The bill incorporates changes to expand the development and adoption of Follow Through models, create closer ties with Chapter 1 as well as Head Start, and increase the focus on comprehensive services and parental involvement.

Authorization levels for the program are $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1991 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 1992 through 1994. The bill allows program funds to be used to pay operating expenses and removes restrictions on locations in which school-age child care may be provided.

II. BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR LEGISLATION

Many of the programs included in the Human Services Reauthorization Act of 1990 (H.R. 4151, as amended), can be traced back to the War on Poverty. Although they have undergone structural and administrative changes since that time, the central principles remain the same: comprehensive services, community involvement, and the goal of self-sufficiency for low-income families.

The War on Poverty, spearheaded by the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, was a response to the realization that millions of Americans were destitute in the midst of an affluent society. A fifth of all Americans were poor. Their children began life at a disadvantage, facing poor nutrition, a lack of health care, and poor educational opportunities. Head Start and other community action programs sought to ameliorate the disadvantages of children and parents using the concept that such assistance was best provided from within the community in which the family lived.

Moreover, Head Start broke new ground. It embodied the knowledge of leading professionals in child development and health that children at risk of failure, because of poverty and its complicating factors, may still succeed in a comprehensive program that speaks to their cognitive and social development, their health and nutrition, and the strengths and needs of their parents and families.

In the years after 1964, the original programs were expanded and new ones, such as the Follow Through program and energy assistance programs, were added. The administering office was changed from the Office of Economic Opportunity to the Community Services Administration. During this period, the face of poverty also changed. By the late 1970's, families headed by women accounted for almost half of the poverty population, compared with little more than a third in 1966. These families faced much greater barriers to self-sufficiency than two-parent families.

In 1981, another major change occurred in the human services programs with the advent of block grants for community service and energy assistance. During the last decade, programs such as the Demonstration Partnership Agreements and State Dependent Care grants were added. Families headed by women continued to face severe poverty. Where children were present, female-headed families were six times more likely to be poor in 1987 than families with a male present. Most alarming, American children, especially young children, became the group most likely to be poor. Today, almost one child in four under the age of six lives in poverty.

At the same time, however, there has been growing awareness of the need for an integrated approach to the negative effects of chronic poverty on the social, intellectual, and economic behavior of children and young people. Professionals and volunteers in child development and education, child welfare services and the courts, and health, mental health, and income support programs are recognizing that without linkage and collaboration among these systems, each is less than fully effective.

As Head Start has demonstrated strongly, assistance to children must speak also to family strengths and needs. It must be provided in a manner responsive to the complex problems that cross conventional bureaucratic boundaries of systems that touch the lives of children and young people at risk and their families. A number of states, several foundations, and associations of professionals working in these systems are now testing methods of collaboration including multi-disciplinary children departments, joint budgeting, pooling of funds, waivers of regulations, compatible eligibility and standards, joint intake, and other approaches. This bill recognizes the value of a comprehensive and collaborative approach to assisting children and their families by strengthening existing comprehensive programs and testing several new approaches.
HEAD START

As Head Start completes its twenty-fifth year, it also faces its greatest challenge since its inception. The families of today's poor children face problems far greater and more complex than those in 1965. With a growing recognition that the nation may face a shortage of skilled workers in the year 2000 and that children in poverty today will form an increasing share of the workforce of the future, government and society have a larger stake than even in their healthy long-term development. Head Start was created to address the problems such children face by providing comprehensive services including education, health, nutrition, and social services. The program's approach emphasizes parental involvement, both to help parents learn more about child development, thus enabling them to enhance the child's learning, and to find their own road to self-sufficiency.

Head Start was established as a pilot program under the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964. Its creation was a convergence of the movement to fight poverty and emerging theories of child development. The program was expanded in 1966, the first year it was actually mentioned in the law, and was funded at $352 million. In 1974, responsibility for administering the program was transferred from the Office of Equal Opportunity to what is now the Administration for Children, Youth, and Families in the Office of Human Development Services of the Department of Health and Human Services.

The Human Services Reauthorization Act of 1987 (P.L. 99-425) authorized funding for Head Start through 1990. The authorization level for fiscal year 1990 was $1.405 billion, which was raised to $1.552 billion by P.L. 101-120.

Since the program's inception, more than eleven million children have benefited from its comprehensive, family-oriented approach to early childhood development. In fiscal year 1989, there were 1,284 Head Start programs, serving over 450,000 children. Thirty-eight of these programs were Parent-Child Centers which seek to provide a continuum of early childhood services from birth. In 1990, the Department estimates 548,470 children will participate in Head Start.

Head Start has built a solid record of achievement over the past 25 years. Studies have found that Head Start students are less likely to be placed in special education classes or to be retained in grade. Research on comprehensive, high-quality preschools in general supports these findings and adds data on long term effects. The Perry Preschool Project of the High/Scope Educational Research Foundation documented long-term benefits such as reduced dropout rates, involvement in crime, or reliance on welfare.

A more personal view of the program's effects was offered in testimony before the Subcommittee on Children, Family, Drugs, and Alcoholism on March 1, 1990, by Stephen Juan King, who participated in one of the early Head Start programs. Mr. King currently is completing doctoral work at the University of Florida. He offered an insight into why Head Start is so successful in drawing family participation, when they might be reluctant to turn to other programs. "I cannot recall any time feeling stigmatized as a Head Start student either at that time or later, as I entered elementary school and continued on. Actually, it was a little bit surprising to think about it as a poverty program when I was approached to make this testimony."

Stephen Davis, an early Head Start graduate who testified before the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources on April 17, 1990, had a similar view. "As a four-year-old boy growing up in public housing 25 years ago, I did not realize that I was participating in a program that would go on to become a model for social service and education programs nationwide. . . . I did not realize then that my friends and I were being targeted because of our parents' low income level," Davis told the Committee. He is currently employed as director of the Cambridge, Massachusetts, Housing Authority's unemployment prevention program.

Parents of Head Start students clearly have benefited as well, although no systematic study on this subject has ever been done. One-third of Head Start staff are or have been Head Start parents. Many of them provide anecdotal evidence of how the program and its staff gave them the self-esteem and support they needed to make something of their own lives. Testifying before the Subcommittee on Children, Family, Drugs, and Alcoholism on March 1, 1990, Eugenia Boggus, now the President of the National Head Start Association, recounted how her close relationship with her child's Head Start teacher gave her the confidence to get involved with the program as well as to work toward and receive a degree in child development. Doreen Lopes, a former Head Start parent and former welfare recipient, testified before the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources on April 17, 1990, that because of Head Start, she received her high school diploma and associate's degree from Wheelock College, despite having learning difficulties.

Two challenges face the Head Start program as it enters the 1990's. The first is how to reach more of the children who need its services. The second is how to maintain and enhance the quality of the program.

Head Start currently reaches only one-fifth of eligible three, four, and five-year old children. But there is strong support from the business community and educators for enabling Head Start to serve more eligible children. The Committee for Economic Development (CED), an organization of leading business executives and educators, has called for full funding of Head Start, noting in its report Children in Need the importance of ensuring quality at the same time. Representing CED, Frank Doyle, Senior Vice President of General Electric, testified before the Subcommittee on Children, Family, Drugs, and Alcoholism on March 1, 1990. He stated that quality early childhood education was "an issue of productivity and profitability in a rapidly changing competitive world."

The testimony received by the Committee on Labor and Human Resources and the Subcommittee on Children, Family, Drugs, and Alcoholism points overwhelmingly to the need to provide special funds to ensure that Head Start's quality is maintained and enhanced. Moreover, the witnesses noted repeatedly that the program's effectiveness will be threatened if program expansion is emphasized over quality services:
Head Start is effective only when quality is high, when every individual local program meets the standards and criteria set forth by the national Head Start Act. There is a direct correlation between the quality of a Head Start program and its long-term effects: it is safe to conclude that the better the program, the more pronounced and lasting its positive effects on children and their families. Below a certain threshold of quality, the program is useless, a waste of money regardless of how many children are enrolled.—Edward Zigler, Sterling Professor of Psychology, Yale University.

