A project was conducted to help nonreading parents who want to read to their children but feel that they are not good enough readers to do so. The primary objectives of the project were to demonstrate that there are children's books that beginning readers can read to their children, to offer suggestions about reading to children, and to provide opportunities to share experiences and concerns, and to practice reading some children's picture books in a supportive and nonthreatening atmosphere. Local education and community service agencies interested in participating in the family reading project were identified. Then, in collaboration with the Free Library of Philadelphia and nine of the local education and community service programs, eight two-part family reading workshops were held for nonreading parents. The first session of each workshop was hosted by a community program, and the second half was held at a nearby branch of the library. Overall, the project was quite successful and well received, the main problem being poor workshop attendance at some sites. It was felt that attendance could be improved by allowing for seasonal conditions and child care needs when scheduling future workshops. (Appendices include the initial project letter and questionnaire, workshop schedules, and workshop materials. Resource lists include books: (1) for parents; (2) for preschool children; (3) about black children; and (4) to use with Spanish-American children. (MN)}
A Report on 310 Project #87-98-7017

THE FAMILY THAT READS TOGETHER

Rebecca A. Eno, Project Director

The Center for Literacy, Inc.
3723 Chestnut Street
Philadelphia, PA 19104-3189
(215) 382-3700

JoAnn Weinberger, Executive Director

August 31, 1987

Federal Funds: $4766  Local Matching Funds: $530

This report is the result of a project supported in whole or in part by the U.S. Office of Education and the Pennsylvania Department of Education. However, the opinions expressed herein do not necessarily reflect the position or policy of the U.S. Department of Education or the Pennsylvania Department of Education, and no official endorsement should be inferred.

Copies of this report and the accompanying booklet have been filed with the ERIC and Advance clearinghouses.
Table of Contents

Abstract ........................................... 3
Introduction ........................................ 4
Goals & Objectives ................................. 7
Procedures .......................................... 8
Evaluation .......................................... 12
Recommendations ................................. 17
Dissemination ....................................... 18

Appendices:
A. Initial Letter & Questionnaire ............... 19
B. Workshop Schedules & Explanatory Letter . 21
C. Useful Resources ............................... 24
D. Workshop Materials ............................ 25
Abstract

Literacy students frequently mention a desire to read to their children as one of their main reasons for improving their own reading. Often, these parents have no family literacy model to rely on; they feel that they cannot read anything, including picture books, and they really cannot read the popular "how to read to children" handbooks.

This project set out to help such non-reading parents by: 1.) demonstrating that there are children's books they can read; 2.) offering suggestions about reading to children (including an easy to read booklet); and 3.) providing opportunities to share experiences and concerns and to practice reading some children's picture books in a supportive, non-threatening atmosphere.

From July 1986 through June 1987, the Center for Literacy collaborated with the Free Library of Philadelphia and nine other local education and community service programs to present nine two-part workshops on reading to children for parents who have difficulty with reading.

This report will be of most interest to individuals who work with non-reading parents: ABE/literacy and early childhood teachers, counselors and administrators, and children's librarians.
Introduction

The adults who come to Philadelphia's Center for Literacy (CFL) give many different reasons for wanting to improve their reading. One of the most compelling motivations, as well as one of the most frequently mentioned is: "I want to be able to read to my children." These parents*, and many others like them who are non-readers or beginning readers, are at a real loss: they are convinced that they can't read anything, including children's picture books; they truly cannot read the popular "how to read to children" handbooks; and they usually lack a personal family literacy model to draw upon, having seldom been read to as children themselves.

That there is a strong connection between family reading behavior and a child's reading success is a common-sense notion which has lately received considerable attention in both educational and popular literature. Many children's educational programs, community programs, and libraries, as well as legislators at all governmental levels have become aware of this family reading connection and of their potential roles in promoting family literacy. In Philadelphia, the Friends of the Free Library has brought together 22 local agencies and institutions (including CFL) to form the Read Together Coalition.

