This teacher's manual is one volume of a six volume curriculum for the secondary level, designed to provide a systematic, group-oriented approach to decision-making in areas crucial to adolescent development: work, drug (substance) use and abuse, sexuality and social relationships, people and government, and juvenile law. The major goals of the curriculum are described, i.e., to provide basic information about rights, and how the court works; to increase student awareness of the role of juvenile law in their lives; and to provide practice in the five core skills (social perspective taking, alternative and consequential thinking, communication, and evaluation); and to provide practice in making decisions about law related issues. The 14 lessons cover laws and crimes, decision-making steps, due process rights, juvenile courts and laws, jobs in juvenile courts, and dealing with problems. The format for the lessons consists of teacher introduction, student worksheet, case studies, opinion polls and debates, and class evaluations. A final student assessment and course evaluation are also included. (BL)
PREFACE

The Adolescent Decisions program represents a cooperative effort among a group of teachers, school counselors, administrators, students, parents, and researchers, under the umbrella of the Adolescent Issues Project (funded by the United States Office of Education, Special Education Projects Grant G008001910, and the Judge Baker Guidance Center).

We are indebted to the students, staff, and parents of the Manville School in the Judge Baker Guidance Center, in Boston, Massachusetts -- who provided the initial impetus and support for the program. We are also thankful for the support, ideas, and feedback provided by students and staff at 15 schools who have tested components of the program -- especially the Bay Cove High School, Holden School, Manville School and River Street Mini-School, which all served as replication sites during the 1982-83 school year.

We are thankful for the support provided by the staff of the United States Office of Education (Special Education Projects), and the staff at Program Development Assistance Systems, especially Ms. Julie Becklund.
A NOTE ABOUT THE CURRICULUM

This curriculum is adapted from the book, Juvenile Problems and Law, by Linda Riekes and Sally Ackerley (West Publishing Company, 1980). We thank Linda Riekes for her ideas, enthusiasm, and guidance in initially formulating the project of adapting her work for students who have language and learning difficulties.

The topics covered in this curriculum are selective, and focus on how decisions are made related to juveniles and the law. There are many excellent supplementary materials available commercially, including the Law in Action series (West Publishing); Juveniles Have Rights, Too, and You Can Change the Law (Fearon Press); the Living Law series (Scholastic), and Street Law (West). Additional materials are available from YEFC, American Bar Association, 1155 East 60th Street, Chicago, Illinois, 60637.

Goals

There are many different ways to help adolescents learn about juvenile law, and there are several fine sets of teaching materials commercially available (see the Resource List at the end of the Program Manual for titles). In the context of the Adolescent Decisions program and curriculum, the units on Juvenile Law focus on decision-making skills, and strategies for dealing with situations that involve the law. The major goals of the curriculum are:

:: To provide basic information about juvenile rights, and how juvenile courts work;

:: To increase student awareness of the role of juvenile law in their lives, the consequences of breaking the law, and the differences between adult and juvenile law;

:: To provide practice in the five core skills, especially understanding the consequences of breaking the law, and developing alternative solutions to juvenile problems.

:: To provide practice in making decisions about law-related issues, through case studies and opinion polls.

Curriculum goals have therefore excluded a number of interesting topics related to juvenile law; supplementary activities as well as more intensive treatment of these issues can be found in the resources listed at the end of the Program Manual. The scope and sequence of the Juvenile Law curriculum are adapted from Juveniles and the Law (Riekes and Ackerley, West Publishing Co., 1975).
Structure of the Curriculum

All lessons include a combination of the following components:

1. Teacher Introduction, which is designed to stimulate interest in the topic, introduce new words or concepts, and map out the lesson's activities;

2. Student Worksheet which supplies basic information on the key concept in each lesson;

3. Case Studies for discussion, role-play or brainstorming activities, which provide concrete examples of the issues and concepts discussed in each lesson, and an opportunity for students to practice making decisions about law-related issues.

4. Opinion Polls and Debates, which provide an opportunity to communicate and exchange ideas, and develop common solutions to law-related problems.

5. Class Evaluations, which provide feedback about the lesson topic and activities, group process, and student behavior.

The case studies included in this curriculum are suggestive of many other, similar case studies. The method can be extended into mock court experiences; and supplemented with visits from members of the community who have been involved with the juvenile law system -- either as lawyers, social workers, advocates, judges, or juvenile offenders.

I. Teacher Introduction

There are many goals that are suitable for a course in juvenile law. This course will emphasize the following:

A. A basic understanding of legal rights, responsibilities and procedures as they relate to juveniles.
B. Exploration of student attitudes about crime, police, juvenile law system and their responsibility in relationship to juvenile crime as a social phenomenon.
C. Basic understanding of the consequences of juvenile crime, for the juvenile, the victim, and society.
D. Practice in using the Five Steps (see Procedural Manual) to develop solutions to juvenile crime.
E. Opportunity to look at crime and courts from different perspectives: juvenile, police, victim, judge, court worker, parent.

Students should be encouraged to think about specific other topics and/or activities which can be included in the course. (See II.C.2)

II. Assessment

Remind students that the purposes of the assessment are to find out:
1) what they already know, so that the teacher can plan a good course (not too repetitive but not missing important information), and 2) what students want to learn more about.
INSTRUCTORS' GUIDE

Lesson: Juvenile Law: Assessment ANSWER KEY

Number: 1

ASSESSMENT ANSWER KEY

I. What is your opinion?

1. Keep a score of how students vote. Use this to help plan lessons and other activities. Compare the ways in which different students voted.

2. Same as number 1. Ask students what they would like to learn from the visit(s) they checked.

3.

4. All of these can get juveniles in trouble with the law. However, (c), (d), (f) and (h) would not be considered crimes in most cases if they were committed by an adult. They are status offenses: behaviors that specifically involve juveniles and the law.

5. Discuss the implications for punishment and rehabilitation of each of the "causes" of crime. Collect student opinions. See if opinions change as a result of the class.

II.

A. True or False

1. F. The age for defining a juvenile changes from state to state but in most cases it includes teenagers younger than 18.

2. T.

3. F. except if a case is appealed.

4. T.

5. F. Most teenagers get in trouble for status offenses--truancy, running away, etc. Theft (larceny) is the most common crime today.
6. F. A juvenile can be charged and tried as an adult if the offense is serious enough (e.g., murder).
7. T.
8. T. Juvenile laws began in this century. Work by Jane Addams and other reformers in the early years of the century led to the development of juvenile courts and the juvenile justice system.
9. T. The case of Gerry Gault (see Lesson 5) led the Supreme Court to decide that juveniles have the same rights as adults to due process—including the presence of a lawyer at all legal proceedings.
10. T.

DEFINE THE WORDS.
1. Detention A.
2. Juvenile D.
3. Due process B.
4. Adjudication E.
5. Constitution C.

