ABSTRACT

This self-instructional module, the ninth in a series of 16 on techniques for coordinating work experience programs, deals with evaluating on-the-job training. Addressed in the module are the purpose of and procedures for evaluating students' on-the-job training and procedures for conducting evaluation interviews to discuss students' on-the-job training. The module contains a series of pretests and learning activities, a guide sheet for a videotape presentation of student evaluation, a posttest, answers to the pretests and posttest, and a list of additional resources. Also provided are sample forms for use in evaluating student performance in a variety of cooperative vocational education programs. A guide for planning an on-the-job training evaluation interview for vocational students is appended to the module. (MN)
This module contains three major parts:

1. Material on the procedures for evaluating a vocational student's on-the-job training performance.

2. Sample evaluation instruments for completing on-the-job training evaluations.

3. A video-tape presentation showing an evaluation interview.

Prerequisite for module: None

When you have completed the module, you will:

GOAL 1: Know the purposes of and procedures for evaluating students' on-the-job training

GOAL 2: Be able to conduct an evaluation interview to discuss a student's on-the-job training.

To begin this self-instructional module, please turn to the pre-test on page 2.
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The Work Experience Modules were developed by Work Experience teacher-coordinators, Vocational Education teacher-coordinators, University teacher educators, and Special Needs consultants in Iowa. Funding for the coordination techniques project was provided through grants from Iowa Department of Public Instruction, Career Education Division.

The modules were written by:

Module 1: Values of Cooperative Training - Dr. Steven Corbin
Module 2: Coordination Techniques - Dr. Jim Burrow and Dr. Roger Ditzenberger
Module 3: Obtaining a Training Station - Mrs. Bonnie Schmalle
Module 4: Placement Procedures and Counseling Students for Job Application - Mr. John Kidney Module 5: Training Agreements - Dr. Jack Reed
Module 6: Student Orientation for On-the-Job Training - Mrs. Sue Hahn
Module 7: Responsibilities of the Teacher-Coordinator and Training Sponsor in Providing On-the-Job Training - Dr. Jack Reed
Module 8: Developing and Implementing Training Plans - Dr. Jim Burrow
Module 9: Evaluating On-the-Job Training - Dr. Jim Burrow and Dr. Roger Ditzenberger
Module 10: Establishing an Advisory Committee - Dr. Del Shepard and Dr. Jim Burrow
Module 11: Federal and State Employment Laws - Mr. John Kidney
Module 12: Regular Coordination Activities - Dr. Jim Burrow
Module 13: Vocational Student Organizations - Dr. Dennis Wubbena and Dr. Jim Burrow
Module 14: Vocational Assessment - Dr. William Callahan
Module 15: Support Services - Mr. John Struck
Module 16: Affirmative Action - Dr. Carl Shawhan and Dr. Ray Morley

The Work Experience Advisory Committee designed the coordination techniques model and developed the module titles and goals. The committee was also extensively involved in editing each module and suggested additions, corrections, and revisions. The Work Experience Advisory Committee included:

Dr. Roger Ditzenberger - Project Co-Director
Dr. Jim Burrow - Project Co-Director
Dr. Ray Morley - Project Consultant
Dr. William Callahan - Advisory Committee Member
Mr. Larry Esk - Advisory Committee Member
Mr. Ed O'Leary - Advisory Committee Member
Mrs. Bonnie Schmalle - Advisory Committee Member
Mr. John Struck - Advisory Committee Member

The modules have been field-tested by over 250 teachers in Special Education and over 200 pre-service students in Special Education and Vocational Education.

Production of the modules was coordinated by Ms. Linda Welton. Modules were typed, edited, and assembled by Ms. Linda Welton, Ms. Julie Adams, and Ms. Kris Eichelberger.

PRE-TEST: GOAL 1

KNOW THE PURPOSES OF AND PROCEDURES FOR EVALUATING STUDENTS' ON-THE-JOB TRAINING

DIRECTIONS: If you wish to attempt the module assessment, complete the questions for the pre-test. If you do not wish to take the pre-test, turn to page 3 to begin the Learning Activities.

