ABSTRACT

An outline of the knowledge and skills to be taught in high school world history courses in order to meet the Department of Defense Dependents Schools (DoDDS) social studies objectives is provided. Material is divided into three parts. Following an introduction, a one page description overviews the curriculum topic for high school world history, and specifies the major subject areas to be covered within the topic, time allotment, and other classroom specifics. A list of acknowledgments contains names and addresses of all educators contributing to the curriculum guide. The bulk of the document consists of a detailed outline of content and objectives to be covered. The information, provided in matrix form, is divided by marking period and includes suggested time frame and a list of areas of study, each tagged to learning objectives, suggested activities, and page correlations with several widely used social studies textbooks. For world history, the areas of study covered are: ancient civilization, Middle Ages, Renaissance through the nineteenth century, and nationalism and the contemporary world. (LP)

INTRODUCTION

The Department of Defense Dependents Schools (DoDDS) Social Studies Guides have been developed for the purpose of providing the classroom teacher with an outline of knowledge and skills which are to be taught at each grade level in order to meet the DoDDS social studies objectives.

As these guides are being used, it is requested that suggestions and recommendations for changes be submitted to the regional social studies coordinators. These guides will be reviewed and revised in accordance with the DoDDS Curriculum Development Plan.

World History

World History carries the seventh and ninth grade geographical and cultural studies one step further by looking at the historical development of these cultures and is a continuation of the chronological sixth grade study of Ancient World Civilizations.

An increasingly interdependent world makes the study of World History vital to any well educated citizenry. Traditionally, this course has focused almost exclusively on Western History and was historically based. Present world situations require a more multidisciplinary approach drawing from economics, political science, geography, and anthropology. The humanities also should not be neglected, showing the development of histories through art, music, and literature. World History should not only be more than pure history, but also functional.

All teachers of World History should strive to see that it is a WORLD HISTORY. Adequate attention should be paid to Asia, Africa, and the Americas. For example, when studying feudalism, do not overlook feudalism in Japan (Shoguarate), China (Mongols), India (Moguls), or other areas of the world. The host nation history and culture should be used as much as possible for comparisons and parallels.

The first nine week course of study should focus on ancient civilization. The second nine weeks cover the Middle Ages through feudalism within and outside of Europe. The third nine week period involves a study of the Renaissance through the 19th century. The last nine weeks should focus on Nationalism and the Contemporary World.
