Descriptive and evaluative information is provided on Rockland Community College's (RCC's) Developmental Studies Department and its Special Services Project for economically and educationally disadvantaged students. Section I describes the functions of the Developmental Studies Department, which provides courses and services to help underprepared students work at college level and to complete a degree or certificate program. The department's assessment, placement, and advisement services; college skills and English-as-a-Second-Language (ESL) courses; physical facilities; and supplemental tutorial services are detailed. Section II deals with the activities and outcomes of the Special Services Project during 1987-88, and includes information on project sites, clientele, services, staff development, coordination with the Developmental Studies Department and with other college personnel, and students' evaluation of services. Section III contains a summative evaluation of RCC's college skills and ESL classes based on student progress in reading, writing, mathematics, and general language skills. Section IV provides a comparative analysis of student gains at RCC's main campus and two other learning centers. Finally, section V presents conclusions and recommendations. The greater part of the report consists of appendixes, including an explanation of RCC's Competency Assessment Policy; a tutorial manual and forms used in the Special Services Project; and an annotated bibliography of instructional materials for the project. PREFACE

Rockland Community College (RCC), an open access Community College, functions under the program of the State University of New York. The College is located in a suburban area 35 miles north of New York City. While Rockland County is considered one of the most affluent counties in the state there are pockets of poverty with a substantial number of Blacks and immigrants (largely Hispanic and Haitian) located within the county. The College has expressed in its mission statement its commitment to serve a wide range of clientele and to provide services necessary to meet the needs of the clientele.

The Developmental Studies Department, established as a College department in the Fall 1987, serves students in need of remedial/developmental services. More than 50% of the entering freshmen who are identified through the College's competency assessment process are enrolled in the department yearly.

The following report: (1) describes the services of the department and of the federally funded Special Services Project which provides supplemental tutorial services for the most severely financially and educationally disadvantaged students enrolled in Developmental Studies courses and (2) provides an evaluation of student progress in reading, writing, English language development and mathematics during the academic year, 1987-1988. Recommendations for program and curriculum development are also included.
DEVELOPMENTAL STUDIES DEPARTMENT

The Developmental Studies Department provides courses and services designed to prepare students lacking college-level skills to enter college courses and to complete a college degree or certificate. The department currently offers College Skills (CS) courses which help native American students develop reading, writing, mathematics, and study skills and English As A Second Language (ESL) courses which assist students whose native language is not English develop oral language, reading, writing, and study skills. The students in College Skills characterize the full range (age, sex, ethnic backgrounds, religions, social class) of clientele at the College. While the ESL enrollment continues to include some 250 students yearly from abroad, the majority of the students in ESL classes (84%) are first generation residents in Rockland County.

Individual assessment and advisement, small group and individual counseling and tutorial services are provided for students enrolled in College Skills and ESL courses and the department continues to provide counseling and tutorial services for College Skills and ESL students who move into the College mainstream as well.

Developmental courses and tutoring in specific areas such as spelling, vocabulary development, and effective listening are offered by Developmental Studies for all Rockland students who can benefit. The department also serves as a faculty development and resource center - providing consultation with College faculty members, coordinated efforts to develop courses which include study strategies related to specific content, workshops and seminars, identification and development of resource materials, and publication of papers and materials. In addition, the Chairperson of the Developmental Studies Department is responsible for coordinating all College-wide tutorial services for disadvantaged students and for providing College supervision of the Special Services Project.*

A diversified staffing model is utilized to provide a maximum of individualized instruction to meet the diverse needs of the students. The staff includes a Chairperson, College Skills Coordinator, English As A Second Language Coordinator, 7 full time instructors, 3 full time counselors, some 28 adjunct instructors and counselors and some 12 teaching assistants in addition to one full time and one part-time clerical assistant.

ASSESSMENT, PLACEMENT, ADVISEMENT

Students are placed in College Skills or ESL as a result of English and Mathematics assessments (See Appendix A). The assessment process is designed to ensure that all students are placed into course work appropriate to their skills.

* Title IV of the Act for Special Programs for Students from Disadvantaged Backgrounds.
Upon acceptance to the College all entering students who have not previously attended college and are planning full time enrollment are required to take the RCC English and Mathematics Placement Examinations before registering for courses. Part-time students who intend to register for initial English language courses or credit bearing mathematics courses are also required to complete the examinations. All other part-time students enrolling for less than twelve credits must also take the examinations prior to registering for their sixteenth degree credit. The English Placement Examination consists of an evaluation of reading comprehension (Comprehension Section of Descriptive Tests of Language Skills - DTLS) and a writing sample on a given topic scored holistically by trained readers. The Mathematics Placement Examination includes an in-house computation section which students are required to take and an algebra section which students are encouraged to take.

After placement into College Skills or ESL each student has a conference with Developmental Studies Department instructors and counselors for needs assessment and to determine a course of study. Students are assigned to non-credit College Skills or ESL courses until re-assessment shows that they are ready to move into mainstream courses. Some, when the appropriate skill level has been reached, may select carefully chosen credit - bearing courses while they are enrolled in College Skills or ESL. The College Skills needs assessment is conducted at specific times throughout the academic year and the summer. Students are provided a general orientation to the College and College Skills, a tour of the campus and referral to College counselors who determine financial aid eligibility and assess each student's full financial need. College Skills instructors explain the College assessment test results and the content of the various College Skills courses to which students have been assigned. Department counselors discuss with the students their vocational objectives and options and the estimated number of semesters they are likely to be in College Skills and then assist the students in selecting courses and completing the registration process.

During the English As A Second Language needs assessment process, which is scheduled during College registration periods, the students also receive orientation and referral for financial aid counseling. They participate in additional ESL in-house testing in English language development, reading and writing for placement in specific ESL courses. The ESL instructors also explain to the students the test results and the content of the courses to which students are assigned. English As A Second Language instructors and/or Developmental Studies Department counselors then discuss with students their vocational objectives and options and the estimated number of semesters they are likely to be in ESL and assist the students in selecting courses and completing the registration process.

COLLEGE SKILLS/ESL COURSES

New students enrolled in College Skills full time are placed in one of four levels of the non-credit courses, Communication Skills (CS011-014), Communication Skills Reinforcement (CS021-024), and Developmental Course II (individualized learning activities and computer assisted instruction-CAI) based on their scores on the English Placement Examination. The courses are competency based and incorporate objectives in reading, writing, critical thinking and study skills. Students also enroll in Strategies for College Success (CS031) and Understanding Human Behavior (CS032). The first course concentrates on an orientation to the nature of higher education with an emphasis on the structure at Rockland Community College and on the development of effective study skills while the second course deals with the fundamentals of psychology. Students also enroll in a counseling seminar for an additional two credit hours. Depending on their curriculum goals and current time commitments new students may or may not enroll in Mathematics Skills (CS^65) for an additional four contact hours plus Developmental Course II which provides up to six hours of individualized learning activities. Exit criteria are specified for successful completion of each level of Communication Skills and each module of Mathematics Skills. As they progress through the College Skills courses students are permitted to enroll in some additional credit courses which have been approved by Department Chairpersons and Program Coordinators as appropriate at specific levels of reading and writing proficiency. Part-time students enroll in one of six levels of Communication Skills courses and counseling for a total of six contact/credit hours per semester.
Students who have met the minimum competency in reading on the English Placement Examination but have not reached the minimum competency in writing are assigned to Introduction to College Writing (CS028). Those students who have met the minimum competency in writing but have not reached the minimum competency in reading are permitted to enroll in English Composition I, (EN101) but they must also enroll concurrently in Efficient Reading (CS029). In addition to regular sections of English Composition I, the College also offers several special emphasis sections. Often after passing into the mainstream College Skills students will enroll in EN101 EGR for additional academic support and ESL students will enroll in EN101 International designed for students for whom English is a second language.

Students enrolled in Communication Skills courses take all or part (reading/writing) of the English Placement Examination at the end of each semester until they have met the minimum competencies in reading and writing required for passing into the College mainstream. A modified mastery approach incorporating mediated instruction is utilized in Mathematics Skills. Therefore, students are not required to retake the Mathematics Placement Examination but they must master at 100% proficiency each module to which they have been assigned in Mathematics Skills before being permitted to take mainstream mathematics courses. Some students may achieve scores on the Mathematics Placement Examination which will permit them to enroll in Elementary Algebra for College Students (MA101) with supplementary College Skills modules in Algebra Reinforcement (CS049) as well.
New students assigned to ESL courses full time may be placed in one of seven levels of the course, English for Speakers of Other Languages, based on their scores on various instruments including the English Language Institute Test. The course incorporates objectives in speaking, listening, reading and writing. A full program of study consists of a maximum of 1½ hours which includes a reinforcement module incorporating individualized and small group activities as well as computer assisted instruction and counseling. Students also enroll in various approved bilingual courses and others taught in English while taking ESL courses. Part-time students enroll in one of seven levels of ESL courses for a total of six contact hours per semester.

PHYSICAL FACILITIES

College Skills and English As A Second Language courses are offered at the College's main campus in Suffern and at two Local Learning Centers in Haverstraw and Spring Valley. The majority of the students served in Haverstraw are of Hispanic backgrounds while those enrolled at the Spring Valley campus are largely Haitian. The Haverstraw Center located at 35-37 Main Street is in downtown Haverstraw while the Spring Valley Center is in a former elementary school at 185 North Main Street, just a few blocks from the downtown area.