1. What is the main purpose of evaluating students' on-the-job training other than grading?

2. Why should evaluation occur on a regular basis during the student's work experience?

3. What are the roles of the training sponsor and the teacher-coordinator in the evaluation process?

DIRECTIONS: When finished with the pre-test, please turn to page 21 and compare your answers with the pre-test key. If you missed any questions, read the material on pages 2-12.
INTRODUCTION:

The cooperative work experience program has several goals. The program is organized to: assist the student in developing academic, social, and personal skills needed to live as a productive member of society; provide an opportunity for the student to receive exploratory work experiences; provide an opportunity for the student to develop work habits and personality traits needed in a job; and provide an opportunity for the student to develop basic job skills as well as other skills needed to be successful in an occupation.

The cooperative work experience program, to achieve these goals, must provide its students with actual job experiences. On-the-job training allows the student to develop employment skills in a supervised work setting. In order for the training experience to be successful, the work experience teacher-coordinator must carefully plan, organize, and evaluate the work experience student's on-the-job training.

After the work experience teacher-coordinator develops the training plan in cooperation with the training sponsor, the student needs to be evaluated on a regular basis to determine if progress is being made toward developing the specific job skills. The work experience teacher-coordinator should develop an evaluation procedure that will measure the student's performance and will provide the student with information on current strengths and areas where improvement is needed.
DEVELOPING A SYSTEM FOR EVALUATION

In developing an evaluation system, the teacher-coordinator must determine the purpose of the evaluation, what needs to be evaluated, when evaluation should occur, and how to evaluate the student.

PURPOSE OF EVALUATION:

Evaluation in education is very often tied to the grading process. When a student's on-the-job training is evaluated, the evaluation is usually used to determine a grade as well. While evaluation for grading is necessary, it is important to realize that evaluation has other uses in the cooperative program. It can provide the student, the teacher-coordinator and the training sponsor with information that will be helpful in planning future instruction. The evaluation form should identify the personality traits, work habits, work adjustment skills, and basic skills needed for success in a job. The training sponsor in evaluating the student's performance is identifying which skills the student perform well and which skills the student needs to improve. The training sponsor can use the information from the completed evaluation form to assist the student in improving specific job skills. The training sponsor can also inform the teacher which skills need improvement so individual classroom instruction may be provided the student. Of course, the purpose of conducting evaluations of students' on-the-job training must be specifically identified before anything else is begun. The structure and content of the evaluation form, the procedures used, and the use of the evaluation information may change based on the purpose of the evaluation. The teacher-coordinator should carefully consider why evaluation is needed, then state the purposes clearly so that students and employers will understand and support the evaluation procedures.

WHAT TO EVALUATE:

The goals and objectives of the work experience program will provide information on what to evaluate. Since the purpose of the work experience program is to develop work adjustment skills and specific employment skills, these skills will need to be evaluated. In addition, the student's basic job skills, social and communications skills should be measured. Most teacher-coordinators also evaluate the personality traits, work habits, and attitudes of the student.

WHEN TO EVALUATE:

Evaluation should occur on a regular basis. Students need to be evaluated often enough to receive reinforcement from the evaluation. Frequent evaluation will emphasize positive behavior and effective job performance, and will encourage the students to continue that effective performance. In addition, skills that require improvement can be corrected before they seriously affect student performance. A performance evaluation should be completed at least every five to nine weeks if it is to be most useful to the student and the employer.
HOW TO EVALUATE:

The evaluation will be completed by the training sponsor. The training sponsor is in the best position to objectively evaluate the student's job performance. However, the teacher-coordinator must structure the evaluation process by developing a procedure, providing evaluation materials, and scheduling and conducting an evaluation interview with the student and the training sponsor after the evaluation form has been completed.

PROCEDURES FOR EVALUATION:

The following procedures should be followed in evaluating the student's on-the-job training:

1. Identify what is to be evaluated. An important purpose of the work experience program is to develop the job skills of each student. Of course those skills should be evaluated. Job analysis or competency studies can be used to identify the important skills of particular jobs. The teacher coordinator can also discuss the job skills with advisory committee members and training sponsors.

