The foreign language camps, operated by Virginia Tech since 1981, offer high school students a one-week foreign language experience in French, German, or Spanish. The camps bring together native speakers, high school students and teachers, and university students and faculty to experience learning situations similar to those encountered in a foreign country. The participants, staff, facilities, activities, schedule, and funding are described. Activities include conversation groups, folk singing and dancing, hiking, sports, drama, games, and films. Application forms, a sample syllabus, schedules, activity group materials, diplomas, evaluation forms, publicity materials, a teacher packet, and a proposed budget are appended. (Author/RW)

ABSTRACT

Although Foreign Language Camps have operated for several decades in various parts of the United States, there is still a need for more regional camps that can provide high quality learning experiences in the target language at a cost that is within the reach of most families. The Foreign Language Camps at Virginia Tech have operated since 1981 in order to provide such a week-long experience in French, German, and Spanish. The Camps bring native speakers, high school students and teachers, and university faculty and students together to experience learning situations much like those they would encounter if they were to visit countries where the languages are spoken. This report describes the Camps in detail and provides instructional and organizational information for readers who may wish to establish their own Foreign Language Camps.
Introduction

The Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures at Virginia Tech offers a one-week summer camp experience in French, German and Spanish, held on the campus in Blacksburg, Va. The Foreign Language Camps provide an informal environment in which high school students, ages 13-17, may acquire greater fluency in the language they study in school. All students have at least one year of language study, and some have four or five years of study. The Camps provide experiences that are appropriate to the student's level of language expertise, and challenge students in language activities slightly beyond their current level.

Origins and Purpose

The Camps were initiated in 1981, and grew out of an interest expressed by high school teachers in southwest Virginia at an inservice class entitled "Updating the Foreign Language Classroom," taught by Dr. Kathy Heilenman, Assistant Professor in the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures. Dr. Herman K. Doswald, Head of the Department, had experience in such camps at the University of Kansas and provided complete financial and inspirational support for the Camps. The first Camps operated in the summer of 1981, with Dr. Heilenman as Director. In 1982 Dr.
Judith Shrum directed the camps and Dr. Heilenman assisted. Beginning in 1983 the camps will be directed by Dr. Shrum.

Since their inception, the camps have had a twofold purpose:

1. To provide informal task-oriented opportunities for interaction in the target language for high school students, high school teachers, university faculty, and native speakers;

2. To provide these opportunities at a cost that is within the reach of nearly all Virginia foreign language students.

One of the hoped-for effects of the Camps is that the enthusiasm for foreign language study and the sense of its reality be carried back to the high school and university classroom, and that native speakers of the target-language and native speakers of English learn to appreciate each other as individuals and as members of a particular cultural-linguistic group.

Participants

Campers. An average of 140 high school students from all over Virginia and nearby states participate in the Camps. Generally, 49% of the campers are French students, 11% are German students, and 40% are Spanish students.
Forty-five percent of the campers have studied one year of the target language, while 34% have studied two years, and 21% have studied three or more years. The age group most frequently represented at the camps is 13-15 years, and most campers are female.

Campers are selected on a space availability basis. In January, high schools receive camp applications (Appendix A) and information. Early completion of the application and a nonrefundable deposit ensure the applicant of a place in the Camps. All campers must have the recommendation of their foreign language teacher, permission of their parent(s) or guardian(s), and at least one year of study in the language for which they enroll in the Camps.

Loyalty to the Camps develops among campers who attend in consecutive summers. The junior counselor position was devised in order to accommodate campers who ask about ways they can continue to work with the Camps once they are 17 years of age or older. Requirements are that the applicant must be at least 17 years of age, have three or more years of language study, and have a good record as a former camper. The junior counselors are considered semi-staff campers in that they pay the regular fee, but they arrive two-and-a-half days before the other campers to participate in the staff planning days. Their expenses for those days are met by the Camps, and the junior counselors thus may... take advantage of the added target-language interaction among staff.

