This 4-week curriculum is designed to help 11th and 12th grade students reach an understanding of the history and culture of Vietnam and the roots of U.S. military involvement there, and also to draw lessons from U.S. actions during the war in Vietnam. Students are encouraged to engage in critical thinking, evaluation, drawing conclusions, taking positions on political and social issues, and hopefully becoming more interested in international affairs and the further study of other cultures. Class activities include role playing, class and group discussions, report writing, library readings and research, talks by guest speakers, and video presentations. A unit syllabus and examinations are included along with lists of concepts, goals, and objectives, student handouts, and an extensive bibliography of resource materials. (DB)

The Vietnam War: A Four Week Instructional Unit
by Darrell Meadows

Introduction

Students today are increasingly far removed from the events of the Vietnam War era. Much of what they know only comes from what they see on television or in movies about Vietnam. Through this manner of obtaining information about the war and about Vietnamese culture, their picture of Vietnam and the war is less than objective and quite distorted. Teaching students about Vietnam is a must for today's curriculum. Most importantly, students need to reach a better understanding of the history and culture of Vietnam, as well as the roots of U.S. involvement, if they are ever to be able to draw lessons from the war.

The 1990's will be a decade of great change in the world. Indeed, the role of the United States in international affairs is likely to be re-defined. This unit on Vietnam seeks to help students at the senior high school level interpret U.S. actions not only during the Vietnam era, but today and beyond. To some degree, it seeks to help students make correlations and come to understand how recent U.S. policy has affected Central America and the Middle East.

In the process of studying the Vietnam War, students will be engaged in critical thinking, evaluation, drawing conclusions and taking positions on political and social issues. It is hoped that students will become more interested in international affairs and will seek further study of other cultures--for such a generation of citizens will be much needed in the next decade.

Concepts, Goals and Objectives

MAJOR CONCEPTS

1. The geography of Vietnam has had a fundamental impact upon its history and development.

2. Confucianism, Buddhism, and Taoism were both borrowed and imposed upon Vietnamese culture, yet their development in Vietnam was quite distinct from China and the bordering countries of Southeast Asia.

3. The Vietnamese have a wealth of literature and poetry from which one can learn a great deal about Vietnam.

4. Vietnamese culture and geography has often been misrepresented in American films about the Vietnam War.

5. Throughout its history, Vietnam has had long periods of time in which it has been invaded and controlled by numerous peoples; at other times, however, the Vietnamese expressed a strong sense of their national identity, fighting for and maintaining their independence.

6. U.S. involvement in Vietnam since the Truman administration has been characterized by a series of decisions and reactions to events which resulted in War and the escalation of War in Vietnam.

7. The Vietnam War was not only a product of the Cold War between the U.S. and the Soviet Union (and China), nor was it just a War about "communist aggression," but also a civil war between the Vietnamese themselves.

8. The Vietnam War era was a time of increased social and political stress in the United States.

9. There were many victims of the war in both the United States and Vietnam, as well as other parts of Southeast Asia.

10. Lessons can be drawn from the Vietnam War which apply to U.S. involvement in Central America and the Middle East.

GOALS

1. That students will learn to think objectively and critically about conflict and its resolution in international relations.

2. To help students learn how to reason ethically about difficult moral choices.

3. To help students better understand people from social backgrounds and cultures different from their own.

4. That students will have a better understanding of the geography of Southeast Asia and that geography can play a crucial role in shaping history.

5. To review the many aspects of the Vietnam War through a diversity of materials.

6. To increase students' reading comprehension, note taking abilities, and study skills through their study of the Vietnam War.

OBJECTIVES

1. Students will engage in role playing activities, class and group discussions, and write a report in order to foster objective and critical thinking skills, as well as ethical reasoning skills.

2. Students will learn about the history and culture of Vietnam through expository and literary readings, library research, guest speakers, and video presentations.

3. Students will create a map of Vietnam and Southeast Asia, as well as read and take lecture notes about Vietnam's geography and its role in Vietnamese history.

4. Students will learn about the Vietnam War through videotapes, lectures, readings, self-guided research projects, role playing, guest speakers, as well as class and group discussions.

5. Students will complete a study guide which corresponds with the assigned readings; they will be engaged in reflective discussions about the readings.

6. Students will take notes on all lectures and videos in an appropriate manner, as outlined by teacher.

7. Students will prepare for the end of unit exam, rather than "cram," in an appropriate manner to be outlined by the teacher.

BASIC READING MATERIALS

Lessons of the Vietnam War: A Modular Textbook. 1988. Center for Social Studies Education. Units 1, 2, 9, 10 and 12. All other readings to be provided as student handouts.
The Vietnam War
Four Week Unit Syllabus

BASIC TEXT MATERIALS: The Lessons of the Vietnam War, Units 1, 2, 9, 10 and 12.

Unless otherwise noted, reading assignments will come from The Lessons of the Vietnam War and will be indicated by "RA." Reading assignments should be read prior to the following class session. Students should complete the corresponding study guide section as they read each assignment.

EVALUATION: You will be graded on your classroom participation in all discussions and activities. In addition, your grade during this unit will reflect your having completed all study guide questions as you read the assigned text. You will also complete to the instructors satisfaction one project on Vietnamese culture, a one-page summary of an interview, and a 2-3 page typed report on one aspect of the Vietnam War. There will be an exam consisting of true/false, multiple choice, and essay questions.

GOALS OF THIS UNIT:

1. To increase your ability to think objectively and critically about conflict and its resolution in international relations.
2. To help you learn how to reason ethically about difficult moral choices.
3. To help you to better understand people from social backgrounds and cultures different from your own.
4. That you will have a better understanding of the geography of Southeast Asia and how geography has played a crucial role in shaping history.
5. To review the many aspects of the Vietnam War through a diversity of materials.
6. To increase your reading comprehension, note taking abilities, and study skills through your study of the Vietnam War.

3. In your reading about the "lessons" of Vietnam, your author made a statement about Vietnam that "what might have remained a local conflict with primarily local implications was elevated into a major international conflict." How does this statement relate to the "lessons" discussed toward the end of this unit?
Instructional Activities and Student Handouts

The remainder of this unit includes a number of the instructional activities--though not all--and most of the accompanying student handouts needed, if you wish to adhere to the suggested unit syllabus. See the list of Sample Student Handouts and Activities at the beginning of this unit for specific page numbers. Many of the activities can be expanded for those teachers who are teaching a half or a full semester course on the Vietnam War. These activities were in most cases adapted from other sources to fit my somewhat ambitious four-week unit. However, especially for those teaching a longer unit, I have included an expanded bibliography which may be of aid in the development of additional activities.

Partial Vocabulary list for Vietnam Unit

Many of the terms you will come across in your readings and in class discussions are listed and defined below. Some will be new to you, while others may be more familiar. Become acquainted with the particular definitions given here, as we will adhere to these definitions throughout the unit. Being familiar with these terms will not only help you in understanding the reading, but will help you to become better at critical thinking about the Vietnam War and modern history in general.

Authoritarian: Characterized by absolute obedience to authority, as opposed to individual freedom.

Capitalism: An economic system characterized by freedom of the marketplace in which increasing private and corporate monopolization of production and distribution of goods is sought through increasing accumulation and reinvestment of profits.

Cold War: Conflict between the United States and the Soviet Union and their allies by means of power politics, economic pressures, spy activities, hostile propaganda and occasional violence.

Colonialism: A policy by which a (usually industrial) nation maintains or extends its control over another (usually agricultural) nation.

Colony: Any region politically controlled by a distant country.

Communism: An economic system characterized by the absence of classes and by common ownership of the means of production and subsistence.

Diplomacy: The art and practice of conducting negotiations and agreements among nations.

Imperialism: A policy to establish or retain formal sovereignty over subordinate societies through political, military and/or economic power.

Negotiation: To communicate or confer with another so as to arrive at the settlement of some matter.

Neo-Colonialism: The economic policies by which an industrial power is able to maintain its influence over other nations, areas or groups.

Racism: A doctrine which holds that psychocultural traits are determined by race and that races are decisively different with respect to their needs, expressions, and right to dominate.
Revolution: Any system of ideas/or actions which transforms the existing political, religious or social structures.

Socialism: An economic system in which the working people possess both political power and the means of producing and distributing goods.

Sovereignty: A supreme power, especially over the political life of a nation.

Third World: A designation applied to the less-developed nations (usually in the southern hemisphere) in distinction to the First World of the industrialized western hemisphere countries and the Second World systems of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Totalitarianism: The subordination of all democratic practices to the control of an elite.

The Vietnam War
Preliminary Reaction Guide

Directions: For the next four weeks, you will be reading and studying about the causes and effects of the Vietnam War, as well as reasons given by U.S. officials for involvement in Vietnam. Before we begin our study of that period of U.S. history, it is important to examine your beliefs and opinions about war. For each statement, put a check mark along the continuum to indicate the extent to which you "agree" or "disagree." This is not a test!

Strongly agree | Strongly disagree

1. A nation must protect the property of its people, even if war is necessary.
2. If a country expects to be attacked by a foreign power, it is justified in attacking that power first in its own defense.
3. Only when a nation is invaded does it have the right to go to war.
4. The government of the U.S. must defend American-owned businesses in foreign countries.
5. Even though some Americans may oppose war with another country, once war is declared each person should give the government his or her full support.
6. When two countries are at war, there should be no distinction between the civilian population and the military.
7. There are situations facing a nation where war is the only alternative.
8. A nation has the right to resort to war to obtain the natural resources it lacks and needs for its well-being.
9. When called upon to approve a declaration of war, a Congressman should decide the matter according to the wishes of his or her constituents.
10. During time of war, a person should put his country ahead of his or her personal beliefs.

During Reading Study Guide

Before reading the daily assigned readings, familiarize yourself with the questions which pertain to that day's assignment. While reading, answer the questions. This study guide will help you to focus on your reading and can be used to prepare for class discussions and the end of unit exam. If you need more space for some of your answers, use additional sheets of paper.

Preview the following questions before reading pages 3-12 in unit 1, and then answer the questions while you are reading.

1. What nations and/or geographic features border Vietnam? (p. 3)
2. What two areas of Vietnam are considered the "heartland" of the country? (p. 4)
3. What is the climate of Vietnam? (p. 3)
4. What non-Western country has colonized and occupied Vietnam? (p. 4)
5. For how long was Vietnam a part of China? (p. 4)
6. Describe some of the tenants of Confucianism and how they were put to use in Vietnam. (p. 4)
7. Explain the meaning of the "March to the South." (p. 6)
8. What was the importance of "the village" in Vietnamese society? (p. 7)
9. Why did the Vietnamese not develop a strong sense of participation in the political process? (p. 7)
10. Why did the Vietnamese not develop a strong sense of individualism and freedom of choice? (p. 7)
11. Most of the population of Vietnam is composed of people known as the ________? They make up approximately ____% of the entire population. What groups of people make up the remaining percentage of the population of Vietnam? (p. 8)
12. Briefly describe the religious and geographical divisions among the Vietnamese. (p. 8)
13. The Cao Dai and Hao Hao sects of Buddhism emerged in response to what? (p. 8)

14. Who were the major colonial powers in the Pacific region during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries? (p. 10)

15. What were their primary interests in the area now known as Vietnam and the other Southeast Asia territories? (p. 10)

16. What did France consider its mission civilatrice in Indochina? (p. 11)

17. What were the positive and negative consequences of French colonial policy? (p. 12)

18. What, if any, of these consequences do you believe the Indochinese people would have considered positive at that time?

19. Considering what you now know about the history and culture of Vietnam, what false assumptions, if any, do you think French (and later U.S.) officials might have made about the people Vietnam?
Although the history of any region is the product of a complex mix of culture and circumstance, in many ways, for Vietnam, geography is destiny. To understand Vietnam’s history it is imperative to have a clear picture of the land and region. Vietnam’s geographical position relative to China has been paramount in shaping its political and cultural history. On the map, Vietnam is directly below China—an elongated, 1,000-mile-long "S," containing in its northern loop the great population center of the Red River delta and in its southern loop that of the Mekong River delta. Vietnam attained this shape through slow, painful expansion from its northern delta (settled before the Christian era), the Mekong region. This expansion took place mainly between the 10th and 18th centuries A.D.

...The formative process of Vietnam’s history culminated in the settlement of the Mekong River delta. In the course of the 19th and 20th centuries, this area, dominated by the major city of Saigon, rapidly became the rice bowl for all Vietnam. The delta became the second great population center, and Vietnam took the shape it has today.

The Poetry of Vietnam

In learning about another culture, poetry can offer a wealth of knowledge and subtlety not found in most history texts. This is equally true of Vietnam. Think about what you already know of the culture and history of Vietnam as you read the following selections of poems. Also, try to put yourself in the place of the author of each poem—What is he or she trying to say? What are the feelings expressed? How can you relate these poems to a better understanding of Vietnamese culture? to the Vietnam War itself?

Reply to a Northerner who asked about Annam’s Customs
by Ho Quy Ly

You asked about things of Annam.
The Quiet South boasts polished ways.
Our king and subjects heed Han laws.
Our caps and gowns obey T'ang rules.
Jade bottles brim with fresh-brewed wine.
Gold knives carve up delicious fish.
Each year, for two or three full months, spring gardens burst with peach and plum.

Birth and old age, disease and death
by Dieu Nhan

Birth and old age, disease and death—
that’s nature’s norm since time began.
You want release and cast off bonds:
you only get more tightly bound.
Seek Buddha as you live in sleep.
Seek Dhyana when you grope the dark.
Buddha and Dhyana—if you seek them not, stop speaking for you’re wasting words.

On reading the Buddha’s scriptures
by Nguyen Binh Kheim

The Buddha taught the Perfect Thusness Way.
O blessings countless as the Ganges sands!
The sun and moon whirl past and then come back.
All plants and blossoms thrive to wither soon.
The richest man will never have enough.
A pauper feels his lot’s the worst on earth.
Within the heart there lies a fallow field:
uproot its weeds and grow true wisdom’s flowers.

The people are like water
by Nguyen Mong Tuan

Fickle, the people’s love may stay or leave.
In truth, like water, it will rise and fall.
They gather and disperse--tides flow and ebb.
They yield or balk--streams run this way or that.
When they left Ch’ in, how could the surge be stopped?
As they joined Han, the torrent rushed unchecked.
O kings, while safe on shore, beware the deep.
Remember--you may cross the sea again.

No thank you
by Tran Te Xuong

My wife, you claim that French is mere child’s play.
You’ll give me money, pack me off to school.
No, thank you, thank you with cinquante bows!
There’s no lead pencil in my forebear’s graves.

Looking far ahead
by Tran Te Xuong

Through five night watches I’ve stayed wide awake.
I’m looking far ahead--I feel a jolt.
To ancient wisdom people have gone blind.
The human race may vanish, all wiped out.
Hills, dug for wealth, will someday crumble down.
Seas, opened up for trade, in time will tilt.
The earth, once hollowed out, will fade away.
Folks say a comet’s started whirling round.
Read through the following statements, thinking about the poems you were given yesterday. Review or re-read the poems if necessary. After doing so, place a checkmark next to the statements you believe come closest to what the author is saying.

____ In "Reply to a Northerner," the author is describing only one trait of Annam--that of loyalty to Chinese laws.

____ Annam is a place of old customs and practices.

____ The people of the South (Annam) lack the skills of great artisans and craftsmen.

____ "Birth and old age, disease and death" is about the author's fundamental Buddhist beliefs.

____ One who adheres to the laws of Buddha will live a life filled with wasted words.

____ Through seeking Buddha and Dhyana, life is less dark and less painful.

____ When one reads "Buddha's scriptures," according to Nguyen Binh Kheim, the heart is renewed and made wise or enlightened.

____ The Thusness Way is a river passage in northern Vietnam.

____ In "The people are like water," the author relates how Vietnamese have always been loyal to Chinese rule.

____ The line "O kings, while safe on shore, beware the deep" refers to the possibility of peasant uprisings.

____ The poem by Tran Te Xuong, "No thank you," is the author's way of paying homage and praising the French dominance in Vietnam.

____ The author of "No thank you" rejects the system set up by the French, who killed his forbears as they sought to colonize Vietnam.

____ The poem "Looking far ahead" is the author's premonition of violence and disorder that will wreck Vietnam, an apocalyptic end to Vietnam--all because certain peoples (the French and Portuguese) sought wealth and power at the expense of the Vietnamese.

____ The author is predicting the coming of Haley's comet.
Group Discussion Questions for "Reality vs. Representation": Scenes from American movies about the Vietnam War

Using the list of movies on videotape included in the bibliography, the teacher should view several of the recent American movies with the idea in mind of looking for specific scenes which are in all probability not a realistic portrayal of the Vietnamese people, their land, the war, or other relevant aspects. This will take some forethought and perhaps a day or two of editing time. But, if well chosen, the resulting video tape can be used repeatedly and will provided an interesting and necessary learning activity for students. Prior to viewing the video, students should receive the following handout information:

Since the end of the war in 1975, there have been numerous films about the Vietnam War and Americans in Vietnam. In most of these productions the Vietnamese people are shown only as villains, victims, or passive bystanders. You have just seen several scenes in which this may have been the case. Discuss the following questions and your reactions to the video with your group.

1. What impressions of the land and people did these scenes give you?
2. What differences have you noticed between the images of Vietnam in the video and what you have read in this unit?
3. What was distorted?
4. What was omitted?
5. Where there any stereotypes? If so, describe them and point out where such stereotypes are based upon falsehoods or ignorance.
6. How would you feel if Americans were portrayed in this way?

Weekend Project:
Vietnamese Culture

For Monday, research an aspect of Vietnamese culture, using readings from the text and other sources—several are listed below and can be found in the school library, your local library, or in your teacher’s library.

SUGGESTED TOPICS:

- Vietnamese Language
- Vietnamese Writing System
- The Tale of Kieu
- Geography of Vietnam (effects on culture)
- Rice Cultivation
- Cultural Influence from China
- Confucian Examination system
- Buddhism and Taoism in Vietnam
- Red River Delta and Surrounding People
- Mekong River Delta and Surrounding People
- Family Structure/Family Life in Vietnam

These topics may be presented in many ways. You may present your topic in any of the following forms:

(a) a one-page, typed report
(b) oral presentation (3 minutes)
(c) photo-collage/drawing
(d) a short skit (3-5 minutes; no more than 3 people to skit)
(e) mixed media (combination)

SUGGESTED SOURCES: (of course, you may use other sources!)

Role Play Activity:
The Roots of U.S. Involvement

Students will act-out the first critical decision which confronted the Truman Administration in the time around 1946: whether to support Ho Chi Minh’s appeal for U.S. moral support for Vietnamese independence or France’s appeal for U.S. military assistance to regain control of its former colony.

1. Show the first 15-20 minutes of "Roots of a War," from the series by PBS, Vietnam, A Television History; this will give a brief overview of Vietnam's history up to the year 1946.

2. Have students get into two larger groups and one smaller group. The two larger groups will each be French and Vietminh delegations to President Truman. The smaller group will be the President’s advisors. (The teacher will be President Truman.)

3. Give each group their handout (provided in The Lessons of the Vietnam War, Teacher’s Manual)--at least one day in advance to save time. Have each group prepare a presentation to the President that will persuade him to give them the support they need. They should review the "five P’s" (Power, Prestige, Principles, Profit, and Protection) and make their presentations in such a way as to appeal to U.S. interests. They should choose a group spokesperson.

4. Each group will first make their presentations to the President in a joint meeting and then separately in a private meeting.

5. Final Debriefing Questions (to be asked after presentations):

(a) What were the arguments made by the French as relate to the five P’s?

(c) If you were President Truman, with what U.S. interest would you be most concerned?

(d) Which arguments did you find most appealing in terms of U.S. national interests?

(e) Which arguments did you find most morally compelling?

(f) Did such a meeting ever take place? If not, why not?

Finally, the teacher should emphasize that the European desk prevailed over the Far Eastern desk of the U.S. State Department in this controversy, that this was because of the greater importance of Europe to U.S. national interests, but that such interest did not dictate U.S. military assistance to France’s efforts to re-colonize Vietnam. The U.S. was in a position to influence French policy but chose to go along with its imperial ambitions. Why? Close with a discussion of the pervasive influence of anti-communist Cold War thinking on U.S. policy-making during this period.
Student Handout: THE SOUTHEAST ASIA RESOLUTION
(Also known as the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution)

Joint Resolution
To promote the maintenance of peace and security in Southeast Asia.
PUBLIC LAW 88-408

Whereas naval units of the Communist regime in Vietnam, in violation of the principles of the Charter of the United Nations and of international law, have deliberately and repeatedly attacked United States naval vessels lawfully present in international waters, and have thereby created a serious threat to international peace; and

Whereas these attacks are part of a deliberate and systematic campaign of aggression that the Communist regime in North Vietnam has been waging against its neighbors and the nations joined with them in the collective defense of their freedom; and

Whereas the United States is assisting the peoples of Southeast Asia to protect their freedom and has no territorial, military or political ambitions in that area, but desires only that these peoples should be left in peace to work out their destinies in their own way: Now, therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Congress approves and supports the determination of the President, as Commander in Chief, to take all necessary measures to repel any armed attack against the forces of the United States and to prevent further aggression.

Section 2.

The United States regards as vital to its national interest and to world peace the maintenance of international peace and security in Southeast Asia. Consonant with the Constitution of the United States and the Charter of the United Nations and in accordance with its obligations under the Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty, the United States is, therefore, prepared, as the president determines, to take all necessary steps, including the use of armed force, to assist any member or protocol state of the Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty requesting assistance in defense of its freedom.

Section 3.

This resolution shall expire when the President shall determine that the peace and security of the area is reasonably assured by international conditions created by action of the United Nations or otherwise, except that it may be terminated earlier by concurrent resolution of the Congress.
Group Activity:
The Gulf of Tonkin Resolution\(^5\)

1. Students should be given a copy of the resolution (provided in this unit) at least a day before the activity, along with the following suggested discussion questions. Students should keep in mind the assigned readings, especially the section in unit 2 of The Lessons of the Vietnam War dealing with the immediate events in the Gulf on Tonkin during those days prior to the resolutions passage.

(a) Why did President Johnson seek congressional support for his actions in Vietnam when Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy had not?

(b) On August 7, the day the resolution was passed by the Senate, Senator Wayne Morse, rejecting the resolution, said: "...we are in effect giving the President of the United States warmaking powers in the absence of a declaration of war. I believe that to be a historic mistake." Explain this point of view.

(c) For what other reasons did this resolution become so controversial?

(d) In recent years, U.S. Presidents have committed military forces to fight in foreign countries without a formal declaration of war by Congress. What are the arguments for and against this change in governmental responsibilities? (Consider the constitutional, political and military implications.)

2. Provide a timeline of the events leading up to the resolution on the chalkboard or overhead projector. Ask students to make an assessment of the events in terms of what "actually" took place in the gulf, how the U.S. interpreted those events, and how the North Vietnamese interpreted those events.

3. If time permits, or on the following day, have students get into groups of about three or four students per group. Each group should discuss their responses to the above questions for about ten or fifteen minutes. Each student will then write a brief summary of the group’s answers or conclusions to one of the questions.

Illustrating the Wounds of War
In Class Activity

Students will form six or seven groups. Each will create a poster which will be displayed either in the classroom or in some appropriate location in the school. Each group’s poster will address the one of the following topics:

(1) Casualties
(2) Psychological Wounds
(3) Economic Costs
(4) Social and Political Costs
(5) Loss of U.S. Prestige in the World
(6) POW/MIA Issues
(7) Destruction of Vietnam.

Students should also adhere to the following criteria:

(a) Posters should accurately illustrate the specific cost of the Vietnam War that has been assigned to the group.

(b) The posters should capture the basic information in the reading, as well as the human dimension of the cost.

(c) The posters should exhibit some measure of creativity and must involve all group members in some form of its production.

MATERIALS NEEDED:
Poster board or large sheets of paper, markers, crayons, colored pencils, water color paints, magazines such as National Geographic or newspaper clippings with appropriate photographs which can be cut out, rulers or other straight edge devices, scissors, and glue.

Group Debates: Covert Wars

1. Students should form five groups. Each group will receive a handout for each of the five points of view from debate about covert operations and the role of the CIA in U.S. foreign policy (from pages 17-19, unit 12, The Lessons of the Vietnam War):

Mortin Halperin (staff member of National Security Council during Nixon Administration):

I believe that the U.S. ought not to engage in covert wars designed to interfere in the internal affairs of other countries. The constitutional grounds for this position are clear. Covert operations commit the U.S. to major foreign policy initiatives—to wage war—without public debate, without congressional debate and without giving citizens the opportunity to express their views either by petitioning the government or by voting against a president because they don’t approve his policies.

Leslie Gelb (national security correspondent for the New York Times):

I disagree with Mr. Halperin’s proposition that we ought not to interfere in the internal politics of other societies. I believe that is exactly what foreign policy is. All foreign policy is the extension of one’s internal policies into the internal policies of another nation.

I think the question is not, "Should you have covert operations?" The question is, "What is your policy?" If you have a policy that makes sense, it seems to me that in principle you could conduct covert operations supporting that policy...

Ralph W. McGehee (served 25 years in the CIA, including in Vietnam; author of Deadly Deceits: My 25 Years in the CIA:)

I believe that CIA covert operations have helped destroy democracy around the world. By means of these operations, the CIA has replaced popular governments with brutal, murderous, U.S.-controlled military dictatorships that torture and kill their own citizens. ...The disastrous Vietnam War began as a CIA covert operation.
William Colby (CIA Director, 1973-76; author of Honorable Men: My life in the CIA):

I have quite a different view. Covert action is nothing new in American life. ...It is true that in the 1950's, with the organization and expansion of the CIA, there was a considerable upsurge in them. Of the covert operations undertaken since then, I would say that some have been very successful and some have been disasters, some have been the wrong thing to do and some have been the wise thing to do. ...The Bay of Pigs was certainly a disaster. But consider our program in the Congo in the early 1960's. The question we faced in the Congo was whether that country, which had just gained its independence from Belgium, would be run by some toadies of the old Belgian mining companies or by men aided by Che Guevara and supported by the Soviet Union. The CIA found a midpoint between those extremes--it helped Joseph Mobutu, then a nationalist member of the Congolese forces, become the third alternative. Now, I concede that the Congo--or Zaire, as it is now called--is no garden spot and that Mr. Mobutu is not the most perfect man in the world. But I think that he has considerable advantages over the alternatives.

John Stockwell (former CIA case officer in Zaire and Vietnam):

I grew up in the Congo and served there in the Marine Corps and as a CIA officer. I know the country very well, and I can say that the CIA intervention there was an unmitigated disaster. The U.S. subverted democracy in the Congo. We participated in the assassination of a prime minister who was democratically elected, Patrice Lumumba. Then we installed in power Joseph Mobutu, who is still the dictator. We have run the country into a debt of $6.2 billion--money that was spent on the multinational corporations, not on the people. In the Congo today, 25 percent of the people are starving, while Joe Mobutu has a personal fortune of about $4.5 billion. That is the result of what the CIA considers a successful covert action.

2. Each group should pick a representative to read that group's portion of the debate, giving further reasons why they (the group) holds such a position.

3. After all groups have had an opportunity to read and offer rationales, they should begin to look at their portions of the debate for assumptions or assertions which cannot be reasonably supported by the "facts" outlined in each argument. Each group should respond to the following questions:

(a) What are the assumptions that your "expert" makes in his presentation?

(b) What are the overall "truths" which can be derived, if any, from this debate as a whole?

(c) In what other countries do you know of that the CIA has had covert operations? Why?

(d) In what countries might the CIA, as directed by the President, be interested in developing a covert operation? Why?

(e) What do you and the members of your group believe should be the nature of the CIA in U.S. foreign policy? Why?

4. Encourage students to watch for articles in the newspaper or television news stories about current CIA activities. After a period of a few months, ask the students if such stories were easy to find. If they were not, why? For longer course units on Vietnam or other foreign relations studies, this activity could be extended with research on the recent U.S. relations in Latin America and Africa, especially El Salvador, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Panama, Chile, Angola, Mozambique, Namibia, and Liberia, to name a few.
The Vietnam War

Final Reaction Guide

Directions: For the last four weeks, you have been reading and studying about the causes and effects of the Vietnam War, as well as reasons given by U.S. officials for involvement in Vietnam. Now that we have studied that period of U.S. history, it would be beneficial to reflect upon and re-examine your beliefs and opinions about war. For each statement, put a check mark along the continuum to indicate the extent to which you "agree" or "disagree."

1. Vietnam Veteran’s Leadership Program
   724 N. Union, St Louis, MO 63108. 314-367-5505

   A non-profit organization, the Leadership Program has a staff of four (three Vietnam War combat veterans) who work to find job placements for veterans of the Vietnam War. Staff members are available to speak about Vietnam veteran’s issues and problems, including post-traumatic stress disorder, agent orange and minority issues. (An honorarium is not required.) The VVLP also has a library of audiovisual materials on topic related to the war. Though some of its services focus on the particular needs of Vietnam veterans, the VVLP provides services for all veterans that include assistance with starting small businesses, a homeless veterans program and up-to-date information on veterans benefits.

2. Vet Center
   2345 Pine, St. Louis, MO 63103. 314-231-1260

   A branch of the Veterans Administration, the Vet Center provides psychological counseling for Vietnam veterans and their families. Vet Center counselors can make presentations about veteran’s issues and problems and have particular expertise on post-traumatic stress disorder. The Center maintains an audiovisual library including 3/4" videotapes. Those counselors who served in the Vietnam War can also speak about the historical background of the war and their personal experiences in Vietnam. The political views of the counselors vary and represent personal opinion, not the official position of the Vet Center, which is an a-political organization.

3. Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom
   438 N. Skinker, St. Louis, MO 63130

   Members of the Women’s International League who were active in the anti-war movement in St. Louis are available to speak to high school classes about the local peace movement and their role in it, including draft counseling for conscientious objectors. The presentations would not be academic lectures but rather accounts of personal experiences.

relationship to public opinion about the war. He also discusses the impact of the media on public opinion about the war. The presentation is an informal one, and Dalton solicits a good deal of student participation in the discussion.

5. International Institute of Metropolitan St. Louis
3800 Park Ave., St. Louis, MO 63110. 314-773-9090

The Institute has been the most important local organization in the resettlement of refugees from Vietnam and other countries of Southeast Asia. The Institute will arrange for native Vietnamese to visit local classrooms and make presentations on the culture of Vietnam. In some cases, schools may need to provide transportation for the speakers. For a $5.00 fee, schools may rent the 30-minute videotape "Silk Sarongs and City Streets," a documentary that depicts how the St. Louis Lao community is using dance as a means of maintaining its cultural traditions while adapting to life in St. Louis. Produced by the International Institute, the video is an excellent classroom resource for teaching about the experience of post-Vietnam War refugees from Southeast Asia and the subject of cross-cultural assimilation.
