Introduction

It is with great pleasure that the State Department of Public Instruction and the Division of Desegregation Assistance present each LEA with this booklet of special school programs which impact minority and equity issues in the public schools of North Carolina. Each program contributed represents the great effort being made by many school officials in North Carolina to insure that all children regardless of their circumstances, receive quality education. We believe these innovative programs will offer invaluable alternatives as together we continue to design educational programs which address the particular needs of our students.

If after examining this booklet, you desire more information on a particular program, please call/or write the "contact person" listed. We want to thank the program contributor(s) and the many people who work daily to make these and similar programs possible for students. We invite your comments and suggestions.

For further assistance, please call William T. Newkirk or Jay D. Cannon, Desegregation Assistance Office, at 919/733-0816.

The Carnegie Corporation provided the funding and EQUALS-Berkeley served as the monitoring, training and consulting agency in overseeing the implementation of the EQUALS program.

Two trainers were sent to EQUALS-Berkeley: a white female Assistant Principal and a black female junior high math teacher. After three days of training in the EQUALS model, they held several mini-workshops for staff development personnel, curriculum specialists and administrators in order to acquaint them with the program's goals and methodologies.

An EQUALS Committee was formed which included some of the school system people as well as representatives from the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. The Committee has functioned in a policy-making role since its inception. The wide diversity of its membership has assured a broad perspective and valuable dissemination opportunities.

Basic Purpose of Program:
To provide supplemental educational and cultural activities for American Indian students.

Nature and Scope of Program:
A three-year grant has been awarded from the office of Indian Education Programs, United States Department of Education to provide a program of activities designed to respond to an increasing number of American Indian students who are leaving school before graduation. The "at risk" population will be identified, their needs assessed and strategies for improving attendance will be developed.

About The Program
The Indian Education Act of 1972 is a Congressional declaration of policy in recognition of the special educational needs of Indian students in the United States.

This Act provides Federal financial assistance to the school district for the purpose of planning, developing, and carrying out elementary and secondary school programs specifically designed to increase educational and cultural opportunities for Indian students. The grant is provided by the United States Office of Indian Education Programs which is a part of the United States Department of Education.
Program Components

Informal/Formal Counseling for Attendance Problems

Provides parents and school personnel with decisive and practical methods of effectively handling situations which result in absenteeism. Students are provided special activities, programs and services which are culturally relevant and responsive to their needs. Referrals are made to existing program and resources commensurate with the needs of the student and the student's family.

College and Career Planning

Guidance is provided for high school students in planning a college preparatory course schedule and exploring career choices. Students are further assisted in seeking admission and financial aid in pursuing post secondary training. The program is conducted in the high schools cooperatively with the Talent Search Project of the North Carolina Commission of Indian Affairs and a designated counselor in each high school.

Appropriate Grade Level(s) For Program:  9-12

Basic Purpose of Program:

To support and encourage achievement of black students in secondary and higher education.

Nature and Scope of Program:

The Love of Learning Program is a cooperative effort of Davidson College and Charlotte-Mecklenburg Schools. Black students with under-developed potential are identified prior to entering 9th grade. The program offers these students summer and school year experiences over a five-year period. Both academic and personal development are emphasized. School personnel, parents and community resources are involved to support the students' success.

Last year, Davidson College tested an innovative summer program designed to help black students: (1) raise their sights about their academic goals and aspirations, (2) improve their scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), and (3) compete successfully for admission to, and as students in, selective colleges and universities. The summer pilot project, designed in cooperation with the Charlotte-Mecklenburg school system is part of a larger 8-year effort--called Love of Learning--intended to increase the number of black students who succeed in higher education and to lay the foundation that will later inspire some of those able students to choose careers in teaching, especially in the field of mathematics, the natural sciences, and the humanities. Our approach combines early intervention with a rigorous academic program which puts students on a college-bound track and builds a network of support to enable them to succeed.
Over the next four years, the Loves of Learning Program will recruit four groups of 30 black eighth-grade students with under-developed potential from Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools. The involved students will be in a five-year sequential program of summer and academic-year experiences that will take them through the first year of college.

The program for students will focus on five areas:

1. Mastery of oral and written English
2. Mastery of mathematical skills
3. Development of skills in scientific inquiry
4. Development of test-taking skills and preparation for the SAT
5. Personal development

Basic Purpose of Program:

We believe that minority students can do well on standardized tests and feel good about themselves if they are provided a little extra help. This help comes from tutoring, working with computers, and being involved with community resource persons.

Letters are sent to parents explaining the program, and a consent sheet giving their permission for their child to participate.

Using the Wide Range Achievement Test, students are tested in reading and mathematics at the beginning and end of the program. They keep daily and weekly study logs, recording the amount of time they have studied at home during a given week. Parents must sign the log and return it on Mondays to be checked.

Resource persons from the Charlotte Community have been invited to come and share an hour with the students discussing such topics as attitudes, family, education, self-esteem and job opportunities.

We believe that with regular school instruction, after school tutoring, regular study time at home, and motivation from resource persons, that we will note improvement on the Wide Range Achievement Test and the California Achievement Test.