In addition to basic and technical job skills, the work habits, attitudes and personality traits needed for job success should be evaluated. Attendance, appearance, cooperation, dependability, etc. are important in many jobs. If they are necessary for job success, they should be evaluated. However, the teacher-coordinator should be careful not to include items that are unrelated to the job.

2. Select or develop an evaluation form. The form to be used in evaluation should be carefully selected. Since the form will be used by business people and students, as well as the teacher, it must be quite easy to understand and use. Also the form should allow the student's performance to be evaluated as completely as possible.

A variety of evaluation formats are used to measure student performance on-the-job. They range from detailed competency lists of each skill needed by an individual student to a general work-habit list that is appropriate for all students in a work experience program.
Several examples of evaluation forms are shown on pages 8-12.

When selecting a form, the teacher-coordinator should look for one that will be as objective as possible. Typically, ratings given only by a numerical ranking, percentage, or letter grade are quite subjective. Forms that give descriptive ratings will be more objective and provide meaningful information on the strengths of the student as well as areas needing improvement.

After examining several evaluation forms, the teacher-coordinator may choose to develop a new evaluation form or modify one to make it more useful for the specific program. It is always helpful, whether the evaluation form is new or modified, to have the advisory committee review the form for completeness and clarity.

3. Explain evaluation procedures. As students are accepted into the work experience program, and as training sponsors are identified to work with the student, the evaluation procedures should be explained to each one. Evaluation is an important element in the effectiveness of on-the-job training. Students and training sponsors must understand and be willing to use the evaluation process.

At the beginning of the year, the teacher-coordinator should talk with each student and training sponsor about the purpose of evaluation, the form that will be used, how the evaluations will be conducted, when evaluations will be scheduled, and how the evaluation information will be used. An application interview or classtime could be used to inform students of the procedures. Training sponsors should be given the information at one of their first meetings with the coordinator. Procedures should be summarized in a Training Guide, or a brochure, or on the evaluation form itself for the future reference of training sponsors and students.

4. Take evaluation forms to training sponsors. As the time for evaluations to be completed nears, the teacher-coordinator should prepare the students and training sponsors for the process. At the time of the first evaluation, the coordinator should review the procedure and evaluation form with the students. This may be the first job evaluation for many students, and they may have many questions and concerns. The student should understand that the purpose of the evaluation is to identify their job strengths as well as areas of needed improvement. They should understand that job criticism is given for the purpose of improving their job performance and should not be taken as personal criticism.
The teacher-coordinator should take the evaluation forms to the training sponsor each time — they should not be mailed. Personal delivery stresses the importance of evaluation. It allows the coordinator to review the procedure with the training sponsor and to emphasize important skills to be evaluated. In addition a specific time for an evaluation conference can be scheduled. This coordination call need not be lengthy, but it is very important!

5. Schedule and conduct the evaluation interview. The evaluation is conducted to identify strengths and areas of needed improvement for the student. Information obtained through the evaluation is used to structure the next on-the-job training period. To insure that everyone understands the ratings and participates in the training process, an evaluation interview should be scheduled. The interview will include the student, the training sponsor, and the teacher-coordinator.

An evaluation interview often has a negative image. This is due in large part to the problems people have in giving and receiving criticism. Since this evaluation is a part of a training program and not related to promotion or pay decisions, much of the negative image should be removed. If the teacher-coordinator observes some negative reactions to the conference from the student or training sponsor, time should be spent in reviewing the value of the interview and procedures to be used in the interview. Make sure the student understands that the purpose of the evaluation is to assist the student in becoming an effective employee. Criticisms are made to help the student improve their on-the-job training performance.

The teacher-coordinator should control the evaluation interview to insure a positive atmosphere is maintained. Important strengths and weaknesses should be discussed, and plans should be developed for the next training period. Each participant should be given ample opportunity to discuss the evaluation items.

A careful record should be kept of the evaluation interview, particularly if information was discussed that was not included on the evaluation form. It may be useful for the coordinator to meet individually with the student and the training sponsor in case there is information that either wishes not to share with the other.

