ABSTRACT

This materials packet contains information on teaching about the electoral process and the elections of 1988, and on participation in a mock election for students whose schools would take part in the 1988 North Carolina Mock Election. Suggestions for teachers' preparations are given, including a classroom skit and a mock candidates' election program. A teachers guide on student preparation consists of a voter registration process and introductions to lobbying, the legislative branch, and political parties. The attachments with the packet include actual voter registration forms, absentee ballot procedures, plans for a student sponsored voter registration program, sample ballots, an explanation of congressional districts and the State General Assembly, information on how to write a bill, a sample bill from the North Carolina State Senate, a congressional quiz, and a political opinion scale. A supplementary student guide contains information on using the newspaper to learn about voting, information on the media, and various activity sheets on the electoral process designed to be filled in by the student as the campaign progresses to the outcome of the election. SKIT

THE UNINFORMED VOTING PARENTS

Narrator: "In the following skit the names have been omitted to protect the guilty. We find ourselves on the day before election in an average North Carolina home. Mom and Dad are resting in the den after dinner. Dad is reading the newspaper, Mom is crosstitching and the teenage daughter is doing her homework."

Teenager: "Mom, are you going to vote tomorrow?"

Mother: "No." (not very interested)

Teenager: "Why not?!"

Mother: "Who's running?"

Teenager: "Mom- don't you know - its Mike Democrat and George Republican."

Mother: "Who is Mike Democrat?"

Teenager: "He's been your Congressman for twelve years!"

Dad: "Who's this guy George Republican?"

Mother: "He's that good looking guy on T.V. I think I will vote for him."

Teenager: "Mom! That's not a good reason to vote for a candidate."

Dad: "Mike must be doing something right- he's been in for so long. I think I will vote for him. What is he promising this year?"

Tenager: "Mom and Dad- you are both voting for the wrong reasons. Have you been keeping up with the campaign and the issues in the newspaper?"

Mother: "Hey- didn't George come out for increased taxes?"

Teenager: "I think both of you need to study the campaign a little more- You are definitely confused. Here are some pamphlets on Mike Democrat and George Republican. They should help you to decide for whom to vote."

(The parents look over the campaign literature)

Dad: "Well - I think we can vote for the best person for the right reasons now."

Teenager: "Do you want me to go to the polls with you?"

Mother: "No - I think we can do it on our own."

Teenager: "Well - When I get old enough to vote, I'm going to keep up with the issues and maybe even work for my favorite political candidate."

Dad: "Thats in the future - now all that matters is that we have the information and we know who is the best person for the job."

Mother: "From now on we are going to be informed about every election. We will set a good example for you - I promise."

THE END

(This a generic skit, feel free to change it by adding or deleting.)

SECTION II

SUGGESTED CLASSROOM UNITS OF STUDY

PREPARATION FOR STUDENTS

Prepare the students so they will gain the most from this educational experience. Covering some or all of the following topics of study will facilitate the learning process for the students involved in this project. Additional coverage of the executive branch is necessary for the study of the presidential or gubernatorial races.

UNIT ONE: VOTER REGISTRATION

Introduce the students to the basic election laws covering voter registration, absentee ballot and election processes.

Activities:

1. Have students to complete a copy of a real registration form. (See attachment 1)
2. Conduct a voter registration drive in your school to register eligible students and teachers. (See Attachment 1A)
3. Conduct a voter registration drive in your local community. (See Attachment 3 and 1A)
4. Use poster contest to make posters on voter registration for your school and/or public libraries.
5. Conduct a telephone survey in your community on voter registration. (See Attachment 4)
6. Hold a mock election in your community prior to the election. (See Pages 4, 5 and Attachment 5)
7. Encourage your school board to appoint a REGISTRAR if your high school does not have one at the present time. (See Attachment 2: legislation concerning registrars)

UNIT TWO: LOBBYING

Introduce the students to the role lobbyists play in the legislative process. Show how special interests use lobbyists to educate legislators on the issues they want to pursue.

ACTIVITIES

1. Have students to role play the right and wrong way to lobby a legislator.
2. You or another teacher role play a teacher lobbying a legislator on an educational issue.
3. Invite a lobbyist to visit the classroom. Ask the lobbyist to answer questions about qualifications, experience, techniques they use, their role in the legislative process etc.

