The first draft of a proposal for a book tentatively entitled "College and Beyond: Library Information Sources on Careers," this document provides information intended to aid career changers, career counselors, and librarians seeking career information in the library. The book is organized around three principal areas of interest for people going to college to prepare for a career: finding the right job, finding the right school, and finding the right city in which to go to school or work. Within each of these areas the book is arranged in the order that a person might follow if systematically using the library to obtain information about a job, university, or city. Major topics include: (1) employment (getting organized, resumes, career des Cerptions, internships, potential employer identification, and finding out about a specific company); (2) graduate schools (finding the right school, school and program information, faculty and department research, financial aid sources, examination preparation, international study, and alternative education options); and (3) cities (descriptive overviews, comparative data, employment and earnings, taxes, crime, climate, health, culture, and travel). The locations of sources available in the Bailey/Howe Library at the University of Vermont are indicated and some assignments are included. (CGD)

INTRODUCTION

The following pages are the first draft of a proposal for a book tentatively entitled: College and Beyond: Library Information Sources on Careers. The intent of the book is to aid career changers, career counselors and librarians when trying to learn about the career information the library has to offer.

I became interested in career information out of necessity. Questions about future employment and further education are among the most frequently asked at library reference desks where I have worked. This book exists because I got tired of giving people the part of the answer I remembered and kicking myself afterward for not telling the user the rest of the information that I had forgotten.

This book is organized around the three principal areas of interest people going to college (now or in the future) have when it comes to careers. Finding the right job. Finding the right school. Finding the right city (in which to go to school or work). Within each of these areas the book is arranged in the order that a person might follow if systematically using the library to obtain information about a job, university or city.

Like all works in progress there is still much to be done. The tasks that I know I have to do include: a section on finding the right undergraduate school; an appendix listing by job title magazines that regularly publish job announcements; a hundred other good sources that I haven't yet discovered; a quick reference index which leads the user to the right source in this book.

I know that this work, even in its unfinished state, will be useful to you. My hope is that I can incorporate some of your thoughts and ideas and experience so as to make the finished product even better. As you use the following pages consider: Is this book organized in the right fashion? Are there areas of career interest which ought to be covered? Are there questions which you get asked for which the library must have an answer (but you don't see it in this work)? Are there sources which you have used successfully in the past which I haven't yet identified? How about a retirement section for faculty and staff?
EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

INTRODUCTION

You will find an overview of the job seeking process, job seeking strategies, strategies for getting started and staying motivated by using the sources in the GETTING ORGANIZED section. Methods of documenting and presenting you credentials are covered in the RESUME section. The CAREER DESCRIPTIONS section lists sources which describe different types of careers and suggest places to contact for additional information. The INTERNSHIP section lists sources of work experiences which allow you to discover, first-hand, if a career "is really you." The POTENTIAL EMPLOYER IDENTIFICATION section aids in finding companies and organizations which may be in need of the skills you possess. The FINDING OUT ABOUT A COMPANY (before the interview or before your hired) section describes sources which you can use to ask informed questions about a potential job and working environment.

In addition to the library the user of this workbook may also want to try two other campus resources:

GETTING ORGANIZED

It is tough getting started, staying motivated, and knowing where to begin the job search. The anxiety associated with seeking employment is enough to feed a multi-million dollar branch of the publishing industry making selection of a good basic career guide difficult. The current standard career guide, a perennial, best-seller, is:

RESUMES

There is a tremendous glut of books of this type. Deep down, what the users of these books really want is to turn to page 27 of one of these manuals and, as if by magic, find their resume already done for them. Experience has shown that the best strategy is to pick a resume book (almost anyone) and choose one of the formats offered and write and re-write "until you can't stand it no more." A word processor helps! So does doing it rather than talking about doing it!!!

To find a resume guide use LUIS or Subject Guide to Books in Print under the heading:

POTENTIAL EMPLOYER IDENTIFICATION

Once you have identified the type of work you are interested in doing the next step is identifying prospective employers. There are dozens of strategies you can use, from calling Uncle Guido to doing an on campus interview. In the library it means looking for a directory. The most familiar of directories is a Telephone Directory (more on that in a minute) but there are thousands of others. How do you find the right one for your circumstances? Would you believe a Directory of Directories?!

Directory of Directories

TELEPHONE DIRECTORIES

The yellow pages of a phone book are an all too frequently overlooked source of information, particularly by those whose search is limited to a specific geographic region. The Bailey/Howe Library's Reference Department has all of the phone books in Vermont, many from New England and most of the major cities of the U.S. Also available are phone books from cities in Canada and overseas. You may obtain phone books for the city of your choice from the local office of the telephone company.

NEWSPAPER DIRECTORIES

Also overlooked are subscriptions to the local newspaper where you are thinking of relocating. A successful strategy involves subscribing to the Sunday edition of the paper for several months prior to your move. In edition to the employment ads the business section can offer unexpected job leads. A newspaper can frequently offer the quickest introduction to a locale and help you decide if you really want to live there.

