Instructors use tests to measure how much students have learned. Unfortunately, tests also measure students' test-taking skills. While these skills won't help if you don't know course material, they can keep you from losing points needlessly.

Preparing for Tests

* Be rested and comfortable. If you take a test when you are hungry, tired, or hung over, you won't perform well.

* Know what to expect. Learn ahead of time the kind of test you'll be taking, where and when it will be held, and what materials to bring. Arrive on time to avoid last-minute pressure.

* Expect some anxiety. Being concerned will help you do your best on a test.

* Avoid worried test-takers. Extreme nervousness, called test anxiety, will interfere with your work. Remember, test anxiety is contagious and unproductive.

Reducing Test Anxiety

* Keep a positive attitude. Decide to do your best, and don't blame yourself for what you don't know.

* Concentrate on the test. Don't worry about your ability, the behavior of other people, the number of questions, or even short memory lapses. Pay close attention to one question at a time. This kind of concentration reduces anxiety.

* Relax. If you are too nervous to think or read carefully, try to slow down physically. Change your mood by taking several slow, deep breaths. Then start to work.

When You Get Your Test

* Put your name on the test paper or answer sheet.

* Read the test instructions carefully. Be sure you understand what's expected of you, and ask questions if you don't.

* Preview the test, make sure your copy is complete, then plan your time for each part of the test, including a few minutes to look over your test after you have finished it.

* Answer the easiest questions first. You'll feel more confident, and you may also find some helpful ideas for the more difficult questions.

* Read each test question carefully, no matter what kind of test you are taking.

Before You Turn In Your Test

* Fight the urge to leave as soon as you have finished. It's natural, but it can hurt your grade.

* Review the test questions and your answers to them. Make any changes you think are important, but don't change your answers unless you have a good reason to do so.

* Review your own performance on the test. If you take a few notes on your test-taking skills, you'll be able to perform better on future tests. Ask yourself:

  Did I use my time well?

  What was asked that I didn't expect?

  How can I predict better for the next test?

  What part of the test was most difficult? Why?

  Did test questions come more from readings or from lecture material?

  What should I do differently in preparing for the next test?

For more information on test-taking skills, consult Raygor and Work, Systems for Study; Preston and Botel, How to Study; and Richardson, Coping With Test Anxiety.
STRATEGIES FOR TEST QUESTIONS

Different kinds of tests require different kinds of test-taking strategies. This handout will provide you with some helpful approaches for objective questions, essay questions and test problems.

Objective Questions
True-false or multiple choice questions appear on objective tests. Since both types of questions involve understanding a statement and making a choice in response to it, strategies for answering well are very similar.

* Look for the central idea of each question. What is the main point?
* Look for helpful key words like always, never, none, except, most, least. Underline key words if you can write on the test paper.
* Try to supply your own answer to a multiple choice question before you look at the alternatives. Then choose the alternative closest to your own answer.
* Mark an answer for every question. You are rarely penalized for guessing. You may lose credit for guessing incorrectly, but an unanswered question will cost you credit automatically.
* If all else fails and you have to guess an answer, then and only then consider this advice.

The length of the choices is sometimes a clue. When guessing, pick the long answer - it is easier for instructors to write short wrong answers than long ones.

If two choices are very similar, choose neither.

If two choices are opposite, choose one of them.

The most general alternative is frequently the right answer.

* Don't change your original answer unless you're completely sure it's wrong.

Essay Questions
When you answer an essay question, you're showing how well you can explain and support an idea, not just what you know. Keep the following ideas in mind.

* Read over all the essay questions before you start to write. Underline key words like define, compare, explain, describe or discuss. Jot down ideas on scratch paper, and then start with the easiest questions first.
* Think before you write, and try to outline your response. Remember, a good answer often starts with a direct response to the question.
  - mentions the topics or areas which the essay question describes.
  - provides specific as well as general information.
  - uses the technical vocabulary of the course.
* Write legibly. Graders sometimes presume your ignorance if they can't read your writing.
* Always write something, and leave a space at the end so that you can add to your answer.
* Proofread your essay answers. The few minutes you spend correcting errors in grammar, punctuation and spelling can improve your grade.