UNIT THREE: LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

Introduce the students to the basic background, organization and terminology associated with the General Assembly in North Carolina as well as the United States Congress. Allow them to discover the real meaning of "making laws" by allowing them to participate in the legislative process. (NOTE: it is suggested that the national and state legislatures be studied as separate units.) (See Attachments 7 and 8)

Activities

1. Use articles from current newspapers and magazines to allow students to write their own bills using the basic form used at Girls' and Boys' State. (See Attachment 7) Suggested state issues include: state lottery, teacher pay, environment, taxes etc. Suggested federal issues include: defense, Central America, taxes, education, budget deficit etc.
2. Hold a Mock General Assembly or a Mock Congress allowing the students to introduce, discuss and vote on their bills. Elect a student as Speaker of the House while other students play the role of representatives.
3. Invite a State Senator or State Representative to speak to the class about their role in the legislative process. Ask them to give their position on the major issues facing the state at the present time.
4. Invite a member of the staff of a U.S. Senator or U.S. Representative to speak to the class. Ask them how the local office handles constituent concerns etc.
5. Plan a Love Feast at the end of the Mock Legislature. Allow the students to roast each other by giving out mock awards based on performance on the topic of the bill.
EXAMPLE: MOUTH OF THE HOUSE AWARD for the student who always had something to say; a low grade on the Report Card for not supporting the Education Bill.
6. Hold an Awards Day in conjunction with the Love Feast. Pass out certificates for the best written bill, best bill presentation, most outstanding representative etc. The Speaker of the House can receive the Golden Gavel Award.

UNIT FOUR: POLITICAL PARTIES

Teach the students the basic differences in philosophy and approach to the issues demonstrated by the major political parties. (NOTE: This unit is more beneficial if studied after or in conjunction with a Mock Congress)

Activities:

1. Allow the students to research specific issues found in the party platforms. (See your newspaper, news magazines etc. for party platforms.)
2. Invite a representative of the Democratic, Republican, Libertarian and New Alliance parties to speak to the class. Have them explain the position of their party on the major federal issues.

ELECTION SURVEY/VOTER REGISTRATION DRIVE

PURPOSE

1. Register prospective voters in your community.
2. Increase public awareness of upcoming election.
3. Obtain unscientific poll of potential vote in your community.
4. Afford the students an opportunity to observe public reaction to voter registration and the election process.

Location

1. Local shopping center or mall.
2. Busy supermarket or grocery store.
3. Any large gathering of people in your community.

Time

1. Late September, early October before voter registration books close. (Books close for 1988 election on October 10)
2. Saturday or whenever you know there will be a large group of people in the area

Preparation

1. Contact the mall or shopping center ahead of time to get permission for project to be conducted on the property.
2. Make one large ballot box to guarantee a secret ballot for your election.
3. Type and run off sample ballots with names of candidates for all political parties with candidates for President, Governor, Lt. Governor, and congressmen where applicable. (see attached sample ballot)
4. Gather necessary supplies and equipment: two card tables, table coverings, pencils, chairs, map of local area with precincts.

5. Locate two registrars or roving commissioners to assist in registering eligible voters at a separate table. Contact your high school commissioner, the League of Women Voters or the Board of Elections for assistance in obtaining these people.
6. Obtain student and parent volunteers to supervise the tables.
7. Invite a local newspaper, radio or television reporter to do a story on your project.

Activity One

Use a public location in your community to conduct an unofficial poll on the upcoming election. Ask people walking by to vote for the candidates they would vote for if the election were held today. The voters will use your printed ballots, vote secretly and deposit it in your ballot box. Students can tabulate the results and share them with your local news media. (See attached sample ballot)

Activity Two

Conduct a voter registration drive in your community. Set up a table with two qualified voter registrars to register eligible voters. Students can ask shoppers if they would like to register to vote and direct them to the proper table. Additional students could be used to assist the people in determining the exact location of their homes. A map with the local precincts or the registrar's street locator will be helpful in determining the proper precinct for each person registering. This will help the registrars and shorten the waiting time to complete the forms if a line develops. Be sure the students know the basic voter registration requirements.

SAMPLE TELEPHONE SURVEY: VOTER REGISTRATION

NOTE: Conduct this survey before voter registration books are closed prior to the election. Make enough calls to get a good sample of all areas of the community.

HELLO: I'm a student at _____ High School. As part of our class work in social studies on the upcoming general election, we are conducting a survey to find out how many people in our community are registered to vote. Would you mind telling me if you are registered to vote?

If the response is YES: Thank you so much. I hope you will vote on election day.

If the response is NO: Ask if they would like information on voter registration in the local area. If so, give information.

Put an X in the box beside the candidate of your choice.

UNIT: GENERAL ASSEMBLY

What is the General Assembly?

Who are your State Senators?

Who are Your State Representatives?

What we will study:

1. The work of the General Assembly.
2. Some issues being discussed in the General Assembly.
3. How bills are written.
4. Your elected representatives in the General Assembly.