But how do you find out subscription information for that distant newspaper? Try:

MAGAZINE DIRECTORIES

Two types of magazines can be particularly helpful in your job search: regional magazines and subject specific or trade magazines. Regional magazines may be the only way to find out information about a small, private, or closely held, company. Trade magazines are magazines devoted to a specific industry or specialized subject. These magazines are the best method of keeping up with the current trends, companies and people in the industry in which you are interested.

The best news is that frequently subscriptions are available for free!!

How do you identify the specialized publications in your area of interest? try these:

FINDING OUT ABOUT A COMPANY

Once you have identified several companies of interest you can take a closer look at each of them to better determine their suitability and prepare you for the application and interviewing process.

Perhaps the single most overlooked source of information about a company is the company itself. Some people have the idea that asking a potential employer what they do and how well they do it is cheating?! Don't be afraid to ask ... and ask often.

Ask for the companies annual report. Ask for any special manuals put together by the personnel offices of large companies for prospective employees. These are frequently available at career development offices for companies conducting interviews on campus. In the Bailey/Howe Library ask for:

Q-File.
St. Petersburg, FL: Q-Data.
LOCATION: Reference Microform Area CALL #: REF/HG/4961/.Q3
LIBRARY HAS: 1982 to present

Contains annual reports or 10-K reports (contains information similar to annual reports) for many publicly owned companies.

Two other frequently overlooked, valuable, sources of information on an individual company are the Better Business Bureau's report on the company (call in the city where the city is located) and the local Chamber of Commerce data on the firm (probably a visit when you are in town). See the following sources for address information:

ASSIGNMENT: Write for information on your company and attach letter to this workbook.

There is a wide variety of information available from libraries on specific companies. The general principle to keep in mind is the larger the organization or company the more the information available. For the very large (Fortune 500) companies the amount of information available is both daunting and confusing.

For a detailed guide to information available about a company and how to find it, both in and outside the library, see:

How To Find Information About Companies

LIBRARY HAS: 1987

Perhaps the best way of identifying the types of information to look for on a company is to put in the context of the question: What information do I want to know about an organization before I interview with the company? For a good introduction to the subject see Joseph T. Straub's book, The Job Hunt: How to Compete and Win, Chapter 3, "The Care and Feeding of Campus Recruiters".

FINDING OUT ABOUT A COMPANY

Some of the questions Straub suggests may be appropriate in your company search:

Sales Performance and Profitability
Are there new products being developed and introduced?
Expected change in product demand
Industry Rank: recent dramatic change
Market performance
Recent acquisitions -- Acquisition target?
Pending Lawsuits?
Awards?
Size of company as compared to the industry leader
Divisions within the company that make the greatest contribution to profitability
Are Training programs available?
Dependency on government contracts?
Concentration of Divisions in one Geographic location -- Can you live there?
Executive biographies

SALARIES

Perhaps the most ticklish issues to resolve with a new employer are those connected with salary. Finding out the true value of an salary as compared to the cost of living can suddenly make the $15,000 offer in Des Moines look better than the $20,000 bid in New York City. The following sources will assist you in this task. See also the Cost of Living and Tax sections of the CITIES workbook.

Deciding if graduate school is for you, getting a clear understanding of the environment, tasks, application procedures and pressures associated with this career path is covered in the GETTING ORGANIZED section. The identification of graduate schools which offer degrees in subjects you are interested in pursuing is covered in the FINDING THE RIGHT SCHOOL section. Obtaining more information about the schools you have identified as potentially interesting can be found in the SCHOOL AND PROGRAM INFORMATION. Learning more about your potential teachers is covered in the FINDING OUT ABOUT THE FACULTY section. Sources of information on finding money to pay for your education are covered in the FINANCIAL AID -- GETTING STARTED, FINANCIAL AID SOURCES, and FINANCIAL AID -- GRANTS sections. Aids to successful test taking (GRE etc.) are discussed in the EXAMINATION PREPARATION SECTION. The last sections: INTERNATIONAL STUDY and ALTERNATIVE EDUCATION OPTIONS will aid you in pursuing graduate study abroad or independently.

There are hundreds of books which try to assist special audiences of people in planning for graduate work, a sampling of these books follow. FINDING THE RIGHT SCHOOL

The first two significant choices you will make are what type of program (discipline or major) will you study and what will be the location (city) that you live in when you pursue your degree.

The most common method of identifying universities with programs you are interested in is the following two sources:

College Blue Book
LOCATION: Reference CALL #: REF/LA/226/.C635

FINDING OUT ABOUT THE FACULTY AND DEPARTMENTAL RESEARCH OUTPUT

Your interest in graduate research may have been sparked by a journal article or book. Who is the author? Where did they go to school? Are they Faculty members at a university? Which one?