Staff

University Students. Student counselors are university students in their third and fourth years of university-level language study. Six to ten student counselors work with the Camps as assistant leaders of conversation groups or activity groups. University students often hold dormitory counselor positions, or direct the sports program for the Camps. As part of their duties, university students must develop and implement instructional plans in cooperation with the Camp Director, the native speakers, and the high school teachers. Often these students have had experience abroad or are native or near-native speakers, so that they can serve as resource persons for campers. They also know the University well, and can assist high school teachers and native speakers with problems in locating facilities and resources on campus. Their greatest contribution to the Camps is that they provide realistic role models, not too far removed in age, for the campers. A week interacting with a university junior or senior who demonstrates moderate fluency in and enthusiasm for the target language can have a considerable influence on career and study choices of high-school-aged campers.
Student counselors are selected on the basis of a Staff Application (Appendix B), an interview with the Camp Director, and on the verbal recommendation of their University language professor(s). Student counselors are hand-picked for their enthusiasm for language study in general and camp participation in particular, their willingness to work with youngsters and most importantly, for their advanced ability in the target language. Student counselors are rewarded for their efforts with three credits earned in a senior-level Field Studies course. Through the cooperative efforts of the Department of Foreign Language and Literatures and the Division of Curriculum and Instruction, earned credit can be applied to the major and minor programs of study in both the College of Arts and Sciences and the College of Education. A sample syllabus for the course appears in Appendix C.

High School Teachers

Six to ten high school teachers participate in the camps each year. Teachers are selected on the basis of a Staff Application (Appendix B), or the verbal recommendation of their principal or foreign language supervisor, and on the basis of an interview with the Camp Director (sometimes by telephone). High School teachers serve as counselors and live in the dormitory with the campers. They bear the primary responsibility for preparation and implementation of instructional plans for conversation groups and activity groups. Once their level of language expertise has been determined, they work with the Camp Director to plan daily events in the conversation groups. In addition, they provide learning experiences for campers in an activity where they have special knowledge or preparation. For example, a teacher who likes French cuisine will plan daily experiences for students in the Cuisine activity group. Experiences might include vocabulary enrichment through recipe selection, a shopping trip, actual preparation of meals and dining. Teachers are given a budget amount when their activity group is assigned to them and the Camp Director works closely with them as they plan their daily activities to ensure meaningful learning experiences for campers. The teachers may be assisted by a student counselor and each has a native speaker assistant. Focusing on the task of teaching a cuisine unit leads to more natural target language interaction among the native speaker, the teacher, and the student counselor.

Teachers also assume supervisory duties during all hours of the Camp day. A relaxed environment changes the usual "supervision" into "accompaniment" as campers and teacher-counselors, students and native speakers all enjoy each others' company and work together in the target language. For instance, the teacher-counselor who supervises the volleyball tournaments is far more than a supervisor. He plays on a camper team, he stoves his fingers as do other team members. He, too, complains about missed shots in the target language. These are experiences beyond the second-language classroom for the campers as well as the teacher. Nevertheless, certain elements of these experiences can be carried back to the classroom by inventive, enthusiastic teachers and campers.

The rewards for teachers who participate in the Camps are tangible and intangible. Among the intangible rewards are the friendships formed with native speakers, university faculty and students, and campers. They have seen how campers blossom in their confidence to use the target language, and have a new tolerance for errors for the sake of communication. They have increased their own confidence in their language skills, and can encourage student efforts to communicate. They have experienced that magic time of realization that they've been speaking French all day without batting an eye. These rewards are nearly impossible to measure, but sure to improve the quality of that teacher's language classes.

Tangible rewards are most specifically the three noncollege inservice recertification credits earned. Teachers pay a minimal $40.00 processing fee for instruction and processing of credits. Forms used to obtain credit are in Appendix D. A second tangible reward for teachers is their room and board, which is provided by the Camps for the duration of the Camps and the precamp session.

Native Speakers. Native speakers generally live in the Blacksburg area, and are students or spouses of students at Virginia Tech. Some have been visitors to the United States who accepted the opportunity to get to know some American high school students and Camp staff, and to earn some money. Native speakers need not be exclusively from France, Germany, or Spain, but may be from Zaire, Switzerland, Colombia, or other countries where the target language is spoken. Native speakers are paid a salary of $200 for full participation in the Camps—ten days from 8 AM to 9 PM. A ratio of 1:15 native speaker to campers provides adequate interaction opportunity.