III. YOU DECIDE
The two cases are designed to provide practice in listening to and judging the consequences of juvenile crime. Help students begin to consider:
   a. What a crime looks like from different perspectives;
   b. The rights and responsibilities of parents as well as juveniles;
   c. Alternative consequences (punishments);
   d. The causes of juvenile crime . . . societal as well as personal.
JUVENILE LAW

This class will help you learn more about how the law deals with teenagers (or juveniles). It will help you learn about your rights and responsibilities. It will help you learn how you can help other teenagers stay out of trouble with the law.

List the crimes in order of how serious (dangerous) they are to other people. Put a (1) next to the most dangerous crime on your list.
Curfew in Lindville was 10:00 p.m. for all juveniles. One night at 10:30 a bunch of teenagers were sitting around in the park. The street light was out. They sat in the dark smoking cigarettes and talking. A neighbor heard them and called the police. The police came and took the kids down to the station. Their parents were sent a notice to appear in court.

Look at the case from different points of view.

THE KIDS. Do they think what happened was fair? Why or why not?

THE PARENTS. How do they feel about coming to court? What did they think should be done to the kids?

THE NEIGHBOR. Why do you think he called the police? Was it fair for him to call the police? Why?

THE JUDGE. What do you think the judge will do?

5 steps to make a decision

1. Name the dilemma.
   What is the decision you need to make?

2. List 2 or more solutions.

3. Think about the consequences of each solution,
   a) for you  b) for others

4. Try out the "best" solution

5. Evaluate your decision.
   How well did your solution work?
   If you need to, start again at number 1.
Lesson: 5 Steps to Make a Decision

I.A. Consequences. Many juveniles get into trouble because they have not considered the consequences of their behavior—for themselves and/or others. Anticipating consequences is an important concept in dealing with the roots of juvenile crime. It is also generally applicable in making many different kinds of decisions—including decisions about jobs, school, friendships, and drug use.

II.A. The 5 steps are one simple way to begin helping students reflect on, and improve, their decision-making skills. They are discussed at some length in the Procedural Manual. However, the major goals are:

1. To increase the number of alternative solutions from which to choose;
2. To improve adolescents' ability to anticipate consequences and take the perspective of others;
3. To evaluate the decision-making process and use case studies to improve that process.
Matt, Alice and Danny are all 15 years old. It is a nice September day and they are walking toward school. Alice says, "Let's cut out today and go to the beach. Nobody will notice we are gone."

After they talk about it for a while, they all agree to cut school and go to the beach. On the way, a police cruiser drives past them. One of the officers says, "Those kids are supposed to be in school. What do you think we should do?"

The police officers stop the three kids. They talk to them awhile, and decide to call the parents. On the phone, Alice's mom gets really mad. She says she wants to do something about Alice hooking school. She wants the police to take her to detention center and charge her with being truant.

When Alice finally has a court date, she tells the judge her story: she just wanted to hook school one day. Her mother says Alice does this alot, and she wants the judge to do something. What should the judge do?
Three Decisions

Put yourself in the role of the teenager who needs to make the decision. Use the 5 Steps. (Use a chart if it helps you.)

1. The paycheck

Deborah has just gotten paid for her part-time job as a cashier. The check came to $43. Deborah remembers a dress and shoes she wanted for $40. But she knows her folks are short of cash this month. And she knows she wants to save for a trip to New York in the spring. What should she do?

2. Late again!

Mark is late for work again! He could try to hitch ride, but hitching is illegal. He could walk, but then he'll have to explain to his boss why he is 'late again. What should he do?

3. The party.

It is ten o'clock at night. Eric and his friends are hanging out by Eric's house. One of the friends says he knows of a party on the other side of town. Eric's mother has told him she doesn't want him traveling across town. But she won't be home until 11:00 p.m., because she is visiting relatives. What should Eric do?
Lesson: #3 - Five Steps to Make a Decision

Pick a decision you made today. Use the 5 steps.

1. Name the problem.

2. List 2 alternative solutions in the chart below:

<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1.</td>

3. Now list a consequence for each solution in the chart above.

4. Put a star (⭐) next to the best solution.

5. Try it next time!
1. Look at the problem from the point of view of:
   - Alice
   - her mother
   - the police officers
   - the judge

2. What decisions did each of them have to make? List them here:
   - Alice:
   - Police Officers:
   - Mother:
   - Judge:

3. How many alternative solutions did you think up for each decision?

4. Role-play or discuss the case from each person's point of view. Can you come to a solution that is good for everyone?

Due Process Rights for Juveniles:
The Gault Case
Lesson: Due Process Rights for Juveniles: The Gault Case

Major Objectives:
1. To understand how due process rights for juveniles first began.
2. To apply due process rights to a juvenile case.

Content and Activities

I. Teacher Introduction

A. Review due process rights. Ask students how many they can remember from the previous lesson.

B. Ask students if they think juveniles should have the same rights.

C. Tell students juveniles did not always have the same due process rights as adults. The case of Gerry Gault, in 1967, was the first case to test juvenile rights to due process.

II. Due process for juveniles: The case of Gerry Gault.

A. Read the student hand-out: "The Case of Gerry Gault",

B. Answer the questions at the end, or C. Use Due Process Rights: What are they? hand-out to review due process and apply it to Gault.

Instructional Materials

- student handout: "The Case of Gerry Gault"
- see student handout: "Due Process Rights"
I. There are many aspects to the discussion of due process. We have chosen to focus on two of them:

1. To understand our rights as juveniles;
2. To practice the 5 Steps.

Good background information can be found in Riekes and Ackerley, Juvenile Problems and Law, and in Street Law. Both are published by the West Publishing Company.

Whatever the information available, the major goal is to practice making decisions—in the role of juvenile, police officer, court, lawyer, par:

DUE PROCESS RIGHTS

3. Cross-examine. You have the right to ask questions.

4. No self-incrimination. You can't be forced to say things about yourself that will make you look guilty.

5. Record the hearing. You can ask that everything be written down during the hearing.

6. Right to review. If you don't like the judge's decision, you can appeal to a higher court. You can ask the other court to change the decision. But you need to bring some reasons why.

REVIEW

Match the words with the due process right. Draw a line.

1. Cross-examine  a. Ask that your case be heard by a different judge.

2. Self-incrimination  b. You can ask someone to help you in court.

3. Right to a lawyer  c. You can't force anyone to say something that will get him/her in trouble.

4. Right to appeal  d. You have to be told what you are accused of.

5. Notice of charges  e. You have a right to ask someone to write down what goes on.

6. Right to record the process.  f. You can ask questions of the person who accused you.
The Case of Gerry Gault

Gerry Gault was 15. He was taken into court because he was accused of making an obscene phone call. The police did not tell Gerry's parents they were taking him to detention. They were not told the reason for a court hearing the next day.

Mrs. Cook had accused Gerry. She did not come to the hearing. The police officer told her story. Gerry said he did not make the call.

There were no lawyers present. There was no juvenile court jury. The judge decided Gerry was delinquent. He was sentenced to be in state reform school until the age of 21 (six years!). If an adult had made an obscene phone call, he would get only 60 days in jail.