*In this report, whenever the term "parent(s)" occurs, it is meant to include all adults who spend time with children in a care-giving role (guardians, grandparents, other relatives, babysitters, teachers aides, etc.)
The Coalition's mission is to promote family reading activities in the Philadelphia area. At the agency level, CFL had done some successful outreach to early childhood programs over the past few years, operating several adult literacy classes at day-care and Head Start sites.

This project, "The Family That Reads Together", was proposed as an innovative way for CFL to reach parents who are non-readers or beginning readers, strengthening our existing family literacy network and initiating new inter-agency relationships. The project was designed to run for a year. It featured the development of an easy-to-read booklet of suggestions for reading to children and the presentation of eight family reading workshops held at various educational, community, and library sites throughout the city.

It was assumed that, through this project, CFL could better serve parents who were already ABE/literacy students. It was also hoped that the project would help CFL reach non-reading parents not already enrolled in adult education: both directly (through the workshops) and indirectly (through our contacts with early childhood and community programs.) Interested parents would be referred to appropriate ABE/literacy programs.

The following agencies and individuals have been extremely helpful in the carrying out of this project:

Friends of the Free Library: Lynn Robert
Spectrum Health Services: Rita Arrington
CCP's Centers for Adult Learning: Julia Eddy and Ms. White Lutheran Settlement House Women's Program: Pennie Marcus and Gloria Still Germantown Women's Education Project: Peggy McGuire
Mid-City YWCA: Jackie Brinkley
North Light Boys and Girls Club: Sandra Clark
Institute for Learning: Allen Lehrman
Fairhill Elementary School: Dr. Marylouise DeNicola
Frankford YWCA: Arlene Poulos and Linda Welch
Manna Head Start: Harvey P. Davis and Jacqui Everett
Goals & Objectives

The goal of this project was to help non-reading parents encourage their children's reading development by strengthening the parents' own self-confidence and reading skill. To this end, the following objectives were proposed:

a. To identify local education and community service agencies interested in participating in this family reading project.

b. To collaborate with the Free Library and interested programs (as determined above) in presenting eight two-part "Family Reading" workshops for non-reading parents: the first session of each to be hosted by a community program, the second held at a nearby branch of the Free Library.

c. To develop, field-test, and distribute an easy-to-read booklet about reading to children.
During the summer of 1986, letters were sent to 664 local educational (early childhood and ABE/literacy), community, and other social service agencies. The letter explained the proposed project and invited agencies to become involved in two ways: by hosting a workshop and/or by passing on information and encouraging non-reading parents to attend. (The explanatory letter and accompanying mail-back questionnaire can be found in Appendix A.)

Of the 36 agencies which expressed an interest in hosting initial workshop sessions, nine were chosen based on geographic representation and accessibility. The schedule of initial workshops was set, and copies were sent to the 664 agencies on the original mailing list. Meanwhile, the Free Library's Office of Work with Children determined which local branches would be able to provide follow-up sessions for the nine scheduled initial sessions. (See Appendix B for copies of the schedules and an explanatory letter.)

The next phase of the project involved designing the workshop and the booklet of suggestions. The workshop format was shaped primarily by experience in working with groups of adult literacy students: it needed to be friendly and informal (low-threat); it needed to invite and encourage participants to share their experiences and ideas; it needed to be positive in tone; and it needed to be structured yet flexible enough to go where participants wanted and needed it to go. Since it was possible that this might be some parents' first contact with adult education, these points were especially important to consider.

The content of the pre-determined portions of the workshop was strongly influenced by personal observations of what does and doesn't work well in reading to children. This information was supplemented by several popular "how-to" books and some academic research into family reading behavior. Books and articles which proved especially useful and enlightening appear in Appendix C.

The booklet, Read to Me!, was designed to be used either within the workshop format or independently. It is similar to the workshop in both content (what, when, where, why and how to read to children, and how to practice oral reading skills) and tone (supportive and encouraging). Vocabulary, proximity to spoken language, print size, and page lay-out were all considered in the effort to make the booklet as easy to read as possible.