The native speakers are the crucial element in the success of the Camps. They share duties of planning and implementing daily events in conversation groups and activity groups. They are living reference sources for teachers and other staff on all topics from linguistics to children's games. They converse readily with staff and campers, and they must be involved in every aspect of the camp activities. Occasionally, they bring their native-speaking friends with them for evening soccer tournaments.
and films. These are the people who make French, German, and Spanish come alive for the campers.

Native speakers are selected on the basis of the Staff Application (Appendix B), and an interview with the Camp Director. Qualities sought are warmth of personality, interest and experience in working with high-school-aged youths, an eagerness to share their culture and language, and a high tolerance for error in pursuit of communication. Whenever possible, native-speaker language capabilities are sought in other staff, e.g. student counselors or high school teachers. Experience has illustrated that the active involvement of native speakers provides richer opportunities for language learning.

Teachers, native speakers, and student counselors arrive at the Camps two and a half days before the campers arrive. During this time they plan the last-minute details of the camps, preview films, set up the dormitory, and get to know each other. This is a period in which the staff learn of each others' strengths and how best to help one another. When the campers arrive, they have already begun to work together to accomplish significant tasks.

What Goes On

The Facilities: The Foreign Language campers are all housed in a dormitory on the Virginia Tech campus, and are separated by sex, and by language. Lobby areas are used for general camp meetings and for activity groups. Kitchenettes in the dormitory are used for cuisine activity groups. The dormitory study lounges are labeled "language rooms" for each camp and contain such things as games, records, posters, tapes, slide projectors, tape recorders, scissors, magic markers, magazines in the target language, candy made in France, Germany and Spain. Students gather in the language rooms for after-hours conversation and games in the target language. All conversation groups and most activity groups are held in the dormitory. Everything in the dormitories is labeled in all three languages -- doorknobs, mirrors, push-buttons on elevators, etc.

The events. The Camp week consists of arrival and check-in on Sunday; regular camp "classes" on Monday through Friday, a Kermesse carnival on Saturday afternoon, an awards/fun show Saturday night, and departure Sunday morning. A log format here facilitates explanation of the events.

Sunday, opening day (Appendix E). Students arrive from noon until 2:00 PM. They are met outside the dormitory by a counselor who shows the parents where to park and asks, "Which language?" When the camper answers, one of the waiting counselors who speak the indicated language greets the camper, asks her/his name, and escorts the student into the dorm lobby for registration. Tee-shirts are provided by the Camps and campers must identify themselves and request a shirt by size in the target language. Next, a counselor escorts the campers to their rooms and helps with luggage.

At 2:00 PM parents and campers meet in the lobby for welcoming remarks by the Director, introductions to Camp Staff, and a delineation of basic rules. After the parents depart, the counselors and native speakers conduct one-hour Campus Tours in the target language. Upon their return to the dormitory, ice-breakers and get-acquainted activities are conducted. Campers then have a few minutes to change clothes if they wish before going to dinner in the nearby dining hall.

After dinner there is an all-camp meeting to give students their schedules for the week, explain expectations, and give announcements. Curfew is at 11 PM and students must be in their rooms with lights out or in the language rooms.

Monday through Friday -- Conversation Groups. This is the most important event of a camper's learning experience. A teacher, assisted by a native speaker or a student counselor, leads students in conversation topics that are of interest to the students' lives. Teachers select relevant contexts and encourage students to: 1) say something that conveys information that is not obvious; 2) say something about themselves or someone they know; 3) express their own opinions; 4) be more concerned about expressing their thoughts in the target language than about mistakes. These groups are small (5-8 campers), specific to language level, and encourage participation and fun for all campers. Sample topics are:

Beginning Level: What are three things you like most about your friends (or the people at Camp) and explain why.

Advanced: Your rented car has run out of gas and you have walked four miles to a gas station in France (Germany or Spain), but you were so upset about running out of gas that you left your money in the car. You must convince the owner to trust you to take some gas to your car so you can drive back and pay him; or, describe the funniest thing that ever happened to you.

Monday through Friday -- The Activity Groups. The next "class" is an activity group: folk dancing, folk singing, cooking, arts and crafts, hiking, drama, microcomputers, quiet games, newspaper, tennis, or soccer. Each camper elects three activity groups that last one and one-half hours each. One is in the morning, and two more are in the afternoon. All activity groups are conducted in each of the languages. The size of the activity groups varies according to the activity, facilities and resources. Folk singing, for example, can have as many as 25 campers while cooking must be limited to a maximum of eight campers. Crucial elements of each activity are camper participation and use of the target language. Brief descriptions of the activities follow.