Gerry's parents got a lawyer who challenged the decision. It turned out the decision was not fair. Gerry was not given his due process rights. Here are some of them:

1. Notice of charges. You must be told what you are accused of and be given time to prepare a case.

2. You must be allowed to have a lawyer. If you are too poor, the court must lend you a lawyer.

Instructional Materials: student handout: "Due Process: A Closer Look"
I.B. There are many terms in the law that are difficult for students to understand, recognize or repeat. It is important to introduce these terms—so that students are at least aware of the kinds of vocabulary often used in legal cases. However, it is important to help students re-state the terms in their own words. (see II.B.)

II.C. and II.D. Due process rights are controversial because they are often seen as "protecting criminals". It is important for students to look at this problem from at least three or four perspectives:

1. The accused person: the law must ensure fair treatment;
2. The victim: the law must ensure fair treatment and restitution;
3. The police officer: due process means police have to be more careful about their work;
4. Judges: due process means a judge must work hard to ensure that everyone's rights are protected.

The opportunity to look at a problem from many different perspectives is an important, generalizable part of making decisions. This exercise can also be used to help students become aware of one major issue currently being debated in this country.

III.A. Recognizing due process rights (and violation of them) is an important part of learning how to function within the law. You can ask questions that will raise disagreements—e.g., should due process rights be the same for adults? Should they hold for schools, etc. This exercise is difficult, and can be adapted to simplify it when necessary.

judge, or the victim of a crime.
DUE PROCESS RIGHTS: A CLOSER LOOK

A. The right to notice of charges. You must be told what you are accused of doing. You must be allowed time to prepare your case. You cannot be arrested and tried the same day without a chance to prepare your case.

B. The right to counsel. Everyone has the right to a lawyer. If you cannot afford to pay one, the court must get a lawyer for you. But you can always choose to defend yourself, without a lawyer.

C. Right to cross-examine witnesses. If a witness testifies against you, you have the right to ask questions. You can try to show that the person who testifies against you is wrong.

D. The right against self-incrimination. No one (not police or the judge) can force you to say things that will be used against you. This right is protected in the Constitution. It is sometimes called "Taking the 5th Amendment." If someone forced you to confess, the case is usually thrown out.
E. The right to a written record of the hearing. Everything that happens in court must be written down. That way, you know later what was said against and for you, and how to try to prove your point.

F. The right to appeal. If you think the judge's decision was wrong or unfair, you can ask a "higher" court to hear your case. The "higher court" can change the decision or keep it the same.
Lesson: Due Process Rights: A Closer Look - #5

YOU DECIDE

Here are 6 cases. Each of them goes against one of the due process rights. Can you decide which right has not been protected?

Write the letter (A to F) of the due process right that fits each case.

1. Abbie Toffman was accused of breaking into a store. At the hearing, the police officer told the judge that a neighbor saw Abbie the same night the break-in happened. The neighbor never came to court. The judge said Abbie was guilty. _______

2. Neal Cassidy was accused of stealing a car. Neal had been in trouble before with the police. The detective and the judge wanted to teach Neal a good lesson, so they brought him into court the next day without a lawyer. He was put on probation for one year. _______

3. Juan Benitez had just come up from Puerto Rico. One night he was hanging out in the park. A policeman picked him up for vagrancy and put him in detention center. No one talked to him about why he was arrested. The policeman said he didn't speak Spanish. _______

4. Ginny Woolf had a court date set for April 1. That day the clerk was sick. The judge said he didn't want to postpone court. He went ahead with the hearing. Ginny was found guilty of shoplifting. She was put on probation.

5. Mary Ann Evans was 13. She had never been in trouble before. She was hanging with some friends who stole tapes from a store. They were all picked up. The police told Mary Ann that if she confessed, they would let her go. But if she went to trial, they would put her in detention center.

6. The Mansfield family was poor. Their son Bobby often skipped school to go to work selling newspapers downtown. After a few warnings, the police picked him up. The judge found him guilty and said he had to be put on probation for 6 months. Mr. Mansfield thought this was unfair. But he didn't have enough money for a lawyer. He didn't know what to do next. The judge said Bobby would have to serve the probation...

III.C. This lesson provides a rich starting point for many different activities. For example, it provides students with a concrete, comprehensible case study in the way the conditions of people's lives have changed in the last 100 years.

Second, it provides options for independent projects through which students can explore life in a different time, and from a different perspective.

Third, it encourages them to analyze or question the reasons for special juvenile laws.

There are many helpful references and resources available, ranging from books and films to possible field trips. A few examples include:

1. Photography collections of child-labor reformer activists like Lewis Hyne and Jacob Riis—these show the life experience of young children 100 years ago.
2. Films like Chaplin's The Immigrant or Easy Street
3. Field trip to the National Historical site in Lowell, MA.

WHAT DID JUVENILE LAWS BEGIN?

One of the things we did not have 100 years ago were laws and courts just for young people. In those days, any child over 7 could be accused of a crime and put in jail with adults. Young children also worked in dangerous jobs, like coal mines, cotton mills, and factories.

Some adults decided that it was wrong to punish children like adults. They said:

Children need care and guidance!
Children do not need punishment!

They wrote down their ideas. They talked to other people. At last a special law was passed. The law said that children should not be treated as criminals. The court should try to help and take care of children—not punish them. This was the start of juvenile law and juvenile courts.
THEN AND NOW

Many things have changed in the last 100 years. Today we have many different things that people did not have 100 years ago.

1. In the table below, list 5 or more things that we have today, but did not have 100 years ago.

2. Then mark a (+) if the new thing is helpful. Mark (-) if the new thing is harmful.

NOTE: This lesson contains a number of complex concepts related to the theory of juvenile law. Two things are important to remember in teaching the lesson. First, the information contained here refers primarily to the theory of juvenile law: to how juvenile law, courts, and consequences are supposed to work. The actual working of juvenile law and courts, as well as the suitability of juvenile court consequences, are topics for continued debate and examination. It will be very important to provide students with some experiences in facing the actual workings of the juvenile law system—either through a guest speaker, field trip or films. Future lessons deal with this issue.

Second, this lesson is designed as an orientation to juvenile law. There are many facts and concepts mentioned briefly. Students will probably not remember most of this information. Our goal has been to outline issues for further discussion, increase students' awareness of juvenile laws and courts, and provide some basic information. Be patient with yourself and your students; many of these concepts will be reviewed later. Remind students that we are trying to help them learn how to think about the role of law in their lives—not memorize specific facts about the juvenile law system.

I. Review. Lesson 8 described some of the reasons for the creation of a juvenile law system. In theory, the juvenile law system is designed to guide and protect children, rather than punish them for breaking laws. (We will discuss some of the limits in later lessons.) Therefore, there are some special situations which apply to juveniles...
Content and Activities

1. Is it fair for juveniles to be punished for status offenses?
2. Should juveniles have the same rights as adults?
3. Should juveniles face the same punishments as adults?
4. Do you think juvenile laws should be changed? How?

III. Options:

A. Court cases: role-play a juvenile court hearing. Assign roles of lawyer, juvenile, judge (other roles: parent, witness, probation officer).

or B. Use the opinion poll to collect opinions from other students and teachers about juvenile laws. Find out how much they know about juvenile law, and what they think should be changed. (Can also be used as homework assignment.)