The workshops focussed on participants' concerns about reading to children. Therefore, each workshop went in a unique direction. Nevertheless, all the initial sessions included the following common activities:

1. Introductions of presenter(s) and participants (names, expectations and hopes for workshop outcomes, ages and interests of children).

2. Filling out the Information Sheet together. (See Appendix D for all workshop materials.)

4. Sharing past and current experiences of reading to children.

5. Discussing various factors: when and where to read to children, how to choose appropriate books, and where to find them.
6. Presenting categories of children's books; discussing and examining popular examples of the different types.

7. Suggesting ways to prepare to read aloud to children, including methods for practicing actual stories or books.

8. Informing participants of the library follow-up session.

9. Making appropriate referrals to literacy and ABE/GED programs.

Throughout each workshop, pertinent sections of the booklet, "Read to Me!" were read aloud (either by the workshop leader or by volunteers from the group.) The workshop leader generally adopted the role of facilitator, guiding the group through open discussion.

Each follow-up session took place in a nearby branch of the Free Library about two weeks after the initial session. In each case, the librarian(s) presented a display of popular children's books, guided participants through library procedures, assisted them in applying for library cards, and helped individuals locate books of interest. Each session allowed some time for browsing, and participants informally practiced reading children's books.

Since most of the participating librarians attended the initial sessions in their areas, the library sessions were clearly designed with the interests and concerns of the particular group of parents in mind. For example, one team of librarians made a point of addressing their group's concerns about helping older children choose appropriate books. Another group was very interested in activities to use along with picture books; that librarian gave many creative examples of games and songs, as well as taking the group through the process of dramatizing a story with stick puppets.
Evaluation

Like most endeavors, this project was quite successful in some respects; less so in others. In terms of achieving the three proposed objectives, the project's accomplishments include:

Objective A. Many educational and human service agencies responded favorably to the initial interest survey. As previously noted, 36 agencies wanted to host workshops. An additional 24 programs actively requested workshop schedules and information to relay to their clients. Twenty-three programs asked for more information about CFL, indicating that they had clients they'd like to refer for literacy instruction.

In general, this project was quite successful at arousing interest and awareness among educational and human service professionals who are likely to encounter non-reading adults, and in particular, non-reading parents.

Objective B. The proposed scheduling goal of eight two-part workshops was exceeded: nine were offered. This was done to better accommodate the various neighborhoods in the city. Therefore, this objective was also met successfully - at least in terms of the number of workshops advertised and offered.

Objective C. The booklet about reading to children was developed, field-tested and revised over the course of the year. The final version, "Read to Me!" is attached to this report. The proposed 50 copies have been made available to those programs which expressed the most interest in this project. An additional 50 copies have been produced for use by CFL's own students.
Beyond the three major objectives, several other criteria were employed to judge the success of this project. A discussion of these follows.

Number of agencies participating. As reported, 60 agencies actively responded to the initial interest survey. It is difficult to know how many other agencies on the mailing list may have posted the workshop schedule or otherwise notified their clients or the general public. (A number of people called after having seen the schedule posted in public space.)

Number of complete workshops held. All nine of the initial workshop sessions were held and were attended by at least one person. Four of the workshops drew no one from the "target" audience of non-reading parents. Three of these sessions were attended by professional and volunteer staff from various programs. The fourth was a strange case in which the main participants present were eight elementary school children from an after-school program. Their parents were expected to attend, but they never appeared. In each of these unusual cases, the workshop format was adapted to the reeds and interests of those present.

The library sessions were an altogether different story. Those which were to follow the four unusual cases explained above were simply cancelled, since they would have served little purpose. Of the remaining five, one went unattended, and another was indefinitely delayed. (Initially the delay was due to inclement weather, then the CCP-CLIC class effected was unable to provide a definite rescheduling date.)
The three library sessions that ran according to schedule made up in quality for the others. The librarians involved radiated an infectious enthusiasm, and provided wonderful experiences for the parents who attended.