Space is designated on Main Campus and at the two Centers for faculty and staff offices, classrooms and areas for individualized learning activities and CAI tutorials. On Main Campus individualized learning activities are provided in the Individualized Learning Activities Center and CAI tutorials are provided in the Computer Assisted Instruction Laboratory. Both the Haverstraw and Spring Valley Center have a Student Development Center which serves to support individualized learning activities and CAI tutorials.

SUPPLEMENTAL TUTORIAL SERVICES

While small group and individualized tutoring and CAI tutorials are provided for students enrolled in College Skills and English As A Second Language courses College resources are limited and are supplemented by funding provided through the Vocational Educational Act (VEA), Educational Opportunity Program (EOP) and the Special Services Project (SSP). Special Services Project funding is designed to assist those students assigned to College Skills who are low income, first generation college students and who are the most severely educationally disadvantaged or who have the most severely limited English speaking ability among the CS/ESL student population but who have the academic potential to graduate from college.

Monies from the VEA Disadvantaged grant focus on services for disadvantaged students enrolled in College Skills or ESL courses to enable them to be successful in occupational education programs. Educational Opportunity Program funds provide educationally related support services and financial assistance to those students whose educational and economic circumstances have limited their post secondary education opportunity.
The Special Services Project provides supplemental tutoring for 200 of the more than 2000 students enrolled in College Skills and English As Second Language courses who meet the Project's eligibility criteria.* and who have the greatest educational need based on assessment test scores and placement levels in College Skills and ESL courses. These 200 students represent the highest risk group in the College and are assumed to be those most likely to show poor achievement and high drop out rates. Therefore, the Special Services Project was designed to meet the following objectives:

1. 75-85% of the project students will remain in good standing at the College.
2. 60% of the project students will receive an associate degree or certificate or will transfer to another institution to complete their college degree.

SPECIAL SERVICES PROJECT SITES

In the academic year, 1987-1988, the Special Services Project served 200 students enrolled in College Skills and English As Second Language courses.

* Amendment to Section 04 subpart 4 of part A of Title IV of the Act for Special Programs for Students from Disadvantaged Backgrounds. Federal Register, Vol. 47, No. 42, Wednesday, March 3, 1982 Rules and Regulations.
ESL courses at the Main Campus (day/evening) and at the Local Learning Center in Haverstraw (day/evening) and Spring Valley (evening).

Main Campus Project tutorial facilities are in the Lester E. Rounds Instructional Technology Center in the Library Media Center. Other activities in this central location include the Pass Tutoring Program, the Mediated Mastery Instructional System and the Computer Assisted Instruction Laboratory. The project office which provides space for the Project Director and the Assistant to the Project Director as well as project files is located within the Center. A private cubicle for use by project tutors is located nearby. Several large storage cabinets are utilized to store instructional supplies (texts, workbooks, taped delivery systems, worksheets) for use by project students and tutors. Individualized and small group tutorial sessions took place within the Center and CAI sessions were conducted in the Computer Assisted Instruction Laboratory where 30 microcomputers are available for student use.

Tutorial services and CAI tutorials were offered in the Student Development Center in Spring Valley. An extensive storage area for instructional materials as well as office space for project tutors is provided in the Center. Six microcomputers are available for student use. At the Haverstraw Local Learning Center tutorial services also were offered in the Student Development Center. Again, instructional materials and six microcomputers are available for student use.
CLIENTELE

Of the 200 students in the project all were first generation college students. A total of 133 of the students were both economically disadvantaged with deprived educational backgrounds or limited English language ability and 67 were identified as having deprived educational backgrounds or limited English language ability.

Participants selected for the project on the basis of deprived educational background consisted of: (1) those students from College Skills courses who scored the lowest on the RCC English Placement Examination and/or the Mathematics Placement Examination and (2) those students who were initially identified as Special Services Project eligible while enrolled in College Skills and passed into the mainstream English Composition I EGR or Elementary Algebra for College Students courses.

Participants selected for the project on the basis of limited English speaking ability consisted of: (1) those students from the ESL courses who scored the lowest on the RCC English Placement Examination and/or the Mathematics Placement Examination and (2) those students who were initially identified as Special Services Project eligible while enrolled in English As A Second Language and passed into the mainstream English Composition I International and/or Elementary Algebra for College Students courses.
A total of 63 of the students were enrolled in College Skills courses and 137 were enrolled in ESL courses (Main 61; Havens straw 56; Spring Valley 20).

There were 68 (34%) males and 132 (66%) females. The group included 2 American Indian/Alaska Natives (1.5%), 24 Asian/Pacific Islanders (12%), 84 Blacks (42%), 69 Hispanics (34.5%), and 21 Whites other than Hispanic (10.5%). The ages of the total group ranged from 17 to 81. (mean =28.26). The median age of the group was 25.0. The English As A Second Language group's mean age was 31.0 (Median age = 24.0) and the College Skills group's mean age was 25.0 (median age = 21.0).

SERVICES

Students were recommended for the Special Services Project tutoring by College Skills and ESL instructors and selected for the project by the Project Director. Although the instructors provided the basic prescription for tutorial services (reading, writing, study skills, English language skills, mathematics) the project tutors diagnosed the specific needs for additional individualized support for each participant. The support services included:

(1) A minimum of one hour per week of tutoring (individualized or small group) for each project participant enrolled in College Skills, English As A Second Language, mainstream English or mathematics courses.

(2) A minimum of two hours per week of computer assisted instruction for practice and drill for each project participant enrolled in College Skills, English As A Second Language, mainstream English or mathematics courses.

Tutorial forms including diagnostic, prescriptive and evaluation information were maintained for each project participant. The tutorial forms were filed in the project office. Periodic review of progress was made by the Project Director, and completion of the tutorial prescription was considered the student's responsibility. Needs assessment was continuous with checkpoints built in to insure review of the prescription and revision when necessary (See Appendix B).

The tutors and project students together developed a semester workplan which specified the objectives to be met, the means by which the objectives would be accomplished and procedures for evaluating progress. The tutors kept the instructors informed of student progress, both on an informal basis and through written mid-term evaluations.

Students used a variety of instructional materials purchased through project funds: texts, workbooks, readers, worksheets, math manipulative and language tapes as well as CAI software for reading comprehension, grammar, speed reading, vocabulary development, logic and critical thinking.
Students also learned basic word processing and then utilized the word processor to complete tutorial and in class writing assignments.

STAFF DEVELOPMENT

New project staff members attended preservice training workshops prior to the beginning of tutoring in the Fall Semester, 1987 and in January, 1988, prior to the beginning of spring tutoring. New project staff members received a copy of the Special Services Project Tutorial Manual and Project Taxonomy of Materials. Topics covered in pre-service training included: (See Appendix C and D)

1. Project design
2. Nature of the clientele
3. Philosophy and rationale of the project
4. Roles and responsibilities of the staff
5. Needs Assessment and placement
6. Assessment and diagnostic instruments
7. Tutorial Forms
8. Instructional Materials
9. Cognitive styles and affective characteristics of clientele
10. Formal and informal diagnosis
11. Integration of study skills and content areas
12. Fostering cultural pluralism

The workshops were conducted by the Project Director. Consultants from inside the College (Instructors of College Skills, English As A Second Language, English and Mathematics) were also engaged to deliver presentations.

Weekly training sessions for the tutorial staff dealt with needs and issues which were identified during pre-service training and throughout the course of the project. Some of the topics covered during recent sessions include:

1) Fostering students' metacognitive skills
2) Computer Assisted Instruction and word processing
3) The effect of cultural differences on the ESL tutoring environment
4) Strategies for allaying students' test anxiety
5) Tutoring the student with a physical/learning disability

Several weekly training sessions were devoted to tutors' sharing of ideas and strategies for use in project tutoring. Tutors delivered a mini-presentation of the instructional strategy using appropriate materials. Tutors then discussed application of the strategy to individual students.

All project staff members were encouraged to attend College-sponsored faculty development workshops in January and June. In June of 1988, the Project Director and several project tutors attended several College workshops dealing with Developmental Studies, ESL specifically and disabled students.

The Project Director attended the National Association of Developmental Education annual conference and the New York College Learning Skills Association conference in order to share information and gain new information. Information and materials gathered from the conferences were shared with project tutors during weekly meetings. The Project Director also attended a U.S. Department of Education Training Session for Special Services Personnel which dealt with student retention. In June of 1988, the Project Director was a co-presenter (with the Director of the College Writing Center) of a workshop dealing with metacognitive strategies and content-area reading comprehension.

ARTICULATION WITH COLLEGE PERSONNEL

The Project Director had regular and ongoing contact with the Developmental Studies Department. She met regularly with the Chairperson of the Department, who provides direct College supervision of the project, to discuss administrative and curriculum issues. The Director participated in Developmental Studies Department Staff Meetings and met with the Coordinators of College Skills and ESL to establish overall tutorial objectives and procedures. The Director and project tutors also met regularly with the instructors of project students in order to establish specific tutorial objectives and to obtain prescriptions for tutorial activities.

