each part you will study a page of fifteen pictures with numbers. On a study page the picture-number pairs will look like this:

After studying the page showing both pictures and numbers, you will be told to turn to a page showing the pictures in a different order.

Examples:

1.

3.

On your answer sheet there are ten boxes with numbers above them for each question. One of the numbers will be the number that goes with the picture. You are to blacken the box with that number above it.

Examples:

1. 12 24 31 44 51 57 65 73 77 92
2. 15 27 34 41 46 55 62 75 82 89
3. 13 19 28 34 46 58 62 67 73 97

The number that goes with the picture of a telephone is 73, so for example 1 you would blacken the box with 73 above it. For example 2 you would blacken the box with 34 above it. For example 3 you would blacken the box with 46 above it.

DO NOT TURN THIS PAGE UNTIL YOU ARE TOLD TO DO SO.
SECTION 3
READING
Time—15 minutes

Directions: Each passage is followed by questions based on its content. After reading a passage, choose the best answer to each question and blacken the corresponding space on the answer sheet. Answer all questions following a passage on the basis of what is stated or implied in that passage.

Despite its problems, black television programming is at last a reality. However, stations broadcasting black programs usually are not supported by advertising. They operate on grants from such corporations as the Ford Foundation, which gives $5 million a year for new programming. The programs may vary from talk shows to variety shows, such as New York’s Soul, to cultural workshops, such as Boston’s On Being Black. Chicago has an all-black nightly news show and Charleston features a show with information on job opportunities. Black television is a good thing because it provides professional experience for young actors and technicians (for the production of a television show is largely technical), a showcase for black talent, and an opportunity for white audiences to learn more about themselves as they learn more about the black man.

4. Which of the following does the author list among the benefits of black television?
   I. Providing experience for young actors
   II. Giving white audiences a chance to learn more about themselves
   III. Giving black people a chance to meet white people
   (A) I only (B) II only (C) I and II only (D) I and III only (E) I, II, and III

5. Which of the following best describes the author’s feelings about black television compared to white television?
   (A) It has had hardships and still faces problems but is on the way to becoming as well established as white television.
   (B) It is no different from white television in most respects and has adopted the standards of white television.
   (C) It is technically better organized and more smoothly run than white television.
   (D) It is more expensive than white television and has higher standards in the quality of its programs.
   (E) It has a large audience and can afford to pay higher wages than are paid to white television technicians and performers.

1. The passage states that black television usually gets money for its operation from
   (A) advertising (B) individual donations (C) the government (D) grants (E) collections from audiences

2. The author implies that the production of any television program depends mainly on the skill of the
   (A) actors (B) writers (C) announcers (D) newscasters (E) technicians

3. The author’s feelings about black television programming can best be described as
   (A) doubtful (B) respectful (C) sorrowful (D) surprised (E) scornful

SECTION 4
LETTER GROUPS

Directions: Each question in this section consists of five groups of letters with four letters in each group. Four of the groups have a characteristic in common which the fifth group does not have. Decide which group is different, and blacken the space on the answer sheet that corresponds to the position (A, B, C, D, or E) of your choice.

Note: The common characteristic will not be based on the sounds of groups of letters, the shapes of letters, or whether letter combinations form words or parts of words.

<td>ABCD</td>
<td>HIJK</td>
<td>UVWX</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. NLIK</td>
<td>PLIK</td>
<td>QLIK</td>
<td>THIK</td>
<td>VLIK</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Sample Answers

1. A B C D E
2. A B C D E

In sample question 1, the letters in four of the groups are in consecutive alphabetical order, but group DEFL in column B is not; so space B has been marked in the sample answers. In sample question 2, four of the groups contain the letter L. Letter group THIK in column D is the group that is different; so space D has been marked in the sample answers.

You will have 15 minutes to work on this section.