Number of parents participating. All told, 89 adults attended the workshops. Of that total, 59 were, as far as could be determined, of the target population. The other 30 individuals attending included interested staff from the Free Library, the hosting programs, and various other programs.

Attendance varied significantly from site to site in numbers and types of people present. Aside from the presenter and library staff, the number of participants at individual workshops ranged from 1 - 22 (including parents and professionals who work with parents).

Several factors appeared to strongly influence attendance at the various workshops:

- weather: Two of the more poorly-attended workshop sessions occurred on bitter, icy days.

- existence of an ABE/literacy program at the site: Predictably enough, three of the four best-attended workshops took place where there were ready-made audiences of self-identified beginning readers.

- active interest and involvement by staff at the site: Two of the more poorly-attended workshops were held at sites where staff gave minimal or no attention to informing and encouraging their own clients to attend.

Number of parents receiving library cards. One of the unconditionally positive results of the project was that 19 parents applied for library cards.

Number of parents continuing as students or joining ABE/literacy programs as a result of this project. Of the 59 parents in attendance, most were already enrolled in ABE or literacy programs. The three hosting ABE programs (Community College CLIC, Lutheran Settlement House Women's Program, and the Germantown Women's Education Project) accounted for 32 of them. Two CFL students attended individually. Twenty-two others attended the workshop at Fairhill Elementary School. Most of these parents were involved with the school in some volunteer capacity (classroom aide, for example), or in the School District's Parent-Scholar Program. Only six of the parents were previously unreached by adult education.

Evaluations of the workshops and booklet by parent-participants and participating agencies. The responses from everyone involved were overwhelmingly positive. Of 44 responses received, 32 rated the workshop as "very useful". The rest said it was "somewhat useful". All but two respondents felt that they would use the booklet after they left the workshop.

The most popular thing about the workshop was getting "new ideas about reading to children", followed closely by "talking with other parents." The display of children's books, tips on how to practice reading out loud, and the booklet and other workshop materials were seen as of relatively less importance.

In examining the responses to the last three questions on the workshop evaluation sheet, it is important to realize that a number of staff responses got anonymously mixed in with those of the parents. Fifteen people reported reading to their children often, 18 reported reading to children sometimes, and 9 said they never read to their children. Most participants reported feeling... better about reading to their children as a result of the workshop; two said they did not, one wrote in "maybe", and eight didn't respond. Twenty-eight people said they thought they would read to their children more often as a result of the workshop, three said they didn't think they would, nine were not sure, and four chose not to respond.

Some miscellaneous evaluative comments from parent-participants:

"This was a very nice meeting. Hope to see you again."

[Regarding the booklet:] "Looks like it's all right here!"

[Regarding the assistance she received to apply for a library card:] "This is great! I went one time, and they shoved this form at me, and I couldn't figure it out so I left."

"I never would have guessed the libraries had all this to offer!"

Comments from participating agency staff:

"I enjoyed hearing from parents all the concerns, fears, frustrations they feel when dealing with their children's school experience."

"The students felt good about themselves after the workshop. They felt you respected them. You were not at all condescending - something they are always prepared for."

"The supportive environment and all the sharing and interaction of parents -- the information and ideas should be of great benefit to families."

"The students really appreciated the workshop. It inspired us to spend more class time at the library!"
Recommendations

Overall, this was quite an informative and successful project. The main problem encountered was poor workshop attendance at some sites. In future projects, seasonal conditions and the availability of childcare should be seriously considered when scheduling workshops.

Many of the people involved in this project volunteered suggestions for improving workshop attendance, many of which are quite time-intensive. Parents at Fairhill Elementary emphasized the necessity of following up any mailed information with a phone call when dealing with institutions and agencies. They also suggested spending a day or two at the school — especially at the beginning and end of the day — to talk directly with parents as they drop off and collect their children.