Folk dancing: Campers learn a dance each day. Inexpensive costumes have been assembled by Camp staff. The folk-dance counselor communicates with campers in advance and encourages campers to bring readily available elements of costumes, e.g. white shirts, black slacks or skirts, red scarves. Music is provided on tape by the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures and from the counselor's personal collections.

Folk singing: Campers learn at least three songs per day, and usually perform two or three selections at the awards/fun show on Saturday evening. This activity group frequently shares resources with the folk-dancing or the hiking group.

Hiking: Campers learn songs and practice story-telling techniques to pass time while hiking. They also learn places where hiking is done in countries where the target language is spoken. Vocabulary for equipment, hiking rules for behavior, and how to read trail signs are also important components of this activity. Campers take small hikes within walking distance of the Virginia Tech campus, and travel by van for two half-day hikes in the nearby Jefferson National Forest.
Arts and Crafts: Campers learn the vocabulary associated with the construction of hand-made items such as eyes-of-god, kiosks, pinatas, yarn painting, and bread-dough figurines. Each activity in this group must be some art or craft that is common in the country where the target language is spoken. The combination of target-language instruction and demonstration is an effective means of teaching. Campers describe their own actions and ask questions about how to accomplish parts of the tasks in the target language.

Drama: Campers produce two short plays, one that is commercially available and selected by the counselor in advance, and one that they write themselves during camp. One of these productions is part of the Saturday evening show. A review of the plays forms the basis for an article in the Camp newspaper. Campers also make their own props and may work with the arts and crafts activity group to produce backdrops, etc.

Microcomputers: Ten to fifteen campers in each language receive two hours of machine familiarization and explore software for French, German, and Spanish.

Quiet Games: Commercially available games like Loto and Mille Bornes have been purchased for the French, German and Spanish camps. Learning how to read directions and play the games is the object of this activity group.
addition, campers learn expressions like "It's your turn" and ways to object to a move or how to congratulate a player.

Newspaper: Campers conduct interviews, take photos, and make drawings that are incorporated in the newspaper for each language camp. They write articles, lay out the paper, type it, and reproduce it in time for distribution at the Saturday evening show.

Tennis: Campers learn vocabulary for the tennis courts, equipment, and scoring. They learn about famous tennis players who speak the target language and they play tennis in French, German, or Spanish with appropriate expressions that facilitate participation in the game. Sample materials for the tennis activity group appear in Appendix F.

Soccer: In this activity group, campers learn vocabulary for the soccer field, equipment, team members, and strategies for play. They learn about good soccer teams and players in target language countries and they practice skills to make them better players. There is a soccer game each evening leading to play-offs between the French Camp, German Camp, and Spanish Camp. All campers may play in the evening games but the members of this activity group have a greater level of expertise and serve as semi-coaches during the evening games.
Recreation. Planned recreation consists of the evening soccer games in which each language camp enters at least one team to compete against the other language camps. When "Peru" plays "Mexico," the target language on the field is consistently Spanish, but when "Peru" plays "Belgique," the mixture of French and Spanish creates some amusing encounters. The purpose of this activity is to provide an opportunity for physical exercise and, lamentably, use of the target languages is often less than desired. The soccer activity group described above is an effort to increase the amount of target language used during the soccer games and tournament.

Some campers prefer to play other sports than soccer, so volleyball, frisbee, frisbee-golf, ultimate frisbee, and softball are also available during the soccer games. Some students do not wish to actually participate in a sport, but are wonderful cheering sections for the teams that are playing.

Unplanned recreation activities include, swimming in the University pool. Campers generally have about an hour of free time daily to go to the pool, or the University bookstore, local shops, or the student center.

Evening activities. Besides the planned soccer games, campers attend an evening program that varies by language. At least two evenings are dedicated to foreign films.
Campers in German, for example, see a film in German without subtitles on two evenings; one film is appropriate for beginning campers, and one film for advanced campers. The University Film Series features international films during the week of the Camps. Campers sell and purchase foreign candy during the films also. All sales must be conducted in the target language. On other evenings, campers hear guest speakers describe bicycling tours of France, for example, or see slides of Chile, Peru, and Argentina, or view videotapes of television programs in France, Germany, or Spain.