Probably the most important lesson that we can learn from looking at what has worked is that we have to pay a lot of attention not just to the numbers of children and families who are served, but to the content and quality of the services that are offered to them.—Lisbeth Schorr, author of Within Our Reach: Breaking the Cycle of Disadvantage.

If we have to water down services to enroll more children, we will have accomplished nothing. Quality in the programs must be maintained. Quality cannot be sacrificed for quantity. Expansion cannot be at the expense of quality programs. All Head Start enrollees and their families must have the complete Head Start experience if it is to be effective.—Sister Barbara McMichael, Director, Providence Head Start, Providence, Rhode Island.

It is imperative that as Head Start is reauthorized and additional money appropriated, as much emphasis is paid to raising quality as to broadening access.—Frank Doyle, Senior Vice President, General Electric Corporation.

The concerns about quality are triggered by the decline in per pupil expenditures, which dropped 13 percent between 1981 and 1989. Frances Collins, Director of Cambridge Head Start and Chairperson of the Massachusetts Head Start Association, noted in testimony before the Committee on Labor and Human Resources on April 17, 1990, that many Head Start programs have been forced to increase class size and shorten program hours in order to reduce costs. The Committee on Labor and Human Resources also heard testimony regarding rising non-personnel costs in region I Head Start programs. Janis Santos, Executive Director of Holyoke/Chicopee Head Start in Massachusetts, testified that increasingly, landlords are demanding rents equivalent to the commercial rate. Even schools and churches, traditional sponsors of low-cost facilities, have increased rents in recent years. In Holyoke/Chicopee, liability insurance has increased by 50 percent and medical insurance for staff has increased by 50 percent as well. Utilities, telephone, heat, and electricity have increased by as much as 20 percent. One Head Start program reports that over the past five years, a 12.4 percent increase in federal funds have been far outweighed by a 46 percent increase in non-personnel costs during the same period.

In its report, Head Start: The Nation’s Pride. A Nation’s Challenge, the Head Start Silver Ribbon Panel catalogued the problems Head Start programs are facing:
Shortages of affordable and appropriate facilities: Public schools have taken back space given or rented to Head Start programs, many landlords are no longer willing to donate space, and increased rents are forcing Head Start programs to vacate space in which they may have made substantial improvements. Some current facilities are inadequate to serve young children, but resources for renovations often are not available.

Inadequate transportation: As a result of cutbacks in transportation systems, some grantees have narrowed the geographic area they serve or serve different types of families, decreasing the ability to serve rural families or provide home-based services. Parents find lack of transportation is a disincentive to parent involvement and a barrier to obtaining needed services.

Staff shortages in critical areas: Many Head Start programs are finding that they need to provide expanded family support in order to encourage parental involvement and meet multiple family needs. However, many programs have been forced to eliminate or combine positions to reduce costs.

Low staff salaries comprise one of the main threats to program quality. Department of Health and Human Services data show that 47 percent of Head Start teachers earn less than $10,000 a year. Low salary levels make attracting and retaining qualified staff difficult. Early childhood development specialists note that resulting staff turnover is particularly harmful to young children, who need stability to thrive.

Studies have shown that staff training in early childhood development is a critical factor in determining a program's quality. However, some Head Start programs lack the resources to encourage their staff to obtain more training and work toward credentials such as the Child Development Associate or a post-secondary degree. The Silver Ribbon Panel's report noted that Head Start funds have not kept up with expansion. Head Start will spend $30.6 million on training and technical assistance in fiscal year 1990. However, as a percentage of total budget, this represents a decrease since 1974.

Witnesses consistently noted in their Committee testimony that at the same time that resources per child have shrunk, the problems of children and families participating in the program have become more complex. Young children are more likely to be poor than any other age group. Half of these children live in areas of concentrated poverty, which generally are characterized by a host of other social problems. In testimony before the Committee on Labor and Human Resources, Dr. Joyce Brothers noted the increase in family fragmentation, the rise in divorce, and the increase in homelessness among families that can reduce the amount of "ordinary care and concern and time spent on the child". Parental substance abuse places children at risk for physical, emotional, and psychological harm. The Head Start program also is likely to see many children who were exposed to drugs or alcohol before birth. Moreover, in some areas, many children in Head Start programs are exposed to chronic violence in their communities.

A November, 1989, study by the HHS Office of Inspector General, Dysfunctional Families in the Head Start Program, found that working with dysfunctional families—those with problems such as substance abuse, poor parenting skills, abusive or violent behavior toward children or other household members, and inadequate housing—requires extra staff time and leads to staff stress and burnout. Although the report found that Head Start works well for children from such families, inadequate resources have limited Head Start grantees’ ability to serve them.

Testimony and available data confirm that Head Start programs lack the staff resources to give these multiproblem families the intensive attention required to secure comprehensive social services for them. Seventy-one percent of Head Start programs nationwide have a social services coordinator caseload of 61 to 1. This is far above the recommendation of a recent Department of Health and Human Services taskforce for a caseload of 35 to 1. Seventeen percent of all Head Start programs lack a full-time social service coordinator; 12 percent lack a full-time health coordinator; and 18 percent lack a full-time parent coordinator.

Based on Head Start's proven track record, the large population of eligible children who are unserved, and the need to halt erosion of program quality, the reauthorization legislation emphasizes several key elements. First, it authorizes sufficient funding to serve all eligible children. Second, and equally important, it creates a set-aside of funds for program quality improvements, including increased staff salaries. While the increased funding for quality will increase the cost per child, the Committee has determined that without these additional resources, Head Start programs across the country will find it increasingly difficult to provide high quality services to the nation's disadvantaged children. With the increase, the Committee is confident that Head Start will enjoy continued recognition as the federal government's flagship program in the war on poverty.

THE TRANSITION FROM HEAD START TO SCHOOL

Although Head Start has succeeded in achieving parental involvement and in addressing the cognitive, health, mental health, nutrition, social services, and educational needs of at-risk children, all too often, elementary schools have neglected the non-educational needs of students and their families. As with all points of transition in a child's life, the child's movement from Head Start to kindergarten is critical. It is at this point that experts believe some of the gains of Head Start begin to erode as the child—and parent—moves from a supportive environment that addresses the needs of the whole child to a new setting where non-educational and family needs are often neglected.

This transition point is the focus of the Head Start Transition Project Act of 1990, which has been included in the reauthorization legislation. Numerous reports and studies indicate that several elements that are critical to continuing the benefits of Head Start into the elementary grades. First, it is essential that supportive services, such as health, mental health, and social services, continue to be provided. Second, the school must foster strong parental involvement that encourages and enables low-income parents to be advocates and teachers for their children. Third, there should be continuity of the educational program, which can be achieved by ensuring that both the Head Start program and elementary school use developmentally appropriate curricula. Finally, a strong line of communication must be maintained between the Head Start program and public school.

The Transition Project builds on these principles. The legislation would authorize the Administration on Children, Youth, and Families to make grants to Head Start agencies or local educational agencies working in partnership with one another. The program sponsor would employ a team of family services coordinators who would be charged with facilitating communication among low-income families and schools, helping these families obtain services, and ensuring that there is developmental continuity between the early childhood and elementary school programs. Local applications would be jointly developed by the Head Start and local educational agencies, after consultation with community agencies that provide supportive services. Twenty million dollars would be authorized to provide at least one demonstration program in each state. An evaluation of the program would be completed by September 30, 1993.

This program model is based on recommendations by educators and other experts in the field of child development. In a 1988 report entitled Right from the Start, the National Association of State Boards of Education’s panel of child development experts recognized that there is a “lack of planning and collaboration to ensure a smooth transition for children between early childhood programs in the community and programs in the schools.” As a remedy, the report encouraged collaborative planning, ongoing communication, and use of a developmentally appropriate “curriculum and classroom environment that responds to learning patterns of children within a given age range, to individual differences among children, and to cultural and linguistic diversity among children.” Right from the Start advocates that elementary schools adopt “features from high quality programs for young children, such as active parental involvement, family support services, and comprehensive services for children.”

The Committee for Economic Development (CED) goes even further. In their 1987 report Children in Need, CED suggested that “schools serving disadvantaged students . . . undergo fundamental restructuring” so schools and their communities could “reach beyond traditional boundaries of education in order to provide the comprehensive services and sustained effort needed by disadvantaged children and youths.”