IV. Evaluate the lesson

Due process rights are the same for juveniles and adults. However, there are special laws that are only for juveniles. These laws are supposed to protect juveniles from being hurt by adults, or from getting into trouble with the law. They are also supposed to guide, or teach, juveniles how to keep out of trouble when they get to be adults.

Some teenagers and adults think it is wrong to have special laws for juveniles. Other people think it is right. As you read about special juvenile laws, you can decide for yourself.

SPECIAL LAWS

Teenagers and children sometimes have to go to court because they have:

1. been truant from school;
2. run away from home;
3. won't listen to their parents;
4. been abused or neglected by their parents;
5. have broken a criminal law (like stealing or using illegal drugs).

Adults usually go to court only if they have broken a criminal law or for civil cases.
Most cases with children or teenagers are handled by a judge in a private hearing. There is no jury. The trial is not open to the public. Sometimes there is a lawyer for the child and the parents too.

We will learn more about how juvenile court works, in the next 2 lessons.

SPECIAL CONSEQUENCES

If a juvenile is found to be delinquent, the judge will decide what to do. The judge can decide to:

1. place the delinquent on probation. This means he or she has to check in with a special court worker every day.

2. place the delinquent in a foster home or a group home, so he or she can get more help.

3. place the delinquent in a training school, to keep him or her off the streets and get some help.

The judge has the power to decide what to do in juvenile law cases. In most adult cases, the punishment is a fine, probation, or prison.

SERIOUS CRIMES

A juvenile can be treated like an adult if he or she has committed a serious crime, like murder. If this happens, the juvenile can be punished just like an adult. The record of Here are some statements about law and the courts. Write (J) if the statement is true for juveniles. Write (A) if the statement is true for adults. Some statements are true for both juveniles and adults; write (JA) for them.

1. ___ They can be tried for running away from home.
2. ___ They have due process rights.
3. ___ They can be sentenced to life in prison.
4. ___ They can be placed in a foster home.
5. ___ They have a public jury trial.
6. ___ They can be tried for shoplifting.

THINGS TO THINK ABOUT

1. Do you think a juvenile delinquent should be sent to a special home to be taught how to get along, or should he or she be punished like an adult?
2. Should there be set consequences for juveniles, or should a judge have freedom to decide on different consequences for different juveniles?
3. Should there be public or private trials for juveniles?
4. Is capital punishment fair? Is it a good way to prevent crime? Should juveniles face the same consequence?
crimes committed by a juvenile is kept private by the court. If an adult committed crimes when he or she was a juvenile, these can be used by a judge when she decides on a sentence.

The most severe consequence usually given to a juvenile is up to two years in a training school. The most severe penalty for an adult is life in prison, or (in some states) capital punishment.

Here are four special things to remember about juvenile law:

1. Juveniles can be in court for special reasons—like being neglected, abused, truant or a run-away.
2. Juvenile cases are heard by a judge, without a jury.
3. Juveniles have special consequences for being delinquent—like placement in a foster home.
4. A juvenile can be treated like an adult if he or she commits a serious crime.
OPINION POLL

1. Should juveniles have the same rights as adults? Why?

2. Should there be special laws for juveniles? Why?

3. Should juveniles get the same punishments as adults? Why?

4. Should juveniles have public jury trials? Why?

5. Juvenile laws should be changed. How?
Lesson: Juvenile Laws and Adult Laws (B)

COURT CASES

Here are two cases. Decide if the person should be tried as a juvenile or as an adult. If you decide on a juvenile court case, discuss (or role-play) how the case would take place.

Case 1.
Robin is fifteen. She is accused of robbing an elderly lady at gunpoint. She has a long juvenile court record.

Case 2.
Michael is fourteen. He stole a car and took it for a ride. He is accused of being involved in an accident where a school child was hit and hurt. He has never been caught by the police.
Juvenile law applies to special cases like:
1. abuse and neglect of young people by their parents;
2. status offenses, like truancy or running away from home.
It also applies when juveniles have broken criminal laws.

I.C. A juvenile court judge gives a disposition, instead of a sentence (which is given in an adult court). Dispositions include probation, or placement in a foster home, group care, or training school.

JUVENILE LAWS VARY SOMEWHAT FROM STATE TO STATE. However, in theory, the primary orientation is protection and guidance--rather than punishment and rehabilitation.

II.A. Ask students if they remember the due process rights described in Lesson 6. It is important to review these so that students understand their rights in the eyes of the law.

SPECIAL LAWS.
Discriminate between criminal trials and civil trials. Adults are involved in criminal cases when they have broken a criminal law. They are involved in civil cases when one person has a complaint against another; a civil case may or may not involve breaking a criminal law.

SPECIAL CONSEQUENCES.
The usefulness and justice of juvenile institutions, like training schools, is a topic of continuous debate. These lessons are not intended to answer the debate about juvenile training schools.
It might be helpful for students to research specific consequences for juvenile delinquents; to evaluate and suggest alternatives. Guest speakers may also be appropriate here.

In general, juvenile court judges have greater latitude in deciding on dispositions than do criminal court judges. This too is a topic for student debate.

II.C. Opinions about the fairness and usefulness of special juvenile laws vary. It is useful to ask students to reflect on these issues, especially on the rights and responsibilities of adults vs. juveniles. For example, students will often say that juveniles should have the same rights as adults, but not have to face the same punishments. It is important to help students examine the consistency of their opinions.

THE COURT CASE

1. Eric is fourteen years old. He has been in trouble with the law for truancy and running away. One night he is hanging out with some friends at the park. They hear a police siren and decide they better leave the park before they get stopped.

A block away, the police car stops Eric. He is accused of vandalizing a nearby school by writing on the walls with spray paint. Eric says he didn't do it.

Role-play what happens when Eric comes before the juvenile court judge at a hearing.

A. Role play the fact-finding hearing.

The people at the hearing are:

1. the judge: he or she wants to get tough with delinquents.
2. Eric's father: thinks Eric is innocent.
3. The police officer: thinks Eric is guilty.
5. state lawyer: wants Eric put in a group home.

B. Role-play the hearing. The judge should decide if Eric is guilty or innocent. If he is guilty, the judge decides on a fair consequence. Other students should rate the process for fairness.

Lesson: Steps in the Juvenile Court Process

I.B.

This lesson presents a very simplified sequence of steps that are typical of juvenile court procedures. The goal of the lesson is not to detail the juvenile court process; rather, it is to help students become aware of what is supposed to happen to a juvenile who gets in trouble with the law. The second objective of the lesson is to apply these steps to a case study—in order to review the steps as well as review juvenile rights in the light of due process. The lesson also introduces the roles of juvenile court personnel. (See Lesson 12)

I.D.

Words to watch

a. process: in law, process means the steps by which a person accused of a crime is found innocent or guilty.

b. detention: keeping a juvenile in a court institution until a hearing before a judge. This is usually done if the police think the juvenile may be dangerous or may run away before the hearing. Root word: detain.

c. counselor: someone who works at juvenile court and is supposed to help the judge make a decision by finding out about the juvenile, his or her family, and the help he or she needs.