In the event that injuries occur during these activities, the University Health Service provides medical care that is paid for through the Camp insurance. A medical form signed by campers' parent(s) and physician must be on file to alert camp staff and medical personnel of any physical conditions requiring attention.

Kermesse: On Saturday morning, campers prepare the booths that will be set up for Saturday afternoon's carnival, or Kermesse. Booths include typically North American Carnival events like a sponge-throw (counselors as targets), egg toss, sack races. Other events are from the target cultures: dancing contests with tomatoes held between the partners' foreheads, or leading blindfolded fellow campers through a maze using only the target language. A costume contest is held and pinatas made during the week.
broken. Cooking and crafts activity groups sell their products for "play" currency of the target countries.

During the Kermesse, staff also judge the labeling contest. Campers have been labeling items in the target languages in their rooms all week in anticipation of the prize to be awarded at the Awards/Fun Show for the room with the most items labeled.

Awards/Fun Show. Campers and counselors coordinate this presentation of skits, songs, and talent. Parents and other dignitaries are invited to attend this event that provides an opportunity for all three language groups to share with each other the most salient of their week's activities. During the week campers have experienced situations and personalities that they portray in humorous ways at the show. Products made by activity groups can be displayed. Camp staff present students with certificates for "Most Improved" and "Best Participation" at beginning, intermediate, and advanced levels for all three languages. The labeling awards are also presented. Awards consist of realia from target countries such as patches, small ceramic items, key chains, etc. Campers present awards to counselors for funny categories such as "Best Sponge Target." Each camper receives a diploma (Appendix G) at this time and completes an evaluation form for the language camp in which s/he participated (Appendix H).
Sunday. Campers must clean their rooms for inspection, turn in their keys to their counselor, and depart by 12:00 noon. If parents so request in person, campers may depart with their parents Saturday evening after the Awards/Fun Show. Camp staff remain on campus until 2:00 p.m. to clean up the dormitory and return materials and equipment to the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures.

Chronology

The first key to a successful Foreign Language Camp is personnel who speak the target language with ease and encourage campers to do likewise. The second key to success is planning. The following chronology is presented as a guide of what to do when planning a Foreign Language Camp.

October
(Year Preceding the Camp) Send out an announcement of the planned Camps (Appendix I). Attend conferences to publicize Camps, leave announcements in prominent places.

January
(of the year of the Camp) Mail a teacher packet (Appendix J) to each high school foreign language chairperson in the state and to those people who have written or phoned requesting materials.

February
Order films, T-shirts, realia and prizes, request facilities and services such as rooms, board, playing fields, vans, and invite special speakers.

March-May
Assemble applications for staff positions and campers, select staff, assign staff to conversation and activity groups, work with staff to develop daily activities and lists of materials needed, select scholarship winners and inform them of selection, send acceptance or rejection packets to campers and staff (Appendix K), set up schedule.

June

Purchase supplies requested by staff, except for perishables, send campers last minute packet (Appendix L), assign rooms and roommates, assign campers to staff and activity groups, purchase nametags.

July

Make last minute purchases and staff arrangements.

July 28-31

Staff planning days -- meet three times daily for three hours each session to complete planning, decorate dorm, make menu posters.

July 31-August 7

Camps

August 7-15

Clean-up, prepare evaluation summaries to send to staff and appropriate authorities

September

Write letters of recommendation for staff and thank you letters to the appropriate persons.

October

Begin preparation for next year's Camp.

Finances. Funds for the operation of the Foreign Language Camps at Virginia Tech come from three sources: camper fees, anonymous scholarship funds, cost-sharing by the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures and the Division of Curriculum and Instruction. Camper fees are $150.00 each and provide the main source of income for the Camps. This is a very low figure, and represents efforts to keep the cost of Camp participation within the reach of as many Virginians as possible. In addition, ten one-hundred dollar scholarships of two types are available: reward/incentive and financial need. These two types of scholarships reflect the values held by Camp staff that excellence should be rewarded, and financial need should not limit the opportunities among foreign language students.

