This guide sets forth minimum approval criteria for clerical training in office occupations education programs in Oregon. The information in the guide is intended for use by district-level curriculum planners, teachers, regional coordinators, or state education department staff involved with new program development or revisions of existing programs. The guide outlines the instructional content of clerical office occupations education programs in terms of program descriptions, areas for training, program goals, course/content goals, and sample performance objectives. Descriptions are given of the following course titles: Office Procedures, Typing, Office Machines, Bookkeeping/Accounting, Business Communications, and Cooperative Work Experience. A section on organizational options is designed to illustrate a few of the many ways to deliver the minimum instructional content required for an approved vocational cluster program. Content is illustrated by course titles for the instructional levels to recognize that students from different grades may enroll in one or more levels of a program. (KC)

- Floppy disk
- Standalone text editor vs. shared logic system
- Dedicated vs. nondedicated (software-based) system
- Networking
- Peripheral devices
- Phototypesetting

Explain the steps in the information processing cycle:

- Input
- Processing
- Output
- Reproduction
- Distribution
- Storage/retrieval

Explain the applications of information processing:

- Repetitive communications (form letters)
- Combined repetitive and variable typing (financial statements and tabulations)
- Transcription typing
- Text preparation and editing
- Composition

List and explain careers available in information processing.

GENERAL OFFICE PROCEDURES

Students will be able to:

(Mailing and Shipping)

Process incoming mail:

- Open and sort
- Maintain register
- Distribute:
  - Read, highlight and annotate
Process outgoing mail:

- Fold and insert letters and enclosures in mailing envelopes

Given a list of 21 company names from the local telephone directory (at least three in each letter grouping; i.e., Blain, bostch, Brook), the student will index each name and then write or type an alphabetical listing with 90 percent accuracy.

Course Titles and Descriptions

OFFICE PROCEDURES (Year): Office procedures is often referred to as the "capstone course" of an office occupations program because it ties together the knowledge and skills acquired in other business courses. It also introduces the student to new, related subject matter, adding to his or her competence as a future office employee.

Office procedures should establish a link between school and business, and should, therefore, include all information, procedures and equipment typically used in an office. This includes training in word and data processing, mailable letters, letter writing, calculating machines, mail and shipping services, filing and records management, reprographics, financial records, telephone techniques and transcription. The course also includes job application and career information, emphasizing the development of productive attitudes and work habits.

Instruction may be provided through traditional classroom techniques, individualized-instruction (open lab), model office, office simulation or a combination of these approaches. The course should be used as the related classroom instruction for office occupations students participating in cooperative work experiences. For those students, classwork is correlated with actual experience in a business office. Usually students spend half the school day in classes and the other half in an office. Classwork concentrates on office occupations skills and procedures, although additional work may be assigned to students in specific areas where job performance shows a need for it.

Typing II (Year): In advanced typewriting, students develop employment skills. Production work is the major emphasis of the course, and includes typing manuscripts, stencil and spirit masters, programs, minutes of meetings, statistical tables and business forms. Students learn to dictate at the typewriter and correct errors. They perfect their typing skills through assignments that are typical of actual office work.

Office Machines (Year): Schools can teach machine skills several ways. One is to offer a separate office machines course. Another approach is to teach these skills in other courses such as office procedures, business math and advanced typing. A third alternative is to offer office machine instruction in a skills laboratory with individualized teaching.

As a separate course, Office Machines teaches students to solve business problems by using various business machines such as the electronic calculator, reprographic equipment, dictation/transcription equipment and word/data processing equipment.

Business Communications (Semester): Business Communications emphasizes grammar and writing for business letters. Students should also study the various types of oral communications, including listening, speaking, dictation and telephone techniques, as well as the process and theory of communications, nonverbal communication, reading for comprehension, proofreading and editing.

Bookkeeping/Accounting (Year): Bookkeeping/Accounting I gives students experience maintaining financial records, along with interpreting and analyzing them. Practice sets with business papers may be used to emphasize record management. Instruction in the application of electronic data processing may also be integrated throughout the course. The fundamentals and terminology of accounting are emphasized.

This course usually includes the basic methods of computing, classifying, recording and maintaining numerical data involved in financial and product control records, including the paying and receiving of money. Career objectives related to bookkeeping and accounting are identified and discussed.

Cooperative Work Experience: The term "cooperative" refers to the working relationship between office occupations, participating businesses and local schools. Office occupations instructors and employers work together to develop on-the-job learning experiences which will reinforce classroom instruction. Students are awarded credit for these experiences. Employers help coordinate on-the-job activities and supervise trainees. Students, teachers and employers plan and evaluate the program on a regular basis.

The office occupations instructor and employer outline individual student's responsibilities and training experiences on the job in a written document called a training agreement. Job experiences are coordinated with classroom instruction and opportunities are identified for the student to apply curriculum on the job. The agreement is usually signed by the employer, student, teacher, and parents or guardian; it requires school approval. A written learning program known as a training plan details the task to be learned by individual students, and may suggest learning activities for each task. Plans serve as a structure for learning experiences and can also help in evaluating student progress. Plans can be maintained by students to help them develop a sense of responsibility for their own progress.

Minimum Clerical Vocational Cluster Approval Criteria

In addition to specific cluster criteria, state-approved vocational programs shall meet the criteria for approval of all secondary vocational education instruction as listed in the Handbook of Policies and Procedures for Vocational Education Instruction in Oregon Secondary Schools, 1985.

Criteria outline:

- 4 credits (130 hours per credit) offered within a maximum of four years:
  - 1 credit of office procedures,
  - 1 credit of second-year typing
  - 2 credits to include any of the following or the equivalent:
    - 1/2 credit business communications
    - 1/2 credit office machines
    - 1 credit accounting
    - 2 credits clerical-related cooperative work experience

- Instructional time blocks of sufficient duration for skill development to meet industry standards.

- Program goals, course goals and instructional content which reflect those in the state cluster brief.

- Provision for occupational cooperative work experience.

- Vocationally certified teacher.

- An active, representative occupational advisory committee.

- Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) as an integral part of the instructional program.
Organizational Options

There are many acceptable options for delivery of instructional content while assuring that a quality program is provided. Schools have the opportunity to schedule classroom and laboratory activities to accommodate students and to facilitate learning. Delivery options include after school, weekends, summer school or alternate days.