DO NOT TURN THIS PAGE UNTIL YOU ARE TOLD TO DO SO.
SECTION 5
MATHEMATICS

Directions: Each problem in this section consists of two quantities, one placed in Column A and one in Column B. You are to compare the two quantities and on the answer sheet blacken space

A if the quantity in Column A is greater;
B if the quantity in Column B is greater;
C if the two quantities are equal;
D if the size relationship cannot be determined from the information given.

Sample Questions

<tr>
<td>Example 2. 6 \times 6</td>
<td>12 + 12</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Sample Answers

1. A B C D
2. B C D

Answer C is marked in Example 1 since the quantity in Column A is equal to the quantity in Column B. Answer A is marked for Example 2 since the quantity in Column A is greater than the quantity in Column B.

You will have 15 minutes to work on this section.

DO NOT TURN THIS PAGE UNTIL YOU ARE TOLD TO DO SO.

(This section contained 25 problems following the format described above.)
SECTION 6

MOSAIC COMPARISONS

Directions: This test consists of pairs of mosaics, that is, patterns of squares like those found on tiled floors or walls. Each mosaic is made up of a number of partially shaded squares. The mosaics in each pair are identical except for one square which differs in shading. The vertical columns of both mosaics are labeled A to C, A to D, or A to E according to the number of columns in the mosaic. Your task will be to locate, for each pair of mosaics, the column that contains the single square which is shaded differently. Then mark the space on your separate answer sheet that corresponds to the letter at the head of that column.

Sample Question

Sample Answers

1. A □ C

In sample question 1, the right-hand and left-hand mosaics are identical except for the center square of column B, so answer space B is blackened in the sample answer.

Sample Questions

Sample Answers

2. A □ B □ C □

3. □ B □ C □ D □ E

In sample question 2, the bottom square in column D is the one that is different, so answer space D is blackened in the sample answers. In sample question 3, the second square in column A is the one that is different, so answer space A is blackened in the sample answers.

There are three parts to this test. All the mosaics in a single part are the same size. During the three minutes allowed for each part, you are to work on that part only. Do not move ahead to the next part until you are told to do so. Remember only one square is different for each pair of mosaics.

DO NOT TURN THIS PAGE UNTIL YOU ARE TOLD TO DO SO.

(This section contained 116 mosaic comparisons, divided into 3 parts as follows:

Part 1 - 56 mosaics
Part 2 - 33 mosaics
Part 3 - 27 mosaics
116 mosaics)

Dear OPERATION FOLLOW-UP Participant:

More than a year has passed since you left high school, and the U.S. Office of Education is sponsoring the National Longitudinal Study of the High School Class of 1972. This study, being conducted by the U.S. Bureau of the Census and the Research Triangle Institute of North Carolina, is called OPERATION FOLLOW-UP. It is a nation-wide study which, we expect, will continue over a period of 6 to 8 years and produce valuable and interesting information.

We are asking you to participate in OPERATION FOLLOW-UP. The purpose of this follow-up is to find out what has happened to you and other seniors after leaving high school. The fact that you are working, married, in college or vocational school, or starting a family is important not only to you, but also to educational planners and policymakers. Through your completion of this questionnaire, valuable information can be obtained about a very important part of this country's population—young adults who are going through some of the most significant experiences of their lives.

Please take a little time and fill out this questionnaire. Let us know what you are doing, what you have done since high school, and what you are planning to do in the next year or so. All of the information that you provide will be absolutely confidential; your name will never be published or associated in any way with your individual answers. If there are questions that you would rather not answer, simply do not answer them.

About the questionnaire: you will not need to answer all sections of it. Begin with Section A and follow the instructions for each question. Your answers will guide you to skip parts which don't apply to you. Please follow all these instructions carefully. Most of the questions can be answered simply by circling the number for the response you choose. In some cases, you are asked to write out your answer to a question.

When you complete this questionnaire please return it to us in the enclosed post-paid envelope. We'll be waiting to hear from you.