SELF-CHECK

1. Using the sample evaluation forms on pages 8-12 or other sources of information, develop an evaluation form to be used in your work experience program.

2. Using an audio-tape recorder, record a description of the evaluation procedures you will use in your program. Assume the information is being prepared for a new training sponsor; prepare a one-page brochure to be given to a training sponsor that describes the evaluation procedures.

DIRECTIONS: When finished compare your answers with the information on pages 3-12. If you would like additional information, please turn to the Additional Resources listed on page 24.
PRE-TEST: GOAL 2

BE ABLE TO CONDUCT AN EVALUATION INTERVIEW TO DISCUSS A STUDENT'S ON-THE-JOB TRAINING

DIRECTIONS: If you wish to attempt the module assessment, complete the questions for the pre-test. If not, turn to page 15 to begin the Learning Activities.

1. What should the teacher-coordinator do to prepare for the evaluation interview?

2. What are the three major determinants of a successful evaluation interview?

3. What should the student's role be in the evaluation interview?

4. How should the training plan be used in the evaluation interview?

DIRECTIONS: When finished with the pre-test, turn to page 21 and compare your answers with the pre-test key. If you missed any of the questions, complete the learning activities.
GOAL 2: BE ABLE TO CONDUCT AN EVALUATION INTERVIEW TO DISCUSS A STUDENT'S ON-THE-JOB TRAINING

DIRECTIONS: Please read the information on pages 15-18 and watch the video tape presentation of an evaluation interview. Then complete the post-test item on page 20.

INTRODUCTION:

The evaluation process is not complete until a conference has been held to discuss the evaluation. The conference provides an opportunity for the training sponsor, the student, and the teacher-coordinator to discuss the student's performance and to plan for the next training period.

If the evaluation process is not carefully controlled, it can become a very negative experience for the student and the training sponsor. The evaluation interview provides an excellent opportunity for the teacher-coordinator to show the value of the evaluation process as well as to create a positive atmosphere.

It is often difficult for the student to interpret the evaluation form without some discussion. The training sponsor can usually provide more information about the student's performance through an interview than is possible using the evaluation form alone. On-the-job training can be improved if each person involved carefully reviews and discusses the strengths and weaknesses of the student's performance and agrees on methods for improving performance.

Planning the Evaluation Interview

The teacher-coordinator is responsible for planning and implementing the entire evaluation process including the evaluation interview. The interview should be scheduled as soon as possible after the training sponsor has completed the evaluation form. A time can be established that is convenient for both the training sponsor and the student.
Ample time should be available so no one feels pressured to hurry through the interview. A location should be available so that it is free from distractions and interruptions and provides a relaxed atmosphere.

The teacher-coordinator must take care in preparing the student and the training sponsor for the first interview. Most students have never had their job performance evaluated and many training sponsors have never participated in evaluation conferences. Both may be apprehensive about the interview and unsure of how the interview will be conducted. To reduce the apprehension, the teacher-coordinator should make sure that each person understands the purpose of the evaluation process -- to improve the student's performance. Also, the teacher should discuss the interview procedures with each student and training sponsor prior to the conference and answer all questions. If the first evaluation interview is positive and successful for the student and the training sponsor, future conferences will be much easier.

CONDUCTING THE EVALUATION INTERVIEW

The major determinants of a successful interview are (1) the atmosphere, (2) content, and (3) outcomes. The teacher-coordinator must maintain a positive, comfortable atmosphere, keep discussion directed toward the evaluation of the student's job performance, and ensure that the interview is completed by establishing goals for the next training period.

Atmosphere. The interview provides an opportunity for the exchange of information about the student's performance on the job. The result of that exchange should provide for recognition of student successes as well as improvement of performance.

The teacher-coordinator cannot assume that the interview will be a positive, comfortable experience. Careful planning must be done to insure the success of the interview. Before the interview, the teacher should review the evaluation form to determine how the training sponsor has rated the student's performance. At the same time, the teacher must determine the appropriate counseling methods to use in conducting the interview. If a directive style is used, the student is told rather specifically what changes in performance are expected. A non-directive style allows more student participation in determining areas of improvement needed and how that improvement will be accomplished. The objectives and expected outcomes of the interview should be outlined before the interview to ensure that all information will be discussed.