Solving Problems
When you work a problem, ask yourself three questions:

1) What are you being asked to find?
2) What do you need to know in order to find this?
3) What are you already given in the problem to help you with your search?

After working through the problem, look back at what it asked you to find. Does your answer cover it? If not, go through the three questions again.

Good problem solvers have these characteristics.

* Positive attitude. They believe that problems can be solved by careful, persistent (though sometimes lengthy) analysis, not by fast answers based on previous knowledge.
* Concern for accuracy. They read a problem several times, trying to understand it. They review their judgments and conclusions, avoid guessing, and check their work.
* Methodical planning. They break work into parts and then solve it step by step, starting with the simplest step.
* Concentration. They use their energy to solve problems by talking to themselves about what they are doing, creating mental pictures, relating the problem to familiar experiences, counting or drawing pictures.
FINDING BOOK REVIEWS

A good book review can provide important information about a book's style, plot and quality and about the author's credentials. It will reflect the current critical response to a book and often give comparisons to other similar titles. Remember that a book review is usually published within a year of the book's publication, so it will not include the more measured, comparative analysis that is found in good literary criticism (see the study guide Finding Literary Criticism).

Book Review Digest

To find book reviews, first look in the Book Review Digest on the library index shelves. Check your book's year of publication listed in the front of the book or on the library catalog and start searching in that year's volume. Reviews will continue to be published after the book is out, so reviews may be listed in Digest volumes several years later than the publication date. The Digest gives a brief plot summary and excerpted quotes from selected reviews. It also gives the length of the full review, which can be helpful when choosing a review to examine. (See the example.) At ACC, the Book Review Digest is available back to 1980.

Book Review Index

If you can't find a review in the Digest, try the Book Review Index, also on the index shelves. This index lists references only, but it examines more review magazines than the Digest. Thus you may find a more obscure title listed here. (See the example.)

Magazine Index

Don't overlook the Magazine Index, which lists book reviews as part of its general index. The Magazine Index lists magazines from 1977 to the present and is more current in its book review listings. This index prints a grade next to the review source, indicating the general tone of the review. The reviews are listed by author and by title.

For shorter evaluations, library selection tools such as Library Journal, Choice and Booklist are helpful. These journals cover a wider range of titles than the New York Times Book Review, although they may not be as critical in their evaluation of the book.

Don't overlook popular magazines such as Time, Newsweek, and Business Week for medium-length evaluative reviews. Special subject reviews are also available in such magazines as Science Books and Films, American Historical Review, American Literature, History, Reviews of New Books, Presidential Studies Quarterly, Texas Humanities and the Texas Observer. Many of these are listed in the indexes noted above, but for some another specialized index may need to be consulted.

Ask one of the librarians for help in your search for book reviews. They are familiar with many sources, as they must read reviews to select books for the library.

This is the story of two American companies in the soft drink industry, PepsiCo and the Coca-Cola Company. The authors examine the history of each company and the methods each uses in pursuit of the national and international market, index.

Choice 18:1310 My '81 180p

"The corporate infighting between Coke and Pepsi, as one must keep reminding oneself, is a cosmic battle over a product that the authors of 'The Cola Wars' rightfully classify as 'utterly superfluous'... As a Pepsi vice-president concedes: 'No one needs it.' What elevates this carbonated-war chronicle above the fizzy inconsequentiality of its subject matter, or the trade-journal dryness of yet another account of industrial competition, is the extent to which—both in this country and the rest of the world—the colas have come to symbolize (however distortedly) American life." Literary criticism describes, interprets, and evaluates literary works. Reading literary criticism can help you better understand an author’s work and define your own views about it.

This study guide will help you find basic sources of literary criticism. Two other ACC study guides might also be helpful: Finding Book Reviews and Finding Biographical Information.

STEP 1: Check the subject section of the library catalog to find books about an author. Critics will have the subheading "criticism and interpretation" after the author’s name, as in:

Faulkner, William, 1897-1962 — CRITICISM AND INTERPRETATION

When you find a book on the shelf, check the index and table of contents to see if it contains useful material. Other students may have checked out all the relevant books already. If so, don’t despair, go to step 2.