We will be sending you results from OPERATION FOLLOW-UP in 1974. Watch for our OPERATION FOLLOW-UP Newsletters.

Sincerely,

J. A. Davis
RTI Project Director

K. A. Tabler
USOE Project Director

Center for Educational Research and Evaluation National Center for Educational Statistics

P.S. May we have your permission to collect school record information (grades, admission test scores, and program) from your high school? This information, too, will be kept in absolute confidence. Please sign your name below if you give permission.

THANK YOU FOR YOUR COOPERATION

THIS INFORMATION WILL BE KEPT IN STRICT CONFIDENCE AND WILL BE USED ONLY FOR FUTURE FOLLOW-UPS IN THE NATIONAL LONGITUDINAL STUDY OF THE HIGH SCHOOL CLASS OF 1972
This questionnaire is divided into the following seven sections:

A. General Information
B. Education & Training
C. Work Experience
D. Family Status
E. Military Service
F. Activities and Opinions
G. Background Information

Start by answering questions in Section A. You will need to answer the first question in each section, but you may not need to answer all the questions in every section. You may be able to skip most of some sections. We have designed the questionnaire with special instructions in red beside responses which allow you to skip one or more questions. Follow these instructions when they apply to you.

Read carefully each question you answer. It is important that you follow the directions for responding which are

- (Circle one.)
- (Circle as many as apply.)
- (Circle one number on each line.)

Sometimes you are asked to fill in a blank—in these cases, simply write your response on the line provided. Where you are asked to circle a number, make a heavy circle. Here is an example:

Why did you leave high school?

(Circle one number on each line.)

The following items give you a chance to rate yourself on the degree to which you possess one of each pair of traits. For ratings on this scale, 1-4 refers to the trait on the far left side while 5-8 refers to the trait on the far right side. Let's take an example to show what you are saying when you circle a number from 1-8.

CIRCLE the ONE NUMBER that comes closest to saying how you would rate yourself.

(Circle one number on each line.)

a. Inactive
I lack drive, energy, vitality; I tend to be passive, and am without strong interests.

b. Understanding of Others
I am sympathetic about the feelings and problems of other persons: people come to me for advice when in trouble.

c. Do Not Think Far Ahead
I act impulsively without thinking of the consequences and frequently I am caught short because I have not foreseen the outcomes.

d. Self-Concerned
I talk a lot about myself, think more about myself and what I want than about other people. I frequently am unaware of the rights and needs of other people.

e. Enthusiastic
I am interested and excited about new events: get involved in activities easily and have strong interests.

f. Practical
I have good judgment and common sense; I make practical and appropriate comments and decisions.

g. Vague Thinking
My thinking is vague, illogical, indefinite.

h. Personally Warm
I tend to be sincere, friendly, emotionally responsive, sympathetic to others, affectionate, and enjoy other people.

i. Ambitious
I set high goals for myself and am dissatisfied when I do not accomplish all of them. When I finish one thing, I begin another right away.

j. Energetic
I have unlimited energy, high drive, vitality; I need to be constantly active and interested in many activities.

k. Not Understanding of Others
I am unaware of and uninterested in the feelings and problems of others; other persons do not come to me for advice.

l. Think Ahead
I consider future possibilities and outcomes of my decisions before acting.

m. Other-Concerned
I think of others and what they want; try to consider others' points of view; can compromise or adjust to demands of others.

n. Unenthusiastic
I do not get deeply involved or excited; I am mild; not much excites me.

o. Impractical
I make impractical, inappropriate suggestions that don't consider all aspects of a problem.

p. Clear Thinking
My thinking is clear, precise, and logical.

q. Personally Cold
I tend to be distant, aloof, austere, and undemonstrative with others; I do not like to express affection or feelings and am more comfortable in impersonal situations.

r. Unambitious
I am unambitious and am easily satisfied with what I can accomplish.