Another excellent idea came from staff at Spectrum Health Services. They thought that a good way to reach non-reading parents would be to set up shop in the waiting room at public health clinics (such as Spectrum). Stocked with a good supply of children's books and brochures about CFL's services, someone could demonstrate to weary parents the calming effect of a good story, encourage family literacy activities, and recruit some potential CFL students.
Dissemination Information

Copies of this final report and the booklet, "Read to Me!" have been filed with the Pennsylvania Department of Education, and the ERIC and Advance clearinghouses.

Fifty copies of "Read to Me!" have been distributed among the agencies which expressed the most interest in this project. Another 50 copies have been distributed within CFL for use of our own students.
Dear Friends:

"I want to be able to read to my children and get them into books." This goal is among the most frequently expressed by adults in literacy programs. These parents feel that their own poor reading skills prevent them from helping their children as much as they would like. Educators of children and adults, parents, researchers, librarians, politicians, and other interested citizens have become aware of the need to work together in an effort to promote family reading as a way to strengthen children's reading.

The Center for Literacy recently received a small grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Education to present eight workshops on reading to children for parents (and other adults who spend time with children) who are non-readers or beginning readers themselves. Parents will learn about the availability of wordless and easy-to-read picture books and be provided with opportunities to locate such books in the public library and to practice reading them orally. They will receive and discuss easy-to-read booklets of suggestions about how to read to children which will directly address the concerns of non-reading parents. The workshops will take place between November 1986 and May 1987, each one consisting of two sessions: the first in an early childhood or adult basic education site, and the second in a near-by branch of the Free Library.

The goal of the project is to reach as many non-reading parents as possible through these workshops. The key to our success lies in collaboration with other local agencies and organizations which have a vested interest in family literacy, including the Free Library of Philadelphia, the Read Together Coalition, area daycare, early childhood education and adult basic education programs, and other various family services. First we must identify those organizations which serve families who would benefit from the workshops. If your program fits that description, we hope you will want to participate in this project. We will need several early childhood and/or adult literacy programs to host workshops at their sites. And we hope that all of you will promote the workshops to potential parent-participants once the schedule of times and locations is set.

Please take a few minutes to complete the enclosed form and return it to The Center for Literacy by August 29, 1986. If you would like to discuss the project in greater detail before responding, call me at 382-3859 during the week of August 25th. I look forward to our future communications.

Sincerely,

Becky Eno

Educational Counselor
"The Family That Reads Together"

AGENCY INTEREST SURVEY

Please check those statements which apply to your program. Thank you for returning this survey by August 29, 1986.

____ We would like to host one of the parent workshops. Site address, if different from agency address:

____________________________________________________________________________________

____ We know some parents who may be interested in attending the workshops. (Estimate how many, if possible:_____.) Please send us the workshop schedule and any other pertinent information as it develops.

____ We would like to refer some of the parents we work with to CFL's adult literacy program. Please:

____ call us with more information.

____ send us more information.

Comments:

Agency ____________________________________________

Address ____________________________________________

____________________________________________________________________________________

Contact person _______________________________________

Phone # _____________________________________________

Best time(s) to contact ________________________________

THANK YOU VERY MUCH FOR YOUR COOPERATION!!
Dear Friends:

During the next four months, the Center for Literacy will present "Family Read-Together" workshops at nine locations throughout Philadelphia. Enclosed is a flier which briefly explains the workshop. We hope that you will post this information in a strategic spot and that you will encourage appropriate (i.e., low- or non-reading) parents to attend. Some additional details about the workshops which you may want to pass on to potential participants are included below.

We will talk about:

- ways to practice reading children's books aloud
- which children's books are easy to read
- what works and what doesn't work when reading to kids

We will also:

- meet with a children's librarian
- pick out library books and practice reading them
- get library cards (if you don't already have one)

If you'd like more fliers to post, please call me at 382-3859, or feel free to duplicate them yourself, if you prefer.

Thanks very much for your cooperation and support!