The contributions of the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures and the Division of Curriculum and Instruction are in the form of one-course released time for the Camp Director (who holds a joint appointment in the two departments) and shared costs of copying, telephone and some supplies. As the Camps become more established, it is expected that all costs will be covered by the income from camper fees. The 1983 proposed budget appears in Appendix M.

Summary

The Foreign Language Camps at Virginia Tech represent a major commitment to the promotion of excellence in foreign language study by high school students from Virginia and neighboring states. They provide an opportunity for high school students, teachers, university faculty and students, and native speakers to interact in informal settings where use of the target language can occur naturally and easily.
Perhaps the best summary for a report as long and detailed as this are the statements of the campers: I really had a great time here. I really learned a lot. The camp really helped me with my speaking and understanding French. I especially enjoyed being able to converse in French. The native speakers were a great help because they persisted to speak in Français. I had a great time and I really think I improved my German.

SAMPLE SYLLABUS

I. Description of Course:

The development of second-language skills requires interaction with native speakers. The informal setting of the Summer Foreign Language Camps at Virginia Tech is a rich environment for students to work with native speakers on a daily basis in creation and implementation of learning experiences in the target language for high-school-age campers.

Further, one of the best ways to broaden cultural horizons is to work with French native speakers. Study abroad programs, courses with native-speaking professors, and language clubs are useful to the student, but continued exposure to the target language and its speakers is difficult to maintain. This course offers students an additional opportunity to learn about the target culture and its people.

Having successfully completed this course, the student will be better able to converse with native speakers in informal settings; prepare and use high school materials in the teaching of activities such as the culinary arts; and cooperate with high school teachers, native speakers, and university professors in planning and conducting a learning experience for secondary students.

A description of the proposed program must include the following (use separate sheets if needed):

PROJECT TITLE:

IN-SERVICE TRAINING -- FOREIGN LANGUAGE CAMPS AT VIRGINIA TECH

1. List the areas of need for in-service programs.
   Secondary teachers of foreign languages do not generally have training in the operation of foreign language camps or other informal arrangements where the foreign language is spoken. They are, in general, unfamiliar with techniques of setting up situations in which the foreign languages can be used by students, and are in need of situations in which they themselves can practice the foreign language.

2. List the objectives of this proposed program.
   1. To provide secondary foreign language teachers an opportunity to use the foreign language with native speakers, students, and University faculty.
   2. To assist them in creating situations in which the foreign language can be used freely.

3. Number of persons who will participate in the program 10-15 (If fewer than fifteen or more than forty, please justify).
   Teachers will live in dormitories with high school students during a week long Foreign Language Camp. There are 130 students; 10 to 15 teachers is the maximum we can accommodate.
   Teachers will spend 4 days prior to the arrival of students in-service and 4 hrs./day in analysis and re-planning and further instruction.

4. Describe the program. Be sure to include planned amount of instruction time per session, the number of sessions per week (or month), the beginning and ending dates, and a brief outline of the program.
   The first session will be the evening of July 28, 3-5 p.m. and 6-10 p.m. The remaining sessions will be three four-hour sessions per day July 29 and 30. Students will arrive on July 31 and teachers will implement what they have learned daily, for 16 hours per day July 31 - August 7. Approximately one-fourth of the time spent from July 31 - August 7 will be spent in analysis, replanning and further instruction.

5. State the plans for evaluation of this project when completed.
   The project will be evaluated using a Likert scale survey of the participants and by a journal that will be kept by each participant.

6. Names and qualifications of consultants and/or instructors. (Indicate for each person such pertinent information as current employer, academic degrees, and experience.)
   Judy L. Shrum, Virginia Tech, Ph.D., Foreign Language Education, Assistant Professor of Spanish and French and Foreign Language Education
Dear School Division Recertification Specialist:

This letter accompanies an application for approval of inservice noncollege credit at the Foreign Language Camps at Virginia Tech, July 28 - August 7, 1983. According to Ms. Joyce Maddra, a Teacher Certification Specialist with the Virginia State Department of Education, this application must be submitted by the teacher who wants to earn credit to his/her school division superintendent and by him or her to the State Department of Education.

Please allow me to highlight some of the benefits accruing to a teacher in your school division who participates in this inservice program. Primarily, fluency in the teacher's foreign language will improve. For twelve days teachers will hear French, German, or Spanish spoken by native speakers and people with near-native fluency. The Camps provide a pleasant environment in which new words and language forms are learned and used in natural ways.