THANK YOU FOR YOUR COOPERATION

THIS INFORMATION WILL BE KEPT IN STRICT CONFIDENCE AND WILL BE USED ONLY FOR FUTURE FOLLOW-UPS IN THE NATIONAL LONGITUDINAL STUDY OF THE HIGH SCHOOL CLASS OF 1972
Third Follow-Up Questionnaire

Prepared for the
DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE
BY RESEARCH TRIANGLE INSTITUTE IN RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, NORTH CAROLINA
FALL 1976
GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

This questionnaire is divided into the following seven sections:
A. General Information
B. Work Experience
C. Education and Training
D. Military Service
E. Family Status
F. Experiences and Opinions
G. Background Information

Start by answering questions in Section A. You will need to answer the first question in each section, but you may not need to answer all the questions in every section. You may be able to skip most of some sections. We have designed the questionnaire with special instructions in red beside responses which allow you to skip one or more questions. Follow these instructions when they apply to you.

Read carefully each question you answer. It is important that you follow the directions for responding, which are:
- (Circle one.)
- (Circle as many as apply.)
- (Circle one number on each line.)

Sometimes you are asked to fill in a blank—in these cases, simply write your response on the line provided.

Where you are asked to circle a number, make a heavy circle. Here is an example:

Why did you leave high school? (Circle one number on each line.)

- Graduated.......................... 1
- Entered college...................... 2
- Went to work........................ 1

Many questions ask what you were doing during a specific time period; for example, "What were you doing during the first week of October 1976?" Because it has been two years since we last heard from you, we also ask some questions about what you were doing in 1975. As you go through the questionnaire, please watch for these time references and make sure you are thinking about the correct time period for each question.

This questionnaire is authorized by law 20 USC 1221e-1.

The Federal Privacy Act of 1974 requires that each survey respondent be informed of the following:
(1) Solicitation of information about the respondent as detailed in the questionnaire is authorized by Section 415 of the General Education Provisions Act as amended (20 USC 1226b).
(2) Disclosure of this information by the respondent is subject to no penalty for not providing all or any part of the requested information.
(3) The purpose for which this information is to be used is to provide statistics on a national sample of students as they move out of the American high school system into the critical years of early adulthood and relate these statistics to postsecondary educational costs and financial aid and other factors on the educational, work, and career choices of young adults.
(4) The routine uses of these data will be statistical in nature as detailed in 9 in Appendix B of the Departmental Regulations (45 CRF 56) published in the Federal Register, Vol. 40, No. 196, October 8, 1975.

When you complete this questionnaire, please place it in the post-paid, addressed envelope provided and mail it to:

O.M.B. No. 051-S-76038
APPROVAL EXPIRES DECEMBER 31, 1980

NATIONAL LONGITUDINAL STUDY OF THE HIGH SCHOOL CLASS OF 1972

Fourth Follow-Up Questionnaire
GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

This questionnaire is divided into the following seven sections:

A. General Information
B. Work Experience
C. Education and Training
D. Military Service
E. Family Status
F. Experiences and Opinions
G. Background Information

Start by answering questions in Section A. You will need to answer the first question in each section, but you may not need to answer all the questions in every section. You may be able to skip most of some sections. We have designed the questionnaire with special instructions in red beside responses which allow you to skip one or more questions. Follow these instructions when they apply to you.

Read carefully each question you answer. It is important that you follow the directions for responding, which are:

• (Circle one.)
• (Circle as many as apply.)
• (Circle one number on each line.)

Sometimes you are asked to fill in a blank — in these cases, simply write your response on the line provided.

Where you are asked to circle a number, make a heavy circle. Here is an example:

Why did you leave high school? (Circle one number on each line.)

- Graduated
- Entered college
- Went to work

Many questions ask what you were doing during a specific time period; for example, "What were you doing during the first week of October 1979?" Because it has been three years since we last heard from you, we also ask some questions about what you were doing in 1977 and 1978. As you go through the questionnaire, please watch for these time references and make sure you are thinking about the correct time period for each question.

