The guide presents information on approximately 150 toys useful for infants and children with sensory impairments. The toys listed are available from stores found nation-wide and the list is organized according to age level (infants, toddlers, and elementary levels). A brief description, price, source, and coding of types of skills the toys may help develop (auditory, balance and coordination, educational, eye-hand coordination, tactile, and visual skills) is included. (CL)
Two years ago two students in Kevin D. Magin's M.S.U. Class, "Educational Methods for Deaf-blind Students," embarked upon an ambitious project of toy evaluation. Toys were identified according to selective abilities/disabilities of infants and children with sensory impairments, with particular attention to deaf-blind children. Our 1982 publication, "Toy Guide: Gifts for Special Children" caused such widespread interest that our new edition includes only products from stores found on a nation-wide basis. Prices may vary.

The authors did not attempt to list every toy in each store. They wished only to give the reader a guide as to the variety of toys available for stimulating various developmental functions in sensory impaired children.

Our thanks to Kevin Magin, to April Coats and Kristy Marquette, the originators, and especially to Mary Przybocki and Stephanie A. Miller, the new editors of this very useful new guide to toys.