How we will study the General Assembly:

We will have a mock General Assembly in which students, portraying real Representatives, will introduce bills they have written. After discussion the class, which acts as the N.C. House, will vote to decide whether to approve or reject the bill.

Students will work in groups of two on a bill. One student will write the bill and the other student will introduce the bill and present a persuasive argument for the approval of the bill. At that time, the floor will be open for debate to the other Representatives. At the conclusion of the debate a vote will be taken to decide whether to approve or reject the bill.

What is a bill?

1. A bill is a piece of legislation which, if enacted, becomes a law.
2. A bill may amend existing laws or if enacted, may become a new law. In North Carolina the body of laws is called the General Statutes of North Carolina.
3. A bill states what is to be done and how it is to be done.
4. Copies of actual bills are available at the Legislative Building in Raleigh.

How to write a bill:

The following basic form should be used in writing all bills for our General Assembly (Form adopted from the procedure used by Girl's and Boy's State.)

SAMPLE FORM:

1. Include all basic words written in each section below.
2. Add to the basic form where you see. . . . to indicate what your bill is about.
3. Look at the sample bill to guide you in writing your bill.

Title: A BILL TO BE ENTITLED AN ACT TO AMEND THE GENERAL STATUTES OF THE STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA TO PROVIDE FOR (state briefly what your bill is about.)

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF NORTH CAROLINA ENACTS:

- Section 1. The General Assembly of North Carolina provides for (repeat brief statement of what bill is about.)
- Section 2. . . . (State a basic provision of your bill.)
- Section 3. . . . (State additional provisions.)

In news accounts, identify candidates for state and local offices such as county commissioners and N.C. House and N.C. Senate representatives. Circle in the newspaper quotations that show their positions on issues.

The Media

Although voters acquire some information about candidates through direct mail pieces, leaflets or word of mouth, most information about the presidential campaign is conveyed through the media — newspapers, television, radio and magazines.

This information is presented in many ways — through news stories, paid political advertisements, editorials, cartoons, photographs, endorsements, headlines, news analyses, interviews, debates, public affairs programs and letters to the editor. Some of these approaches are strictly factual, while others contain opinion. For example, a political cartoon may poke fun at a candidate, and is clearly the cartoonist's opinion. A breaking news story on the other hand, is a factual account of what happened and should not reflect the writer's opinion.

For one week, collect from the newspaper an example of each of the types of coverage listed below. Clip and save the newspaper articles you use. Write the publication date, name of the newspaper, and page of the newspaper on your articles or create an index card including this information and attach it to each article.

Write a summary of the article's main idea and categorize your entry as "fact" or "opinion." (Keep newspaper clippings in a folder or attach them on a separate sheet of paper. For television pieces, you will need to take notes. Record the date and time the item was aired, and the station or network on which it appeared.)

Which of the examples you selected and described above might influence you as you form your own opinion about a particular candidate? Explain.

The Electoral College

As you follow the 1988 campaign, you may notice that the presidential candidates spend more time, money and effort in some states than in others. This is because presidents are actually chosen by the Electoral College rather than by direct popular vote.

Under the Electoral College system, each state is allotted a number of electors equal to the combined number of U.S. Senators and Representatives in that state. (The District of Columbia has three electors.) The number of a state's U.S. representatives is determined by its population. Thus, it is a state's population rather than its physical size that determines the number of electors it has. For example, New York has 36 electoral votes, while Montana has only four. In this "winner-take-all" system, the candidate who receives the most popular votes in a state is expected to receive all of that state's electoral votes. To be elected president, a candidate must receive 270 of the total 538 electoral votes. Can you see why candidates usually concentrate their efforts in those states with the highest number of electoral votes?

On the Campaign Trail

1. On the map below, locate the 14 states with the highest number of electoral votes. Color them yellow.
2. Add the total number of electoral votes in the 14 yellow states. Could a candidate win the election by winning just these 14 states and no others? How many electoral votes would he or she receive? Must a candidate take all 14 of these states to win the election? What is the smallest number of states a candidate could win and still become president?
3. During a period of four to six weeks, use the newspaper to track the travels of the presidential and vice presidential candidates. Plot the Republicans' paths in red, using a solid line for the presidential candidate and a broken line for the vice presidential candidate. Chart the Democrats in blue. Have the candidates traveled more frequently to the states you have colored yellow?

Numbers refer to each state's electoral votes.

The Issues

Determining solutions for problems our country faces and defining goals for the future are central to every presidential campaign. Candidates are expected to state their positions on the important issues of the moment.

