How to File a Consumer Credit Complaint:

Designed for the general public and possibly suitable also for high school economics students, this pamphlet explains how a complaint against a Federal Reserve bank concerning a possible violation of any of the federal consumer credit laws can be filed. Seven consumer credit laws are listed with a brief statement about the major protections of each: (1) The Truth in Lending Act, requiring the disclosure of finance charges and annual percentage rates for consumer comparison purposes; (2) The Equal Credit Opportunity Act, prohibiting against discrimination because of age, sex, marital status, or ethnic background; (3) The Fair Credit Billing Act, ensuring prompt correction of billing errors; (4) The Fair Credit Reporting Act, providing procedures for correcting credit record mistakes; (5) The Consumer Leasing Act, requiring disclosure of information for consumer comparison purposes; (6) The Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act, requiring the disclosure of information about the costs and services involved in property transfers; and (7) The Mortgage Disclosures Act, requiring lending institutions in metropolitan areas to inform the public of mortgage and home improvement loans. The Division of Consumer and Community Affairs is noted as the office responsible for handling consumer complaints. The final section provides a complaint form and a list of names and locations of federal enforcement agencies. (LH)
how to file a consumer credit complaint
If you have a complaint about a bank, you can get help from the Federal Reserve. You may complain about a possible violation of any of the Federal consumer credit laws listed in this pamphlet—or about any bank that you think has been unfair or deceptive in any business you have conducted with it. You don’t need to have an account at the bank to file a complaint.

We will receive complaints about any bank. However, the Federal Reserve supervises only State-chartered banks that are members of the Federal Reserve System. If your complaint is outside our authority, we will refer it to the proper regulatory agency or direct you to the right kind of help.

here’s what to do

First try to solve your problem directly with bank personnel. If you can’t, use the form attached to this pamphlet to let us know about your problem. Please mail your complaint to the Director, Division of Consumer and Community Affairs, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C. 20551. Or you may get in touch with the Federal Reserve Bank serving the District in which the bank is located, as listed on the back of this pamphlet. Federal enforcement agencies for other financial institutions are also listed.

Here’s what we’ll do

We will respond within 15 days. We’ll try to answer your questions in full within that time. If that’s not possible, our reply will set a reasonable date for getting back to you with more information. We’ll also let you know if we’ve referred your complaint outside the Federal Reserve for an answer.

consumer credit laws

The Federal consumer credit laws offer you these major protections:

The Truth in Lending Act requires disclosure of the “finance charge” and the “annual percentage rate”—and certain other costs and terms of credit—so that you can compare the prices of credit from different sources. It also limits your liability on lost or stolen credit cards.

The Equal Credit Opportunity Act prohibits discrimination against an applicant for credit because of age, sex, marital status, race, color, national origin, or receipt of public assistance. It also prohibits discrimination because you have made a good faith exercise of any or your rights under the Federal consumer credit laws. If you’ve been denied credit, the law requires that you be notified in writing and gives you the right to request the reason for the denial.

The Fair Credit Billing Act sets up a procedure for the prompt correction of errors on a credit account and prevents damage to your credit rating while you’re settling a dispute.

The Fair Credit Reporting Act sets up a procedure for correcting mistakes on your credit record and requires that the record be kept confidential.

The Consumer Leasing Act requires disclosure of information that helps you compare the cost and terms of a lease with another and with the cost and terms of buying on credit or with cash.

The Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act requires that you be given information about the services and costs involved at “settlement,” when real property transfers from seller to buyer.

The Home Mortgage Disclosure Act requires most lending institutions in metropolitan areas to let the public know where they make their mortgage and home improvement loans.

Pamphlets describing some of these laws in more detail are available from the Board of Governors or from the Federal Reserve Bank in your District.

the division of consumer and community affairs and consumer advisory council

The Federal Reserve has set up a separate office in Washington—the Division of Consumer and Community Affairs—to handle consumer complaints. This Division also writes regulations to carry out the consumer credit laws, enforces these laws for State-chartered banks that are members of the System, and helps banks to comply with these laws.

The Federal Reserve is also advised by a panel of experts in consumer credit, representing both business and consumer interests across the country. The Consumer Advisory Council meets four times a year, and its meetings are open to the public.

We welcome your comments and suggestions on any consumer credit issue.