The Director also met on numerous occasions with various College personnel such as the Project Officer, Director of Administrative Services, Director of Plant Facilities, Director of Institutional Research, Director of Financial Aid, Director of the Educational Opportunity Program (EOP), and the Coordinators of the Local Learning Centers in Haverstraw and Spring Valley.

STUDENT EVALUATION OF SERVICES

In order to evaluate Special Services Project tutorial services a student survey form was prepared in Fall of 1987, with the assistance of Dean Laura Harckham of the R.C.C. Office of Instructional and Community Services. The questions were designed so that they would be readily understood by the students (even Non-English proficient) as well as elicit necessary data. On a pilot basis, the surveys were administered to 100 students during the final two weeks of the Spring 1988 semester. Forms were distributed to students in the Special Services Project office after individual tutoring sessions. The questions were answered anonymously, thereby encouraging honest responses to the survey.

Survey results were overwhelmingly positive; indeed, data indicates that 100% of the students surveyed felt that the tutor was helpful and gave them work that they needed. In addition, 97% of the students indicated that they could write and/or read better because of the tutoring. When responding to the question, "What was most helpful in improving your reading and writing" many students specifically mentioned the tutor in their responses. Student responses included comments such as, "she helps me understand "my errors," "she is a good teacher and she speaks well and explains well too," "the tutor was patient going over the material," "she gave me work that was interesting," and "she cares about my progress."

When students were asked to provide recommendations for improving the tutoring, the only "suggestion" indicated was that further tutoring time would be beneficial.
SUMMATIVE EVALUATION

COLLEGE SKILLS

The achievement of students enrolled in College Skills courses in the areas of reading, writing and mathematics during the 1987-1988 academic year will be described in this section.

READING

Students' performance in reading was assessed in both the Fall and the Spring semesters on the Descriptive Tests of Language Skills (DTLS). The DTLS serves as the reading assessment instrument for all students entering Rockland Community College.

The DTLS results for the Fall semester, 1987 are summarized in Table 1. During the Fall semester all subgroups of College Skills except level CS 013 made statistically significant gains in reading. Table 2 shows the results for Spring 1988. Sub-group CS012 and CS014 did not show significant gains, but the other three levels of College Skills did show gains in reading. (CS 012 approaches significance, but the small number of students requires a larger gain in order to achieve statistical significance). Table 3 combines students in Fall and Spring. With the larger numbers in each of the sub groups, all levels of College Skills made statistically significant gains in reading during the academic year, 1987-88. Of note in this table is that students in CS 014 and CS 029 (the highest levels of College Skills) achieved mean post-test scores which exceeded the College cut-off of scaled score, 11. And the mean post-test score for all College Skills students (N=251) for the academic year approaches the college cut off score (\( \bar{X} = 10.22 \)).

Students' writing competency was assessed through the writing sample which is part of the English Placement Examination. This test, administered to all incoming students at Rockland Community College, served as both a pre-test and as a placement indicator (as do DTLS scores) for students.

Writing samples were scored holistically by a team of trained readers. Each essay was scored twice, independently and the sum of the two scores is the student's writing score. Native English speaking students whose scores fall below the minimum competency level established by the College (score = 6) were assigned to College Skills courses. Students' post-tests produced at the end of the semester were scored similarly and in blind readings with essays from new incoming students. The results in writing for the component subgroups in College Skills are reported in Table 4 for the Fall semester, Table 5 for the Spring semester and Table 6 for the combined Fall and Spring semesters.

In Fall 1987, students in CS 012 (the lowest level of full time Skills students) and in CS 028 (the writing course) demonstrated statistically significant gains in writing. In Spring 1988, students at all levels showed statistically significant gains with CS014 students earning a mean post-test score above the College minimum competency level. The combined totals for the academic year(Table 6) show all Skills students posting statistically significant gains in writing with the exception of CS 071 (the evening part-time students).

The writing test results demonstrate that the College Skills population was in need of basic writing skills instruction and that the results of that instruction were beneficial and did result in improved writing skills.

NS means not significant.
Students whose Mathematics Placement Examination scores indicated that they had not yet reached the level established as an indication of competency were assigned to Mathematics Skills CS065. This course has been designed for students with remedial and developmental skill needs in mathematics and operates on a highly individualized basis. Students are assigned work in specific modules based on their diagnosed areas of need. Their progress is carefully monitored and their final grades reflect the degree to which they have mastered the content. In order to receive a P (pass) grade, a student has to complete the modules assigned and to achieve 100% accuracy on the tests associated with each module. An IP (in progress) grade was assigned to those students who had made significant progress in their work and were close to completing their assigned modules. Students who had not demonstrated sustained work and therefore not made satisfactory progress were assigned a U (unsatisfactory) grade.

Table 7 contains the results of the Fall semester, 1987 and Table 8 contains the results of the Spring semester, 1988. The levels of P and IP grades combined are similar to those for prior years (range 82-85% Fall semesters, 79% Spring semesters). The current year figures are 84% Fall, 1987, 80% Spring, 1988. The evening students present a somewhat different picture. The combined P/IP grades are 62% for Fall 1987 and 73% for Spring 1988; consequently the failure rate for the academic year, 1987-1988 for the evening group is 33%, nearly double that of the day groups. Unlike the day students assigned to Mathematics Skills who are required to enroll in a specific section which has designated meeting times, students in the evening section were allowed to attend the Mathematics Individualized Learning Center whenever they wished and whenever space was available rather than being assigned to attend at designated times.

It would appear that without this built in commitment to the class and without the accountability factor that is inherent in regularly scheduled class meetings, many students (approximately one-third) did not maintain the motivation necessary to make sufficient progress to warrant a satisfactory grade. There can be no question that the decision to change procedures from those which apply for day students was ill-advised. Students who have difficulties with math cannot be expected to become self motivated by fiat; our past evaluations of Mathematics Skills have demonstrated this fact amply and resulted in the set of procedures currently in place for day students.

ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE

Many of the students who require remedial and developmental instruction are those for whom English is a non-native language. This instruction which includes practice in oral and written English is carried out on the Main Campus of Rockland Community College and at two off campus Learning Centers, Spring Valley and Haverstraw. Because the curricula, amount of instruction and methodologies vary greatly from site to site, each Center's results are treated separately in the data.

Students' placements in sections of classes and subsequent instructional emphases are determined by performance on the English Placement Examination (scores on a writing sample and scores on the DTLS), the English Language Institute Test and by personal interview.

READING

Tables 9-12 show the results of reading test scores for Fall 1987, Fall and Spring continuing students, Spring 1988, and summary of all ESL students, Fall and Spring - continuing and non-continuing respectively. In every instance, pre to post - test gains are statistically significant clearly demonstrating that there is growth in reading skills for ESL students at all levels and at all sites.

WRITING

Tables 13-16 show the results of writing test scores for students in Fall 1987, Fall and Spring continuing, Spring 1988, in all semesters, continuing and non-continuing respectively. Growth in writing is demonstrated by statistically significant gains by students at Main Campus and Spring Valley for each semester and for the year. Only students at Haverstraw did not achieve significant growth in writing skills. It is important to bear in mind that the population served by ESL varies at each of the Learning Centers. It has been documented by prior years' evaluations and substantiated by this year's analysis that students at the Haverstraw Center enter ESL with lower writing scores indicative of their lower level skills and proficiency with the English language. Many students are barely literate in their native tongue. These students are the most difficult to teach English and have the most difficulty learning to read and write English. Their growth and development in English language skills is much slower and their involvement with ESL will continue much longer. The fact that Haverstraw students showed gains in reading is probably attributable to greater curricular emphasis on reading instruction and to the fact that generally growth and development in reading skills precede growth and development in writing skills.

The data demonstrate that there has been growth in reading and writing skills for ESL students. The data also show that one or two semesters of instruction in ESL is probably insufficient for most students to meet the College's minimum competency level in reading and writing.

GENERAL LANGUAGE SKILLS

Students in ESL also take the English Language Institute Test which includes measures of general language usage, grammar, syntax, idiom and aural skills. Tables 17-20 show the results of this test for students in Fall 1987, Fall and Spring continuing, Spring 1988 and all students for all semesters. In all instances the gains in language skills were significant except for those students who continued in the courses for two semesters. In both instances, numbers are small which mitigates against statistically significant gains, but the data from Main Campus are unexplainable. The much smaller number of students at Main Campus for whom there were pre and post test scores on this test suggests that this group of 12 is not representative of the continuing student population at Main Campus.

The data on these tables showing scores on general language usage most graphically point out the differences between the language skills of students at Haverstraw and those of other ESL students. In no instance do the mean post-instruction scores of Haverstraw students reach the level of the mean pre-instruction scores of students at Main Campus or Spring Valley. It seems logical to suggest that curricular modifications designed to improve the effectiveness of ESL instruction at Haverstraw is needed.

COMPARATIVE ANALYSIS

The Developmental Studies Department encompasses several different programs conducted at the Main Campus of Rockland Community College and two other learning centers, Spring Valley and Haverstraw. We have hypothesized that the population served by English as a Second Language, College Skills, the Special Services Project, and the three different sites for which ESL is provided are different. Although our research over the years has shown that there is growth in reading, writing and general language skills within all programs and across all sites, it has also shown that this growth varies by program and by site. However, it has been difficult in the past to compare programs and sites because of large differences in entering levels of skills for these different groups. This year, in an effort to document the differences in groups we performed several analyses of covariance on the data.