II.B.

There are several points along the process where a police officer or a judge has to make a decision about the juvenile's case. The first is after the arrest: if there is enough evidence for a hearing the juvenile will be held in detention, or released to his/her parents until the hearing before a judge. The second is after the initial

III. Case Study

Use the case study ("Bill and the Broken Window") to review the steps in the juvenile court process.

Options:

A. Finish filling in a flow chart like the one used above by deciding the case and a consequence; or hearing. If there is not enough evidence, the juvenile may be released. The third is at a dispositional hearing, ("third hearing" in student handout) when the judge decides on a consequence. One possible consequence is release to parents, or probation officer. It is good to review each of these decision points for two reasons: first, the behavior of the juvenile can alter the decisions made. Second, a great deal of power is given to judges, counselors and probation officers in the juvenile court process. It is good to ask students to think about this system: is it fair to juveniles? What are the alternatives? Role-playing the process will help facilitate discussion and evaluation of fairness issues.

B. Role-play the juvenile court process. Try to include the following roles: Bill; Mr. Evans (custodian); juvenile court judge; lawyer for Bill; court counselor; (other roles: parents, police officer)
Thanks for your evaluation!
SALLY B. AND THE BRACELET

The Case: Sally Browning was stopped as she left a department store. She had a bracelet in her pocket that still had a price tag on it. Sally said she had bought it yesterday and lost the sales slip. The owner said she stole it. He tells the store detective to hold Sally and call the police.

Here are the steps that happen next:

1. ARREST: When the police come, they talk to the store owner. If they think there is enough reason to hold Sally, they will place her under arrest. They ask Sally her name, age, and address. They tell Sally her rights and take her to the juvenile court or a police station.

2. INTAKE: A police officer asks Sally more questions. She does not have to answer. Sally can call her mother. The police can let Sally go home or keep her in detention until her hearing.

3. DETENTION: If Sally has a court record, the police may keep her in detention. Then she is given a room and some clothes. She will stay in detention until her first hearing.
4. JUVENILE COURT HEARING: A juvenile court judge hears the case. Sally can plead guilty or not guilty. If Sally pleads not guilty, there will be another hearing. Sally may or may not be kept in detention. If Sally pleads guilty, the judge will decide what consequence to give her. Sally can have a lawyer at this hearing.

5. JUVENILE COURT HEARING: Sally's lawyer will give facts to show Sally is not guilty. A court lawyer can call witnesses and give facts to show Sally is guilty. The judge listens to everything. He makes a decision.

6. THIRD HEARING: If Sally is found guilty, there is a third hearing. The judge decides what consequence to give Sally. A counselor can give the judge some help in deciding what is the best consequence for Sally.
Here are the steps in the case of Sally B. Go through her case again and fill in the empty boxes.

2. Intake → Released

BILL AND THE BROKEN WINDOW

The Case: Bill liked to hang out behind the school. The school custodian, Mr. Evans, was always chasing Bill and his friends away from the school. Sometimes Bill gave Mr. Evans a hard time.

One morning, Mr. Evans found 2 broken windows in the back, where Bill hung out. He called the police. He said that Bill had broken the windows. The police picked Bill up and took him to juvenile court. Since Bill had a record for truancy, they kept him in detention. The next week he had a hearing.

Lesson: Jobs in the Juvenile Court

I.C. Throughout this curriculum, we have chosen to emphasize social thinking skills, rather than factual material. In lesson 12, the major objectives concern the ability to look at a problem (or situation) from several different perspectives. The judge, attorneys, social worker, parents, and juvenile will all have somewhat different views of the same process. The role-play activities and the descriptions of job responsibilities are both intended to help students think about making decisions from several different perspectives.

II.B. Throughout the Adolescent Decisions curriculum, we make reference to related jobs. The "educational qualifications" part of this exercise is probably most valuable for groups of students who have a good probability of completing high school educations and/or continuing on to university. The other parts of this exercise will help students make more accurate inferences about adults with whom they may become involved in the juvenile court system.

III.B. The Job Description cards are intended to help students focus on specific aspects of the job, and to create possible dialogues between players in the situation. The final task in this section asks students to reach two decisions: the first is the disposition or judgment of guilt and innocence; the second is the imposition of a consequence. Juvenile court workers make these kinds of decisions many times each day. Therefore, we believe it is important for juveniles to practice seeing the world through the eyes of a court worker.

IV. The major objective for the role-play is to help students practice looking at and talking about a social situation from more than one perspective. The third is to begin to talk about broad social issues, like fairness, the responsibilities of parents and juveniles, etc.

JOBS IN THE JUVENILE COURT

1. Clerk. The clerk's job is to "swear-in" witnesses. A witness promises, or swears, that he or she is telling the truth. If the witness breaks that promise, then he or she can be in trouble with the court.

2. Court Reporter. The job of the reporter is to keep a record of everything that happens during a trial or hearing. Sometimes clerks use a tape recorder, or a special kind of typewriter. Courts keep a record so parents or children can go back and check what happened if they think something was unfair.

3. Court lawyer. Sometimes an attorney will only represent the state. Then she will try to prove that the juvenile did commit a crime and needs help.

4. Defense lawyer. If there is a court attorney, then the juvenile has the right to his or her own lawyer. This lawyer tries to prove the juvenile is innocent, and the charges should be dropped.

   Sometimes there is just one attorney, who is supposed to protect the rights of the juvenile.

5. Social Worker. The social worker talks to the juvenile's family and court staff. He tries to decide which kind of help the juvenile (and family) need. The report of the social worker will often be used when the judge makes a decision about the case.

6. Witnesses. Witnesses do not get paid by the court. They only come in to tell their story, if they are needed. The lawyers can ask questions. In juvenile court, the judge also asks questions.

7. Judge. The judge listens to all the testimony. Then she must decide if the juvenile is innocent or guilty. The judge also sets a punishment, or consequence. She must be sure that everything is fair.
THE CASE OF
SAMMY THE DISCO KING

Sammy is 15 years old. His apartment is upstairs from Mr. Lincoln, who is 55 years old. Sam lives with his father and his sister, who is 8 years old.

Sam's father works nights. Sam likes to listen to his tapes at night. One night a friend comes over. They start listening to the tapes. They turn the music up real loud because they like it so much.

Downstairs, Mr. Lincoln gets real mad. He has asked Sam a few times to keep the music down. Now he decides to call the police. He says:

I can't sleep because of the noise! This is the third time I have complained. I want Sam out of that house. I want him put in detention!

When the police come, they give Sam a summons. Other people have complained about Sam's loud music, so Sam has to come to juvenile court. His father has to come, too. Sam is charged with disturbing the peace. Sam's father comes to court with Sam.
JOB DESCRIPTIONS FOR ROLES

In
THE CASE OF SAM THE DISCO KING

THE CLERK. Your job is to swear in the witnesses called by the lawyers. If there is any evidence, you must hold onto it for the judge.