STEP 2: Use the reference collection. The reference librarian will help you. Some frequently used reference sources are listed below. Some of these contain criticism; others only show where to look for criticism.

The reference books on literary criticism usually cover a particular time period and or type of writing. Before you can make an intelligent selection from these sources, you need to ask yourself the following questions:

- Is the author dead or alive?

  - When and where did the author live?
  - Is the author alive or dead?
  - Is the author major or minor?
  - Does the author primarily write novels, short stories, drama, or poetry?
  - Did the author write primarily in English?

GENERAL

- Contemporary Literary Criticism - REF PN 771 C59 - for living authors
- Twentieth-Century Literary Criticism - REF PN 771 C27 - for 20th century deceased authors

Each set listed above contains excerpts from criticism of major authors, as well as references to additional criticism. Check the cumulative author index in the last volume under the author’s name to find entries.

- Magill’s Bibliography of Literary Criticism - REF PN 523 M35
  - This bibliography contains references to criticism of fiction, drama, and poetry from ancient times to the present.
- Masterplots - REF PN 44 M33
  - Although primarily a source of plot summaries, this set sometimes includes short critical commentaries on the world’s major literary works.
- Survey of Contemporary Literature - REF PN 44 M34
  - This set critiques American books published between 1954-1976 and also includes references for further study. It covers novels, poetry, collections, drama, and nondrama.
- Magill’s Literary Annual - REF PN 44 M35
  - These essay-reviews of outstanding American books published during a year include plot summaries and some criticism. This set covers books published after 1976.

NOVELS

- Critical Survey of Long Fiction - REF PN 274 M51 C7
  - After a short biography and summary of each author’s achievements, this work offers several pages of analysis of the author’s work. The index in the last volume lists all authors and works discussed.
- The Contemporary Novel - REF PN 3365 A227 1972
  - For each novelist, this book lists general criticism and criticism of individual novels. Published in other books and magazines.

SHORT STORIES

- Critical Survey of Short Fiction - REF PN 3321 C7
  - This work briefly discusses the author’s life, influence and story characteristics, then analyzes one or more of the author’s short stories in detail. The index in the last volume lists all authors and stories covered.
- Twentieth-Century Short Story Explication - PN 3373 W344 1977
  - Indexes essays about other books and magazines on individual short stories. This library only has a few of the sources; ask the librarian to show you which.

OTHER CRITICAL SOURCES

- McGraw-Hill Encyclopedia of World Drama - REF PN 1625 M3
  - This set provides “factual information and critical evaluations” of the world’s dramatists from ancient times to the twentieth century. As well as critical commentary, the book includes a complete list of plays and a list of criticism published elsewhere for major dramatists. Lesser dramatists have only encyclopedia-type articles.
- Drama Criticism: A Checklist of Interpretation since 1940 of English and American Plays - REF PN 2595 .C664 1972
- European Drama Criticism, 1900-1975 - REF PN 1721 P2 1977
  - The sources listed above are indexes to poetry explication printed elsewhere.

DRAMA

- Poetry - REF PN 1111 C7
  - This work gives principal works, achievements, biographies, and several pages of analysis for each poet covered. The last volume indexes all poets and titles of poems discussed.
- An Index to Criticism of British and American Poetry - REF PR 302 K866 1980
  - These are indexes to poetry explication printed elsewhere.

POETRY

- Poetry Explication, A Checklist of Interpretation - REF PR 302 K866 1980
  - These are indexes to poetry explication printed elsewhere.

INDEXES

- An Index to Criticism of British and American Poetry - REF PR 302 K866 1980
  - These are indexes to poetry explication printed elsewhere.
Students of literature often wonder where to begin with a first writing assignment. Is a book report-style plot summary right? Many literary critics have had important things to say. How can a student's ideas be as good?