What have emerged as the most important issues of the 1988 campaign? The twin deficits - budget and trade? U.S.-Soviet relations? Threat of war in Central America or the Mideast? The Iran-Contra affair? Crimes? Drugs? Education? Poverty? Health care? Farm failures?

During a period of several weeks, study newspaper articles to determine each presidential candidate's position on various issues. Clip and save the newspaper articles you use. Write the publication date and the name and page of the newspaper on the articles you clip, or create an index card with this information and attach it to each article. Be sure to include headlines for all articles. (If you tear out the entire page where a selected article appears, the requested information will be on the top of the page.) Then select what you feel are the three most important issues in the 1988 campaign. On the chart below, summarize each issue briefly, describe your own position on each, and fill in the candidates' positions.

	My Position	Republican's Position	Democrat's Position
Issue 1:
Issue 2:
Issue 3:

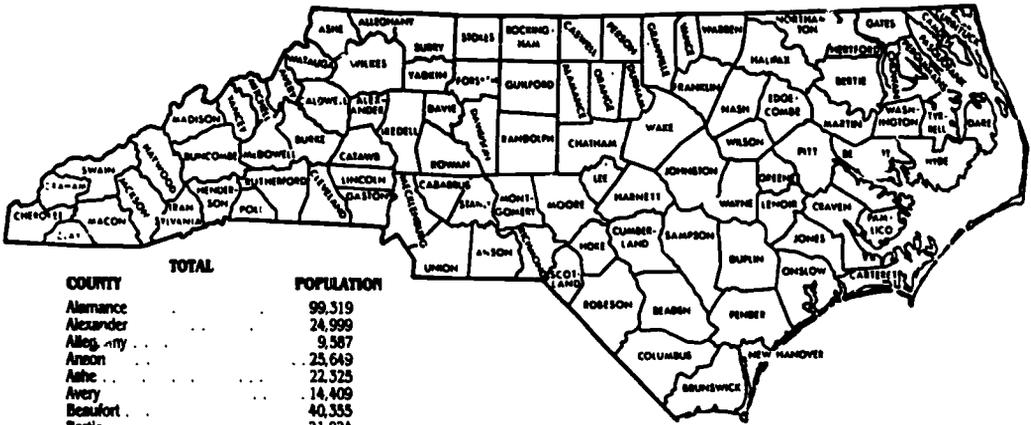

Based on your analysis of the issues you have chosen, for whom would you vote if the election was held today? Write a newspaper editorial explaining why you support that candidate.

The Campaign and Issues in North Carolina

To be elected governor, a candidate must receive a majority of the popular vote. Use the state map below to color-code county population and determine which counties and areas of the state have the most potential voters. Color counties with a population of more than 100,000 red. Color the counties between 50,000 and 100,000 blue. Color the counties between 10,000 and 50,000 green and all the counties with a population below 10,000 yellow. Then see which are the most and least populated counties in the state.

Use the newspaper to track the gubernatorial candidates. Plot the Republican's path with a solid line and the Democrat's with a broken line. Note the issues discussed on the campaign trail. Clip and save the newspaper stories that state the candidates' positions on issues. Write the newspaper's name and date of publication on each story.

Have the candidates traveled more frequently to densely populated counties? Have they covered the entire state? Have they campaigned in their home counties and each other's home county? Have they raised different issues in rural and urban areas?

Activity 4B:

Using the stories you have clipped from the newspaper, select what you feel are the three most important issues in the 1988 gubernatorial campaign. On the chart below summarize each issue briefly, describe your own and the candidates' positions on each.

Gubernatorial Issues

	My Position	Republican's Position	Democrat's Position
Issue 1:
Issue 2:
Issue 3:

Based on your analysis of the issues you have chosen, for whom would you vote if the election was held today? On a separate sheet of paper, write a newspaper editorial explaining why you support that candidate. _____

On the Ticket

Presidential candidates choose their running mates, the candidates for vice president. List the Democratic and Republican vice presidential candidates and complete the chart below.

Vice President	Republican candidate	Democratic candidate
Who are they?
Where are their home states?
What, if any, public offices do they hold or have they held?
What are they saying and doing on the campaign trail?

Presidential candidates choose running mates that they think will help their chances of being elected. Can you tell why vice-presidential candidates were chosen from reading about them in newspapers? What role are they playing in the election? How might they affect voters' views of the presidential candidates? Explain. _____

North Carolina's gubernatorial candidates do not choose the candidates for lieutenant governor, but candidates for lieutenant governor may affect the gubernatorial candidates' chances of being elected. Check the newspaper for references to the candidates for lieutenant governor. Complete the chart below based on your findings.