A recently released interim report by the High/Scope Educational Research Foundation, A Follow-up Study of Head Start’s Role in the Lives of Children and Families, found that in many cases even modest efforts at program continuity were lacking. For example, Head Start records were usually not included in the permanent school records of children studied, and nearly all of the first- and fourth-grade teachers interviewed for the study were unaware of their students’ Head Start experience. The study recommended increased communication between Head Start and public school teachers, including communication regarding curriculum planning, parent involvement, and transition to school. The study also found that parents of former Head Start children had fewer opportunities to participate in school than in Head Start, and that elementary school teachers regarded this lack of involvement as lack of interest on the part of parents, rather than failure of the schools to reach out to families. Clearly schools could benefit by use of the Head Start parent involvement model.

In testimony before the Committee on Labor and Human Resources on April 17, 1990, Dr. Edward Zigler, Sterling Professor of Psychology at Yale University, who has had a long involvement with the Head Start program stated that “it is high time for the public schools to learn the major lessons of Head Start: (1) that services to poor children must go beyond the purely educational and (2) that any program for the child must involve the entire family.” Dr. Zigler strongly supported school’s adoption of the “Head Start mentality,” including parent involvement, offering health and social services to the family, and using a developmentally appropriate curriculum geared to the whole child.

Because of the strong and widespread support for the Transition Project, the Committee anticipates that the demonstration will prove successful as a way to promote continued physical, social, emotional, and intellectual development of Head Start graduates through the elementary school years.

LOW-INCOME HOME ENERGY ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

Energy costs account for a sizeable portion of living expenses for poor families. To help meet rising costs, the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) was established in 1980 under the Home Energy Assistance Act, part of the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 (P.L. 96-223). Funding for fiscal year 1980 was $1.6 billion, a response to rapidly increasing heating oil prices. LIHEAP grew out of several one-year programs established from 1977 to 1979 to deal primarily with energy-related emergencies. However, authority for low-income energy assistance can be traced back even further, to the Economic Opportunity Act amendments of 1974.

LIHEAP was reauthorized as a block grant in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (P.L. 97-85), but the basic design and intent of the program remained essentially the same. States were given more flexibility in fulfilling the program’s purpose of helping low-income households meet their home heating and cooling costs. In addition to providing heating and cooling assistance, states had to reserve a reasonable amount of their allotment for energy crisis intervention and could use up to 15 percent of their LIHEAP allotment for LIHEAP for weatherization services and energy-related home repairs. States were given the authority to transfer up to 10 percent of LIHEAP funds to other programs, such as the Community Services and Social Services Block Grants.

A continuing increase in the price of natural gas combined with severe winter weather kept LIHEAP funding at or above its authorized level. LIHEAP authorizations were set at $1.875 billion for each of the fiscal years 1982 through 1984. Appropriations for those years were $1.875 billion in fiscal year 1982, $1.975 billion in 1983, and $2.075 billion in 1984.
The Human Services Reauthorization Act of 1984 (P.L. 98-588) reauthorized the LIHEAP program for fiscal years 1985 and 1986. Effective fiscal year 1986, the Act prohibited states from establishing income eligibility criteria that are less than 110 percent of the poverty level and treating categorically eligible and income eligible households differently. The Act authorized the program at $2.140 billion in fiscal year 1985 and $2.2 billion in fiscal year 1986. The program received appropriations of $2.1 billion for both of those years, although fiscal year 1986 funding was reduced to $2.01 billion following a sequestration.

Following its reauthorization in 1986, however, program funding began to decline, shrinking to 65 percent of its former size. The Human Services Reauthorization Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-425) provided authorizations of $2.050 billion in fiscal year 1987, $2.132 billion in fiscal year 1988, $2.218 billion in fiscal year 1989, and $2.307 billion in fiscal year 1990. Among other things, the Act added language to the statute to encourage states to use community-based organizations, such as Community Action Agencies or senior citizen agencies, to administer the energy crisis intervention program. The program received appropriations for fiscal years 1987, 1988, and 1989 of $1.825 billion, $1.535 billion, and $1.385 billion, respectively. In fiscal year 1990, the program received $1.393 billion. A supplemental appropriation added $50 million.

As funding declined, so did the number of households served, from 6.8 million in 1987 to 5.9 million in 1989. This decrease meant 2.7 million people were dropped from the program over a three-year period. The program now serves only 25 to 35 percent of eligible households. States reported during this period that, in addition to limiting the number of households served, they cut benefits. The average benefit decreased by almost 13 percent from 1986 to 1989.

LIHEAP recipients are among the poorest in America. Almost three-fifths of LIHEAP households have an annual income of less than $6,000. They can ill afford higher energy costs. Yet, the percentage of income paid by the poor for utility bills has risen to about 14 percent, almost 4 times the percentage paid by other households. LIHEAP benefits, while critical, cover a small portion of low-income households' energy costs, less than 30 percent in the vast majority of states.

Energy bills cannot be viewed in isolation, since they are a significant component of housing costs. People whose utilities are disconnected because they cannot pay their bills face risks, such as frozen plumbing, fire, or eviction, that can lead to homelessness. Rent and utilities together add up to 58 percent of the entire income of the average LIHEAP recipient. Testifying before the Subcommittee on Children, Family, Drugs, and Alcoholism on March 29, 1990, Mr. Carlos Dominguez described the precarious relationship between energy costs and housing in the trailer he and his family occupied:

Because there was no money I could not pay for my monthly utilities. The condition of the trailer added to this problem. No insulation, poor fitting windows and doors and no outside trailer skirtng allowed large amounts of cold air to infiltrate the trailer which drove up the heating bills. One day it was so cold inside that all our plants froze, in addition to having the water freeze. Most of the trailers in this mobile home lot are in the same condition. If we had not been eligible for fuel assistance our utilities could have been shut off since I was getting further and further behind on utility payments.

Mr. Dominguez and his family ultimately were evicted when they were unable to pay utilities or rent.

Witnesses before the Subcommittee strongly supported increased funding for LIHEAP. Mr. Ernest-Karkut, Vice President of Southern Connecticut Natural Gas Company, testified on behalf of the American Gas Association:

A.G.A. supports a LIHEAP program that is adequately funded. Most studies on the low-income energy program indicate that past LIHEAP funding levels, including the highest annual appropriation of $2.1 billion in FY 1985 and $2.0 billion in FY 1986, have fallen significantly short of the need for fuel assistance. Ideally, LIHEAP funding should be sufficient to ensure that low-income families have a reasonable opportunity to meet their energy bills.

Mrs. Ethel Peacock summed up the desperation and, ultimately, the tragedy of a poor family, unable to pay utility bills, resorting to makeshift, unsafe means to keep warm. Three of Mrs. Peacock's children died in a fire caused by an overloaded space heater cord. Mrs. Peacock had never heard of LIHEAP:

Congress needs to keep on funding this Energy Assistance program. But if you want to give families the kind of help they need, you must be prepared to put money into Energy Assistance. My children should not have to live without heat, lights, and water. We shouldn't be forced to live in a homeless shelter because we can't afford to pay rent and utilities. My three little boys did not deserve to die.

One of the problems mentioned in Mrs. Peacock's tragic story, a lack of knowledge about the program, also was cited by other witnesses before the Subcommittee. Ms. Helen Gonzales, Staff Attorney with the National Consumer Law Center, noted that "one reason more households are not being served is because they don't know about the program or because they don't have reasonable access to it." While reduction in outreach efforts may be the result of inadequate funding, it also can give one group greater access to the program than other groups when funding becomes available. Ms. Gonzales testified that:

The lack of access to the program may be particularly acute in states where only one state office operates the program. If that state office is a welfare office it may especially pose an obstacle for the elderly and the working poor who prefer not to deal with such offices, leaving those households with no viable alternative for accessing the program.
Finally, several witnesses noted the contributions of the private sector and the need for more cooperation and coordination between the state and local agencies and private utilities. Dr. Meg Power described the use of “leveraging” to stretch energy resources, using techniques such as discounts from vendors, product rebate plans, and waivers of reconnect fees. Mr. Kleeman testified that much more needs to be done to improve coordination with utility companies and fuel vendors:

While some of the utilities do provide limited financial assistance and most of the utilities do refer clients to us, we believe they could and should do more. The Federal government receives the best prices on everything they buy in bulk; food, supplies, equipment, etc. I believe it should be Federal policy that the LIHEAP client also receives the most favorable treatment.