When the interview begins, the first few minutes should be spent putting the student at ease. Then the purpose of the session and the evaluation form should be briefly reviewed.
Content. The evaluation interview is an opportunity for the full discussion of the student's on-the-job training experience. The feelings of the student are just as important as the facts. The interview must not be dominated by either the teacher-coordinator or the training sponsor. The student must be given the opportunity to discuss the job, strengths as well as problems, and ways the student believes improvement can be made. The teacher must encourage student participation during the interview. This can be done by asking questions listening, supporting the student's statements, and keeping criticism at a minimum.

Since the purpose of evaluating is to measure student progress, much of the interview time should be spent reviewing successful performance and areas where the student has shown the most noticeable improvement. Areas where improvement is needed must be discussed but should not dominate the interview. When problems are discussed, the focus should remain on how the student can improve performance rather than the problem itself. The entire evaluation form should be reviewed, but the majority of the interview time should be devoted to a discussion of student success, important strengths, and methods of improving performance during the next training period.

Outcomes. The teacher-coordinator must be confident that the student's performance has been thoroughly discussed and there is general agreement on the performance. Then attention can be focused on the next training period. Before the interview is completed, plans for that period should be developed and agreed upon.

The Training Plan provides a useful format for completing the evaluation process. The plan can be reviewed and updated based on the results of the evaluation. In addition, the teacher-coordinator can identify related classroom instruction that may help the student improve performance. Specific activities can be identified to be accomplished during the next training period.

The student should actively participate in this planning. Interest in the training should increase if the student becomes involved in the process. Since the student has experience in the business, his or her suggestions can be very valuable in improving the training. In addition, the student can more clearly see the relationship between the evaluation just completed and the next training period. Cooperation and enthusiasm should result. In order to achieve these benefits, however, the student must do more than observe. The teacher-coordinator and training sponsor must encourage the student to participate.

TEN COMMANDMENTS FOR CONDUCTING AN EVALUATION OF THE STUDENT'S ON-THE-JOB TRAINING PERFORMANCE

The evaluation interview is an important part of the evaluation process. The evaluation interview, however, is a difficult procedure for many business people, managers, or supervisors to conduct. The teacher-coordinator must carefully plan each interview to make sure that it provides an opportunity for the discussion of the student's performance. Atmosphere and content should be carefully controlled. However, the teacher-coordinator should not dominate the interview, but encourage the student and training sponsor to discuss the evaluation. The following ideas should prove beneficial in making the evaluation interview a positive experience for the student:
1. Make sure the interview is conducted in a quiet, private place, which is free of annoying interruptions.

2. Plan for the evaluation interview. (See Appendix for planning form.)

3. Explain that the purpose of the evaluation interview is to measure student progress and to identify performance or skills which are performed well and those skills which need improvement. Make sure the student realizes that the purpose of the interview is to assist him/her in improving on-the-job training performance.

4. Start the interview by putting the student at ease. Remain calm regardless of student attitude or student behavior.

5. Start the interview with positive comments about skills the student performs well.

6. LISTEN TO THE STUDENT -- part of the purpose of the evaluation interview is to gain information or learn more about the student's attitude toward the on-the-job training. The student should be given the opportunity to discuss strengths and areas of needed improvement, as well as discuss means of improving performance.

7. CORRECT ACTIONS -- DON'T ATTACK THE STUDENT -- The evaluation interview should center on an evaluation of the student's performance of the basic job skills, work adjustment skills, human relations skills, and specific job skills needed to be successful in an occupation. Talk about objective job-skill performance, NOT about subjective factors.

8. OFFER ENCOURAGEMENT -- Make sure the student understands that you believe he/she does more things right than wrong. Offer sincere compliments when the student's performance merits your positive reinforcements. When the student needs to improve a skill, make sure you provide suggestions and/or instructions on how to improve their performance.