Lieutenant Governor	Republican candidate	Democratic candidate
Who are they?
Where are their hometowns and/or counties?
What, if any, public offices have they held?
What are they saying and doing on the campaign trail?

What role are they playing in the election? How might they affect voters' views of the gubernatorial candidates? Explain. _____

The Debates

Since the 1960 election between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon, televised presidential debates have been an important part of the election process. Debates give voters a chance to see the candidates meet face to face and to compare their stands on the issues.

Viewers of the debates also pay close attention to the image each candidate projects. Such qualities as charisma (special leadership appeal and charm), forcefulness, physical appearance, sincerity, integrity, trustworthiness and confidence play a crucial role in contemporary politics.

Check your newspaper for information about the dates and times of the presidential and vice presidential debates. Watch each debate, then use the scorecards below to rate each candidate's performance. The first chart deals with issues; the second deals with image. Rate each category as 1, 2, 3, 4 or 5, with 1 being the worst performance and 5 being the best. Then total the scores and declare your debate winner.

Follow-up on the debates: On the days after each televised debate, clip and save all newspaper articles relating to the debate. Prepare a "Debate 1988" file folder to use in storing the newspaper articles. Be sure to label each news item you save so that they can easily be identified.

Did the newspaper article declare a winner in the debate? If so, did the results agree with yours? Compare your scorecards with any that might appear in the newspaper.

The Polls

Public opinion polls attempt to discover the attitudes and opinions of large numbers of people by questioning a relatively small group, or sample, of the population. Pollsters (persons taking the poll) may ask respondents (the persons interviewed) which candidate they would vote for if the election was held at that moment, or how they feel about a particular issue in the campaign.

Results of the polls are usually widely reported in the media, and can have a substantial impact on the campaign. For example, candidates may step up their campaigning in a region where the polls show they are behind. Some people believe polls may influence undecided voters by prompting them to vote for the candidate who is ahead.

In this activity, you will conduct your own poll. Ask ten persons—friends, family, neighbors—the following three questions, and record the responses in the chart below.

1. Do you consider yourself a Republican, Democrat, or other?
2. If the election was held today, for whom would you vote?
3. What do you think is the most important issue in this campaign?

Respondent 6
Respondent 7

Based on the results of your poll, can you predict a winner? Write a report in the style of a news story summarizing the results of the poll you conducted. Plan a graph or chart to illustrate your news story.

Follow up on polling: Clip from the newspaper a story that reports the results of a poll. Compare the results with your own poll.

ACTIVITY 7

The Outcome

On the day after the election, look in the newspaper for state-by-state results of the popular vote. On the map below, color states won by the Republican red, and states won by the Democrat blue.

Record the nationwide popular vote totals in the spaces below. Tally the electoral votes and fill in the blanks.

Popular vote: Republican Democrat Other

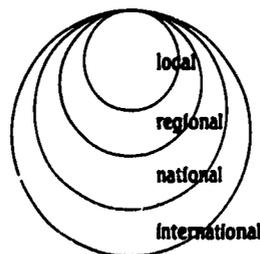

Electoral vote: Republican Democrat Other

Many newspaper stories have a local, regional, national or world news focus. Look in the newspaper in the days following the election to find stories that tell how your city, your region and the nation voted. (Note: A region could be considered a county, a state, or an area covering several states.) Clip election stories for several days and mark each story "local," "regional" or "national" as the case may be. Look also for international stories about the election - perhaps a reaction from an Asian or European country.

At the top of each article you clipped, write the publication date and name and page of the newspaper, or prepare an index card with this information for each of your examples and attach it to each article. Be sure to include headlines for all articles. (If you tear out the entire page where a selected story appears, the information will be on the top of the page.)

Compare how your city and region voted with how the nation voted. In the circle below enter the number of stories you found for each category.

Compare coverage of the results of gubernatorial and presidential races. Did the newspaper cover the outcome of the governor's race as heavily as it did the president's race? Using what you learned from news accounts and the color-coded N.C. map on page 9 of this guide, determine where the winning candidate for governor drew his support. Do the winning candidates for Governor and President belong to the same party? In your opinion, did the candidates for national and state offices help or hurt each other in N.C.?

Scavenger Hunt

Collect as many of the following items as you can from the newspaper or from your family and friends. Use the items to make a poster or class bulletin board that tells about the 1988 presidential election.

Republican and Democratic party symbols										Political cartoons
A ballot from your district (Hint: Look in the newspaper in the weeks just before the election)
Photos of the presidential and vice-presidential candidates
Bumper stickers							Newspaper advertisements
Campaign buttons
Newspaper endorsements. If your newspaper endorses candidates
Your newspaper's front page headline the day after the election