FOLLOW THROUGH

Follow Through was one of the special programs authorized in Title II of the Economic Opportunity Act in 1967 to improve services to disadvantaged elementary school children. As first proposed by President Johnson in 1967, Follow Through was intended to become a direct service program providing comprehensive services as Head Start does. Over the years, the Follow Through authorization has retained this focus, requiring grantees to “provide such comprehensive educational, health, nutritional, social and other services as will aid in the continued development of children . . . to their full potential. Such projects shall provide for the direct participation of the parents of such children in the development, conduct, and overall direction of the program at the local level.”

However, restricted funding and differing views on the basic purpose of the program have kept Follow Through from achieving its full potential. In initial reauthorizations, Congress indicated that Follow Through was expected to grow along with Head Start as a direct service program. Funding for such growth was inadequate, however. In contrast, successive administrations viewed Follow Through primarily as a demonstration program to develop, test, and disseminate information about program effectiveness.

As a result, Follow Through currently serves only about 12,500 children in a relatively small number of demonstration classrooms. These programs are designed to serve all low-income children with previous preschool experience in full-day, regular classroom settings.

More than two-thirds of Follow Through projects have been evaluated as exemplary and effective by the Department of Education’s Joint Dissemination Review Panel. Separate studies also have found both significant achievement gains and parental involvement in Follow Through programs. But the small size of the program has limited its influence. Restricted funding has limited the development of the noncurricular services that are intended to be an integral part of Follow Through. The legislation extends and expands the authorization of Follow Through and associates it with a major source of direct funding, Chapter 1, which could be used to continue a successful program after a school’s Follow Through funding has expired. The Committee anticipates that with adequate funding, Follow Through may more fully realize its statutory charge of providing both curriculum and social services, with significant parental involvement, to disadvantaged children in kindergarten through grade three.

STATE DEPENDENT CARE DEVELOPMENT GRANTS ACT

The State Dependent Care Development Grants Act was enacted in 1984. Its purpose has been to provide funds to states to establish before and after school care as well as resource and referral services to provide information concerning the availability, types, cost, and location of dependent care services for young people, the elderly, and the developmentally disabled. The funds are distributed to each state based on population. States must allocate 60 percent of their funds for before and after school care and 40 percent for resource and referral services. The grants have an authorization of $20 million and received an appropriation of $13 million in fiscal year 1990.

"Latch-key children," or school-age children who are left at home after school, are a continuing concern. The Census Bureau estimated that, in 1988, over 2 million latch-key children spent some part of the day alone while their parent(s) worked. Fifty-one percent of teachers responding to a Harris poll cited children's being left alone as the most critical factor undermining their school performance. Children left unsupervised during afterschool hours are reported to be at greater risk for teen pregnancies as well as alcohol and drug abuse.

Studies have also shown that after school programs can improve children's social and educational skills. In testimony this year before the Subcommittee on Human Resources of the House Committee on Education and Labor, a representative of the Wellesley College School-Age Project noted that in many communities the State Dependent Care Development Grants Act was the only source of funding to establish before and after school child care programs.

As the need for child care in general has expanded, many parents have found it difficult to identify and locate the child care options open to them. Resource and referral agencies originated as a community response to this problem. These agencies collect information on child care providers in the community, directing parents to the providers and offering consumer education on different child care options and how to select a provider. This service is most important for parents seeking family day care, as these providers usually do not advertise and are more difficult to locate.

Resource and referral agencies have expanded in their geographic coverage as well as the scope of their activities. For example, activities have included recruiting new providers, forming networks of family day care providers, seeking funding to meet gaps in community services, and providing training and technical assistance to child care staff.

Fifteen states now have statewide resource and referral networks. All but two states have resource and referral services available in some part of the state. State Dependent Care Development
Grant funds have helped stimulate the rapid spread of this critical link in community child care services in the last five years. Many resource and referral programs, however, still must struggle to find funds for continued operation once they have moved beyond the initial startup costs.

COMMUNITY SERVICES BLOCK GRANT

Although the Community Services Block Grant (CSBG) was established through the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1980, its roots go much deeper. The Office of Economic Opportunity, and later the Community Services Administration, operated the Community Action Program, which gave seed grants to local Community Action Agencies to provide services broadly targeted on the causes of poverty. The governing boards of the Community Action Agencies were members of the community, including low-income individuals. The Community Services Administration also funded several small special purpose programs, including community economic development, community food and nutrition, and national youth sports.

In 1981, the Community Services Administration was abolished and the CSBG program created. The overall purpose, a broad anti-poverty program, and the community-based character of the program were retained, however.

A major change was the administration of the CSBG by the states. The states distribute the funds to local Community Action Agencies and other agencies designated as eligible entities. Seventy-three percent of local CSBG agencies are Community Action Agencies. The rest are units of local government, migrant and seasonal farmworker organizations, Indian tribes, and limited purpose agencies. These agencies operate programs that address the problems created by poverty and provide advocacy services for the poor. Typically, these local agencies also administer a wide variety of federal, state, and local programs as well as initiatives in partnership with the local private sector.

Programs receiving CSBG funds include uniquely successful public-private partnerships, as demonstrated by the fact that CSBG funds constitute a small proportion of total funding available to the local agency system. These include coordination and integration of services both on a case by case and a community-wide basis; raising new funds, goods, and services for the poor, including mobilizing millions of volunteer hours; providing direct services not available under any other programs; and identifying local needs and creating programmatic responses appropriate to the community circumstances. Testimony before the Subcommittee on Children, Family, Drugs, and Alcoholism on May 1, 1990, provided examples of effective initiatives in each of the categories outlined above.

—Total Action Against Poverty, a Community Action Agency in Roanoke, Virginia, developed the Comprehensive Health Investment Project that, in 1990, will bring comprehensive health care to over 1,000 children in the offices of private pediatricians with care coordination by the local Health Department.
—The People’s Regional Opportunity Network in Portland, Maine, supported a substance abuse prevention program, Teen Peer Leaders, in housing projects to develop healthy leadership skills, employment opportunities, and positive role modeling.

—The Salt Lake City, Utah, Community Action Agency operates a project to meet the housing needs of the poor, providing assistance such as mortgage foreclosure intervention, mortgage counseling, housing location, a Landlord Contribution Program, and the payment of a mortgage or rent payment to prevent eviction.

Local agencies administering the CSBG program have been very successful at using their funds to leverage support from other sources. Reports from the states show each federal dollar of local CSBG grants is matched by approximately $1.35 in local and private funding.

The flexibility of Community Action Agencies to address multiple needs as well as their roots in the community make them a source of assistance when families cannot or will not turn to public assistance programs. In testimony before the Subcommittee, Donald Lowe, a Kansas farmer, said, > I’m a proud person who does not want anything to do with welfare of any kind. But Community Action Agencies, like the Southeast Kansas Community Action Program are different. It’s different because SEK-CAP could design locally something like the Linn County Food Growers Coop, which was the only place I could turn to when I needed help feeding and clothing my children while we were struggling not to lose our farm.

Nadine Dowdell, who lives in Indiana, echoed this view:

> The low-income need a hand-up, not a hand out and Community Action provides that hand up. They offer their hand with a feeling of mutual respect and sincere desire to help people get on their feet. . . . Community Action is not a welfare system, it is a grassroots effort to restore family independence. I feel good about myself and my family’s future. I think part of that is due to my friends at Community Action.

Other witnesses told the Subcommittee that the importance of CSBG funds to maintaining the comprehensive, community-based approach so vital to providing effective services could not be underestimated.

All targeted programs stress a comprehensive approach in the assessment and delivery of services and an emphasis on self-help and self-sufficiency. . . . The flexibility and availability of CSBG support is vital to the effective continuance of these program efforts.—Grant Lee, Executive Director, People’s Regional Opportunity Network, Portland, Maine.