Outcomes of enrollment are improved self-esteem; reduction of absenteeism; improved rate of academic achievement; increased occupational skills, knowledge, and employability; improved vocational opportunities for youth; and increased skills for daily living.
The Young Parents Program component of Hickory Alternate School has several objectives: to facilitate the delivery of existing community services to young parents and to prospective young parents; to provide educational classes in the areas of child development, family and life management, self-development, sexuality, pregnancy prevention, and issues relating to parenting; and to promote infant bonding through the provision of an on-site nursery. The goal of ROCAME is to establish the sound foundation for a viable and accountable program to encourage minority youths to enter the fields of engineering, science and technology.

Need

Minority representation in the engineering and technical fields needs to be increased. Nationally, concerned representatives from industry, engineering schools, professional societies, government, foundations, and minority organizations formed the National Advisory Council on Minorities in Engineering (NACME) in 1972. The goal of NACME is to increase the number of minorities who pursue engineering as a profession.

On a local level, representatives from industry and education formed a non-profit organization in 1979 called Region 0 Council for the Advancement of Minorities in Engineering (ROCAME) to stimulate and motivate minority students in this area toward a career in engineering.
Approximately 1,000 students each year in Brunswick, Columbus, New Hanover, Pender Counties, and Whiteville City Schools are identified to participate in the program. ROCAME has played an important role providing math, science, and technological experiences to aid these students in making career choices.

Introduction

Teachers, administrators and parents are continually challenged to come up with the "right" approach to raising and educating our young children. As educators, we spend at least four years learning the rudiments of our profession. When we enter the classroom and "discover" the children, we find that our preparation may have suited us well in testing us to present conten: and for children to learn. However, most of us quickly find out that we have few if any skills for creating an environment in which children will consistently choose to learn the things we teach them. The "You've Got To Be KID-DING" program was developed as a result of these concerns.
Objectives

- To teach students to feel capable of solving their own problems
- To help students understand their feelings and help improve self-esteem
- To encourage students to handle problems (i.e. rebellion, family stress, fighting, drugs)
- To teach critical thinking, teamwork, self-discipline, problem solving and improve students self-responsibility
- To recognize stages in children's development
- To create environments where students are motivated and want to learn

Appropriate Grade Level(s) For Program: 6th grade

Basic Purpose of Program:

To match sturdy, caring black male educators (or community leaders) with 11 or 12 year old black males who are experiencing difficulty.

Nature and Scope of Program:

The Wake County Public School System is preparing to launch the second phase of its privately funded, pilot project designed to help black male students take full advantage of learning opportunities. The program pairs sturdy role models, first from the school and then from the community, with 11- and 12-year-olds who have the potential for success in school but are at risk of failure. The pilot program attempts to combat the negative influences which hinder the black male student's development.

The first phase of the School/Community Helping Hands Project involves the matching of sturdy, caring, black male educators with these students. The educators serve as personal models for the young people, working for a year one-on-one and in groups to boost the youngsters' self-image and ability to access fully educational opportunities.

In the second phase which will begin in the fall of 1988, the project will join hands with the community, enlisting community personal models to work with the students who were assisted by the school personal models in the first year.
These community models will need at least 12 to 15 hours each month with their student partners. This relationship must continue for at least one year.

These community models will meet at least 12 to 15 hours each month with their student partners. This relationship must continue for at least one year. During this community component of the project, emphasis will be focused on the home, school, and child, with attention and activities targeting four specific areas:

- providing a positive role model
- understanding and improving peer relations
- improving success in school
- developing leadership potential

The process for selecting community models is crucial to providing sturdy, caring, black male models to bond with and enhance the self-image of the black male child.

Appropriate Grade Level(s) For Program: K-12

Basic Purpose of Program:

Goals

1) To teach students communication, problem-solving, and conflict resolution skills.

2) To encourage students to take responsibility for solving conflicts among themselves and their peers in a constructive, peaceful way.

3) To decrease tension, hostility, and violence within the school.

4) To build a stronger sense of cooperation and community within the school.

What is Mediation?

Mediation is a process in which people who have a dispute meet, and with the assistance of a neutral mediator, talk out the problem, come to a better understanding of both person's needs, and work out a solution that satisfies both disputants.

Peer mediation is when young people are trained to mediate the disputes of other young people. There are more than 300 peer mediation programs in the U.S., most of which have been implemented in school settings, where they are usually known as student mediation programs. In North Carolina, there are approximately 20 student mediation programs, in such diverse school systems as Chapel Hill, Fayetteville, Raleigh, Chatham County,
Asheville City, and Orange County. The programs have been implemented by resource people from mediation centers, working with the staff, administration, and parents of each school.

Peer mediation programs usually include both a schoolwide "conflict resolution" curriculum, and the selection and training of 15-25 students to be mediators. Some programs also offer mediation training to teachers and parents.

Why Peer Mediation?

Through the conflict resolution curriculum and the process of mediation, young people learn conflict-solving strategies that are more effective and satisfying than the ones they normally use. Mediation offers them constructive, positive strategies and skills that they'll be able to use the rest of their lives. The process also encourages and enables them to take responsibility for solving their own conflicts in a peaceful, satisfying way. The result? They'll grow into adults who can solve their disputes without hurting anyone, or having to go to court to settle them.