9. LEAVE THE STUDENT ANXIOUS TO IMPROVE -- Make sure the student realizes that you are not attacking him/her. Help the student identify ways they can improve the on-the-job training performance.

10. PLAN FOR FOLLOW UP PROCEDURES -- Suggest how the student will receive instruction to improve -- classroom instruction from the teacher-coordinator or specific job instruction from the training sponsor. Give the student specific instruction on the why, how, and when for improving.

The evaluation interview is not complete until plans have been developed and agreed upon for the next training period. When the evaluation interview is completed successfully, on-the-job training will be more effective in the future.
GUIDESHEET FOR THE VIDEOTAPE
EVALUATING STUDENT ON-THE-JOB TRAINING

1. How did the training sponsor and teacher-coordinator prepare for the 3-way evaluation conference?

2. How did the teacher-coordinator put the student at ease?

3. What was the role of the training sponsor during the conference?

4. What was the role of the teacher coordinator?

5. What plans were made for the next training period?

DIRECTIONS: When you have completed this guide-sheet, please turn to page 20 for the post-test. If you feel you need additional information before attempting the post-test, turn to the Additional Resources on page 24.
POST-TEST

1. What is the main purpose of evaluating the student's on-the-job training?

2. List at least five procedures which should be followed in evaluating the student's on-the-job training.

3. Outline ten techniques for correcting which may assist you in conducting the evaluation interview.
GOAL 1

1. What is the major purpose of evaluating students' on-the-job training other than grading?

Evaluation should provide the teacher, student, and training sponsor with information on the strengths and areas of needed improvement for the student. The information can be used to help structure the next training period.

2. Why should evaluation occur on a regular basis during a student's work experience?

Students need to be evaluated often enough to receive reinforcement from the evaluation. It can emphasize positive behavior and correct problems before they become serious.

3. What are the roles of the training sponsor and the teacher-coordinator in the evaluation process?

The training sponsor completes the evaluation form and participates in the evaluation interview with the student and the teacher-coordinator. The teacher-coordinator develops an evaluation procedure, provides evaluation materials, and schedules and conducts an evaluation interview with the student and the training sponsor.

1. Identify what is to be evaluated.
2. Select or develop an evaluation form.
3. Explain evaluation procedures.
4. Take evaluation forms to training sponsors.
5. Schedule and conduct the evaluation interview.

GOAL 2

1. What should the teacher-coordinator do to prepare for the evaluation interview?
   a. Schedule the interview as soon as possible after the evaluation is completed.
   b. Schedule a time that is convenient for everyone and allows enough time for a full discussion.
   c. Review procedures with the student and the training sponsor and answer any questions.

2. What are the three major determinants of a successful evaluation interview?
   Atmosphere, content, and outcomes
1. What should the student's role be in the evaluation interview?

   The student should take an active part in the interview. He or she should be encouraged to discuss the evaluation, supply additional information to be considered, and suggest ways to improve the training experience.

   When the next training period is being planned, the student should also participate. In this way the student can see the relationship between the evaluation and training and should become more interested in the training.

2. How should the training plan be used in the evaluation interview?

   The Training Plan can be used to plan for the next training period at the end of the interview. It should be reviewed and updated on the basis of the results of the evaluation.
1. What is the main purpose of evaluating the student's on-the-job training?

To provide the teacher, student, and training sponsor with information on the student's strengths and areas of needed improvement.

2. List at least five procedures which should be followed in evaluating the student's on-the-job training:

1. Identify what is to be evaluated
2. Select or develop an evaluation form
3. Explain evaluation procedures to the training sponsor and the student.
4. Take evaluation forms to the training sponsor.
5. Schedule and conduct the evaluation interview.

3. Outline ten techniques for correcting which may assist you in conducting the evaluation interview:

1. Make sure the interview is conducted in a quiet, private place free from interruptions.
2. Plan for the evaluation interview.
3. Explain the purpose of the interview to the student.
4. Start the interview by putting the student at ease.
5. Start the interview with positive comments about the student's on-the-job training performance.
6. Listen to the student.
7. Correct actions -- don't attack the student.
8. Offer encouragement.
9. Leave the student anxious to improve.