Failure to reauthorize the CSBG would have a devastating impact on CAA’s and the communities they serve. Not only would services be eliminated, but the concept of communities “in” action would be lost. Low-income persons would lose the ability to impact the design, implementation and evaluation of the programs that are set up to assist them.—Charles Smallwood, Director, Office of Community Services, State of Maryland.

The CSBG funds are essential to support the local CAA’s as they bring together other federal and state programs that have limited or no administrative money. In most cases, the funding requires prior planning and grant application.—Ann Kagie, Director, Utah State Community Services Office.

COMMUNITY FOOD AND NUTRITION

The Community Food and Nutrition Program (CFNP) was created in 1974 to help counteract conditions of hunger and malnutrition among the nation’s low income population. These conditions had been well documented by a team of doctors from the Field Foundation in 1967. A more specific purpose of CFNP was to provide temporary relief to the hungry and malnourished in emergency situations pending other federal relief or longer term solutions to the problem of hunger. CFNP was the successor to the Emergency Food and Medical Services Program which was added to the Economic Opportunity Act in 1967. CFNP appropriations were $26.2 million for fiscal year 1976, peaking at $30 million in 1979.

In 1981, the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act terminated the program, but Congress authorized a new CFNP grant program in 1984. An authorization level of $2.5 million was established for fiscal years 1985 and 1986, but no funds were appropriated. The Human Services Act of 1986 reauthorized CFNP for four years at $3 million, and Congress has appropriated $2.4 million annually.

CFNP has been quite successful at stimulating participation by local agencies in federal food assistance programs and coordinating antihunger efforts in communities. In a 1989 letter to Senator Robert Byrd, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Appropriations, Secretary of Health and Human Services Lewis Sullivan listed some of the program’s accomplishments, noting that the total benefits were too numerous to be included in the letter:

—Approximately 500,000 low-income persons were served, 25% of whom were children and elderly individuals;
—over 300,000 pounds of food was donated to the projects;
—more than $6,000,000 was mobilized from other public and private sources; and
—publications on food and nutrition were developed by a majority of grantees to improve outreach and the delivery of food.

Unfortunately, hunger continues to be a national problem, particularly among low-income children. There are more than 12 million children living in poverty, and one national study estimates that there are two to five million children hungry at any given point in time. As many as eight to nine million children are hungry or at risk of hunger. The implications for children who are hungry are farreaching. For example, in testimony before the Subcommittee on Children, Family, Drugs, and Alcoholism on May 1, 1990, Matthew Melmed, Executive Director of the Connecticut Association of Human Services, noted that studies have shown that hungry children are much more likely to experience "specific health problems, such as ear infections, dizziness, colds and unwanted weight loss, during a six month period as children from 'adequate' households."

While CFNP has had great success in identifying potential sponsors of child nutrition programs, many children remained unserved. Mr. Melmed commented,

As a nation, we have a lot of work to do! The ever popular and successful WIC program still only serves approximately 4.4 million of the 7.4 million potentially eligible population. The School Breakfast Program is still only available to 4 million of the 24 million children who participate in School Lunch. Participation rates of low income children in the Child and Adult Day Care and Summer Food Programs are particularly low.

CHILD DEVELOPMENT SCHOLARSHIP ASSISTANCE

The Child Development Associate Scholarship Act was enacted in 1986 as part of the Human Services Reauthorization Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-425). The scholarships assist low-income individuals in paying for the cost of application and assessment to receive the Child Development Associate (CDA) credential. Currently, assistance is provided to individuals whose income is less than 150 percent of the federal poverty line. Nearly 12,000 scholarships have been awarded over the past three years.

The CDA credential originated in 1975, a result of the movement to improve the quality of early childhood education by assuring that programs were staffed with people qualified for the job. The requirements for the credential were a collaboration between federal officials and early childhood educators. They created a system to train, assess, and recognize the competence of child care staff that has grown into a national network for stimulating professional development among people who work with young children. More than 23,000 CDA credentials have been awarded. Forty-two states and the District of Columbia have incorporated the credential into their licensing regulations as an option for child care staff qualifications. Persons with the CDA credentials are employed in a variety of early childhood settings, including Head Start, child care centers, family day care, church-based day care, facilities for Indian and migrant children, and parent cooperatives.

DEMONSTRATION PARTNERSHIP AGREEMENTS ADDRESSING THE NEEDS OF THE POOR

The Demonstration Partnership Agreements were enacted as part of the Human Services Reauthorization Act of 1986. The legislation reflected concern in the Congress that eligible entities under the Community Services Block Grant Act did not have the resources to be able to develop new approaches and techniques for alleviating the particularly critical needs or problems of the poor. Accordingly, the Secretary of Health and Human Services was given the authority to make a limited number of grants to support development of new and innovative approaches. Grants can be made which (1) propose new activities that are closely coordinated with on-going programs; (2) involve partnership agreements with non-profit organizations, public agencies, or private interests to produce significant new combinations of resources or new and innovative approaches to ameliorating causes of poverty; or (3) are structured so that the purposes of the CSBG Act will be promoted more effectively. The program was authorized at $10 million for fiscal year 1987 through 1989. The program authorization was extended through 1990 with an authorization of $5 million. The program received $3.5 million in appropriations for fiscal year 1990.

An area that is increasingly recognized as a critical poverty issue concerns a cluster of problems faced disproportionately by minority males. Males between the ages of 18 and 24 comprise a much larger proportion of minority populations than of the non-minority population. Young black and Hispanic males are more likely to live in poverty and have median earnings that are significantly less than those of whites. The unemployment rate for minority males is several times that of white males, and their participation in the labor force is much lower. On the whole, minorities have significantly lower educational levels than whites. While only 22 percent of the white population lack a high school diploma, 36 percent of blacks and 48 percent of Hispanics lack this credential. Violence is becoming increasingly prevalent in the lives of these youth. One in ten blacks will die from homicide versus one in 80 whites. For black males ages 18 to 25, homicide is the leading cause of death. Minorities, and especially blacks, are disproportionately involved in the criminal justice system. Twenty-five percent of blacks between ages 20 and 24 are incarcerated, on probation, and/or on parole.

Despite the severity and complexity of the problems facing minority males, there has been no focused federal response. Many programs such as the youth opportunity programs and CETA that once served large numbers of minority males are no longer in existence. The programs that replaced them are considerably smaller in scope and lack the necessary resources to adequately address the needs of this population. Current initiatives such as employment-related activities under welfare reform are important, but are targeted to women. Programs such as the Job Training Partnership Act have the potential to serve minority males, but have not, due to a lack of resources.

III. HISTORY OF LEGISLATION

LEGISLATIVE ACTION IN THE 101ST CONGRESS

On March 1, 1990, Senator Christopher J. Dodd introduced S. 2229, the Head Start Expansion and Quality Improvement Act of 1990, a bill to reauthorize the Head Start program for fiscal years 1991-1994, and to fully fund Head Start to serve all eligible children by 1994. The bill also sets aside a total of 12 percent of the amount appropriated in each fiscal year for quality improvement to be used for training and technical assistance and for compensation and other quality enhancing activities. Several other bills were introduced on related programs. On January 15, 1989, Senator Donald Riegle introduced S. 268 and on June 28, 1990, introduced S. 2811, both of which would allow State Dependent Care Development Grant funds to be used for operating costs. On March 29, 1990, Senator Edward M. Kennedy introduced S. 2363, which would establish Head Start Transition Projects for elementary school children. On June 14, 1990, Senator Paul Simon introduced S. 2736, a bill to reauthorize and amend the Follow Through program.

A field hearing on Head Start and related programs was conducted by the Committee on Labor and Human Resources in Boston, Massachusetts, on April 17, 1990.

On June 27, 1990, the Committee on Labor and Human Resources ordered reported H.R. 4151, the Human Services Reauthorization Act of 1990, as amended. During Committee action, H.R. 4151 was amended by an amendment in the nature of a substitute, which incorporated provisions from S. 2229, S. 2363, and S. 2736. The Committee approved the amendment in the nature of a substitute by voice vote. H.R. 4151, as amended, was approved by the Committee by a unanimous roll call vote of 16-0.