An analysis of covariance is a statistical test which analyzes the sources of variation among groups on a single variable. For instance, if one were analyzing differences among groups on writing skills, post-test writing scores would be the variable under study. Because the groups vary initially on writing skills, that is before instruction occurs, pre-test writing scores are utilized as the covariate. To explain as simply as possible, the effect of the differences in entering levels is removed statistically by adjusting the post-test means of the various groups. In effect, this statistical manipulation results in post-test means being adjusted downward for those groups entering with the highest levels of skills and conversely results in post-test means being adjusted upward for those groups entering with the lowest levels of skills. The overall result is to compensate for the differences in entering levels of skills on the variable under study to determine if there remain differences in post-test scores between groups. If such differences do exist, they can then be attributed to one or more of the possible sources of variation in one analysis.

Table 21 shows a 2X3 analysis of covariance for ESL on post-test writing scores with pre-test writing scores the covariate. There are six cells (groups) in the analysis: Main Campus-Special Services, Main Campus-Non-Special Services, Spring Valley- Special Services, Spring Valley-Non-Special Services, Haverstraw Special Services, Haverstraw Non-Special Services. In other words 2 conditions (Special Services, Non-Special Services) and 3 sites (Main, Spring Valley, Haverstraw). In addition, the table has totals for columns (sites) and totals for rows (conditions) and a grand mean, or average for the entire population. In the table the numbers are means or averages of the post-test scores for each cell; the numbers in parentheses are the number of subjects in the cell. From this table we can see that non-Special Services students on Main Campus achieved a post-test mean of 4.50 in writing; their counterparts at Spring Valley achieved a 4.14 mean score and at Haverstraw the group achieved a 3.14 score. Similarly for Special Services students, Main Campus students had a mean score of 4.01, Spring Valley students a 3.45 and Haverstraw students a 3.14.
These mean scores are the unadjusted mean post-test writing scores for each of these six groups. The second part of the table describes the results of the analysis of covariance. In this part of the table the sources of variation are listed at the left. The sources under investigation are the main effects - Special Services vs. no Special Services and sites. In this analysis both main effects are statistically significant.

There were statistically significant differences in the post-test writing scores of Special Services students ($\bar{X}=3.70, n=126$) and non-Special Services students ($\bar{X}=4.32, n=409$) after these scores were adjusted for entering levels of writing skills. This fact suggests that effects of the additional services provided as part of the Special Services Project did not have the desired result. Even after instruction, students in Special Services did not perform at comparable levels to non-Special Services students in writing skills. Similarly, there were statistically significant differences between post-test writing scores of students at the Main Campus ($\bar{X}=4.40, n=334$) Spring Valley ($\bar{X}=3.97, n=158$) and Haverstraw ($\bar{X}=3.14, n=43$) Centers. The differences in post-test writing scores at the Centers suggests that there are differences in the student populations served and/or differences in the instructional services provided at the different Centers. There were no significant interaction effects meaning that the variations between the six cells do not reach statistical significance individually (although this effect does approach statistical significance). Finally, the covariate was statistically significant which means that the pre-test scores do vary significantly from the post-test scores demonstrating that all students had gains in writing scores from pre to post tests.

Table 22 reports the results of a 2X3 analysis of covariance for ESL on post-test DTLS scores with pre-test DTLS as a covariate. Examination of the cell means for columns and rows in combination with the part of the table dealing with sources of variation shows that only the main effect which deals with sites and the covariate effect are statistically significant. Thus as with the writing scores, all students gained from pre to post tests, but the gains differed for each of the three sites. The main effect of Special Services vs. no Special Services was not statistically significant (although it does approach statistical significance) suggesting that the additional services provided by the Special Services Project were having the desired effect of making the Special Services Project students more like their non-project counterparts.

The 2X3 analysis of covariance for ESL on post-test English Language Institute Test scores with pre test ESL test scores as covariate in Table 23 shows the same pattern of gain for general language scores as for reading test scores. The significant covariate variance shows gains for all students in general language development. And the significant variance attributable to the main effect sites indicates differential growth in language skills at the three sites.

The next two analyses were performed on College Skills students. Table 24 reports the results of a one-way analysis of covariance for College Skills students on post-test writing scores with pre-test writing scores as the covariate and Table 25 reports the results of a one-way analysis of covariance for College Skills students on post-test DTLS scores with pre-test DTLS scores as the covariate. In these two analyses the only main effect is the students' project status, that is whether students were or were not receiving additional services through the Special Services Project. College Skills students showed gains in both writing and reading (in both tables, the effect of the covariate is statistically significant) but the main effect of project status was not statistically significant. Thus when the post-test means are statistically adjusted for the fact that project students had lower writing levels and thus were more in need of additional services, there were no statistically significant differences between the post-test scores of project and non-project students.

This analysis suggests that for College Skills students the additional services provided through the Special Services Project are having the desired effect of making them more like their non-project counterparts in terms of reading and writing skills.

The next set of analyses reports the results of a 2x2 analysis of covariance comparing ESL and College Skills (CS) students and Special Services Project participants and non-participants. Table 26 reports on post-test writing scores using pre-test writing scores as the covariate and Table 27 reports on post-test DTLS scores with pre-test DTLS scores as the covariate.

Table 26 reports that all sources of variation are statistically significant: the two main effects of program (ESL or CS) and project status (SS and non-SSP); the two-way interaction effect; and the covariate effect.

All students in all programs grew in writing (the covariate effect). However, the post-test scores in writing even after adjusting for differences at entry, were different for different groups. College Skills students' average scores were higher than ESL students' average scores; non-project students' average scores were higher than project students' average scores (the main effects of program and project status). The significant interaction effect heightens the differences between the groups; the mean or average post-test scores in writing for each of the four sub-groups are statistically different from each other. In this case program status and project status interact with one another to exacerbate the differences between groups.

scores as the covariate. The results for reading are similar to the results of writing. All students grew significantly in reading. However, there were differences in post-test reading scores between College Skills and ESL students and between Special Services Project participants and non-participants (the main effects). In this analysis, however, there were no significant two-way interaction effects.

The last set of analyses must be dealt with carefully. All ESL students, at all levels and at all learning sites are grouped together. All College Skills students regardless of level are grouped together. Given this caution, it is apparent that the average levels of reading and writing skills are greater for College Skills students than for ESL students and the average levels of reading and writing skills for Project participants are lower than for non-participants, especially if those students are ESL students. Besides the difference in students, attention must be paid to the quality and quantity of instruction provided within the various categories. The Project services seem to be insufficient to surmount the problems presented by lower-level ESL students. The data suggest that there are probably differences between the two programs in terms of the efficacy of instruction, especially for students at the lower levels of ESL.

CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

It is important to begin this section by reaffirming that almost all of the groups of students enrolled in Developmental Studies showed progress over the course of the academic year 1987-88. They improved their reading, their writing and their several language skills.

For College Skills students, the mean post-test DTLS score for all students regardless of level was 10.22, just slightly below the cut-off score for demonstrating minimum competence (score = 11). Similarly for writing, the mean post-test writing scores for all College Skills students was 5.31 which approaches the College cut-off score of 6. These scores represent significant progress for the College Skills students. It would lead to the conclusion that for the most part, the placements for students are accurate, the curricula are meeting their needs, and the quantity and quality of instruction are sufficient. The one group for whom the program is not working as well as possible is for the evening students. Although this group gained in reading skills, their writing skills are not developing as rapidly. Generally for most students reading will improve more quickly than writing. Current research on writing suggests that writing is very much tied into a developmental sequence which requires much time and practice in order to achieve fruition. Clearly, time is scarce in the part-time evening sequence. It is also important to bear in mind that the students in the evening sections represent all levels of skill in reading and writing and that the instructors of these sections are... required to develop highly individualized programs for students. There are also more materials available for mediated, individualized instruction in reading than in writing which makes it easier to individualize instruction in reading. All of these factors probably explain the much slower progress of the evening Skills students in developing their reading and writing skills.

Two recommendations for the evening sections are: 1) To find more time for instruction and practice in the part-time evening sections. 2) To identify more mediated, individualized instructional material to supplement the writing curriculum.

The ESL students within Developmental Studies also showed positive growth patterns, for the most part. All groups demonstrated growth in reading and general language development and most of the groups demonstrated growth in writing skills. But there are some problems which the data reveal. The average post-test scores of students at the end of the academic year are far below the College competency level in both reading and writing. Although students developed more skill over the course of the academic year, they did not achieve enough skill to be able to enter the College mainstream. It is important to remember that we are looking at averages for each of the Learning Centers; obviously some students did achieve competency level scores in reading and/or writing and were able to enter the mainstream. What is apparent is that there appears to be many more students at lower levels in ESL at all the campuses, than there are in College Skills, and that the program as constituted is experiencing difficulty in raising competency levels within the framework of one academic year.

It would seem that the major factor contributing to the differences in achievement levels between ESL and College Skills students is the presence in ESL of many more students whose reading, writing, and language skills are at very low levels. The presence of lower level students in higher numbers results in lowering of the pre and post-test averages for each of the centers in each of the variables. Thus many students potentially would spend many more semesters in ESL courses in order to reach the minimum competency level. The bulk of the resources available for the instruction of ESL students are expended on those with the lowest levels of skills. The fact leads to another hypothesis about why the ESL students' average scores are low, namely the nature of the instruction for ESL students.