Sincerely,

Becky Eno
Project Coordinator
"Read to me!!"

Do you want to read to your children?

Is reading hard for you?

Are you tired of making excuses to your children and to yourself?

COME TO A FAMILY READ-TOGETHER WORKSHOP!

Parents, grandparents, and other adults who take care of children are welcome.

COME TO THE WORKSHOP THAT IS BEST FOR YOU:

January

13 (Tues.) 6-8pm. Spectrum Health Services 5619-23 Vine St.

16 (Fri.) 12-2pm. Community College of Phila. St. James Episcopal Church 6838 Woodland Ave.

February

10 (Tues.) 10-12 noon Lutheran Settlement House Women's Program 1340 Frankford Ave.

26 (Thurs.) 10-12 noon Germantown Women's Ed. Project Wissahickon Boys & Girls Club Morris & Coulter Sts.

March

2 (Mon.) 6-8pm. Mid-City YWCA 2027 Chestnut St.

17 (Tues.) 3:30-5.30pm. North Light, Inc. 175 Green Lane

25 (Wed.) 10-12 noon Institute for Learning 1427 Catharine St.

April

29 (Wed.) 7-9pm. Frankford YWCA 4700 Leiper St.

A visit to the local library will follow each workshop.

* Workshops presented by the Center for Literacy in cooperation with the Free Library of Philadelphia

For more information, call Becky Eno at 382-3859.
"The Family That Reads Together"
Center for Literacy Workshops

Schedule at The Free Library of Philadelphia

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Time</th>
<th>Location</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>January 27</td>
<td>6:00 P.M. - 8:00 P.M.</td>
<td>West Philadelphia Regional Library (Spectrum Health Services)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>January 30</td>
<td>12:00 Noon - 2:00 P.M.</td>
<td>Peaschalville Branch (Community College of Philadelphia)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 18</td>
<td>10:00 A.M. - 12:00 Noon</td>
<td>Kensington Branch (Lutheran Settlement House)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>March 12</td>
<td>10:00 A.M. - 12:00 Noon</td>
<td>Falls of Schuykill Branch (Germantown Woman's Ed.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>March 16</td>
<td>6:00 P.M. - 8:00 P.M.</td>
<td>Central Library - Children's Department (Mid-City YWCA)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>March 31</td>
<td>3:30 P.M. - 5:30 P.M.</td>
<td>Roxborough Branch (North Light, Inc.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>April 1</td>
<td>10:00 A.M. - 12:00 Noon</td>
<td>South Philadelphia Branch (Institute For Learning)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>April 22</td>
<td>9:00 A.M. - 11:00 A.M.</td>
<td>Lehigh Avenue Branch (Fairhill School)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>May 13</td>
<td>7:00 P.M. - 9:00 P.M.</td>
<td>Frankford Branch (Frankford YWCA)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Appendix C

Useful Resources

May Hill Arbuthnot; Children's Reading in the Home; Scott, Foresman and Co.; 1969

Erma Bombeck; "How to Encourage Your Child to Read"; the "Power of the Printed Word" series; International Paper Co.; 1984

Marilyn Cochran-Smith; The Making of a Reader; 1984

Carol Cox; Sharing Books with Babies: A Program for Parents; unpublished manuscript; 1984

Bob Greene; "'I Just Want to Read to My Granddaughter'"; 50 Plus; December, 1984

Joanne Healy; How to Organize a Parents and Tots Reading Program in Your Community and Storyteller's Guide; Literacy Council of Alaska, Fairbanks; 1986

Shirley Heath; "What No Bedtime Story Means: Narrative Skills at Home and School"; Language in Society 11:1

Nancy Larrick; A Parent's Guide to Children's Literature; Doubleday & Co., Inc.; 1964

John Lautenschlager and Karl V. Hertz; "Inexpensive, Worthwhile, Educational - Parents Reading to Children"; The Reading Teacher; October 1984

Denny Taylor; Family Literacy: Young Children Learning to Read and Write; Heinemann Educational Books Ltd.; 1983

