This directory provides information about a variety of resources, organizational and material, in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area (District of Columbia, Maryland, and Virginia) that may be helpful in serving limited-English-proficient populations. The first section consists of two parts. The first lists organizations and reference and instruction materials, alphabetically, giving telephone numbers where appropriate and providing an annotation on the services and publications offered. The second part lists educational institutions in a similar format, and contains information about program type, audience, special support services, curriculum materials, and special funding. The second section is an index to the full entries in the first section, listed by category: consulting or service agency, ethnic group, materials, program type, and educational institution. A geographical index is also provided. (MSE)

THE GUIDE

A RESOURCE HANDBOOK

For Those Who Work With Limited English Proficient Students Pre-K to Adult Ed.

Maryland, Northern Virginia and Washington, DC
The U.S. Department of Education estimates that between 1.2 and 1.7 million school-aged children in the United States are classified as limited English proficient. According to surveys conducted by school systems in Maryland and Northern Virginia, and in the District of Columbia, approximately 18,300 limited English proficient students attend area schools. Efforts to meet the educational needs of these students are derived from a variety of sources. The Federal Government provides assistance through Title VII of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, as amended. Funds authorized under this Act are administered through the Office of Bilingual Education and Minority Languages Affairs. This office administers a broad range of activities for establishing, operating, or improving programs of bilingual education to help limited English proficient students improve their English language skills.

The Office of Bilingual Education and Minority Languages Affairs recognized that there is a great wealth of quality services and programs available for limited English proficient students in the Washington DC-Maryland-Northern Virginia area and initiated the publication of this resource guidebook. The Guide will benefit administrators, teachers, counselors, and other school personnel working with limited English proficient students. We hope that our effort will stimulate the sharing of information and ideas among its users and provide a basis for establishing productive and on-going relationships among organizations, programs, agencies, and institutions that are mutually supportive.

How To Use This Guide

Our goal in preparing this Guide is to help you find sources of information quickly and easily. We have provided you with a complete listing of contacts for information, materials, and programs. We hope your questions will be answered by contacting those sources.

How to put the Guide to work for you:

Scan the Directory.
Decide which of the five main categories with subdivisions most closely describes your need.

Check the categorical listings.
Refer to pages and tabs for the names of the organizations, materials, or institutions listed under the specific subdivisions.

Decide which sources seem most promising.

Check the full entry.
For a description of services available, please check the two sections: (1) organizations, reference and instructional materials, and (2) educational institutions.

 We know that despite our efforts some valuable resources have been omitted. If you know of such a resource, do help us by letting us know. Please see "How to Update Information" in the back of this Guide.