Even if you can't identify a person whose research interest matches your own using the information you have obtained from the college catalog or from the departmental guides listed above you will have identified the names of faculty members teaching at institutions you are interested in attending. You can use this information to find out more about the individual faculty members and what the individual faculty members or department as a whole have been writing about.

Look under the person you are trying to find in each year of the index. The entry under the person's name will give you a coded form of a title of a biographical source. Look on the front inside cover to get the full title of the book. Then use LUIS to find out if the library has the book you need.

FACULTY PUBLICATIONS

There are a number of ways to identify what faculty members are writing about. A search might start with LUIS (a= ) to identify books which this library owns by the faculty member. Perhaps the best place to look is in an index or abstract to radical articles. Ask a REFERENCE LIBRARIAN to assist you to identify the best index in your area of interest. Three especially good indexes to scholarly articles in a wide range of disciplines are listed under INSTITUTIONAL PUBLICATIONS below.
FINDING OUT ABOUT THE FACULTY AND DEPARTMENTAL RESEARCH OUTPUT

INSTITUTIONAL PUBLICATIONS

In many cases it is possible to find out citations to books and periodical articles arranged by university department. While the list will not be complete it may give you a good idea of faculty members research interests. To find out about the university departments you are interested in begin with the three sources listed below. If you are unsuccessful ask a REFERENCE LIBRARIAN to recommend additional sources. When you write to the various university departments for information be sure to ask for a publications list. Frequently departmental alumni magazines will have a section devoted to faculty research.

Social Science Citation Index.
Philadelphia: Institute for Scientific Information.
LOCATION: Reference CALL #: REF/Z/7161/.S65

Determine which broad category (Arts and Humanities, Science or Social Science) correspond to your interest and use the appropriate index. Within each index you have several access points. Use the SOURCE index to find out what a particular faculty member wrote in a certain year. Use the CORPORATE SOURCE index to find out what a department at a university has written. To do this you must look up the department first by state (or foreign country), then by city, by university, and by department. Once you have a short reference from the CORPORATE SOURCE index go to the SOURCE index for a complete citation (including title and bibliography). Finally you can use the CITATION index to find out who has cited a faculty member in a specific year (one measure of how important the author's work is). If you need help when using these indexes be sure to ask a REFERENCE LIBRARIAN!!

CITIES

INTRODUCTION

Whether you decide to go to school or seek a job you are likely to be considering relocating to a new city. Is city X for you? Can you live in a city without an Indonesian restaurant? The following section contains sources of information within the library that you can use to find out about a city before you actually move there. BASIC SOURCES list frequently overlooked or forgotten library resources all people considering relocating can use. Use the section on DESCRIPTIVE INFORMATION to get a quick overview of your city. Sources which rank and compare cities can be found in the COMPARATIVE DATA section. Then several sections follow on finding out about specific issues including: EMPLOYMENT, EARNINGS & COST OF LIVING; TAXES, CRIME, CLIMATE, HEALTH and CULTURAL LIFE. Preparing in advance for traveling to another city is covered in the TRAVEL section.

BASIC SOURCES

The following are frequently overlooked sources of important useful information.

TELEPHONE DIRECTORIES

Telephone Books
U.S.A., Some in Canada: Various Phone Companies.
LOCATION: Reference
LIBRARY HAS: Major U.S., some Canadian and overseas

Phone books are useful when looking at a new city in a thousand unexpected ways. Some of the most obvious uses include: Using the yellow pages as a directory of potential employers arranged by type of work. Identifying the location and phone number of federal, state and local agencies you need to contact (e.g. How do I get a driver's license?). Getting a sense of the social and cultural life of the community: How many movie theaters are there? Are they part of a chain? How many restaurants are there and how much variety? What are the large department stores? What about museums? Phone books list the names of local moving companies, real estate agents, motels and hotels, airlines, buses and train information etc.

The Bailey/Howe library receives telephone books (white and yellow pages) for the major cities in the U.S. They are arranged alphabetically by state and within state are alphabetic by city. There is a list of the telephone books received, and their dates available at the Reference Desk. To obtain your own copy of an out of state (or Canadian) phone book call your local phone company and expect to pay for them.

LOCAL NEWSPAPERS AND TRADE PUBLICATIONS

Gale Publications Directory
Detroit, MI: Gale.
LOCATION: Ready Reference CALL #: REF/Z/6951/.A97
LIBRARY HAS: Latest

Local newspapers and trade publications are as underated as local phone books are as sources of information. Employment listings. Real Estate listings? What's going on in local politics? Are there sewage problems? Are the tax rates going to double? What's showing at the movies? Is there anything to do in town?

Most newspapers and trade publications of any size will have a mail subscription service. This publication helps you identify the local newspaper in the United States, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Canada, Bermuda, Panama, and the Philippines in your intended city and gives you the address, phone number and price information you'll need. In addition each listing will include: frequency, circulation, names of editors, and publishers. Has descriptive and statistical matter about each state and good maps.