Jim Trelease; The Read-Aloud Handbook; Penguin Books; 1979
Appendix D
Workshop Materials

FAMILY READ - TOGETHER
INFORMATION SHEET

Name ____________________________
Address __________________________
Phone ____________________________

1. How did you find out about this workshop?
   ___ Child's pre-school or daycare center
   ___ Family health or counseling center
   ___ Adult reading or ABE program
   ___ Community center

2. Do you have a library card? Yes No

3. Do you borrow children's books from the Free Library?
   Yes - often Yes - sometimes No

4. Will you be joining us at the ___________ Library at __________________________ on ____________?
      Yes No

5. Are you enrolled in an adult education program?
   Yes No

6. Are you interested in joining an adult education program?
   Yes No
THE FREE LIBRARY OF PHILADELPHIA
KENSINGTON BRANCH

READING WITH YOUR PRESCHOOL CHILD

Concept books

P.D. Eastman
Thomas Matthiesen
Tana Hoban
Bill Gillham
Molly Bang
Maurice Sendak
Bill Martin
Tana Hoban

Books of participation and thought

Tana Hoban
Peggy Parish
Miki Yektai

Mother Goose

Tomie de Paola
William Joyce
Rodney Peppé
Steven Kellogg

Wordless or nearly so

John Goodall
Peter Spier
Nancy Tafuri
Tana Hoban
Ann Jonas
Margaret Wise Brown
Charlotte Pomerantz
Pat Hutchins
Tomie De Paola
Raymond Briggs

Easy readers

Else Minarik
Arnold Lobel
Mary Blount Christian
Joanna Cole
Caron Cohen
Berniece Freschet
Jean Bethell

The alphabet book
ABC, an alphabet book
1, 2, 3
Let's look for numbers
Ten, nine, eight
One was Johnny
Brown bear, brown bear, what do you see?
Round & round & round

I read signs and I read symbols
I can -- can you? (Four levels)
Sun rain

Tomie de Paola's Mother Goose
Mother Goose
The house that Jack built
There was an old woman

Creepy castle and Paddy Pork's holiday
Noah's Ark
Early morning in the barn and Rabbit's morning
One little kitten
Two bear cubs
Goodnight Moon
Where's the bear?
Rosie's walk
The hunter and the animals
The snowman

Little Bear
Frog and Toad are friends
Swamp monsters
Bony-Legs
Sally Ann Thunder Ann Whirlwind Crockett
Porcupine baby
Bathtime

List compiled by Margaret Plotkin
Easy picture books

Gabrielle Vincent
H.A. Rey
Feodor Rojankovsky
Alice and Martin Provensen
Ezra Jack Keats
Albert Lamorisse
Shigeo Watanabe
Ruth Krauss

Bravo, Ernest and Celestine
Curious George
Animals on the farm
The year at Maple Hill Farm
The snowy day
The red balloon
What a good lunch!
The carrot seed

Harder picture books

Judy Dunn
Ina Friedman
James Marshall
Russell Hoban
Harry Allard
Graham Oakley

The little puppy
How my parents learned to eat
The cut-ups
Bread and jam for Frances
The Stupids have a ball
The church cat abroad

Parent-Teacher collection

Jim Trelease
Margaret Mary Kimmell
Nancy Larrick
Betsy Hearne
Kate McMullen
Marion Grayson
Ann Cole

The read-aloud handbook
For reading out loud!
A parent's guide to children's reading
Choosing books for children
How to choose good books for kids
Let's do fingerplays
I saw a purple cow
The Reader's Digest children's songbook

Books to help with specific issues, such as a new baby, going to school, child abuse, or what to do on a rainy day!
Some Picture Books About Black Children

(Available at the Free Library of Philadelphia)

Notes: 1. This is not a complete list.
2. The list is not meant to imply either that black children should read these books or that only black children would enjoy them. The list is only to be used as a starting point for parents or teachers who would like to provide any children with a more balanced picture of story book characters.