IV. COMMITTEE VIEWS

TITLE I, SUBTITLE A—AMENDMENTS TO THE HEAD START ACT

Authorization levels

It is time to significantly expand the Head Start program. The alarming number of young children in poverty and the need for a well-trained workforce in the future, combined with the proven success of Head Start and other early childhood programs, indicate the importance of reaching as many eligible children as possible.

Section 103 of H.R. 4151, as amended, provides for the authorization of appropriations sufficient to enable all eligible three- and four-year-olds and 30 percent of eligible five-year-olds to participate in the Head Start program by 1994. The gradual increase in participation rates embodied in these authorization levels are as follows: 35 percent in fiscal year 1991, 60 percent in fiscal year 1992, 80 percent in fiscal year 1993, and 100 percent in fiscal year 1994.

In calculating the appropriate authorization levels, the Committee utilized Congressional Budget Office estimates of the number of children in poverty and the inflation rate for fiscal year 1991. Because information from the Department of Education indicates that 70 percent of five-year-olds attend some type of public education program, it is assumed that only 30 percent of the five-year-olds eligible for Head Start will indeed participate in the program. The estimate assumes that children will be served for multiple years.

While the estimate assumes funding levels sufficient to provide services for all eligible three- and four-year-olds, the Committee recognizes that some eligible three- and four-year-olds may not participate. The Committee assumes that funds available as a result of a participation rate of less than 100 percent will be used to pay additional costs of serving children with disabling conditions as well as any additional costs necessary to improve the quality of the Head Start program. (The cost of serving children with disabling conditions is twice that of serving other children in that program.)

The funding estimate assumes a per pupil cost of $3,640 for fiscal year 1991 for a part-day, part-year program. This amount is adjusted for inflation in each subsequent year. The annual per pupil cost for 1991 was determined by using (i) the Committee for Economic Development’s estimate of $3,500 to $4,000 in 1986 dollars for a high-quality preschool program, and (ii) the annual per pupil expenditure of $4,449 for non-comprehensive public kindergarten through twelfth grade program of $4,499, (iii) the National Head Start Association’s estimate of $4,289 per child for quality Head Start services, and (iv) the General Accounting Office’s estimate of $4,797 (including the value of in-kind contributions), for a full day program, as published in the report Early Childhood Education: What are the Costs of High Quality Programs (January, 1990).
Head Start quality

The Committee believes that maintaining and enhancing the quality of Head Start services is just as important as expanding the number of children served. Therefore, section 104 of H.R. 4151, as amended, would require that portion of Head Start funds be allocated for quality improvement activities. The funds for quality are set aside in a manner that ensures that this reserve does not cut into funds needed to maintain the number of children being served.

For the first year, 10 percent of the entire Head Start appropriation would be targeted for quality improvement once the appropriation reaches a specified level. This level is an amount equal to the fiscal year 1990 appropriation adjusted for inflation, plus 10 percent. The trigger is intended to ensure that the set-aside does not take effect unless the appropriation is sufficient to guarantee the maintenance of existing services. In subsequent years, the quality set-aside would be 25 percent of any funds appropriated in excess of the previous year's appropriation adjusted for inflation.

The Secretary will determine how the quality improvement funds will be distributed. The Committee recommends, however, that the Secretary allow some flexibility at the local level for directing funds toward the most critical needs. At least half of the funds targeted for quality must be used to improve compensation (salaries and benefits) to Head Start staff. In accordance with Section 653, salaries cannot exceed the average rate paid for a comparable job in the area.

The remaining funds may be used for transportation; hiring additional staff; facilities improvement; and training in addition to that funded under a special training and technical assistance set-aside. The funds also may be used to provide services needed by children from dysfunctional families, children of substance abusers, and children from communities where violence is prevalent. The Committee believes that the Head Start program will see a disproportionate number of such children and that the program should be prepared to cope with their special problems.

Use of quality funds and adjusted appropriations

The Committee intends that funds made available under Section 640(a)(3) shall be used to supplement and not supplant grants made with funds under Section 640(a)(5). The Committee expects the Department to continue to provide cost-of-living increases under Section 640(a)(5) and that funds under Section 640(a)(3) will not replace such increases. The Committee further expects that the quality improvement funds received by a grantee in a given year and expended for recurring costs such as salaries and insurance will be maintained with funds from Section 640(a)(5) after the first year of such improvements.

In addition, section 105 of H.R. 4151, as amended, specifically states that the funds included to account for inflation in the adjusted appropriation (used to trigger the quality set-aside) will be used only to maintain the level of services provided in the prior years. In order to maintain the quality of existing services, these funds are not to be used to expand the number of children served in the program.
Pending regulations

The Committee understands that there are a number of pending regulations that would strengthen the quality of Head Start, including regulations establishing performance standards for infants and toddlers and Parent and Child Centers. Regulations are also pending to establish staffing patterns and maximum classroom size, set a minimum number of hours each day for program operations, and enumerate expanded local program options for grantees. The Committee believes the Department should promulgate such regulations should be promulgated as soon as possible.

Services to Indian and migrant children

Section 104 of the legislation also increases the minimum amount of funds reserved for Indian and migrant Head Start programs under Section 640(a)(2)(A) to the amount reserved in fiscal year 1990. The Committee wishes to make clear, however, that this is a minimum level of funding and that funds to meet the needs of these children should increase as their need for services increases.

The Committee believes that it is important for the Migrant Head Start Program to be administered at the national level given the complex task of providing services to migrant children. It also is essential that migrant children continue to have access to services from birth to the age of compulsory school attendance. The Committee also notes the importance of making funds for service expansion available to migrant programs as early in the year as possible to accommodate the seasonal nature of the programs. Expansion funds for fiscal year 1990 were not made available in time for many migrant programs to take advantage of them. The Committee expects the Department to ensure that such funds are distributed while migrant programs can still use them.

The Committee wishes to call to the Secretary's attention a unique situation that has developed on reservations of federally-recognized Indian Tribes as a direct result of federal actions. Due to several federal initiatives (such as tribal set-asides under the Vocational Education Act, the Vocational Rehabilitation Act, and several Interior Department programs for economic development), tribes are making real progress in moving adults into tribal enterprises and other jobs and away from reliance on federal assistance programs. The entry-level nature and low wages of these jobs mean that the children of these parents are still educationally and socially deprived. However, they are marginally ineligible for Head Start because of increased family income. The Committee urges the Secretary to work with the tribes and the Department of Interior to develop modified eligibility criteria for use on Indian reservations, so that we can encourage this laudable trend of increased employment without penalizing the children of such families.

Services to non-English language background children

The Committee wishes to underscore the importance of providing Head Start services to all eligible children, including those whose primary language is not English. The Secretary should ensure that policies regarding program funding, recruitment, and service delivery provide equal opportunity to non-English language background parents and their children. H.R. 4151, as amended, contains provisions to highlight and provide additional resources for bilingual programs sensitive to these children's needs. In particular, section 104 adds non-English language background children to the priorities for discretionary funds listed in section 640(a)(2)(A) of the Head Start Act, which currently gives priority to Indian and migrant programs and services to disabled children.

The Committee does not intend for children from non-English language backgrounds to be immersed in English-only programs, which can confuse the child and affect the relationships in the family. Rather, services to these children and families should be provided in a manner that respects and strengthens the language and culture of the participating families. These services also should have the goal of providing opportunities for children and parents to develop the linguistic skills necessary for social competence.

Coordination

The Committee believes that a key element of Head Start's comprehensive approach is coordination with other programs that provide services to Head Start families. For that reason, the Committee welcomes the June 27, 1990, proposal by the Department inviting applications for "projects demonstrating the capacity of Head Start programs to work with other community agencies and organizations, both public and private, to effectively deal with the problems of substance abuse, illiteracy and unemployment among Head Start families." The Committee places a priority on coordination between Head Start and the public schools, to assure a smooth transition for Head Start children into kindergarten and the elementary grades. The Committee also is concerned that Head Start and other early childhood development programs, including those sponsored by schools, are not well coordinated at the local level. Lack of communication and joint planning often results in poor distribution of services and unnecessary competition between programs for children, staff, and facilities.