In literature - fiction, poetry or drama - writers use special forms and structures of language to express their values. When you write about a literary work, you should explain your ideas about the work's values and evaluate the ways these values, or themes, are presented. In other words, a book report-style summary which answers the question “what did it say?” is not original or interesting. An analysis, which explains and evaluates how and why an author wrote, can be both. If you support your ideas with a close reading of the literary work you're discussing and if you explain your ideas clearly, your interpretation of a literary work can be as valid as anyone else's. You'll also find your own literary analysis a stimulating opportunity to present and argue for your views.

Your Audience

Assume that you are writing for a group of intelligent readers who have read the work you are discussing, who are interested in hearing a new interpretation of it, and who may or may not agree with you. Your purpose in writing about literature will be to persuade through discussion, not merely to inform.

Getting Started

First of all, make sure that you understand the scope and purpose of your essay assignment. Read it through carefully. Then discuss the assignment with your instructor. When you are sure of the problem the assignment describes, you are ready to develop your own answers.

To find original ideas, start with a few careful readings of the text itself. Mark the margins of your copy with questions, comments and responses. Underline sections you find especially interesting and significant. Look for repeated patterns. By the time you have finished your careful reading, you should be familiar with the work and understand the way it uses literary elements you have studied. Your ideas and feelings will be your most useful resources for writing; these ideas and feelings (and confidence) can only come from real familiarity with the work you want to discuss.

Supporting Your Thesis

Use the notes you have made to develop the body of your argument. Notecards and marked pages will help. When you use direct quotations, make sure that they are introduced clearly and that they are directly relevant to the point you are making. Don't overquote, or you'll seem to be asking another author to write your essay for you. If you read the work of critics, make sure that you document ideas that are not your own.

Writing Well

Your essays about literature should discuss your ideas and should be written in your voice, from the head and the heart. Don't try to impress your reader with a pretentious style.

Your essays about literature should reflect careful writing as well as careful thinking. Make sure that your statements about literary works are accurate and well supported, and proofread carefully to correct all mistakes in writing. You'll have better luck in writing and proofing if you prepare your essays in several stages.

When your essay has explored and supported the issues of your thesis fully, when it's organized logically and revised to reflect a clear, direct writing style free from careless errors, it's finished. If your thesis and discussion interested you, they'll interest your reader as well.
Business letters require good solid communication skills and knowledge of business letter conventions. This handout will provide you with guidelines for writing business letters that will transact business quickly, effectively and courteously.

When Do You Write a Business Letter?
Business letters represent you when you conduct transactions in writing. For example, you might write to request a price list, apply for a job or inquire about a refund policy.

Though your letter should not be particularly personal in tone, it should reflect courtesy, clarity and an understanding of your reader's needs. In business, time is valuable. Make it easy for your reader to help you by writing simply and by including only the information your reader needs.

PARTS OF A BUSINESS LETTER

Recipient Address
Give the reader's name and address as they are on the envelope in which your letter is mailed.

Salutation or Attention Line
Always address your reader by name prefixed with "Dear." This form of address is called a "salutation" and is always punctuated with a colon. When writing to a department or to a manager you do not know by name, use an attention line. (Example: "Attention Claims Manager"). Avoid stuffy "Dear Sir" or "Dear Madam" salutations.

Complimentary Close
"Sincerely" is a good choice. Punctuate your close with a comma.

Your Signature

A Typed Copy of Your Name

Return Address
Always provide your address so that your reader can contact you.

Date
The date on which you write is an important way for you to record the date of your message.

Introduction
Begin your letter with a short statement of your subject and reason for writing.

Your Text
Explain your subject fully and clearly. Be accurate and don't waste your reader's time with unnecessary details.

Closing
End your letter by saying something helpful or courteous to your reader. If you thank your reader, explain why.
Finding information about a person can be difficult for a library user. Your request may be very specific - "What is former Governor Bill Clements' address?" - or it can be more complex - "What was Eleanor Roosevelt's role in the Roosevelt presidency?" Different needs require different types of sources, and the ACC LRS has many materials that can help in your search for biographical information. First, try to narrow your search by finding basic facts about your subject. Is he alive? What is his nationality? Is she a scientist? a writer? To determine this information, try a general encyclopedia or:

- Chambers Biographical Dictionary (for British biographies) (REF CT 103 C4)
- Webster's Biographical Dictionary (for Americans) (REF CT 103 W4)

These resources provide brief sketches of contemporary and historical figures and are good for basic facts about hard to find individuals.

