Reference Materials - Directories/Catalogs (132)

Audiovisual Instruction; Community Colleges; Educational Radio; Educational Television; Instructional Materials; Resource Materials; Telecourses; Two Year Colleges; Undergraduate Study

This catalog provides descriptive information about 107 lower-division undergraduate telecourses, usable as self-contained instructional units, produced to be used outside the producer institution, and suitable for use on either open air or cable modes. Course descriptions are provided under the following headings: Adult Skills and Leisure; Business Skills, General Business, and Management; Computers; Fine Arts, Humanities, and Foreign Languages; Health and Health Occupations; History and Social Sciences; Mathematics and Science; and Teacher Aide and Teacher Education. Each course description includes the following information: course title, video and/or audio media, producer, production date, course description, study materials, program titles, and source of availability. (LL)
FOREWORD

This is the third edition of the Mass Media Catalog of College-Level Courses, which appeared originally in 1977. Both earlier editions were well received.

The present edition is thoroughly revised and updated. A number of the courses listed in the first two editions have been removed because they are now obsolete. Recently produced courses have been added.

CRITERIA FOR INCLUSION. This is not presented as a complete listing of audio- or video-related instructional materials adaptable to direct instructional uses at the postsecondary level. Rather, it is a selective compilation of lower-division undergraduate courses produced to be used outside the producer institution. Many of the courses are of already demonstrated high quality, from the standpoints of both content and production qualities. The video or audio programs are suitable for use on open broadcast, as well as in non-broadcast modes. Some consistently attract large audiences whenever they are broadcast on open air or cable.

It goes without saying that neither the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges (AACJC) nor the Association's Instructional Telecommunications Consortium, under whose auspices this catalog is published, vouches for the quality of all the courses listed herein. Information in the entries is supplied by the producers and distributors.

The compiler has restricted listings to lower-division courses that are "telecourses" rather than sequences of educational/instructional programs. A telecourse is an articulated instructional series that combines video or audio programs with a variety of supporting study materials: textbooks, student study guides, supplementary readings, tutorial and face-to-face instruction, computerized materials, etc. Most of the telecourses listed herein were developed by teams of highly qualified academics assisted by specialists in the arts of instructional technology and curriculum design.

Finally, the entries are all usable as self-contained instructional units. How much credit is to be awarded for successful completion of a telecourse listed herein, or whether the credit is applicable to degree-directed study, is, of course, a matter a user institution determines. In this connection, also, it is important to note that entries are so designed as to be adaptable to the user institution's needs and practices by local faculties. That is, a user institution is encouraged to supplement or modify the materials as it sees fit.
Purchasers of this catalog will soon note that a number of the telecourses contain audio or video programs that were produced originally for general TV or radio audiences. Ancillary study materials were produced later to make the materials usable as college-credit courses. (The widely acclaimed BBC series, The Ascent of Man, is a notable example.) This means that video or audio rights must be negotiated separately with their holders. The contact agency listed at the bottom of each entry can supply full information as to the availability of course components.

USING THIS CATALOG. All entries are classified according to subject matter. Necessarily, the categories are broad and somewhat arbitrary. As anyone who has ever attempted such classification is aware, college credit courses often do not fit into neat subject-matter divisions.

For better or for worse, the courses listed are grouped under the following headings: Adult Skills and Leisure; Business Skills, General Business, and Management; Computers; Fine Arts, Humanities; and Foreign Languages; Health and Health Occupations; History and Social Sciences; Mathematics and Science; Teacher Aide and Teacher Education.

The table of contents lists entries in alphabetical order under the subject matter headings. After each title, in parentheses, there is an indication as to whether the course is video or audio.

To locate an entry, open the catalog at the section bearing the appropriate subject-matter heading. Turn the page, until you find the entry in which the course is described. We decided to adopt this loose-leaf format to enable catalog owners to remove individual entries easily if they want to reproduce them, or to add additional entries as new courses become available.

A WORD ABOUT THE PUBLISHERS OF THIS CATALOG: This catalog is published by the Instructional Telecommunications Consortium, an agency of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges. The regular members of the ITC are all two-year colleges and associations of two-year colleges dedicated to encouraging wide and effective utilization of telecommunications-based instructional materials. (Current ITC member are listed on the page following the title page.)

For membership information or information about the ITC and its activities, users of this catalog are invited to get in touch with the ITC Director, c/o the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges. The ITC and its members are eager to provide whatever assistance they can to institutions or other educational/training agencies considering employing, or actually employing, telecommunications-based materials in programs of instruction.