* means that the book is quite easy to read.

All the Coors of the Race by Arnold Adoff, Lothrop, Lee & Shepard, 1982
* Shawn Goes to School by Petronella Breinberg, Crowell, 1973
* Just Us Women by Jeannette Caines, Harper & Row, 1982
Window Wishing by Jeannette Caines, Harper & Row, 1980
* My Friend Jacob by Lucille Clifton, Dutton, 1980
* Alex and Ray by Mary Dickinson, Deutsch, 1981
* Jambo Means Hello: Swahili Alphabet Book by Muriel Feelings, Dial, 1974
* Me and Neesie by Eloise Greenfield, Crowell, 1975
She Come Bringing Me that Little Baby Girl by Eloise Greenfield, Lippincott, 1974
* Sam by Ann Herbert-Scott, McGraw-Hill, 1967
* Ben's Trumpet by Rachel Isadora, Greenwillow, 1979
Apt. 3 by Ezra Jack Keats, Macmillian, 1971
* Goggles by Ezra Jack Keats, Macmillian, 1969
A Letter for Amy by Ezra Jack Keats, Harper & Row, 1968
* Louie by Ezra Jack Keats, Greenwillow, 1975
* The Snowy Day by Ezra Jack Keats, Viking, 1962
* Whistle for Willie by Ezra Jack Keats, Viking, 1964
Me Day by Joan M. Lexau, Dial, 1971
Stevie by John Steptoe, Harper & Row, 1969
* I'm Glad I'm Me by Elberta Stone, G.P. Putnam's Sons, 1971
Walk Home Tired, Billy Jenkins by Ianthe Thomas, Harper & Row, 1974
* Willie Blows a Mean Horn by Ianthe Thomas, Harper & Row, 1981
Ty's One-Man Band by Mildred Pitts Walter, Four Winds, 1980
A SELECTION OF BOOKS TO USE WITH SPANISH-AMERICAN CHILDREN

Picture Books and Easy Reading

j Belpré, Pura Santiago
je Blue, Rose I am here; Yo estoy aqui je Felt, Sue Rosa-Too-Little je Keats, Ezra Jack My dog is lost je Lewis, Thomas Hill of fire
je Talbot, Toby I am Maria

Folktales

je 398.4 B418o Belpré, Pura Oté; a Puerto Rican folktale je 398.4 B418p2 Belpré, Pura Perez and Martina j398.2 B418r Belpré, Pura The Rainbow-colored horse j398.4 B418t Belpré, Pura The Tiger and the rabbit; and other tales (see "The Bed") j398.4 C374j Chardiet, Bernice Juan Bobo and the pig

Poetry, Songs and Games

j811 P769"j Pomerantz, Charlotte The Tamarindo puppy & other poems j784.624 P933p Prieto, Mariana Play it in Spanish; Spanish games and folk songs for children j398.8 Sa57g Sandoval, Ruben Games, games, games—Juegos, juegos, juegos; Chicano children at play j398.809 T638p Tortillitas para mama and other nursery rhymes / Spanish and English j784.624 Y92f Yurchenco, Henrietta A Fiesta of folk songs from Spain and Latin America

4/87 Compiled by Barbara Baumgartner
FAMILY READ - TOGETHER

WORKSHOP EVALUATION

1. Did you find this workshop useful?
   Very useful    Somewhat useful    Not useful

2. Do you think you will use the booklet after today?
   Yes            No                Not sure

3. What were the best parts of the workshop for you?
   ___ New ideas about reading to children
   ___ The booklet and other materials
   ___ The children's books
   ___ Tips on how to practice reading out loud
   ___ Talking with other parents

4. Do you already read to your child?
   Yes - often    Yes - sometimes    No

5. Did this workshop make you feel better about reading to your child?
   Yes            No

6. Do you think you will read to your child more often now?
   Yes            No                Not sure

THANK YOU VERY MUCH FOR YOUR HELP!