This curriculum outline, designed for use in U.S. history, world history, or English courses, presents information about Adolf Hitler and the Holocaust. Part 1 provides a rationale for teaching about this subject, while part 2 presents an outline of historical information from 1887 to 1934 concerning Hitler's life and the rise of the Nazi Party. Part 3 outlines the Holocaust in terms of: (1) the roots of European anti-Semitism; (2) the persecution of Jews from 1933-1938 through use of the established legal system; (3) the intensification of Jewish persecution from 1938 to 1940 by legal and extra-legal means; and (4) the physical destruction of European Jews from 1941 to 1945. Part 4 contains a 20-item partially annotated bibliography. (JHP)

RATIONALE FOR TEACHING HITLER AND THE HOLOCAUST

In the study of the Holocaust and related studies, teachers need to approach this unit with sensitivity and competence. Before teaching the Holocaust, teachers should understand clearly their reasons for incorporating such a unit into the curriculum. The teacher's rationale for including such a unit may be an effective vehicle for introducing this topic to high school students.

Based on teacher preference, a rationale/introduction may include the following:

1) Recent events which demonstrate a continuing interest in Hitler, Nazi Germany, and the Holocaust (e.g. the 1985 exhumation of Dr. Joseph Mengele's remains, the 1986 election of Kurt Waldheim, the forged diaries of Adolf Hitler and the recent "discovery" of his World War I photo album);

2) Resurgence of groups motivated by intense nationalism and desire for racial purity;

3) Apparent willingness of people to follow uncritically those who offer easy solutions to complicated problems (e.g. Jim Jones and the Peoples' Temple and popular cult groups);

4) The moral dilemma which exist when men violate their conscience and system of ethics (e.g. peer pressure and the unwillingness of people to become involved with individuals and issues).

The value of the Holocaust to the learner depends on the extent of one's search for understanding - not only the Nazi regime and the destruction of millions of people, but also one's own personal value system.
HITLER AND THE HOLOCAUST: A TEACHER’S OUTLINE

I. Hitler - The Early Years: 1889-1903

A. Family Background

1. Alois Schicklgruber, Hitler’s father, born to unmarried peasant woman in 1837
   a. Becomes successful and respectful Austrian civil servant, collecting customs duties at border posts
   b. Changes his name to Hitler in 1876, for reasons which are unclear
   c. Marries his third wife, Klara Polzl, in 1885
   d. Dies of cerebral hemorrhage in 1903

2. Klara Polzl, Hitler’s mother, leads life of obscurity until she marries her second cousin, Alois Hitler, after receiving papal dispensation
   a. Devout Catholic who lives for God and her family, raising her children in the tenets of the Church
   b. Gives birth to Adolf, her fourth child, after having seen first three children die in infancy or childhood

B. Adolf Hitler - Birth and Childhood

1. Born at half past six in the evening of April 20, 1887, in Brannon am Inn, an Austrian border town where Alois collected customs duties

2. Sickly at birth and into childhood, resulting in Klara’s becoming overprotective, prone to spoil her son

3. Led routine childhood from all accounts by friends and family, although rumors persist that Alois subjected his family to mental and physical abuse

4. Performed well in school until 1900, when his grades plummeted and he developed an anti-intellectualism which would last the rest of his life

5. Leaves school in 1905 at age of 16 and applies for admission to Vienna Art Academy, only to fail the exam in 1907 and be refused the right to take it over in 1908

6. Heartbroken by the death of his mother in 1907 from cancer
7. Blames Jewish professors for his failure on the art exam and Jewish doctor for Klara’s painful death

II. Hitler - Years of Wandering and Fulfillment: 1908-1919

A. Moves to Vienna in 1908 and begins five year period of living in "flop houses," subsisting on meager income from odd jobs and painting post cards

B. Begins to develop "gift" for oratory, frequently haranguing residents of flop houses where he lives

C. Collects and reads anti-Semitic literature, formulating his own ideas on the "Jew" which will later find expression in the national life of Germany

D. Flees Vienna in 1913 to avoid service in Austrian military and takes up residence in Munich, Germany

E. Inducted into the Germany army in August, 1914, and becomes a dispatch runner (a lance corporal in rank) during World War I