THE COURT REPORTER. Your job is to take down what is said at the juvenile court hearing. Use a tape recorder if you can. If not, try to take down notes as carefully as you can. Read your notes back at the end; or play the tape!

COURT LAWYER. You must prove that Sammy did play the music too loud and did not turn it down when Mr. Lincoln asked. You also think Sam should be placed in foster care. You can talk to Sammy and the social worker before the trial.

DEFENSE LAWYER. Your job is to defend Sammy and his dad. You think Sam should stay at home. Try to find other ways that Sammy has been helpful around the apartment, in school, in the neighborhood; other solutions to the problem (earphones, etc.). Talk to the social worker, Sammy's father and to Sammy.

SOCIAL WORKER. You follow up on reports of delinquent kids or cases of neglect. You talk to kids and parents, about getting help for themselves. When Sammy was charged with disturbing the peace, you called and talked to his father. You found out the father works nights and sleeps most of the day. You will... make recommendations about Sammy, his sister and father during the court hearing.

WITNESSES.

MR. LINCOLN, THE NEIGHBOR. You have lived in your apartment for 12 years and never complained about noise. But his was too much! And Sammy often has friends over to listen until midnight. If Sammy's father were home more or were married this would not have happened. You think Sam should be taken away from his father.

SAMMY'S SISTER, EVA. You are eight years old. Sammy takes care of you. You think he does really well and he doesn't get into that much loud music. You think Mr. Lincoln hates kids.

THE JUDGE. You have to make sure the whole thing is fair. You listen to all the testimony. You make sure lawyers do not speak unfairly to witnesses. You must decide:

1. Is Sammy guilty?
2. Should Sammy's father help pay damages?
3. Should Sam be placed in a foster home?

SAM. You have to tell your story. The lawyer will ask questions about what you do while your father works. The lawyer will also ask about what happened on the night Mr. Lincoln called the police.

SAM'S FATHER. You work nights. You think your son does a good job helping with his sister. You think Mr. Lincoln is a kind of crank who complains too much.

PROBLEMS WITH JUVENILE COURT (page 2)

Now you know some of the problems with juvenile court. Think about the case you read before ("A Juvenile Thief"). Discuss Frank's problem. Use the 5 Steps to think of new ways to help Frank and his parent. Don't forget the victim, too.

List some decisions you would make if you were a juvenile court judge hearing Frank's case. How are they different from the decisions you read about?
PROBLEMS WITH JUVENILE COURT

Juvenile court does not always work the way it is supposed to work. Here are some problems with the juvenile courts.

1. There are too few courts and judges. Young people sometimes have to wait a long time to get into court. Lawyers don't have enough time to really make a good case. Judges have to hurry and make decisions. When people hurry, they sometimes make mistakes and poor decisions.

2. There is not enough money. Parents sometimes don't have enough money to hire a good lawyer. There is not enough money to hire workers. There is not enough money for places that can help (like special job programs, schools or homes).

3. Judges need more training. Some juvenile court judges have not been trained to understand teenagers, families, what is going on in their communities, and the special problems they have. There is not enough time or money to train judges.

4. Different judges have different opinions. Some judges think young people just need help. Other judges think they need to be punished, like adults. Each judge can make a different decision about what to do with a juvenile offender. There is no jury, and juvenile laws are sometimes confusing. There are special laws for juveniles. Some people think these things should be changed.
THE CASE:

Frank Jones was caught stealing a purse from a lady in the park. There were two witnesses. Frank lives with his mother; his father left them when Frank was 3. Now he is fourteen. Frank has been to juvenile court twice before. The judge finds Frank guilty. Now it is time to decide what the consequences should be.

THE JUDGES:

Here are three judges. Each one has a different opinion about juvenile court. Read each judge's opinion. Then read the decisions on the next page. Match each judge with a decision, by writing the number.

1. Judge Haso.

I have four children. The best place for kids is with their families. Sometimes families need some extra help. We should help families keep their kids.

2. Judge Ackerman.

Sometimes teenagers can be too much for their parents. They need special places where they can get lots of help like education and counseling. Sometimes the home is not the best place.
3. I'm Judge Taft. Last summer my wife got her purse stolen. I think kids get away with too much. I need to protect people from kids who steal. If they haven't learned by now, the court can't help them learn.

THE DECISIONS

Here are four decisions. Put the number of the judge beside the decision you think he or she will make. There is one "extra" decision.

- "I decide to let Frank go with a warning, and encourage him to stay in school and work harder."
- "I decide to put Frank on probation. He will go to a counselor each week, with his mother."
- "I decide to place Frank in a group home, so he can get some help every day." (This is a tough one!)
- "Frank needs to be punished. I decide to place Frank in a State School where he'll know what it feels like to be in jail. That way he will be off the streets. Maybe he can learn something there."

INSTRUCTORS' GUIDE

Lesson: Juvenile Court: Does it work?  Number: 12

I.C. This lesson points up the differences between the theory of juvenile courts, and the practice. There are many ways in which the juvenile court process fails to help juveniles; there are many opinions about the changes that should be made in the juvenile court system.

This lesson has a general goal of introducing students to the processes of evaluating how something works, and suggesting alternative solutions. (See Procedural Manual: Five Steps). It does not deal with a broad range of aspects of juvenile court; rather, it focuses on one aspect: the role of opinions in affecting judicial decisions.

To introduce this problem students should first talk about or brainstorm, some common things in their lives that are supposed to be helpful but sometimes fail—thereby causing new problems. Bikes, appliances (like can openers, washing machines), flashlights, batteries, cars, watches are all examples of objects whose failure causes problems. It is important to mention relationships in this exercise, too: friendships, teacher-student, family relationships all sometimes fail to meet our expectations. These "failures" cause disappointment, and require alternative solutions.

I.E. Opinions are hard to define. The dictionary uses terms like judgment, preference, or feeling—based on some kind of evidence but not the same as a fact. It is helpful to use examples to contrast opinions, and facts: "I like his new bike" vs. "His new bike is red."

A decision usually involves some action. In this way, it is also different from an opinion. "I like Smith better than Gibson for mayor" is an opinion. A vote for Smith, instead of Gibson, is a decision. Although we don't always act on our decision, it seems helpful to speak of decisions in the context of choosing a particular action.

II.A. Opinions and Decisions

Again, it is helpful to start with concrete, familiar and somewhat more neutral examples of how opinions affect decisions (or behavior). The decision to eat a particular lunch, or go to a particular movie, or buy a particular record—all hinge on our opinions about food, movies, and music. This kind of connection can be applied to social issues like voting, or judicial decisions. Emphasize that judges are supposed to make decisions not based on their opinions. However, the juvenile court system does not build in many safeguards against the all-too-human likelihood that decisions are affected by experiences and opinions.

III.B. Role-play

The opinion of each judge can be read aloud. However, it is more fun to role-play the judges: state opinions, state other views, and then state a decision.