Secondly, teachers from all over Virginia will share their expertise with each other in devising situations where foreign language can be used by themselves and their students. Furthermore, the Camps are directed by a specialist in foreign language teaching methodology who will share her knowledge. Finally, faculty from the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures will share their language skills, cultural knowledge, and talents with participating teachers. What teachers learn at the Foreign Language Camps is directly applicable to the classroom.

On behalf of the teacher submitting this application to you for approval, I ask that you grant approval and hasten this application to the State Department of Education so that your teacher can rest assured that credit will be one more tangible reward for his/her experience at the Foreign Language Camps at Virginia Tech.

Cordially,

Dear Parent(s):

The Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures at Virginia Tech is organizing one-week Foreign Language Camps (French, German, and Spanish) to be held on the Blacksburg campus from July 31 to August 7 and we would like to invite your children (ages 13 to 17) to attend.

We will provide a structured program of activities, sports, conversation groups, films, games, friendship and supervision in French, German, and Spanish that will be designed to help campers develop their fluency in the foreign language naturally and informally. Our staff will include university faculty, experienced high school teachers, foreign language students from Virginia Tech, and native speakers in all three languages. Our goal will be to encourage campers to use the foreign language to the maximum in an immersion environment much like they would experience were they to actually visit a country where the language is spoken.

Eligibility is open to students between the ages of 13 and 17, who have the equivalent of one year's study of a foreign language and who are recommended by a foreign language teacher. The total cost is $150 and includes room, board, instruction, materials, insurance, and a tee-shirt. All your son or daughter will need is transportation to and from the camp and some pocket money ($10 to $15).

The Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures will offer a limited number of scholarships in the amount of $100 for students who have demonstrated excellence in foreign language study and for students who demonstrate a need for financial assistance. Your child's foreign language teacher can provide information about application procedures for the scholarships.

Our space is limited to approximately thirty campers per language, and there has already been a great deal of interest shown by parents, teachers and students around the state. So, if you are interested in enrolling your son or daughter, please fill out the appropriate application form, enclose a $50 deposit (or the whole $150) and return it to us as soon as possible, but no later than April 1. Upon receipt of your application and deposit, we will send you detailed instructions concerning camp schedules, medical form, roommate selection, bedding and clothing needed, etc.

If you have any questions or just want more information, please feel free to write me or to telephone me (703-961-5537 or 703-961-5361), and I will be happy to help.

Sincerely,

Judith L. Shrum
Camp Director
Dear

I am delighted that you will be working with the 1983 Foreign Language Camps at Virginia Tech.

As you know, you will receive three in-service non-college credits for your training experience in the Camps. I've enclosed the form you will need to send to your school division to apply for your credit. Before June 15, you must send this form and my cover letter to the person in your school division who handles in-service non-college credit for recertification. This person will then send the form to the Virginia Department of Education which will assign a course number and approve your credit. Credit was approved for last year's camp, so we anticipate no difficulties in approval. Please let me know if you have any problems in this area.

As you read in in-service credit application form, you'll probably decide that it looks like you'll be very busy while you're here at the Camps. We hope you'll learn a great deal and grow as a teacher, as a speaker of French, German, or Spanish, and as a person who works with youngsters. You will receive free room and board beginning with the evening meal on July 28 through breakfast on August 7. You will share a room in Slusher Tower with another counselor. We'd like for you to direct or codirect a conversation group, and two activity sessions per day and participate in other activity groups, sports sessions and movie/slide/video tape shows.

You should plan to arrive on campus and report to Slusher Tower on Thursday, July 28 anytime between 1-2:00 p.m. We will have our first get-acquainted meeting at 3:00 p.m. on Thursday, July 28 in Slusher Tower, followed by dinner, then another planning session that evening. I have enclosed a campus map for your convenience.

As a camp counselor, you'll be working with native speakers, other teachers, Tech students and faculty in planning camp events. We want the Camp to be an expression of the creativity of its counselors and its students. Based on your staff application, we have assigned the principal activity listed below to you. You are responsible for directing this activity; and by June 15 you should send me the following:

1) a day-by-day plan for this activity; 2) a list of supplies you will need based on 1 student in the group (I will multiply by the number in the group); 3) all materials you will need to have typed or copied. I will purchase supplies for you unless there are some items you prefer to get because of limited availability. Please save receipts if you purchase anything. I can only reimburse you if you have receipts. We will provide copying service, markers, tape, posterboard, etc.