F. Serves with some distinction and receives the Iron Cross, first and second class

G. Becomes espionage agent for German military after war's end, checking on the many political parties which might threaten stability of Weimer Republic, Germany's democratic government after the war

III. Political Awakening and Consolidation: 1919-1933

A. Attend meeting of German Workers Party in September, 1919, as espionage agent

1. Impresses members of party with his fervor during impassioned speech he suddenly makes and is invited to join

2. Becomes a card-carrying member in 1920 and soon becomes a prominent figure, leading the party to increase its membership to 3,000

B. Emerges as "Fuhrer," Leader of the party

1. Orders the name changed to National Socialist (from which we derive the word "Nazi") German Worker's Party

2. Threatens to resign in July, 1921, unless he is given absolute power
C. Attempts armed revolution in Munich - November 9, 1923

1. Fails due to inadequate planning and over-estimation of his power

2. Arrested and tried for treason

3. Sentenced to five years in Landsburg Prison, but released after nine months due to governmental weakness

D. Revives the sagging Nazi Party and publishes his autobiographical study and blueprint for power, Mein Kampf (My Struggle)

E. Appointed Chancellor by President Paul von Hindenburg, believing he could control the "little corporal"

F. Secures from Hindenburg an emergency decree granting Hitler the power to prohibit public meetings, to suppress publications, and to outlaw newspapers dangerous to the state

G. Reichstag fire on February 27, 1933, reportedly set by unbalanced Dutchman, actually set by Nazis as pretext to suppress civil liberties (with resulting abolition of free speech, assembly, press, and privacy of the mails and telephone conservations)

H. Secures on March 23, 1933, the "Law for the Relief of the Distress of the People and the Reich," authorizing the Nazi-controlled government to use extra-constitutional powers for the next four years

I. Nation-wide "burning of books" signifying the Nazi attack on freedom of thought--May 20, 1933

J. Outlawing of all political parties except the Nazi Party on July 14, 1933

K. Opposition within and without the party broken by violent blood purge, "Night of the Long Knives," in which more than 500 people die

L. Consolidation of total power as Hitler appoints himself "Fuhrer" of all Germany, while retaining the office of Chancellor, upon the death of Hindenburg on August 1, 1934

Thus, by the summer of 1934, the World War I corporal had "legally" become absolute master of Germany's millions.
THE HOLOCAUST

I. Roots of European Anti-Semitism

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Frankl, Victor E. Man's Search for Meaning. New York: Simon and Schuster, 1959. 156 pp. Survivor of Auschwitz and Dachau recounts memories and examines the mind of survivors, victims and persecutors. Frankl was a medical doctor and psychotherapist before and after the war. Excellent source.
A polymical account of Hitler's life, achievements, failures, and effects on a nation and world. Not footnoted.

Levin examines the destruction of Jews in all of Europe--in and outside the death camps--by Nazis and their supporters.

Excellent. Personal testimonies and historical content.

Remak, Joachim, ed. The Nazi Years: A Documentary History

Stern, J. P. Hitler: The Fuhrer and the People. Berkeley, California: University of California Press, 1975. 254 pp. Examines the social and economic setting of Germany not only in the "inter-war" period, but also historically in order to understand the phenomenal public support which Hitler received.

Toland, John. Adolf Hitler. New York: Ballantine Books, 1976. 1371 pp. Excellent source. Written by one of America’s most popular World War II historians, this biography captures Hitler’s personality and the interplay of forces which developed Hitler’s mind and political state.

Waite, Robert G. L. The Psycho-pathic God: Adolf Hitler. New York: Basic Books, 1977. Excellent Source. This psychohistorical analysis narrows its focus, in contrast to Toland’s Adolf Hitler, to examine Hitler’s relationship with his family. Waite details this foundation on which Hitler’s personality, and later destructiveness, rest. (video tape supplement available by permission of Time-Life, Inc.)
Personal account of one survivor of the Holocaust.
Excellent. 127 pages.

Both books are difficult to read, but are worthwhile.
Each explores the spread of fascism throughout Europe in the 20th century and the receptive audience for it in each nation.