IV.C. Brainstorm

The goal of this exercise is to practice brainstorming alternative solutions, using a case study for a basis. Specific alternatives (existent and hypothetical) to current juvenile court practices, are described in subsequent lessons. The practice at this point will help students use further lessons on alternatives.

Dealing With Problems:
Negotiation Strategies
Major Objectives:
1. To introduce the concept, negotiation, as a way of understanding how people solve problems with others.
2. To recognize and evaluate different negotiation strategies through case studies.

Content and Activities

I. Introduction: What does the word negotiate mean?

A. Ask students if they have heard the word negotiate. Write down what they say. Ask for examples—baseball strike, hostages, TV shows?

B. Provide other words that have similar meanings.
   - Suggestions: "make a deal"
     - "cooperate"
     - "Compromise"
     - "talk"

II. Case Studies:

A. Introduction. Teenagers sometimes find themselves in difficult situations, with peers and adults. There are lots of different negotiation strategies to use in a difficult situation. The

CASE STUDIES: Adults

1. THE STREET CORNER

Cindy is hanging out with some friends by the corner store. They always hang there and usually there is no problem. But last week two kids got in a fight and the police came. Today the store owner comes out and asks the kids to leave.

Cindy: You want to stay on the corner, because there are not too many places to go and you think your friends won't cause any trouble.

Store Owner: You like the kids, but you don't want the police around anymore. You want the kids to leave now and find someplace else to go.

(Optional roles): Other kids in the group, and/or a customer in the store.

2. SKIPPING SCHOOL

Sam doesn't skip school too often. But every time he does, his mother finds out and she gets in trouble. Today he skipped again. At lunch time, the principal goes out to get a sandwich and sees him in the store. She threatens to tell Sam's mother again. Cindy knows his mother said the next time he skips school, she will call the juvenile court.

Sam: You want to convince the principal not to tell your mother.

Principal: You like Sam but feel he needs to have strict rules, and skipping school means a call home!
Lesson: Negotiation Strategies

NEGOTIATION STRATEGIES

Here are 7 different strategies that people use in different situations.

1. Hit or Run. If Susan wants a pencil someone else is using, she grabs it without thinking about what is fair. If Sandy doesn't want to play a game in gym, he puts his jacket over his head or runs away.

2. Just Give In. If the boss asks Mike to do something that is unfair, he does it anyway and doesn't say anything. If his friends want to skip school, Jerry just goes along without saying anything.

3. Boss Around. If Arthur wants to use the basketball, he says, "Give it to me now or else!" If a teacher asks David to say in at recess he he says "You can't make me. Try it and I'll just walk out! No one tells me what to do."

4. Act Helpless. If Eddie's teacher wants him to finish his math, he whines and says, "I can't!" and puts his head down. If her friends want her to go roller skating, Abbie whines, "I don't know how" and won't go.

5. Bargain. If Kenny wants to go to the gym, he says, "I'll get you a soda after the game if you go with me now." If Margaret wants to stop doing school work, she says, "I'll finish it for homework."
you try stapling those pieces together instead."

Ex: If someone wants to go to movie, asks other: "I'd like to go to a movie, how do you feel about that? What do you want to do? Would you like to go?" (adapts to do something else they both want if other doesn't like movie).

II.B. Case Study: Peers

Each case study involves a decision (whether or not to skip school; whether or not to join some kids in buying alcohol). However, observation and discussion of the role-plays should focus on the strategies students use to implement their decisions—in other words, the behavior they use to deal with each situation. For example, if a student decides not to skip school, he could use the following strategies with his friend:

1. Just say no; just leave; hit his friend ("Hit or Run")
2. Threaten to tell if the friend skips ("Boss Around")
3. Say "I'll get in trouble, I can't do it." (Act Helpless)
4. Offer to go to the park with his friend after school instead ("Compromise")

The goal of this lesson is not to match student strategies with each of the 7 strategies listed above. Rather, it is to provide practice (for students and teachers) in recognizing different kinds of strategies—and then evaluating how well they work.

NOTE: Repetitive truancy can be a status offense—and involve a juvenile in the court system. Possession of alcohol by a minor is against the law.
II.C.4 Differences between adult and peer negotiations include:

1. Values: Adults often have different values than teens.
2. Power: Adults can get you in trouble, can punish you.
3. Language: Adults sometimes don't understand what kids are talking about.
4. Peer pressure: Teens really want to be liked/accepted by other teens, therefore negotiations are sometimes more complicated.
5. (others?)

II.C. The purpose of providing students with a list of negotiation strategies is to help them recognize strategies (especially if they have difficulty or thinking them up). The list provides one additional opportunity for recognizing and labeling different strategies. It also provides a starting point for evaluating how different strategies work in different situations. This is a very complicated discussion—for adults as well as adolescents—and the lesson in no way attempts to "answer" the values questions involved in matching situations with strategies. However, it is our experience that making students more conscious of their negotiation strategies is itself a helpful and constructive exercise.

Finally, like Five Steps to Make a Decision, this list provides one thread to which teachers can refer in subsequent lessons—as well as in helping students reflect on their own classroom behavior.
Lesson: 13. Negotiation Strategies - CASE STUDIES

1. SKIPPING SCHOOL

   Mark and Darren are new friends. They both dislike school, and usually skip about once a month. One day Mark says he wants to skip school, and go to the park--hang out, find some older guys and just have a good time. He wants Darren to come. Darren was told yesterday by the principal that if he keeps skipping school he will get in trouble.

   Here are the roles:

   Mark: You want Darren to skip and must try to convince him to come with you.

   Darren: You're not sure you want to skip today, but you want Mark to be your friend.

2. BUYING BEER

   Margarita is with two friends, Janet and Vicky. Janet and Vicky sometimes drink--just after supper, when they hang out behind the school. Tonight they see some older kids on the way to the liquor store. They ask Margarita if she will help them buy two six packs.

   Margarita: You have tried beer once before and it was OK. You're pretty sure it's not a good idea to buy it and drink in the school yard. You want to be with your friends.
Janet and Vicky: You think drinking is fine and you never got caught before. You want Margarita to come with you and have some fun.
II.A. Introduction

Negotiation strategies (like Five Ways to Make a Decision) are intended to help students recognize and improve the ways in which they try to solve interpersonal problems. The strategies used in this curriculum derive from our observation, assessment and evaluation over the past two years. (See Procedural Manual for a more detailed description of the rationale for the negotiation strategies.) Remember that negotiation strategies are somewhat different from decisions: negotiation strategies refer to the behaviors students use in implementing a decision. This distinction is important, because the lesson should focus on the behaviors (or strategies) in each case study, rather than the actual decision (yes-no; etc.) See Instructor Guide, IIB for more on this issues.

EXAMPLES OF STRATEGY TYPES

1. One set of strategies is to impulsively use physical action to get what one wants (Hit or Run).
   Ex: If Joe wants a pencil someone is using, he grabs it without thinking of consequences.
   Ex: If Alice is asked to do something she does not like, she runs out of the room.