If you determine that your subject is an American or British historical figure, the following will provide excellent information:

- Dictionary of National Biography (REF DA 29 D56)
- Dictionary of American Biography (REF F 176.D563)

More like encyclopedias than dictionaries, these biographical volumes contain detailed, signed articles which provide information on subjects from Britain (in the National Biography) and the United States (in the American Biography). No living persons are included. Bibliographies accompany each article.

For more contemporary information, the Who's Who series may prove valuable:

- Who's Who (REF DA 28 W6)
- Who's Who in America (REF E 176 W642)
- Who's Who in the South and the Southwest (REF E 176 W643)
- Who Was Who in America (REF E176 W64)

These well-known references list thousands of brief biographical sketches of prominent people, outlining education, career history, family facts, and recreational pursuits. Who's Who is primarily for people now living or recently deceased. Who was Who in America and other regional titles provide coverage in their particular areas.

Another valuable resource for contemporary figures is the Current Biography Yearbook (REF CT 100 C8).

Yearly collections of biographical articles on "living leaders" in all fields of human accomplishment the world over. A good source for current and past information on entertainers, prominent businessmen, scientists and politicians. The LRS has annual volumes starting with year 1940.

If you know your subject's "claim to fame," try some of the reference books that focus on selected subject areas.

POLITICS AND GOVERNMENT

- Political Profiles (REF E 840.6 P6)

Articles on people prominent during a particular presidential administration. The LRS has volumes on The Truman Years, The Eisenhower Years, The Kennedy Years, The Johnson Years, The Nixon/ Ford Years.

For facts about hard to find individuals, you might also try:

- McGraw-Hill Encyclopedia of World Biography (REF CT 103 M27)

This 12-volume set of illustrated biographies includes subjects from around the world and for all historical periods.

If your subject is in none of those references, try:

- Biography Almanac (REF CT 31 B563) or
- Biographical Dictionaries Master Index (REF CT 213 B56)

These are indexes which direct you to over 250 different publications that provide biographical information.

Who's Who in American Politics (REF E 176 W6242)

The Almanac of American Politics (REF JK 1012 A44)

The Justices of the Supreme Court (REF KN 8744 F75)

LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE

- Contemporary Authors (15 volumes, REF C44 451 C59)

Don't miss this one. Brief, informative sketches of over 7,000 authors and media people now living or recently deceased. Broad coverage includes screenwriters, songwriters, editors, cartoonists and people prominent in fields other than writing, such as Salvador Dalí or George McGovern.

- Dictionary of Literary Biography Series

The American Renaissance in New England (REF PS 243 A54)

Antebellum Writers in New York and the South (REF PS 299 D5 v.3)

American Novelists 1910-1945 (REF PS 399 A54)

Modern American Novelists since 1945 (REF PS 323.5 A5)

- Science Fiction Writers (REF PS 374.535 S36)

American Poets since World War II (REF PS 370 A54)

American Poets since World War II (REF PS 370 A54)

- Twentieth Century American Dramatists (REF PS 129 D5 v.7)

Other helpful titles in language and literature include:

- American Women Writers (4 volumes, REF PS 147 A4)

- American Poets since World War II (REF PS 370 A54)

- Southern Writers: A Biographical Dictionary (REF PS 261 S59)

- A Dictionary of Literary Biography Series

- Dictionary of Scientists and Engineers (3 volumes; REF Q 141 M15)

This includes a volume for the Social and Behavioral Sciences

- Dictionary of Scientists and Engineers (3 volumes; REF Q 141 M15)

If you want to read a biography about your subject to gain a broader, detailed picture into the ACC LRS the biographies are mixed with other relevant books on the topic. To find a biography, look up the person's name in the SUBJECT section of the catalog. For example, biographies of historical figures are in the history section, while biographies of famous entrepreneurs are in the business section.