I have enclosed a list of Camp Staff responsibilities so that you can see the names of folks with whom you will be working. I have also enclosed the addresses of all Camp Staff members for car pool and other communication purposes.

I’ve enclosed all the materials that have been sent to student campers for your information. By June 15 please return the Medical Form and your 440.00 administrative fee (checks payable to Treasurer, Foreign Language Camps), if you have not already done so.

I’ve tried to cover every question you might have but I’m sure I’ve forgotten something. Please call me or write if you have any questions: Office: 703/961-5537 (Tues. 3:30-4:30 p.m.); 703/961-5361 (8-5 for messages); 703/961-5537 (8-5 for messages); Home: 703/552-5822 (after 9:00 p.m.).

See you in July!

I am happy to inform you that you have been selected to work with the Camp at Virginia Tech, July 28 - August 7. Campers will arrive July 31, but you should arrive by noon on the 28th for planning sessions. Extensive details about which activities you will be working with will be mailed to you by May 1. Dear [Name],

Thank you for applying for a Reward/Incentive Scholarship to the Foreign Language Camps at Virginia Tech. Your credentials were very fine and represent high academic achievement in foreign language study. We are proud of you for your accomplishments. The selection of scholarship recipients was a difficult task because so many were so good.

Even though you are not a scholar recipient, we hope you will still attend the Camps. Please let us know if you will attend by returning your Medical Form, Individual Interest Form and the remaining Camp fee by June 1. If you cannot attend, please advise us as soon as possible.

Again, congratulations on your fine work.

See you in July,

Judy Shrum
Camp Director
Dear Junior Counselor

Enclosed is a list of camp staff for your use in planning activities, carpooling to camp, etc. I have also enclosed a campus map, information that was mailed to campers, and a camp staff responsibilities list. As per my last letter to you, you should plan to participate most heavily in the area marked I next to your name. Your attendance and participation in the other areas (II and III) as well will contribute to the success of the Camps.

You should have the enclosed Medical Form completed and return it to me by June 15.

You should report to Slusher Tower between 12:00 and 2:00 p.m. on July 28. Our first staff meeting will be July 28 at 3:00 p.m. in Slusher. I’m looking forward to seeing you then.

Dear

Thank you for your application to work as a staff member in the 1983 Foreign Language Camps. I am sorry to inform you that we are unable to employ you at this time. It would be wonderful if we had sufficient funding to employ all of the fine applicants. Your application will remain on file in case there is a cancellation among personnel.

I hope you will accept my invitation to visit with the campers and staff during the week of July 31 - August 7. You will be a most welcome guest! The campers will all live in Slusher Tower and most activities will be held there.

Again, thank you for your application and best wishes for a successful summer.

Cordially,

Dear

I am very glad you have agreed to serve as a native speaker during the Foreign Language Camps, 1983. I think you will find the experience exciting, exhausting, and highly rewarding. The Camps will be approximately 130-140 students: nearly 70 in French, about 65 in Spanish, and about 15 in German. Most students will have had 1 or 2 years of language study, but some will have had 3, 4 or 5 years. You will be expected to direct or codirect a daily conversation group, direct one activity group, and participate in two others. Based on your staff application and the needs of the Camps, we'd like for you to take principal responsibility for the area marked I at the end of this letter. For your principal activity, you should take charge of planning and directing it, though you will have some assistance, as you can see from the enclosed staff responsibility list. By June 15, you should send me the following: 1) a day-by-day plan for this activity; 2) a list of supplies you will need based on 1 student in the group (I will multiply by the number of students in the group); 3) all materials you will need to have typed or copied. I will purchase supplies for you unless there are some items you prefer to get because of limited availability. Please save receipts if you purchase anything; I can only reimburse you if you have receipts. We will provide copying service, tape, markers, posterboard, etc.

I've also enclosed all materials sent to campers for your information. You should plan to arrive at Slusher Tower at 3:00 p.m. on July 28 for the first staff meeting.