2. Another set of strategies is to give in thoughtlessly, without asserting self's needs (Just Gives In).
   Ex: If a mother asks her child to clean up her room, the child says "okay" even though she doesn't want to, i.e., she just does it without acknowledging that he or she doesn't want to.
3. Another set of strategies is to tell, order or command, without considering the wants of other or giving reasons (Boss Around).
   Ex: If Arthur wants to use someone's toy, he says "Give it to me now, or else."
   Ex: If Jane wants to be up a t bat when someone else is up, she says "Let me bat or I'll beat you up."

4. A fourth set of strategies is to act helpless. (I can't)
   Ex: Bill acts helpless when trying to tie shoes, whining "I can't do it," without really trying.

5. A fifth set of strategies is to try to persuade/bargain with the other and give reasons, thinking of other's wants but only as a way to get what self wants (Bargain).
   Ex: If Kenny wants to go to gym, he says, "I'll go down and pick up snack today if you let me go to the gym."
   Ex: If Pete wants a friend to go sledding but his friend doesn't want to, Pete says: "You're such a great sledder, why don't you come out and sled?"

6. A sixth set of strategies is to ask others to convince the self (Give Me a Reason)
   Ex: "Why do you want to take me with you to visit your friend?" asks Alice if she does not want to go.

7. A final set of strategies is to compromise, paying attention to the needs of self and other and balancing them (Compromise - Let's Think About It).
   Ex: If two people are building a model and one person can't make her pieces stick with glue, the other may say: "It's up to you whether you want to try this, but it may work better if

2. Try to get two or three different adult and teen strategies.
3. Ask students to name any new strategies they saw in this set (that they did not see in part B).
4. (Optional) Discuss how it is different to negotiate with a person than with an adult.

III. Listing Negotiation Strategies

A. Use the strategies named in parts B and C above. List them on the board.

B. Ask if there are any other kinds of strategies that students use (or know about) that were not listed.

C. Read through the Negotiation Strategies handout. Ask students which strategies on the list they saw during the role-plays.

D. Tell students we will use this list and talk more about negotiation strategies during the rest of the course.

6. Give Me A Reason. If Alice wants to stay home and her friend wants to go to a movie, Alice asks, "Give me a reason why you want to go."

   If Ted doesn't want to practice division, he asks his teacher, "Why do I have to do this stuff?"

7. Compromise: If Alice wants to stay home and her friend wants to go to a movie, Alice says, "Let's watch a movie on TV instead."

   If Ted doesn't want to practice division, he asks his teacher if he can do half the exercise now and then take a break for a few minutes before he does the rest.

ASSESSMENT AND EVALUATION
Lesson: Introduction and Assessment

Number: 14

Objectives:

1. To introduce the goals of the juvenile law course.
2. To assess students' conceptual understanding, attitudes and interests related to juvenile crime and law.

Content and Activities:

I. Teacher introduction

Introduce the goals of the course and begin talking about some of the lessons and activities included in the course -- e.g., guest speakers, films or filmstrips, etc.

II. Assessment

A. Introduce reasons and expectations of juvenile law assessment

B. Complete assessment, either individually or as a group, depending on the needs and skills of students.

III. Evaluation

A. Use the student evaluation to review the course activities. Be sure to collect this data for future reference and course changes. Respond positively to students' ideas and criticisms; model and encourage constructive feedback.

B. Ask students for alternatives -- for new ideas about how to improve the course.
6. E. A juvenile can be charged and tried as an adult if the offense is serious enough (e.g., murder).

7. T.

8. T. Juvenile laws began in this century. Work by Jane Addams and other reformers in the early years of the century led to the development of juvenile courts and the juvenile justice system.

9. T. The case of Gerry Gault (see Lesson 5) led the Supreme Court to decide that juveniles have the same rights as adults to due process—including the presence of a lawyer at all legal proceedings.

10. T.

DEFINE THE WORDS.

1. Detention A.
2. Juvenile D.
3. Due process B.
4. Adjudication E.
5. Constitution C.

III. YOU DECIDE

The two cases are designed to provide practice in listening to and judging the consequences of juvenile crime. Help students begin to consider:

- a. What a crime looks like from different perspectives;
- b. The rights and responsibilities of parents as well as juveniles;
- c. Alternative consequences (punishments);
- d. The causes of juvenile crime ... societal as well as personal.
INSTRUCTORS' GUIDE

Lesson: Introduction and Assessment

I. Teacher Introduction

There are many goals that are suitable for a course in juvenile law. This course will emphasize the following:

A. A basic understanding of legal rights, responsibilities and procedures as they relate to juveniles.
B. Exploration of student attitudes about crime, police, juvenile law system and their responsibility in relationship to juvenile crime as a social phenomenon.
C. Basic understanding of the consequences of juvenile crime, for the juvenile, the victim, and society.
D. Practice in using the Five Steps (see Procedural Manual) to develop solutions to juvenile crime.
E. Opportunity to look at crime and courts from different perspectives: juvenile, police, victim, judge, court worker, parent.

Students should be encouraged to think about specific other topics and/or activities which can be included in the course. (See II.C.2)

II. Assessment

Remind students that the purposes of the assessment are to find out:

1) what they already know, so that the teacher can plan a good course (not too repetitive but not missing important information), and 2) what students want to learn more about.
I. What is your opinion?

1. Keep a score of how students vote. Use this to help plan lessons and other activities. Compare the ways in which different students voted.

2. Same as number 1. Ask students what they would like to learn from the visit(s) they checked.

3.

4. All of these can get juveniles in trouble with the law. However, (c), (d), (f) and (h) would not be considered crimes in most cases if they were committed by an adult. They are status offenses: behaviors that specifically involve juveniles and the law.

5. Discuss the implications for punishment and rehabilitation of each of the "causes" of crime. Collect student opinions. See if opinions change as a result of the class.

II.

A. True or False

1. F. The age for defining a juvenile changes from state to state but in most cases it includes teenagers younger than 18.

2. T.

3. F. except if a case is appealed.

4. T.

5. F. Most teenagers get in trouble for status offenses—truancy, running away, etc. Theft (larceny) is the most common crime today.
JUVENILE LAW

This class will help you learn more about how the law deals with teenagers (or juveniles). It will help you learn about your rights and responsibilities. It will help you learn how you can help other teenagers stay out of trouble with the law.

The first part of this class will help us find out what you know about crime and the law. It will also help us find out what you want to learn.

Please answer these questions. If you don't know an answer, try to guess. Try to answer all the questions on your own.

1. WHAT IS YOUR OPINION?
This part asks about your opinion. There are no right or wrong answers.

1. I want to find out more about:

   __a) my rights if I am arrested
   __b) what happens when a juvenile gets arrested
   __c) what happens in court
   __d) how juvenile court started
   __e) what it is like in a detention center
   __f) what kinds of jobs you can get helping teenagers
   __g) how to help teenagers stay out of trouble
   __h) different kinds of crimes and punishments
   __i) (list any other interests you have:)

2. I would like to visit with:

   __a) a lawyer
   __b) a policeman or policewoman
   __c) a judge
   __d) a juvenile court session
   __e) someone who has been convicted of a crime