If students enter ESL with very low levels of proficiency in English, much of the instruction must be designed to improve general language proficiency. The nature of this instruction focuses on grammar, syntax, idiom and vocabulary development. Development of skill in reading and writing is incidental: reading and writing are utilized as modes through which the major instructional objectives relating to language development are realized. It is only after students have grasped the basic structures, vocabulary and grammar of English that they can turn their attention to the more learned skills involved in reading and writing the language. In short, once there is basic mastery of the language, the focus can shift to the development of higher levels of reading and writing. It is not that reading and writing do not occur in the lower skill level classrooms; it is that the nature of that reading and writing does not begin to approach the difficulty or complexity required for passing the reading and writing tests and for functioning in college classes conducted in English. Therefore, it is hypothesized that another major factor influencing achievement levels and related to the first factor, the characteristics of the ESL students, is the nature of the instruction, specifically that the objectives of the bulk of the instruction in ESL are to improve language proficiency. That this goal is being met can be seen by the across the board gains for all students on the English Language Institute Test.

Unfortunately, this test has no known norms and no known validity; therefore there is no way to know what the scores mean or how much is enough in order to be able to focus on higher level reading and writing skills. This factor coupled with the fact that neither the DTLS nor the writing sample are useful for making discriminations between students at the lower end of their scale means that placement in ESL sections reduces itself to some very subjective factors with low levels of consistency both within and across Learning Centers. Thus another factor which may be contributing to the lower levels of achievement is the inadequacy and inconsistency of the placement procedures. The effect of this insufficiency on instruction is that conscientious instructors like those in ESL will modify the curriculum and the instructional objectives to match their students' needs.
and abilities which fact in turn impacts negatively on end of semester reading and writing test scores.

These factors may be useful in explaining why the levels of achievement in ESL on the reading and writing tests are low. They also lead to some questions which go to the heart of the ESL sequence in Developmental Studies.

First, there is the question of the ESL students, namely who should be a student within a college-level ESL program? What level of skill and proficiency with the English language should a potential student have? There are constraints which make answering this question a necessity: those associated with the allocation of College resources and those imposed externally by the availability and duration of financial aid. Many colleges deal with this issue by setting minimum proficiency levels for admission to the college-level ESL courses. In the case of students from abroad, results of TOEFL must be at or above certain cut-off levels in order for students to qualify for college admission. In the case of resident students, results of other tests of language proficiency for which norming and validity data exist must be at or above specified cut-off levels.

Next, there is the question of the nature of the instruction provided to ESL students within the college-level program. How much instruction should be provided in general language proficiency and how much in the reading and writing skills necessary for achieving satisfactory grades in college courses taught in English? Most colleges provide between one and three semesters of instruction below the level of introductory college courses. Financial aid constraints would dictate a maximum of four semesters if there are a sufficient number of college courses which students can take and which don't rely too heavily on reading and writing as the primary modes of instruction and evaluation. It would seem, however, that the bulk of the instruction should be on improving reading and writing skills in English.

Third, there is the question of how to place students accurately so that they get the kind of instruction they need and can potentially move through the sequence experiencing success and developing the skills they need in order to move into the mainstream within a predictable and realistic time frame. When the other two major questions have been answered, the answer to this question too will be in hand. Whatever instruments are used to determine admission can also be used along with other assessments in developing criteria for placement and movement between levels. These decisions must be developed utilizing the most objective criteria that can be devised; they must be consistently applied at all the Learning Centers and for all categories of students; ultimately, they must be validated through some kind of empirical analysis.

Finally, there is one last question; what happens to the students who do not have sufficient language proficiency to be admitted to a college-level ESL sequence? The only possible answers are to find, invent or develop a new program (or get someone else to do it) to serve these students and to find, invent or develop alternative funding sources to support this program. Prior years' evaluations have suggested that many of the lower level ESL students have a desire to improve their English language skills but not necessarily an immediate desire to pursue a college education. Developing a literacy program under the aegis of the College but not within the framework of the college curriculum solves the problems of both sets of students—those denied admission because of low proficiency and those desiring only to improve their English proficiency. Completion of this program at a satisfactory level of proficiency would become part of the criteria for admission to the college-level program should an individual desire to pursue college-level work.

In summary, the questions raised and the solutions proposed in the preceding pages will require some commitments by the faculty and the administration. There will have to be time set aside for the finding and/or developing of instruments and procedures for admission, placement, and movement. There will need to be time devoted to modifying the curriculum to meet the goals proposed. There will have to be some extensive staff development activities provided in order to provide support for instructors who may be moving in new and different directions. Institutional support in developing a new program and in finding alternative funding will be necessary. In short, these recommendations can only be implemented if the college administration can provide high levels of support in terms of staff-time and effort, released time for faculty, consultant services and staff development activities.

RCC Competency Assessment Policy
RCC COMPETENCY ASSESSMENT POLICY

To ensure that all students are placed into course work appropriate to their skills, Rockland Community College has a policy of assessing all applicants for placement in English and mathematics courses. The English Assessment consists of a reading comprehension evaluation and a writing sample on a given topic. As a result of these assessments, students may be placed in English Composition, College Skills, or English as a Second Language courses. The Mathematics Assessment includes a required computation section and an algebra section which students are encouraged to take. Students may be placed in Mathematics Skills, College Mathematics, Intermediate Algebra, or one of the more advanced courses offered by the Mathematics Department.

First-Time College Students: All entering students who have not previously attended college and are planning full-time enrollment (12 or more degree credits) should take the English and Mathematics Assessments as soon as possible after acceptance into the College and before registration. This applies to all students, including those at local learning centers and sites.

An entering student does not have to take the English Placement Examination if, in the judgment of the English as a Second Language (ESL) faculty coordinator or College Skills instructor, the student cannot perform on the assessment, is to be placed into a beginning section of ESL or Communication Skills (CS 011 or CS 071 or CS 072), and will be taking no other courses. A waiver form for the English Assessment must be signed by the ESL coordinator of Assessment and Placement.

Part-time students who intend to register for a credit-bearing mathematics course must take the Mathematics Assessment before enrolling in the course, regardless of the number of credits already earned.

Part-time students registering for English 101 or Business Correspondence (EN 110, BU 110) must take the English Assessment before enrolling, regardless of the number of degree credits already earned.

All other part-time students enrolling for less than 12 credits will be required to take the English and Mathematics Assessments before registering for their sixteenth degree credit.

Transfer Students: In accordance with Rockland's policy on Advanced Standing, transfer students may be exempt from the English and/or Mathematics Assessment, based on a review of their previous academic record. However, when applying to specific programs, they may be required to take the English and/or Mathematics Assessment.

Selection of Project Participants

After acceptance to the College, all entering students who have not previously attended college and are planning fulltime enrollment (12 or more degree credits) are required to take the English and Mathematics Placement Examinations before registration for courses. Part-time students who intend to register for their first English language course or a credit bearing mathematics course are also required to complete the examinations. All other part-time students enrolling for less than twelve credits must also take the examinations prior to registering for their sixteenth degree credit. As a result of assessment, students are placed in various courses or programs in the College.

The Special Services Project clientele will be selected from those students who have been placed in College Skills courses (CS), English as a Second Language courses (ESL), English Composition I EGR, English Composition T International, or Contemporary College Mathematics. The Director of the Project will select those students for the project who are: (1) low income individuals who are first generation college students and (2) the most severely educationally disadvantaged students among those assigned to College Skills, English as a Second Language, English Composition, or Contemporary Mathematics courses but who have the academic potential to graduate from college.

Procedures for identifying the students from College Skills, English As A Second Language, the English Department and the Mathematics Department, and for integrating the services have been established between the Special Services Project and the Coordinator of College Skills and the Coordinator of English as a Second Language, the Chairperson of the English Department and the Chairperson of the Mathematics Department since the establishment of the first Special Services Project in 1977.

Initial Needs Assessment

All students who are required to enroll in College Skills courses or English as a Second Language courses participate in an initial College Skills Needs Assessment or initial English as a Second Language Needs Assessment for placement in courses and for orientation.

The College Skills initial Needs Assessment is conducted at specified times throughout the academic year and the summer. Each student is provided a general orientation to the College and College Skills, a tour of the campus and guidance in securing information about financial aid. Students also schedule meetings with financial aid counselors who determine financial aid eligibility. Each student meets with a Communication Skills and Mathematics Skills instructor who explains the College assessment test results and the general level and expectations associated with the particular Communication Skills course or Mathematics Skills section into which the student has been placed. The student then meets with a counselor who discusses vocational objectives and options and the estimated number of semesters the student is likely to be in College Skills and who assists the student in selecting courses and completing the registration process.

During the initial English as a Second Language Needs Assessment process, which is scheduled during College registration periods, all students with limited English speaking ability are tested by the instructors who teach English as a Second Language. The instruments currently used are a combination of both in-house and standardized tests. Students are given the English Language Institute Test (ELI) and are placed in various levels of the English as a Second Language courses based on test results. Counselors also provide a general orientation to the College and to English as a Second Language, a tour of the campus, assistance with College registration, and guidance in securing financial aid.