Section 107 of H.R. 4151, as amended, strengthens the existing requirements for coordination with the public schools and other programs, adding a requirement that Head Start agencies coordinate with the state agency administering the JOBS program for recipients of Aid to Families With Dependent Children. Coordination is intended to provide more effective services to children and their families and to enhance efficient use of funds. Just as coordination between Head Start and the public schools is strengthened by this and other provisions in the legislation, the Committee believes that more attention should be focused on coordination between Head Start programs serving Indian children and schools operated by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Appeals

Section 111 of H.R. 4151, as amended, clarifies that each grantee may request timely hearings when funding is reduced or terminated. The legislation further clarifies that grantees will continue to have certain rights which are currently provided to them under the existing Departmental appeals process. These rights include: the right to an in-person hearing; the right to have the issues to be discussed at the hearing finalized before the hearing takes place; and an opportunity to take depositions as part of the pre-hearing process. The effect of these amendments is simply to continue current practice in these specific areas, not to restrict the ability of the Department to make other modifications in the appeals process.

Staff qualifications, salaries, and training

Section 112 of H.R. 4151, as amended, establishes a requirement that by the end of fiscal year 1994, each Head Start classroom will have one teacher with a credential in early childhood education or a related field. Appropriately trained teachers are an essential component of quality early childhood services. This is especially true for programs serving disadvantaged children, who need teachers qualified to meet their special needs.

The language of section 112 is virtually identical to Section 1306.21 of a Proposed Rule issued by the Department on December 8, 1988. Under section 112, the credentials which satisfy the requirement are the Child Development Associate (CDA) credential, a State certificate for preschool teachers that meets the CDA requirements, a post-secondary degree in early childhood education, or a degree in a related field as long as the teacher has experience and a State certificate in preschool education. To give Head Start programs ample time to meet this requirement, the legislation delays the effective date long beyond that originally envisioned by the Department. While compliance is not required until the end of fiscal year 1994, programs are encouraged to meet the requirement earlier. The Committee believes this requirement will not be burdensome, as 78 percent of Head Start teachers in 1989 had a CDA credential or a degree in early childhood education.

The credentialing requirement would apply only to one Head Start teacher in each classroom. It would not prevent Head Start parents from working in the classroom as assistant teachers or aides. Moreover, the Committee believes that encouraging Head Start staff, including Head Start parents working in the program, to obtain a CDA or post-secondary degree is important to their own professional development and advancement. Paid or volunteer work by parents in the Head Start classroom can provide the experience required by the CDA credential. To recognize staff who pursue such additional training and enhance the program's ability to recruit and retain qualified, staff, the legislation requires the Secretary to encourage programs to use salary scales based on training and experience.

The Committee recognizes that the requirement for a minimum credential as well as the proposed expansion of the Head Start Program will increase the need for training resources. Therefore, section 104 of the legislation changes the minimum that must be allocated for training and technical assistance funds each year from a specific amount to 2 percent of the program's total appropriation. This will allow these funds to grow as the program grows. The Committee intends that the training funds be used not only to help teachers and other staff earn a beginning credential, such as the CDA, but to further their professional development beyond such an initial training credential. The Committee expects, however, that these training funds would be used for staff working in all components of the program, including education, parent involvement, social services, health, and nutrition.

The Committee encourages the Secretary to develop a national training and technical assistance program which will bring the results of the most recent biomedical, behavioral, and other research to Head Start staff. Recent behavioral studies, including the Child Care Staffing Study, have reaffirmed the relationship between quality services and specialized training. Such training could provide an understanding of the most recent developments in health, mental health, safety, nutrition, special needs, infant development, and the importance of partnerships with parents.

The Committee recognizes that appropriate or specialized Head Start training resources may not be readily available in all communities and encourages the establishment of training networks to ensure that all programs have access to high-quality, appropriate training. The Committee is concerned particularly about rural areas and encourages the Department to ensure that Head Start staff in rural areas have access to training opportunities and, especially in the isolated circumstances of Indian reservations, to assure that funds are adequate to accomplish the training effectively.

Studies and evaluations

H.R. 4151 includes several provisions to improve the data available on the Head Start program and its effectiveness. The legislation establishes requirements for a biennial report, a longitudinal study, and two smaller studies of service delivery approaches.

The Committee expects that the biennial report included in section 113 will be thorough and substantive in nature and will include information contained reported in the existing required report on services to disabled children. When providing information on eligible children, the report should include migrant and Indian children. Reliable data on the total number and characteristics of these children currently is unavailable.

Section 113 also requires the Secretary to arrange for a study of various approaches to providing early, continuous, and comprehensive intervention and services to low-income or at-risk children from birth through age three, and to the families of such children. The Committee has seen convincing evidence that intensive programs that provide comprehensive services on a continuous basis from birth to compulsory school age are effective for extremely disadvantaged children. Regular Head Start (beginning at age three or four) may begin too late to reach such children—including those from dysfunctional families, children of substance abusers, and children who experience chronic violence in their communities. A variety of early intervention programs serving these populations have been implemented. The Committee expects that need for these programs will continue, and seeks information that will enable policymakers to assess the effectiveness of various approaches. The Committee expects that Head Start family day care homes included in this study will comply with program guidelines developed specifically for family day care and based on the Head Start performance standards.
In addition, Section 113 requires a study of the effectiveness of using family day care providers to deliver Head Start services. The committee expects the study to include a sufficient number of family day care providers which serve children from birth through the age of compulsory school attendance. The Committee expects that all family day care programs selected for the study will adhere to guidelines for the operation of Head Start family day care homes based on the Head Start performance standards. The family day care study should be designed to determine whether Head Start comprehensive services can be provided effectively in family day care settings and what program characteristics including costs are necessary to provide effective, comprehensive Head Start services in this setting.

Cooperative research

During hearings on the reauthorization of Head Start, the Committee was favorably impressed by testimony on the High/Scope Educational Research Foundation’s use of community-based cooperative research efforts to enable Head Start directors to conduct evaluations of their programs with the assistance of independent researchers. Such research efforts enable Head Start directors and staff to play a more central role in the design of research questions than in tradition research methods. Similarly, “grassroots” research allows local leaders to acknowledge and evaluate the effect that Head Start has played in the community. In addition to providing important insights into the benefits of Head Start and the way they are achieved, these research efforts have resulted in increased community commitment to Head Start, including greater cooperation between Head Start agencies and public schools, and increased appreciation for Head Start by community leaders. Such efforts similarly enhance the professional development of the Head Start directors by allowing staff to better understand the program, to interact on a wider range of professional issues critical to Head Start quality, and to see Head Start from a broader perspective. Section 114 of the legislation encourages the Secretary to provide funds for such research efforts. The Committee intends that a portion of evaluation funds be made available to conduct research of this type.

Study of Head Start participants

Section 115 of the legislation requires the Secretary to conduct a longitudinal study of Head Start participants. This study is not intended to determine whether or not Head Start is effective; there are numerous studies that demonstrate that Head Start is one of the best ways to ensure the future success of disadvantaged children. The purpose of the study is to provide greater insight into how these positive results are achieved and which program options best serve specific subgroups of children, including children from dysfunctional families, children of substance abusers, and children who experience chronic violence in their communities. The study will consider not only program options related to Head Start, but also later educational and other experiences. The High/Scope Educational Research Foundation has recommended using a minimum of four subpopulations of 1000 participants each. The Secretary and advisory panel should take into account the need for greater numbers of participants due to the length of the study.

The Committee also notes that the Hawkins-Stafford Elementary and Secondary Education Improvement Act of 1988 instructed the Secretary of Education to conduct a longitudinal study of children in the Chapter 1 program. Because the population of children served through Head Start often overlaps with that of Chapter 1, the Secretary should consult with the Secretary of Education regarding coordination of the two studies.

Parent-child centers

In keeping with the Committee's concern about the need for early intervention, H.R. 4151, as amended, provides for a modest expansion of the Parent-Child Centers currently funded under Head Start. The Centers provide early childhood intervention programs to enhance the development of children from birth to age three and strengthen the family unit. The programs focus on promoting the child's healthy development and developing parenting skills. Their comprehensive approach includes health, education, and social services, as well as opportunities for parents to improve their employability.