This questionnaire is authorized by law 20 USC 1221e-1.

The Federal Privacy Act of 1974 requires that each survey respondent be informed of the following:

1. Solicitation of information about the respondent as detailed in the questionnaire is authorized by Section 415 of the General Education Provisions Act as amended (20 USC 1226b).

2. The respondent is subject to no penalty for not providing all or any part of the requested information.

3. The purpose for which this information is to be used is to provide statistics on a national sample of students as they move out of the American high school system into the critical years of early adulthood and relate these statistics to postsecondary educational costs and financial aid and other factors on the educational, work, and career choices of young adults.

4. The routine uses of these data will be statistical in nature as detailed in 9 in Appendix B of the Department Regulations (45 CFR 6) published in the Federal Register, Vol. 40, No. 196, October 8, 1975.

When you complete this questionnaire, please place it in the post-paid, addressed envelope provided and mail it to:

SECTION B: WORK EXPERIENCE

In this section, we would like to find out about the jobs you have held, particularly in the three-year period from October 1976 through October 1979. Include full-time jobs, part-time jobs, apprenticeships, on-the-job training, military service and so on.

We are interested in learning about the kinds of jobs you have held, the hours you worked and your income from these jobs, the level of your job satisfaction, and the relation of your training and education to your work experience. This information will help us better understand the movement of young people into the world of work and the reasons for changes in job situations.

* 11. Since leaving high school, have you at any time held a job of any kind?

The Supplemental Questionnaire

NATIONAL LONGITUDINAL STUDY OF THE HIGH SCHOOL CLASS OF 1972

Prepared for the
DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE
BY RESEARCH TRIANGLE INSTITUTE • RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, NORTH CAROLINA
GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

You heard from us for the first time in 1972 when you were about to graduate from high school. At that time we asked you about your plans for the future, and about how useful you thought your high school education had been. Since that time we've gotten back in touch with you three times to ask about how things are actually working out for you. Now we'd like to check in on you again.

What we're trying to do with the Supplementary Questionnaire is find the answers to certain questions about your work or your education that were not completed in your earlier questionnaires.

You will need to answer the first question in each section, but you may not need to answer all the questions in every section. You may be able to skip most of some sections. We have designed the questionnaire with special instructions beside responses which allow you to skip one or more questions. Follow these instructions when they apply to you.

Read carefully each question you answer. It is important that you follow the directions for responding, which are:
- (Circle one.)
- (Circle as many as apply.)
- (Circle one number on each line.)

Sometimes you are asked to fill in a blank—in these cases, simply write your response on the line provided. Where you are asked to circle a number, make a heavy circle. Here is an example:

Why did you leave high school?  (Circle one number on each line.)

Many questions ask what you were doing during a specific time period; for example, "What were you doing during the first week of October 1976?" As you go through the questionnaire, please watch for these time references and make sure you are thinking about the correct time period for each question.

This questionnaire is authorized by law 20 USC 1221e-1.

The Federal Privacy Act of 1974 requires that each survey respondent be informed of the following:
1. Solicitation of information about the respondent as detailed in the questionnaire is authorized by Section 415 of the General Education Provisions Act as amended (20 USC 1226b).
2. The respondent is subject to no penalty for not providing all or any part of the requested information.
3. The purpose for which this information is to be used is to provide statistics on a national sample of students as they move out of the American high school system into the critical years of early adulthood and relate these statistics to postsecondary educational costs and financial aid and other factors on the educational, work, and career choices of young adults.
4. The routine uses of these data will be statistical in nature as detailed in 9 in Appendix B of the Departmental Regulations (45 CRF 56) published in the Federal Register, Vol. 40, No. 196, October 8, 1975.

When you complete this questionnaire, please place it in the post-paid, addressed envelope and mail it to:
