The Orange County (Florida) Public Schools Workplace Literacy Project is described. The program, established to meet the training needs of the growing hotel and restaurant industry in central Florida, has served over 1,000 primarily limited-English-proficient, immigrant students during the 18-month period of October 1988 through March 1990. Literacy and math skills are also offered to monolingual English-speakers at the workplace. Sixty classes were conducted at 22 sites within businesses and industries. Continuation of classes to large businesses through the schools' vocational technical centers is anticipated. Funding to serve small businesses and support ongoing efforts is being sought. This report describes components of the program, including testing, curriculum, guidance services, marketing to industry, coordination with participating schools, teacher recruitment, teacher and tutor training, and the role of volunteers. Appended materials consist of maps and directions to all class locations, a list of advisory committee members, student performance level descriptions, student screening tests, forms to be completed by students' supervisors, four sample lesson dialogues with exercises, an employer task analysis form, a workplace safety manual, a course syllabus, a teacher self-evaluation form, and a memorandum to instructors. This handbook was prepared with funding from the office of Vocational and Adult Education, U.S. Department of Education under grant number V198A80. The opinions expressed in the handbook are solely from the perspective of the writers and do not necessarily reflect the positions and/or policies of the department.
PREFACE

This publication culminates an eighteen month adult literacy endeavor facilitated through the Orange County Public School System in Orlando, Florida. The Adult Education Department of Orange County Public Schools was the recipient of a Workplace Literacy Partnership Grant in October 1988. The project was enthusiastically endorsed by community associations and businesses who had signed an agreement of partnership. The partners include:

- Orlando/Orange County Convention and Visitors Bureau, Inc.
- Central Florida Hotel and Motel Association
- Central Florida Restaurant Association
- Regal Marine
- The Peabody Hotel
- The Marriott's Orlando World Center
- The Sheraton World Resort
- The Buena Vista Palace
- Frito-Lay, Inc.

All partners remain supportive of the program. As members of the advisory committee, these partners were satisfied with the progress experienced and are anxious for the program's continuance.

A testimonial of the program's success are the awards received in 1989. The Workplace Literacy Program was the recipient of the Secretary's Award for Outstanding Adult Education Programs from the United States Department of Education and also the Award of Excellence for Adult Education Job-Site Program from the Orange County Public School system.
PHILOSOPHY

The quality of life in any society, as well as its economic status, is directly related to the productivity of its citizens. The Orange County Public Schools Workplace Literacy Program contributes in this effort to upgrade the quality of life of its citizens and the corporate entity, as well as the economic status of the individual and that of the community as a whole.

The Workplace Literacy Program in Orange County, Florida, addresses the English training needs of individual employees in a cooperative partnership with business/industry. The intent of the Workplace Literacy Program is to meet the needs of the individual, industry and the community by providing literacy skills, which will enable employees to function more efficiently and/or advance within their particular place of employment.

The basic goal of the program is to provide English skills to employees so their individual productivity enhances that of the corporate entity, enriches their personal welfare and impact the economic status of the community.
OVERVIEW

The workplace literacy classes provided are in direct response to the training needs of the hotel and restaurant industries in Central Florida. The number of motel rooms has more than doubled in the past few years, from 34,000 in 1980 to some 68,000 plus in 1989. The number of restaurants has increased accordingly. As these service industries have grown, so has the number of non-English proficient workers who apply for entry level jobs.

Census figures (1980) indicate that Orange County's Hispanic population was 4.2 percent; it is now (based upon student enrollments) over 9 percent, a 41 percent increase. The Asian (Vietnamese and Cambodian) populations have remained constant in the schools, but training records indicate that approximately 15 percent of present project participants are Asian. The greatest influx has been Haitian immigrants. In the 1980 census this population was given scant attention. Based on the growing number of Haitians seeking employment in the service industries and interviews with representatives from the East Central Florida Planning Council and Catholic Relief Services, Orange County Public Schools' Adult Education staff estimate that this population now numbers more than 5,000. Agency statistics show they are the least educated and most disadvantaged of the immigrant populations.

The aging population plus the expectancy of fewer young people in the employment pool by the mid-1990's, and given that the service industries employ the greatest number of entry-level persons in Central Florida, we can predict that for the next ten years the service industry will recruit the majority of their new employees from the immigrant ranks.
Background

The Orange County Public Schools Postsecondary Vocational, Adult and Community Education Department initiated the Job-Site Partnership Literacy Program during the 1985-86 school year for the implementation of the Job-Site Partnership Project funded through the Carl D. Perkins Vocational Program and an Adult Education 310 Project. The project provided work-related, customized English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) instruction at the job-site for over 290 students. The curriculum was custom developed at each job-site through the joint efforts of the project's curriculum resource teacher (CRT) and the business partner, based upon needs that the business partner identified by completing a detailed language needs assessment and job shadowing when necessary. By May 1988, the project increased the number of participants per year to more than 450.

The recipient of a federal Workplace Literacy Partnership Grant in October 1988, further enhanced the offering of job-site classes. The number of participants increased to over 1,000 by December 1989.

The effectiveness of these programs has been recognized as exemplary. The State of Florida Department of Education named the Job-Site Partnership Project to the Adult and Community Education (ACE) network as one of ten exemplary adult and community programs, the only ESOL program so recognized. In January 1987, the Business Council for Effective Literacy named the project a model program for workplace ESOL. The recipient of the Secretary's Award for Outstanding Adult Education Programs from the United States Department of Education and also the Award of Excellence for Adult Education Job-Site Program from the Orange County Public School system, 1989, serve as testimonial of the program's success.
Purpose

The purpose of the Orange County Public Schools Workplace Literacy Project is to fortify family, workplace, and community by aiding in raising the literacy level among adults who are employed by businesses in Orange County, Florida.

It is the responsibility of everyone involved with the Workplace Literacy Program to accept the adult student at their present achievement level of communication in English. Furthermore, establish realistic educational objectives for each student, and provide learning experiences necessary to meet these objectives. Instruction specifically related to employment includes training in listening, speaking, reading, and writing.

Literacy instruction at the workplace provides students with:

- individualized, competency-based curriculum tailored to workplace needs using materials related to job performance
- guidance and counseling services to assist students with information about community services
- individual and group counseling for educational and personal growth
- consultation and training on cross-cultural communication
- an understanding of the American work ethic
The businesses whose employees are provided with English language skills, gain:

- increased job safety
- increased training effectiveness
- increased employee advancement
- improved cultural understanding
- increased productivity and job satisfaction
- decreased turnover
- decreased training time

The unique partnership between the Orange County Public School System and local businesses offering customized literacy classes at the workplace, results in a community literacy effort where everyone is a winner.

Locations

Maps and written directions to the various workplaces served have been printed. These maps and directions can be found in Appendix A.

Advisory Committee

The Advisory Committee comprised of members representing each of the partners was established for the Workplace Literacy Program. The committee provided guidance to the director of the program, assisted in goal setting, reviewed progress and made recommendations. The committee met quarterly and included representatives from each of the Orange County Public School system's vocational schools. The vocational schools are key literacy providers; therefore, the vocational schools' industry services coordinators were invited guests at the advisory committee meetings. A list of the advisory committee members can be found in Appendix B.
The Workplace Literacy Project of Orange County Public Schools in Orlando, Florida, encompasses a multifaceted spectrum offering of literacy skills. Literacy skills and math skills offered to monolingual native English speakers at the workplace as well as CAI (Computer Assisted Instruction) and ESOL (English for Speakers of other Languages) are components of the project. The major portion of the project is directed at ESOL where the greatest need is evident.

Classes generally meet three hours a week, and are scheduled between 7:00 a.m. and 6:00 p.m., Monday through Saturday, for approximately eight to ten weeks. Students are evaluated upon entry into the class and at eight to ten weeks intervals until the appropriate exit level is reached.

The student levels are identified through the Mainstream English Language Training Project (MELT: Refugee Materials Center, U.S. Department of Education, 324 East 11 Street, 9th Floor, Kansas City, Missouri 64106) as follows:

See Appendix C for breakdown. A competency-based checklist was also kept for each student. This documentation serves as an assessment record for informing progress to business/industry. Participants and instructors need to be aware of when and what competencies have been mastered. Management is interested in finding out if their investment is worthwhile. See Appendix C for sample of checklist and a sample form of how it was used.

Testing

A test called WESOLT (Workplace English for Speakers of Other Languages Test) was developed and piloted. It primarily covers pre-literacy and beginning level competencies. The intent was to have a general workplace test that could be used at all worksites to test LEP (Limited English Proficient) students. A sample test without the picture booklet can be found in Appendix D. The test consists of two parts: WESOLT(A), the oral section and WESOLT(B), the written section. The test was translated into Spanish and Creole to determine literacy and knowledge of the concepts in the native language of the participant.

The OPI (Oral Proficiency Interview) adapted from Palm Beach County was used for the more proficient ESOL students. These students were also requested to write an essay describing their country in terms of location, tourism, economy, and education. A vocabulary comprehension test comprising of 22 statements was also administered. See Appendix D.

Ideally, an evaluation tool should be developed for each course that is taught. The items included in the evaluation tool should directly reflect the desired student behavioral outcomes as a result of having taken the course. The curriculum written should identify the desired outcomes in terms of measurable objectives and reflect the skills to be taught: listening, speaking, reading and writing. It should also encompass the cultural insights taught, such as understanding schedules, time, introductions and responding to small talk with co-workers and/or supervisors.

The State of Florida Department of Education requires that the TABE (Test of Adult Basic Education) be administered to all adult basic education students including ESOL students. The TABE Locator test determines the level of the TABE to be administered. If the student is unable to complete the test because of non-literacy, this is documented. The student is tested at a later date when his/her literacy level improves.

Curriculum

The curriculum is designed to meet the needs of the employee at the workplace in accordance with the needs assessment submitted by the employer and/or a task analysis performed by the curriculum writer(s). See Appendix E for a sample form of the Needs Assessment. The employee handbook and/or other materials, provided by the employer, as well as the teacher going through the employee orientation session(s) is also valuable in preparing the curriculum.

Each worksite should be dealt with on an individual basis even if needs appear to be similar. A task analysis (job shadowing) is sometimes necessary to enable the curriculum writer to become familiar with specialized technical vocabulary and to develop a clear understanding of specific job responsibilities of the prospective students. (Appendix F). Acquiring this experience is an important step in curriculum design and development. Material development should continue throughout the duration of the classes. Flexibility and creativity are vital and materials should be viewed as a means to an end. The materials must serve the purpose for which they were created; if not, revise or eliminate them. Materials must be designed to meet the needs of the adult learners. Activities should be varied, enjoyable, and capture the learner's interest. Two basic texts utilized in the project:

It is important to include a variety of activities employing methods and techniques appropriate for each level. A list of methods/techniques, a curriculum development chart, a list of basic survival sight words and sample dialogs can be found in Appendix G.

Basically, students in ESOL classes receive English instruction in such related skills as reading pay checks, filling out forms, names of tools and equipment used on the job, calling in sick and safety on the job. A sample safety curriculum developed for one of the sites is included in Appendix H.

The more advanced ESOL students who are in a supervisory/leadership position, complete higher level and longer reading/writing assignments. In addition, American culture and work ethic is included in the ESOL classes.

Guidance

An essential and unique part of the Orange County Public School Workplace Literacy Program is the provision of counseling services.
The guidance component was designed to offer both employers and employees assistance. The guidance component serves as the vehicle for facilitating the employees' success at the workplace, as well as a resource for aiding the employer in managing specific concerns more efficiently.

Services provided:
- Vocational and job skills assessment
- Individual and group counseling for educational/personal growth
- Consultation and training on employability skills
- Counseling and consultation with supervisors/employers on special issues
- Consultation and training on cross cultural communication

A need for knowledge about the American work ethic/cross cultural communication beyond the class perimeters was realized. A resource guide for the guidance counselor was developed. The units and/or sections in the Resource Guide for the Workplace Literacy Project, 1989-1990, can be used by teachers as needed. Due to space limitations, Appendix I contains only the table of contents of the resource guide. A form used by the guidance counselor at the initial interview can also be found in Appendix I.
MARKETING

The development of successful English programs is enhanced by the establishment of many different linkages with the local business and industrial community. Initial contacts may be made through memberships in business organizations such as local chambers of commerce, the Hotel/Motel Association, the American Society for Training and Development, and Personnel Managers Association.

Networking through existing business and industry contacts can be a major source of new classes to be developed. By asking contacts who have had literacy programs to share their success with other business people, or to provide names of other companies to contact, many more companies are told about literacy education. Corporate personnel who know the value of English programs can provide a source of advertising hard to duplicate. Word of mouth recommendation is the basis of a positive referral. Other networking opportunities can be initiated through attendance of business/industry meetings, conventions, seminars, associations and trade shows. Speaking engagements for community organizations and civic groups will provide valuable linkages with all types of employers.

Social service agencies, the Private Industry Council, other agencies, and church groups can act as referral agencies for people who need English communication/literacy skills.
Many district vo-tech centers employ personnel with extensive contacts at local businesses and industries. The vo-tech coordinators are a tremendous resource for outreach since the vo-tech centers provide training to corporate employees. The vo-tech staff hears of needed English programs at these companies and/or is able to contact employers and ask if they are interested in literacy classes at their worksite.

In addition, all the area vo-tech centers have advisory committees related to their vocational and academic programs. The advisory committee is made up of business people who meet regularly to provide the school with updated information about the industry's training and employment needs. Sharing information about job-site literacy with them is a good way to "P.R." the program to business people who already support adult education.

The Workplace Literacy Advisory Committee is a terrific source of networking. Not only does it serve as a personal testimonial, but also as a source of advertisement through their various in-house and association newsletters.

Periodic follow-up calls to companies that have been previously served by on-site literacy programs will determine if they need additional or updated classes. Another source of telephone contact is corporate personnel calling the school district directly. Since the growing nationwide interest in literacy has increased, corporate managers and trainers call to inquire about local literacy education. They are impacted by the immediacy of the illiteracy problem in the workforce and are concerned about their employees' low level of literacy skills. They may need reassurance that their problems are widespread and may ask for documentation. There are many statistics in publications such as Workforce 2000 and based on the Census Bureau's estimate, the nation's illiteracy rate stood at 0.5 percent in 1980... close to one million (people). (Guglielmino, 1989, page 6.) Thirty-eight percent of U.S. adults aged 16 and over have not completed high school, (50-70 million adults)... and thirty-four percent of U.S. adults were marginally competent: functional but not proficient. (Guglielmino, 1989, page 6.)

Based on the 1980 census, Florida's target population for adult education was the sixth highest in the nation. In 1982 a survey of functional illiteracy placed Florida among the lower ranks of literacy in the U.S. -- tied for fortieth place with six other states. (Guglielmino, 1989, page 6.) Today, these statistics are even higher and Florida is increasingly concerned about its growing immigrant (non-English speaking) population.

Florida is faced with population growth which will proportionally increase the illiterate and functionally literate population. Compounding the problems associated with a general population increase is the continuing immigration to Florida from the Caribbean, Latin America and other countries. Many foreign-born immigrants are not literate in their native languages and their functional ability is further challenged by a new culture, language and work ethic.

Once a company has called for information or the educational coordinator has contacted a company who may have an interest, the business person may ask questions about benefits to the employee, benefits to the company or existing classes. Listen to the needs of the company's employees and direct information to answer their questions. Other business leaders may need the support or assurance of the educational staff that this program will be productive.
Corporate leaders may be interested to hear that executives across the country are creating partnerships and linkages with providers of literacy education. Nationally known corporations such as Kodak Corporation, Walt Disney World, Motorola, and IBM are committed to workplace literacy. Since the labor pool of young adults is shrinking, the workforce of the 1990's and later will rely on the older worker. Marginally literate citizens will also need to be educated to allow them to become productively employed.

Specifically to our local area, Central Florida's rapid growth in tourist attractions and high technology has created a need for employees in the service and trade industries. In turn, these services, hospitality and technical industries are in greatest need of literacy programs. They are requesting job related basic literacy skills, communication skills with supervisors and guests, job safety, personal and career development topics for their classes.

Local providers of literacy education are gaining the support and cooperation of businesses and industries who recognize the benefits of a more literate workforce. Companies are more likely to participate in offering literacy classes when they see a need and how their business is benefited.

By educating local businesses regarding the need and benefits for literacy programs, we strengthen their desire for commitment to literacy programs for employees. Local businesses can contribute to literacy education in any or all of the following ways:

- assist in goal setting
- conduct an in-house needs assessment/literacy audit
- provide the facility
- provide some materials, supplies and handouts
- provide work-time for employees to attend classes
- encourage employee participation and attendance in classes
- assist in curriculum development by selecting appropriate instructional material
- involve supervisors of employees to support the program
- assist in selecting appropriate instructional materials
- assist in the final evaluation process

Internal marketing was initiated through meeting with colleagues in staff meetings and through informal talks with personnel. Another avenue for disseminating information is through the For Adults Only, A Newsletter By, For and About Adult Education, which is distributed through the adult education department. In addition, there is the Educator, an Orange County Public School publication which is distributed quarterly to approximately 250,000 households in Orange County.

The marketing effort assists the community business and industry personnel as well as prospective teachers and students to understand program goals and results. It is a necessary means of presenting positive information about the project which aids in development and expansion.
Coordination of the Workplace Literacy Program is usually provided by the District Office and the area vo-tech centers. The district, through its administrative staff responsible for the Workplace Literacy grant, assumes the role of guiding, directing and implementing the literacy program within the terms of the grant and our state/county guidelines.

The district project director:

1. Conducts outreach and recruits business partners.
2. Refers requests for classes whenever feasible to the appropriate vo-tech coordinator.
3. Makes joint initial visit to the corporate client with the vo-tech coordinator (if it is a large corporation).
4. Presents county philosophy and grant information to the prospective corporate client.
5. Promotes a continuous relationship between the district office and the corporate client.
6. Initiates and supports curriculum development.
7. Assists instructor with "job-shadowing" whenever necessary.
8. Holds monthly staff development meetings for instructors.
9. Assists in entry/exit student testing.
10. Provides support staff for student guidance counseling.
11. Provides the corporate client with a needs assessment form which is needed for class design, scheduling, and curriculum development.
12. Requests written evaluation of the class from management, teachers, and students.
13. Compiles and disseminates workplace literacy curriculum and/or other information to the instructor, the United States Department of Education, vo-tech coordinators, other districts, ERIC, Curriculum Coordination Centers, researchers, and/or journalists.
14. Documents pertinent student statistical data (race, sex, age, length of employment, etc.).
15. Provides translation of forms (developed for grant documentation) for non-English speaking students. Translators are provided to help with forms when the student is illiterate in his/her own language.

16. Attends class graduations.

The area vo-tech centers' Business and Industry coordinators provide, set up, and operate classes within district and local school policy. The vo-tech coordinator can explain the program to the employer and remain in close contact with the corporation and instructor to monitor class progress. The coordinator assists the program director in maintaining the class as originally designed and obtain feedback about the class from the corporate contact person to ensure that needs are met.

The vo-tech school coordinator serves in the following capacity:

1. Contacts the Workplace Literacy director when a referral is received.

2. Visits the corporate client jointly with the director to explain and set up specifics of the program.

3. Presents vo-tech school policies to the corporate client.

4. Interprets task/needs analysis with the instructor.

5. Assists the instructor in making curriculum outline.

6. Supports the instructor in developing daily lesson plans from needs analysis and curriculum outline.

7. Assists the instructor with development and reproduction of curriculum classroom materials.

8. Provides materials/assistance for entry level state mandated testing.

9. Provides on-going support and guidance to the instructor for class instruction.

10. Supports district staff development by attending monthly teacher training sessions provided by the project director.

11. Disseminates and follows up on instructor reports, forms, student record files, and instructor teaching hours.
12. Provides a continuous relationship with the corporate client and acts as a liaison between the vo-tech school and the corporate client.

13. Attends class graduation ceremonies.

14. Provides the district with student/class information.

15. Provides follow-up with corporate liaison after class is over to obtain information on success of program and possible start of another class.

When the class is initially requested, the district office and vo-tech center begin working together to design a class to meet the employer's needs. The Business and Industry Services coordinators at each vo-tech center in coordination with the workplace program director, stays in contact with the corporate liaison to ensure the class success in terms of corporate needs and requirements. The corporate needs assessment determines the structure of the instruction and is the basis for class curriculum according to the employee's English skill level, job tasks, and requirements of corporate supervisors/management.

The vo-tech school coordinator in cooperation with the Workplace Literacy director ensures the availability of certified instructors who will best match the needs of the company. Other factors such as class meetings per week, the time of day, length of class, and curriculum are considered in the hiring of the instructor. At a pre-class meeting the instructor is introduced to the corporate liaison. This affords an opportunity for the corporate liaison to meet the instructor, refine and further customize the curriculum, and finalize the goals and objectives of the class. The instructor is now ready to develop daily lesson plans for the customized curriculum. If any changes need to be made by the corporate liaison and/or the instructor, the coordinator/director is notified and changes are finalized with the best interest of the corporate client, the instructor, and school policy in mind.
The vo-tech coordinator orients the instructor to the vo-tech school policy and procedures regarding instructor pay vouchers, absences, curriculum requirements, student files, lesson plans, student attendance forms, and student graduation certificates. The vo-tech coordinator provides and collects the student registration forms, withdrawals, attendance and keeps a record of class evaluation. See Appendix K for a sample of vo-tech center requirements and procedures.

Both the vo-tech school coordinator and the Workplace Literacy Project director assist the instructor in obtaining appropriate curriculum material, testing students, and evaluating the class from the student's and the corporate liaison's perspective. The grant director provides supplementary materials, instructors for small classes and small businesses, tutors, translators, curriculum writers, and guidance counselors as needed.

In this project, a resource guide was written to provide the guidance counselor and the instructor with information about the importance and need for some commonly requested employability skills and living skills information that apply to the American culture. By using the resource guide, the counselors and the instructors have a common reference for interacting with the student employees regarding employability topics as they relate to American business practices and to social issues as they relate to living within the American culture. See Appendix H for a table of contents since the complete guide could not be included.

The purpose of these coordination activities is to provide a means of communication between the corporate client and the Orange County Public School system. These coordination efforts provide the most meaningful job-site instruction possible to the employees in our community and assist in attaining job success at the workplace which is our goal.

RECRUITMENT

Several aspects were taken into consideration when selecting teachers for the workplace project. Teachers had to be certified in the area that they were to teach (ESOL, Math and/or English). Certification in a related area, with experience teaching adults in the specific area was acceptable. All teachers and tutors were interviewed to determine interest in the project, willingness to teach at the workplace, flexibility in teaching hours and empathy for students from a variety of ethnic groups. Willingness to utilize a variety of methods and techniques was another criteria used in the selection of the instructional personnel.

All instructors (teachers/tutors) work on a part-time basis. Factors such as the number of class meetings per week, and the time of day and length of class are considered in the hiring of instructors (teachers/tutors).

One of the most important attributes (besides competency in the classrooms) that a teacher must possess is flexibility. The instructor (teacher/tutor) must be flexible about logistics/conditions and be prepared to carry materials to and from each class.

The instructor (teacher/tutor) should be able to serve not only as an instructor, but also as a liaison between the educational and business partners as well as a "PR" person at the workplace.

The instructor (teacher/tutor) must remain neutral on management/employee issues. The teacher and/or tutor is to function as an instructor of basic skills or language and not represent either management nor employees. It should be made clear that the communication skills which enable participants to speak for themselves may be taught.
Teacher/Tutor Training

Staff development is an essential part of the Workplace Literacy Project. The intent is to have a competent, capable, and professional staff resulting in successful workplace literacy instructors.

Designing a relevant training program that is based on actual needs can be accomplished through an established competency model. Thus, the Workplace Literacy Project adopted the model developed at Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton, Florida, which was pursuant to a grant from the State of Florida Department of Education.

The following competency listing comprised of five broad statements with general statements within each statement, serve as objectives. These statements describe knowledge and skills essential for the effective teaching of adult literacy learners.

1. Instructional Skills
   - Assess learning needs
   - Use relevant and effective instructional methods

2. Interpersonal Relationships
   - Develop effective working relationships with adult literacy learners
   - Exhibit respect for the dignity and worth of adult learner

3. Curriculum Design
   - Develop and organize curriculum reflecting the needs of adult workplace literacy learners
   - Develop appropriate objectives for adult literacy learners

4. Perspectives of Learning
   - Develop conditions which facilitate learning
   - Demonstrate a commitment to life-long learning
5. Community Development

Understand the purposes of adult literacy education within the community (Grant # AB7-s), FY 1976-1977)

The competencies were drawn from a broad spectrum of adult educators from different communities involved in varied program areas. The competencies identified are essentially used as indicators which point out the need for awareness and professional development. The instrument may be used as an assessment vehicle to identify areas needing improvement. This effort is primarily aimed at instructors who have not had prior experience in workplace literacy. It is a consistent, valuable self-appraisal assessment instrument, which is easily interpreted. See Appendix J for the assessment items and directions.