New students enrolled in English Composition I EGR, English Composition I International and/or Contemporary College Mathematics receive orientation, advisement and assessment from the College Counseling staff while students continuing from College Skills or English As A Second Language receive advisement and assessment from the College Skills and English
As A Second Language counseling staffs in addition to the College staff.

Participants selected for the Special Services Project on the basis of severe educational need will consist of: (1) those students from College Skills courses who score the lowest on the English Placement Examination and/or the Mathematics placement Examination and (2) those students who are initially identified as Special Services Project eligible while enrolled in College Skills and pass into the mainstream English Composition EGR, and/or Contemporary College Mathematics courses. Participants selected for the Special Services Project on the basis of limited English speaking ability will consist of: (1) those students from the English As A Second Language courses who score the lowest on the English As A Second Language courses who score the lowest on the English Placement Examination and/or the Mathematics Placement examination and (2) those students who are initially identified as Special Services Project eligible while enrolled in English As A Second Language and pass into the mainstream English Composition I International and/or Contemporary College Mathematics courses. It is proposed that 350 students will be selected for the project.

Secondary Needs Assessment

Students selected for the Special Services Project will receive additional assessment from the project tutorial.
Although the instructors of College Skills, English As A Second Language, English and Mathematics courses will provide the basic prescriptions for tutorial services (reading, writing, study skills, English language skills and mathematics) the tutors will diagnose the needs for additional individualized support for each project participant. The support services will include:

1. A minimum of one hour per week of tutoring (individual or small group) for each project participant enrolled in College Skills or English As A Second Language courses.

2. A minimum of two hours per week of computer assisted instruction (CAI) for practice and drill for each project participant enrolled in College Skills or English As A Second Language Courses.

3. A minimum of one hour per week of tutoring (individual or small group) for each project participant enrolled in mainstream English or Mathematics courses.

4. A minimum of two hours per week of Computer Assisted Instruction (CAI) for each project participant enrolled in mainstream English or Mathematics courses.
Tutorial forms including diagnostic, prescriptive, and evaluative information will be maintained for each project participant. The original form signed by the student and project tutor will be filed with the Project Director. Periodic review of progress will be made by the project Director, but completion of the prescribed workplan will be considered the student's responsibility. The important principle of needs assessment which underlies the project design is that needs assessment is continuous with checkpoints built in to insure review of the workplan and revision when necessary. The purpose of continuous needs assessment is to maximize the success of project participants.
COLLEGE READING & STUDY SKILLS

Success in college depends greatly on knowing how to learn, understand, and remember new information. Mastering good reading/study skills gives students control over their learning situations.

Below is an outline detailing these reading/study skills.

Reading: PREVIEW

READ

I. PREVIEW READING MATERIAL
   A. Previewing gives you an overview of the subject -- helps you see the overall picture and central point
   B. Previewing brings to mind any background knowledge you may already have on the subject
      1. You will relate the new knowledge to your background knowledge
      2. You will better understand and remember the new knowledge
   C. Read the title and subtitle to narrow down the subject
   D. Look at study help:
      1. pictures and captions
      2. charts and tables
3. graphs
4. boldtype words or italics

E. For short articles, read the first sentence of each paragraph and the last sentence of the article

F. For textbook, look at key parts for content and organization:
1. table of contents (chapter headings and subheadings)
2. preface or introduction (author's purpose of writing and lay-out of book)
3. glossary (definitions of important terms, located at end of text)
4. index (lists subjects covered in alphabetical order with page numbers -- may activate your knowledge of these subjects; located at end of text)
5. appendix (provides additional related information; if included, located at end of text)
6. skim through chapters

G. When previewing text chapter, read subheadings
H. Watch for names, dates, numbers, unfamiliar words
I. Read end-of-chapter questions first to identify important information to be learned from the reading
J. Read introductions and conclusions, or summaries, of chapters
K. When possible, preview material to be covered during next class
1. As you preview, make up questions you have about the subject and focus on their answers in class
2. Look up meanings of new terms in glossary
3. You will better understand the instructor's lesson
II. READ ACTIVELY

A. Turn headings/subheadings into questions and try to answer them after reading

B. As you read, ask yourself, "What is the main idea?"
   1. The main idea is what the writer is saying about the topic (subject)
   2. Main idea is often the writer's opinion added to the topic
   3. Main idea is what the whole passage is about
   4. Main idea is often (but not always) stated in the first paragraph

C. To find the main idea, ask yourself:
   1. Who or what is the topic (subject)?
      What is the writer saying about the topic?

D. If the main idea is implied (not directly stated), ask yourself:
   1. Who or what is the topic that all the details relate to?
   2. What point are these details making about the topic?
   3. Your answer is the main idea

E. Underline key words and phrases (main ideas and major details)
   1. Underline main ideas with a double line and major details with a single line
   2. Don't underline too much
3. Discriminate between major and minor details
4. Major details directly support or explain main idea

F. Take notes on the reading
   1. Write down the main ideas as you read and try to see how they are related, how they fit together
   2. Outline key points
   3. Write or verbalize a summary

G. Pay attention to print signals
   1. headings and subheadings
   2. words printed in boldface, italics, color or all capitals
   3. charts, tables and graphs

H. Look for answers to end-of-chapter questions

I. Look for context clues (in same sentence, prior sentence, and next sentence) for new vocabulary meanings

J. Try to predict what will happen next or what the writer will say next -- headings give clues

K. Look for organizational patterns and signal words to better understand and to see the writer's plan
   1. Enumeration - are details listed? (one reason is; first, second, third; in addition; also; furthermore; finally)
2. Sequence - are details told in time order? (first, second, third; before; then; next; later; last; finally)

3. Comparison or Contrast - are details compared or contrasted? (similarly; like; unlike; whereas; however; by contrast; on the other hand; although)

4. Cause and Effect - does the writer state causes or reasons for certain effects or results? (because; causes; since; as a result; therefore; due to; consequently; so; thus; this led to) consequently; so; thus; this led to)

5. Generalization - are examples given to support a general statement? (for example; for instance; in other words)

L. List any points you do not understand in the reading to question in class
III. REVIEW READING MATERIAL (Study)

A. Reread the main ideas and key phrases you underlined

B. Reread your notes/outlines on the material

C. Summarize the reading material
   1. Retell verbally in your own words the key points of the reading
   2. Write a summary or explanation of the reading in your own words
      a. Written summaries help you to think through and understand the author's ideas
      b. Written summaries are very useful for review and study for tests

D. Test yourself
   1. Answer end-of-chapter questions
   2. Use index cards to write questions on front and answers on back (flash cards)

E. Outline the reading
   1. An outline is a summary of the reading's important points in skeleton form using numbers and letters to show:
      a. main ideas
      b. supporting details and examples
      c. relationships among these
   2. Outlines force you to organize what you have read
a. Outlines force you to discriminate between main ideas, major details, and minor details
b. Outlines help you to understand and remember the key issues
c. Detailed outlines provide you with information you need to study for exams

3. Label main ideas and details correctly
a. Letters, numbers and indentations show levels of importance
b. Key words identify significant ideas (sentence fragments are ok)
c. Label main ideas with Roman numerals (I, II, III, IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, IX, X)
d. Label major details with capital letters, under the corresponding main idea
e. Label minor details with numbers under the corresponding major detail
f. Label further subdivisions with lower case letters

F. Pay attention to subheadings and words printed in italics, all capitals, or bold-face type -- these are often main ideas.

G. If reading material seems too lengthy to study, divide it into smaller segments
IV. NOTE TAKING IN CLASS

A. Lecture may provide new information not included in the textbook

B. Information presented in class may further explain the textbook material

C. Note taking will be easier if you have previewed the reading

D. Good class notes will contain information needed to be learned for exams

E. Notes are a summary of what the instructor says
   1. Note main ideas and details in phrases rather than sentences
   2. Do not try to write lecture word-for-word
   3. Separate and underline main idea headings
   4. Clearly list major details next to or under main ideas

F. Take notes in a rough outline form
   1. Number major details, but you will not have time for exact lettering and numbering
   2. By numbering steps of a process or a sequence of items, you can later ask for help if a certain item is missed

G. Copy down all information written on the board

H. Copy down new terms used in the lecture and their definitions (if not provided, look up in glossary or dictionary later)
I. Listen for organizational clues (See II. K. 1-5)
   1. Example: "There are three reasons for the Industrial Revolution."
   2. Example: "There were several causes for the rise in immigration."

