INTRODUCTION

This document contains validated activities and competencies needed by information professionals working in an archive or museum. The following operational definition of competency was developed:

A competency is a generic knowledge, skill or attitude of a person that is casually related to effective behavior as demonstrated through external performance criteria, where:

- Knowledge is having information about, knowing, understanding, being acquainted with, being aware of, having experience of, or being familiar with something, someone, or how to do something.

- Skill is the ability to use one's knowledge effectively.

- Attitude is a mental or emotional approach to something, or someone.

We have identified several types of knowledge that are necessary to perform information work satisfactorily as follows:

- Basic knowledge in such areas as language, communication, arithmetic operations, etc.

- Subject knowledge of primary subject fields of users served such as medicine, chemistry, law, etc.

- Library and information work environments such as the information community, its participants and their social, economic and technical interrelationships, etc.

- Knowledge of what work is done such as the activities required to produce services and products, etc.

- Knowledge of the organization or user community served such as the mission, goals, and objectives of the user or the organization, user's information needs and requirements, etc.
There appear to be three kinds of skills necessary to perform information work satisfactorily including:

- Basic skills such as cognitive, communication, analytical, etc.

- Skills related to each specific activity being performed such as negotiation, reference questions, evaluation of search outputs, etc.

- Other skills such as managing time effectively, budgeting and making projections, etc.

Attitudes of information professionals are found to be extremely important to work performance. We have found it useful to subdivide attitudes into:

- Dispositional attitudes toward one's profession, the organization served, one's work organization, and other people such as users and co-workers.

- Personality traits/qualities such as confidence, inquisitiveness, sense of ethics, flexibility, etc.

- Attitudes related to job/work/organization such as willingness to accept responsibility, willingness to learn, desire to grow, etc.

The activities and competencies are organized according to the functions which information professionals perform, and by professional level as displayed in Figure 1. The competencies are cumulative across professional level, i.e., competencies of mid-level professionals include entries shown at the mid-level as well as those at the entry level, etc.

It is important to understand the distinction between functions performed and positions or job titles. Our rationale behind the functional approach was that we were more concerned with what information professionals do than with what they are called. In a single-person unit, therefore, the information professional will undoubtedly perform more than a single function. In using and interpreting the competency data in this document, it is important to consider the functions being performed by professionals and the activities being performed to determine which competencies are appropriate. The functions identified for information professionals working in an archive or museum are:

- acquisitions
- cataloging/indexing
- reference
- exhibit management
- organization/management support.

Three professional levels were defined as follows:

- entry level (up to 3 years of professional experience)
- mid level (4-9 years of professional experience)
- senior level (10 or more years of professional experience).

The activities performed are listed first and numbered sequentially. The actual assignment of individual activities to subcategories of the major activities and to the functions varies from one worksetting to another. The organization of activities that we developed provided us with the "best fit" case. Indented and unnumbered activities are essentially paraprofessional activities which, in small organizations, may be performed by professionals.