Volunteers

Volunteer tutors for the project are available through two sources which provide volunteer recruitment and training. The Independent Adult Literacy League which uses Laubach materials and training is a good source for volunteers and materials. Also evident in Orange County are the volunteer tutors recruited and trained through the local Literacy volunteers of America affiliate which is housed and supported by Orange County Public Schools Adult Education Department. Both organizations are involved in adult literacy and are a welcome and needed public service.
SUMMARY

The Orange County Public Schools Workplace Literacy Project has successfully served over 1,000 students during the 18-month period, October 1988 through March 1990. Sixty classes have been conducted at 22 sites within businesses/industries. Continuation of classes to large businesses is expected through the industry service department of each vocational technical center in the Orange County Public School system. Funding is being sought through a proposal to the U.S. Department of Education Partnership Grant, primarily to serve small businesses as well as support the on-going efforts in cooperation with the district vocational centers.

Documentation

The measure of evaluating program success has been accomplished through cumulative and summative evaluations. Cumulative evaluations have been conducted in the form of teacher-made evaluations in which instructors monitor student progress. A sample competency checklist can be found in Appendix C. Summative evaluation is conducted through the use of course evaluations completed by each student and business/industry. In addition, informal feedback throughout each course is obtained from the manager and/or company liaison during meetings or via telephone.

It is of the utmost importance to maintain an awareness of the status of program success and correct any deficiencies immediately. The involvement in utilization of facilities as well as (sometimes) release time for employees to attend class, necessitates provision of a successful program, otherwise, it is viewed as a loss of time and profit by management.
Conversely, a successful program provides:

- profitable return in terms of employees' skills
- improvement in communication by employees which enhances concepts and attitudes and enriches communication within business/industry
- increased production/decreased margin of error (due to better understanding and communication)

A management evaluation form designed to obtain a formal project evaluation from the business/industry can be found in Appendix L. Also in Appendix L is a student course evaluation form and a teacher course evaluation form.

An accurate indication of program success is evident through the process of cumulative and summative evaluations. Furthermore, feedback provided by students, management, vo-tech center coordinators and instructional personnel helped to keep abreast of any adjustments needed in curriculum, materials and methods of instruction throughout the program. Further evaluation of the program will be provided by Dr. Phil Grise, the project evaluator.

GENERAL MECHANICAL SAFETY

General mechanical safety on machines is of the utmost importance. An employee should not attempt to do any mechanical work for which he/she has not been trained. Training on the machines is a requirement before you operate a machine alone.

Supervisors are trained to handle any mechanical problem with the machines. If you as an employee have a problem with your machine, call a supervisor and let him repair the machine or take care of the problem.

You should become familiar with the "Emergency Stop Buttons". These are located on all the machines and they stop the machines when they are pressed. Use them only in Case of Emergency.

All employees should know what "Safety Covers" and "Sensors" do on the machines. "Safety Covers" are used to protect the employees from injuries by covering the moving parts of the machine. "Sensors" are used by the machine to detect a malfunction within the machine. The "Sensors" detect an unsafe condition and usually shut off the machine. "Safety Covers" should never be removed from the machine.

The following safety signs are designed to warn the machine operator of potential safety hazards.

"DO NOT TOUCH HOT"
"CAUTION MOVING PARTS"
"CHANCE OF ELECTRICAL SHOCK"
FORKLIFT OPERATIONS

"DO NOT OPERATE ANYTHING THAT YOU HAVE NOT BEEN TRAINED TO OPERATE."

"DO NOT BE AFRAID TO SAY NO/OR REFUSE TO OPERATE A MACHINE THAT YOU FEEL THAT THERE IS A POTENTIAL DANGER TO YOU OR SOMEONE ELSE."

"BE SURE THAT YOU ARE PROPERLY TRAINED TO OPERATE A FORKLIFT BEFORE YOU OPERATE ONE."