J. Listen for key words used in main ideas:
   1. causes, reasons
   2. effects, consequences, results
   3. benefits, advantages/disadvantages, problems
   4. objectives, points, purpose
   5. stages, steps
   6. differences/similarities

K. Use abbreviations whenever possible
   1. e.g. = for example
   2. w/ = with
   3. w/o = without
   4. info = information
   5. ex. = example
   6. + = and
   7. # = number
   8. --> = leads to
   9. . . = therefore
   10. In time, you will develop your own personal symbols and abbreviations

L. Use a separate, dated page for each class or lecture
M. Looseleaf notebooks work best
   1. Paper can be added as needed
   2. Any handouts, study guides, important papers should be hole-punched and inserted into looseleaf notebook right away
   3. Keep notes from different courses separated by dividers

N. Revise your notes as soon after class as possible
   1. Ask instructor for clarification where needed
   2. If notes are missing information, get help from another student or instructor

O. Write down assignments, due dates, and exam dates in notebook

P. Do not lose notebook! (Print your name, address, and phone number inside front cover)
V. TEST-TAKING STRATEGIES

A. Prepare thoroughly for tests
1. Study class notes thoroughly
2. Complete all reading assignments at the time you are required to complete them
3. Review reading material: study the main ideas, major details and key phrases you had underlined
4. Study notes, summaries, and outlines you had made on reading material
5. Focus on main ideas and major details
6. If instructor gives a test review session, attend it, and study subjects discussed
7. Test yourself
   a. Make up questions about the important topics from class and text, or use end-of-chapter questions
   b. Answer questions without referring to class notes or textbook
   c. Refer to class notes or text to check your answers
8. Study any handouts or review forms given by instructor
9. Study ideas stressed or repeated by instructor or textbook
10. Study definitions of new or technical terms
11. Review any exams or quizzes already taken in the course
   a. May give you clues to how next test will be constructed
   b. You will see what your weak spots are (e.g., not following directions, not answering questions completely)

12. Write summaries of reading material

13. Study in an appropriate place
   a. quiet and comfortable room free from distractions
   b. area with good lighting
   c. study in a sitting position

B. Overcome test anxiety
   1. Think positively — believe you will succeed!
   2. Get enough sleep the night before the exam and eat breakfast
   3. Schedule yourself enough study time — don't cram!
      a. Your anxiety will increase if too much studying is left for the last minute
      b. Crammed information will be quickly forgotten
   4. Study main points the night before the exam, and briefly review them next morning, if possible.
   5. Begin the test by answering the easiest questions first — you will feel more confident once you begin writing
6. Don't worry about what you do not know; write down what you do know

C. Take exams using effective tips:
   1. Come to testing room on time with necessary tools (pens, pencils, erasers, calculator, etc.)
   2. Always read and follow test directions carefully
   3. Survey the entire test quickly before writing
      a. Take note of the type of questions (short answers? essays?)
      b. Allow more time to answer those questions worth the most points
   4. Answer the easier test items first
   5. Don't spend too much time on any one question
      a. If you are unsure of an answer, go on to the next question
      b. Sometimes an answer in one part of a test will give you a clue to the answer you did not know 6. Reread your paper before turning it in a. Make sure you have answered all questions completely
      b. Check spelling, sentence sense, etc.

D. Multiple-choice questions
   1. It may be helpful to turn the statement into question form
   2. Read all choices before answering
3. Eliminate answers you are sure are incorrect and look for the best answer (two choices may seem good, but one is better)

4. Watch for qualifiers
   a. Absolutes, such as "never, always, only, all" usually indicate a wrong answer
   b. Qualifiers such as "probably, usually, generally, often" have a greater chance of indicating a correct answer

5. Watch for incomplete items
   a. Answer is probably incorrect if a term or phrase is omitted
   b. Complete (sometimes longer) answers tend to be correct

6. Watch for statements that are too broad or too narrow in main idea questions
   a. too broad: statement doesn't contain enough information and is too general to be main idea
   b. too narrow: statement may be true, but it is just one detail of the passage, not what the whole passage is about

7. Inference questions ask you to "read between the lines" -- to gain certain meaning and understanding that is not directly stated by the writer
a. Ex: "You can infer that..."
b. Ex: "The writer implies that..."
c. Ex: "The writer suggests that..."
d. Ex: "You can conclude that..."

8. Use reason, logic, process of elimination to figure out answers, when possible

9. If time runs out, fill in multiple choice answers at random

E. True-False questions

1. For a "true" answer, all parts of the statement must be true
   a. Watch for words or phrases that may not be entirely true
   b. If a statement is partly false, mark it "false"

2. Watch for qualifiers
   a. Absolutes such as "always, never, all, every, only, none, the best, the worst, everyone" leave no room for exceptions and often make the statement false
   b. But words such as "often, usually, generally, frequently, rarely, some, several, a few" do leave room for exceptions and are more likely to indicate a true statement

3. Watch for negatives and confusing double negatives
a. To simplify double negative sentences, restate the sentence leaving out both negatives

b. Ex: Not studying for a test is unwise. = Studying for a test is wise.

F. Matching items

1. Read both columns before matching any items
2. If one column has more items, you will not match every item
3. Match the items you know first
4. Cross out items as you match them

G. Essay questions

1. Read question carefully: note key word that indicates what type of answer is expected
   a. enumerate or list = name one by one, give examples
   b. explain = give reasons for
   c. trace or develop = write facts in chronological order
   d. identify = tell who a person is or what a thing is
   e. illustrate = make clear by using examples or stories
   f. define or interpret = give the meaning of
   g. compare = point out how persons or things are alike (note similarities)
h. contrast = point out how persons or things are different
i. evaluate = judge something by giving its positive and negative features
j. describe = tell how a person, place, thing, or event looks, acts, or takes place
k. discuss = tell all you can about topic; consider from various points of view
l. summarize = explain briefly, stating most important points
m. demonstrate = show clearly; prove
n. justify = give good reasons to prove or support a statement or idea as just or right

2. Brainstorm first: make a list or quick outline of your main idea and supporting details or examples

3. Turn the essay directions into a question
   a. The answer to the question becomes your opening sentence for your essay
   b. Your first sentence sets up a plan or format for writing the essay

4. Write a complete, organized answer to the question
a. Use a separate paragraph for each part of the answer
b. Begin with your opening sentence/main idea
c. Begin each paragraph with a topic sentence that refers to the question (the main idea)
d. Use specific details and examples to support your answer and explain what you say
e. End the essay with a summary/conclusion that restates your main idea

5. Proofread your work
   a. The essay should make sense, moving from point to point in a logical manner
   b. Use proper punctuation to separate sentences (no run-ons)
   c. Be sure each sentence is a complete thought with subject and verb (no fragments)
   d. Check for spelling errors
   e. Make sure you have answered what the question asks (key word -- see V. G. l. a-n)
VI. UNDERSTANDING NEW VOCABULARY THROUGH CONTEXT CLUES

A. Context is the phrase, sentence, or paragraph that surrounds a word.

B. Authors often define or explain unfamiliar words
   1. The meaning of the new word may follow right after it, either within parentheses, between commas, or after a dash
      a. Ex: The dentist must see Mr. Jones each week because he has pyorrhea (a gum disease).
      b. Ex: Roe, fish eggs, are considered a delicacy by many people.
      c. Ex: He is majoring in geology -- the study of the physical history of the earth.
   2. Author may give examples to clarify meanings of unfamiliar words
      a. Ex: Professor Jones is an expert in three disciplines -- music, physics, and history.
      b. Ex: People are influenced greatly by the mass media (films, t.v., radio, newspapers, magazines).

C. Use the general sense of the sentence to figure out word meanings
   1. Words surrounding the unfamiliar word may reveal its meaning
2. Surrounding sentences may help reveal the meaning.
3. If not the exact meaning, you may get a close enough idea of the meaning.
   a. Ex: Even though he seemed to falter, near the end of the race he recovered enough to win.
   b. Ex: He tried seven matches before he could ignite the firecracker.

D. A comparison or contrast of the new word with something familiar may reveal the meaning.
   1. Ex: Jack was lazy, but Bob was diligent.
   2. Ex: While the king was served huge meals, the servants existed on a meager amount of food.

E. A synonym used with the new word may reveal the meaning.
   1. Ex: The potent drug's power was felt at once.
   2. Ex: The poignant film was so painfully touching, it left the audience in tears.
VII. UNDERSTANDING NEW VOCABULARY THROUGH STRUCTURE CLUES

A. Many words are made up of other words or word parts
B. You can figure out meanings for many unfamiliar words by analyzing the prefix, root, and/or suffix

1. Ex: predetermine prefix pre = before
   predetermine means to decide beforehand

2. Ex: biography
   root bio = life
   root graph = write
   biography means writing about someone's life

3. Ex: childish
   suffix ish = belonging to, characteristic of childish means characteristic of or like a child

C. Some suffixes show the part of speech of the word

1. Ex: astrological
   suffix al added to end of word shows it is an adjective

2. Ex: sickness
   suffix ness added to end of word shows it is a noun

3. Ex: quickly
   suffix ly added to end of word shows it is an adverb
VIII. RETAINING NEW VOCABULARY

A. If word meaning cannot be derived from context or structural clues, look up meaning first in textbook glossary, or in a dictionary.

B. Use text glossary to learn word meanings exactly as they are used in that textbook for that particular course, especially technical terms.

C. Keep a list of new important words and their meanings in each course's section of your notebook.

D. Put a check mark next to each word you look up in the glossary; study definitions of all checked words before test.

E. Write each new word as it is used in a sentence to help remember its spelling and meaning.

F. Use new words (not technical terms) in your conversation and writing to make them part of your permanent vocabulary.

G. Relate new words to what you already know; associate new word meanings with knowledge, similar examples or situations which are already a part of your life.

Remember, too, that a student's attitude affects his/her success. Be positive! Believe that you can succeed! Focus on your past successes, not your failures. Take each new task as it comes, practice these effective study skills, and you will be a successful college student.

Mastering Study Skills - A Student Guide

Reading and Studying for Success

Compiled by Elise Moloney
Special Services Department
January 1989
The Developmental Studies Department provides courses and services designed to prepare students lacking college-level skills to enter college courses and to complete a college degree or certificate. The department currently offers College Skills (CS) courses which help native American students develop reading, writing, mathematics, and study skills and English As A Second Language (ESL) courses which assist students whose native language is not English develop oral language, reading, writing, and study skills. The students in College Skills customize the full range (age, sex, ethnic backgrounds, religions, social class) of clientele at the College. While the ESL enrollment continues to include some 250 students yearly from abroad, the majority of the students in ESL classes (84%) are first generation residents in Rockland County.

Individual assessment and advisement, small group and individual counseling and tutorial services are provided for students enrolled in College Skills and ESL courses and the department continues to provide counseling and tutorial services for College Skills and ESL students who move into the College mainstream as well.

Developmental courses and tutoring in specific areas such as spelling, vocabulary development, and effective listening are offered by Developmental Studies for all Rockland students who can benefit. The department also serves as a faculty development and resource center.
providing consultation with College faculty members, coordinated efforts to develop courses which include study strategies related to specific content, workshops and seminars, identification and development of resource materials, and publication of papers and materials. In addition, the Chairperson of the Developmental Studies Department is responsible for coordinating all College-wide tutorial services for disadvantaged students and for providing College supervision of the Special Services Project.*

A diversified staffing model is utilized to provide a maximum of individualized instruction to meet the diverse needs of the students. The staff includes a Chairperson, College Skills Coordinator, English As A Second Language Coordinator, 7 full time instructors, 3 full time counselors, some 28 adjunct instructors and counselors and some 12 teaching assistants in addition to one full time and one part-time clerical assistant.

ASSESSMENT, PLACEMENT, ADVISEMENT

Students are placed in College Skills or ESL as a result of English and Mathematics assessments (See Attached). The assessment process is designed to ensure that all students are placed into course work appropriate to their skills.

* Title IV of the Act for Special Programs for Students from Disadvantaged Backgrounds.
Upon acceptance to the College all entering students who have not previously attended college and are planning full time enrollment are required to take the Rockland Community College English and Mathematics Placement Examinations before registering for courses. Part-time students who intend to register for initial English language courses or credit bearing Mathematics courses are also required to complete the examinations. All other part-time students must also take the examinations prior to registering for their twelfth degree credit. Federal regulations also mandate that the College determine that entering students who receive financial aid have the potential to succeed in College and that they receive appropriate remedial/developmental services to help them succeed in college. Therefore, all full time and part-time students applying for financial aid must take the Rockland Community College English and Mathematics Placement Examinations before registering for courses as well. The English Placement Examination consists of an evaluation of reading comprehension (Comprehension Section of Descriptive Tests of Language Skills - DTLS) and a writing sample on a given topic scored holistically by trained readers. The Mathematics Placement Examination includes an in-house computation section which students are required to take and an algebra section which students are encouraged to take.

After placement into College Skills or ESL each student has a conference with Developmental Studies Department instructors and counselors for needs assessment and to determine a course of study. Students are assigned to non-credit College Skills or ESL courses until re-assessment shows that they are ready to move into mainstream courses. Some, when the appropriate skill level has been reached, may select carefully chosen credit-bearing courses while they are enrolled in College Skills or ESL. The College Skills needs assessment is conducted at specific times throughout the academic year and the summer. Students are provided a general orientation to the College and College Skills, a tour of the campus and referral to College counselors who determine financial aid eligibility and assess each student's full financial need. College Skills instructors explain the College assessment test results and the content of the various College Skills courses to which students have been assigned. Department counselors discuss with the students their vocational objectives and options and the estimated number of semesters they are likely to be in College Skills and then assist the students in selecting courses and completing the registration process.

During the English As A Second Language needs assessment process, which is scheduled during College registration periods, the students also receive orientation and referral for financial aid counseling. They participate in additional ESL in-house testing in English language development, reading and writing for placement in specific ESL courses. The ESL instructors also explain to the students the test results and the content of the courses to which students are assigned. English As A Second Language instructors and/or Developmental Studies Department counselors then discuss with students their vocational objectives and options and the estimated number of semesters they are likely to be in ESL and assist the students in selecting courses and completing the registration process.

New students enrolled in College Skills full time are placed in one of four levels of the non-credit courses, Reinforcement (CSK 021-024) and Developmental Course II (individualized learning activities and computer assisted instruction-CAI) based on their scores on the English Placement Examination. The courses are competency based and incorporate objectives in reading, writing, critical thinking and study skills. Students also enroll in Strategies for College Success (CSK 031) and Understanding Human Behavior (CSK 032) The first course concentrates on an orientation to the nature of higher education with an emphasis on the structure at Rockland Community College and on the development of effective study skills while the second course deals with the fundamentals of psychology. Students also enroll in a counseling seminar for an additional two credit hours. Depending on their curriculum goals and current time commitments new students may or may not enroll in Mathematics Skills (CSK 065) for an additional four contact hours plus Developmental Course V which provides up to six hours of individualized learning activities. Exit criteria are specified for successful completion of each level of Communication Skills and each module of Mathematics Skills. As they progress through the College Skills courses students are permitted to enroll in some additional credit courses which have been approved by Department Chairpersons and Program Coordinators as appropriate at specific levels of reading and writing proficiency. Part-time students enroll in one of six levels of Communication Skills courses and counseling for a total of six contact/credit hours per semester. They may also enroll in Developmental Course II or V for an additional two hours per week.
Students who have met the minimum competency in reading on the English Placement Examination but have not reached the minimum competency in writing are assigned to Introduction to College Writing (CSK 028). Those students who have met the minimum competency in writing but have not reached the minimum competency in reading are permitted to enroll in English Composition I, ENG 101 but they must also enroll concurrently in Efficient Reading CSK 029. In addition to regular sections of English Composition I, the College also offers several special emphasis sections. Often after passing into the mainstream College Skills students will enroll in ENG 101 EGR for additional academic support and ESL students will enroll in EN 101 International designed for students for whom English is a second language.

Students enrolled in Communication Skills courses take all or part (reading/writing) of the English Placement Examination at the end of each semester until they have met the minimum competencies in reading and writing required for passing into the College mainstream. A modified mastery approach incorporating mediated instruction is utilized in Mathematics Skills. Therefore, students are not required to retake the Mathematics Placement Examination but they must master at 100% proficiency each module to which they have been assigned in Mathematics Skills before being permitted to take mainstream mathematics courses. Some students may achieve scores on the Mathematics Placement Examination which will permit them to enroll in Elementary Algebra for College Students MAT 101 with supplementary College Skills modules in Algebra Reinforcement CSK 049 as well.
New students assigned to ESL courses full time may be placed in one of seven levels of the course, English For Speakers of Other Languages (ESL 035 - 056), and in one of six levels of the course, ESL Reinforcement Module (ESL 800 - 821), based on their scores on various instruments including the English Language Institute Test. These courses incorporate objectives in speaking, listening, reading and writing. The ESL Reinforcement Module utilizes individual and some small group techniques as well as computer assisted instruction. Students may also enroll in Developmental Course IV which provides up to six hours of additional individual and group activities.

Other ESL courses, Writing Module (ESL 071) and Reading Module (ESL 072), concentrate only on development of writing or reading skills. Students also enroll in various approved bilingual courses and others taught in English while taking ESL courses. Part-time students enroll in one of seven levels of ESL courses and Developmental Course IV for a total of 10 hours per semester.

Students enrolled in ESL courses take all or part (reading/writing) of the English Placement Examination at the end of each semester until they have met the minimum competencies in reading and writing required for passing into the College mainstream.

PHYSICAL FACILITIES

College Skills and English As A Second Language courses are offered at the College's main campus in Suffern and at two Local Learning Centers in Haverstraw and Spring Valley. The majority of the students served in Haverstraw are of Hispanic backgrounds while those enrolled at the Spring Valley campus are largely Haitian. The Haverstraw center located at 35-37 Main Street is in downtown Haverstraw while the Spring Valley Center is in a former elementary school at 185 North Main Street, just a few blocks from the downtown area.

Space is designated on Main Campus and at the two Centers for faculty and staff offices, classrooms and areas for individualized learning activities and CAI tutorials. On Main Campus individualized learning activities are provided in the Individualized Learning Activities Center and CAI tutorials are provided in the Computer Assisted Instruction Laboratory. Both the Haverstraw and Spring Valley Center have a Student Development Center which serves to support individualized learning activities and CAI tutorials.

SUPPLEMENTAL TUTORIAL SERVICES

While small group and individualized tutoring and CAI tutorials are provided for students enrolled in College Skills and English As A Second Language courses Collge resources are limited and are supplemented by funding provided through the Vocational Educational Act (VEA), Educational Opportunity Program (EOP) and the Special Services Project (SSP). Special Services Project funding is designed to assist those students assigned to College Skills who are low income, first generation college students and who are the most severely educationally disadvantaged or who have the most severely limited English speaking ability among the CS/ESL student population but who have the academic potential to graduate from college.
Monies from the VEA Disadvantaged grant focus on services for disadvantaged students enrolled in College Skills or ESL courses to enable them to be successful in occupational education programs. Educational Opportunity Program funds provide educationally related support services and financial assistance to those students whose educational and economic circumstances have limited their post secondary education opportunity.