"WHEN IN DOUBT ABOUT OPERATING ANY EQUIPMENT ASK YOUR SUPERVISOR, OR GET THE PROPER TRAINING BEFORE YOU OPERATE THE EQUIPMENT."
SAFETY RULES

1. DO NOT FIX/REPAIR MACHINES, UNLESS IT IS YOUR JOB.

2. DO NOT PLAY WITH THE RED "STOP BUTTONS", UNLESS IT IS AN EMERGENCY.

3. DO NOT REMOVE "SAFETY COVERS".

4. DO NOT TOUCH "SENSORS".

INTRODUCTION FOR COUNSELOR

In the workplace literacy program, many basic skills and competencies are learned in the classroom so that the limited English proficient employee can learn to better function on the job. In the cross cultural guidance counseling materials, many employability skills and topics will be discussed so that an understanding of their usefulness and function in the American workplace will precede the skill or topic and also follow learning the skill itself in activities at the end of the topic unit. In the classroom, the guidance counselor will assist the teacher with further communication and demonstration of why these employability and living skills are important in this country and when they are to be used at work and at home.

The guidance counselor will provide student/employees with an understanding of the American work culture that will make our work customs seem more realistic and easier for foreign-born employees to follow. Knowing how and why American businesses and industries operate and what they expect from their employees gives the foreign-born employee a better understanding of the workplace and a better chance for success on the job. The first few months as an American employee is a starting point in the American business system. Guidance provided in the classroom will contribute to the student's successful job performance through definition, discussion, and active participation by role playing typical job and life management situations.
Each section of this guide is formatted as a unit. A vocabulary check list of words and idioms precedes each unit and provides a preview of key words and concepts used in the text. Specific vocabulary words related to the unit topic are defined in the text. Several activities follow the text to provide visual and verbal practice of the skills taught, as well as practical reinforcement of the skills as they relate to the student/employee's job. The self-check and personal rating activities can be used as counseling tools to create an awareness of difficulties or problems at work and find possible solutions to them.

After each unit, a Self-Appraisal form is included. This form may be filled out by the student and given to the job supervisor to encourage communication and feedback from the student, teacher and work supervisor. The guidance counselor may also use this form to counsel the student on progress made in problem areas.

In all activities in "Working in the United States," the most beneficial information includes specific data and material about the student's employer. Guidance counselors and teachers are encouraged to alter or add to the activities to reflect specific company procedures and information.

Your assistance in teaching and managing customized classes for corporations is what makes this program successful. This memo is designed to be a tool for you in tracking the components that make for successful courses. If I may ever be of assistance in your achievement of your class goals and objectives, please call extension 243 and I will be happy to assist you.

FORMS

Attendance - The Student Attendance Register is an approved county form and is due the last day of class. All instructors are required to use established codes to complete and to keep a copy. The official copy is a computer print-out and provided to you by the coordinator.

Student Registration - The Vocational/Adult Registration form is a white and blue form approved by the county office. Note: Industry Services use a one-page version of the four-ply form. Registrations are due after the first class session.

Class/Teacher Assignment Sheet - is an OVTC form used to track all Industry Services classes and assists in data management. It is intended to save the instructor time in the registration process by allowing the instructor to fill out the top third and omit filling out each individual registration below the gray line. (Just include course, course number and section on each form.) Please obtain further instruction on the procedure. The Class/Teacher Assignment Sheet is submitted with the completed Registration forms.

Evaluations - Course evaluations are given at the end of the course. An OVTC form is provided.

Student Withdrawal - Withdrawal is currently being reported on the Student Registration form and is due immediately upon withdrawal. Students who withdraw prior to the completion date need to be reported immediately. If the four-ply form is used, submit the white copy (it will be returned to you after entry into the Information System) with the withdrawal information documented on the bottom line. (See attendance instruction sheet.)

If a student withdraws from a course registered on the one page form, notify the Industry Services Coordinator.

Certificates - Course attendance certificates are provided by OVTC and may be given at the end of a class. (Please allow two weeks to process certificates.)

Teacher Pay Voucher - is used to record the instructional hours of the part-time teacher. The payroll period extends from the 16th of the month to the 15th of the next month. The voucher must be placed in the Assistant director's "In Box" (Room 237) by the 15th of each month. Exceptions are:

The FTE Reporting Schedule will be distributed on a yearly basis and should be referred to "keeping up-to-date" the Industry Services coordinator.

Curriculum Requirements - A course outline -- including the number of hours, purpose, objectives, methods, topics, resources, bibliography and AV equipment required is completed and turned in before class begins.