Section 104 of the legislation requires the Secretary to reserve $30 million for fiscal year 1991 for expanding existing programs or establishing new programs. The Secretary also is required to reserve $31,200,000 in fiscal year 1992, $32,448,000 in fiscal year 1993, and $33,745,920 in fiscal year 1994. The legislation requires agencies receiving grants to certify that Head Start services, if any, provided by the agency will not be reduced. To the maximum extent practicable, the agency also should provide continuous services to the children until they reach the age of compulsory school attendance. The Committee believes the children receiving services through Parent-Child Centers should go on to have a Head Start experience. The Committee also notes the virtual absence of Indian Parent-Child Centers and encourages the Department to increase their numbers.

Use of expansion funds

The Committee is extremely concerned about apparent actions by the Department both to limit participation in the Head Start program to one year per child and to restrict that one year of service to the year prior to a child's entry into kindergarten. The Committee believes interventions for disadvantaged children and their families must begin as early as possible and occur over the course of several years, especially in view of the growing number of multi-problem families. Section 645(c) of the Head Start Act explicitly allows each Head Start program in a community to provide more than one year of services to children from age 3 to the age of compulsory school attendance. The clear intent of this subsection was reinforced in a series of committee reports accompanying Head Start authorization and appropriations legislation since 1994.

In providing expansion funds, however, the Department has recently issued advisory guidelines which convey the impression that the Department intends to limit the ability of local Head Start programs to serve a child for more than one year. A Departmental funding guideline issued on February 6, 1990, stated "Expansion funds should not be used to provide a second year of services to current Head Start enrollees."

In addition, on June 12, 1990, the Department issued an "Invitation for Grantees to Apply for New Funds to Expand Head Start Enrollment." The Invitation states:

Expansion funds are intended to allow more low-income children to participate in Head Start. Therefore, our priority for new enrollees will be to serve children in the year prior to their entry into kindergarten.

It also states:

There may be situations where grantees are unwilling or unable to implement an expansion, or where the Regional Office determines that funding should not be recommended. This would include situations where reasonable costs cannot be negotiated, or where the grantee will not agree to expand in a way that conforms to the objectives and requirements of this expansion initiative.

The Committee believes these instructions are inconsistent with statutory intent. More specifically, while the instructions technically do not prohibit grantees from serving children who are age 3 (and therefore would qualify for an additional year of service), they may intimate grantees from proposing to include younger children in the expansion. These instructions do imply that a grantee proposing to include younger children will be placed at a competitive disadvantage for Head Start expansion funds.

As part of the 1990 reauthorization of the program, the House and Senate versions of H.R. 4151 each contemplate sufficient funding not only to provide a one-year benefit to all eligible children, but also to allow Head Start grantees to provide two years of Head Start services to all eligible children. Congress anticipates that the availability of this modest investment will pay for itself many times over.

It is the explicit view of the Committee—and the clear intent of the Head Start statute—that the Department not establish any funding or programmatic policies that appear to place any grantee at a competition disadvantage for any Head Start funds or imply that a Head Start grantee will not receive funds allocated to it because such grantee serves or proposes to serve children for more than one year with new or existing funds. This view is embodied in the Committee's strong reaffirmation of the intent of Section 645(c) to permit children to be served for more than one year by clarifying in section 118 of H.R. 4151, as amended, that the Secretary may not issue or enforce any rule or guideline which forbids any Head Start Agency to carry out a Head Start program in accordance with the authority described in 645(c).

Allocation of funds among States and rural areas

It has come to the Committee's attention that the fiscal year 1990 Head Start expansion funds were allocated in such a manner that some states received no funds for expansion. The Congress had appropriated $1,386,315,000, an increase of $151,315,000 over the fiscal year 1989 appropriation, with the expectation that $49,335,000 of that increase would be used for salary increases.

The Department distributed 87 percent of the increase according to the statutory Head Start formula, with the understanding that the states would provide an average 4.35 percent increase in staff salaries. Thus, the salary funds and the expansion funds were distributed together. In some states, the salary increases consumed the entire increase, with no funds remaining for expansion.

For those states that did receive enough funds for expansion, the Department developed its own formula to target the funds to those communities with the greatest unmet need. The Department defined unmet need as the number of unserved children in the community, a definition that heavily favors those communities with large numbers of four-year-olds. This definition placed small and rural communities, where the absolute numbers of children were not great enough automatically to entitle them to a share of the expansion funds, at a competitive disadvantage.

The Department informed those states and communities which did not receive expansion funds that they would have an opportunity to compete for funds. That opportunity was not extended, however, until after the passage of the supplemental appropriation bill for fiscal 1990, which provided an additional $165,000,000 for Head Start.

The Committee stresses that it is not the intent of this legislation or any previous authorization to encourage the use of a Department-determined formula for allocating Head Start expansion funds in a manner that places grantees serving rural and small communities at a relative disadvantage in obtaining those expansion funds. Moreover, the Committee intends that all states and Indian tribes have an opportunity to share in such expansion funds.

Non-Federal share

The Committee recognizes that local programs or communities may be unable to meet non-federal matching requirements due to special circumstances such as significant one-time only funds for program implementation or expansion in impoverished rural areas. This is particularly true when such funds become available late in the fiscal year. The Secretary is encouraged to exercise the flexibility provided by the Head Start Act regarding the nonfederal match in those instances where strict adherence to the matching requirements would prevent financial assistance to programs or communities.

Program administration

The Committee recognizes that the large expansion of the Head Start program expected over the next four years will require an adequate number of qualified federal staff. Additional administrative support and technical assistance to grantees both at the national and regional level will be necessary to establish and maintain grant management.

In addition, section 106 of H.R. 4151, as amended, requires the Department to conduct a triennial review of each Head Start program. Such reviews are required, to the maximum extent practicable, to be carried out by Department employees. This requirement will increase the need for Department staff who are knowledgeable about the Head Start program and early childhood development.

SUBTITLE B—HEAD START TRANSITION PROJECT ACT

The reauthorization legislation includes a new Head Start Transition Project designed to facilitate the smooth transition of disadvantaged children from Head Start to elementary school. The project accomplishes this objective in two ways: by improving communication between Head Start agencies and elementary schools, and by introducing into kindergarten through grade 3 programs specific elements of the Head Start program, including parental involvement and coordination of supportive services.

The Committee believes that to retain the gains made by children in the Head Start program, the transition to elementary school should not involve merely the transfer of records or meetings between the Head Start and kindergarten teachers. While these are important elements that are often neglected, the Committee believes that continuity in the programs themselves is also essential. Such continuity should include the use of developmentally appropriate curricula in both the Head Start program and elementary school. However, the major focus of the Transition Project is a team of family service coordinators trained to work with school personnel and families to ensure that children receive the services they need both in and out of school. This model has been used with great success by the Head Start program.

The Committee intends for at least five percent of funds authorized for the Transition Project to be used to evaluate the program. If the Transition Project proves successful in ensuring the continued physical, social, emotional, and intellectual development of Head Start graduates through the elementary school grades, it should be widely disseminated, especially for use by Chapter 1 schools.

TITLE II—AMENDMENTS TO THE LOW-INCOME HOME ENERGY ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1981

Forward funding

The Committee believes that the funding cycle for LIHEAP under current law is a major obstacle to effective state planning and management of an efficient and timely winter heating or crisis program. LIHEAP funds are designed to be expended in the season when home energy costs are incurred and in time to avoid household energy emergencies. However, in recent years, the Department had most often been without a final appropriations figure by the October 1 program start date. States must begin their planning for the program well before the level of funding is established. As a result of funding uncertainties, benefits cannot be set and, especially when major cuts are proposed, eligibility levels cannot be determined.

LIHEAP programs also end their heating program operations long before the end of a normal fiscal year. Twenty-nine states close their programs by April 30th or earlier. Thus, it is not feasible or possible to redesign program benefits or eligibility after final appropriations are in place. In addition, state LIHEAP programs have little capability to help households which experience payment problems in the spring after the program closes. There is no orderly process to avoid a crisis atmosphere in winter when people are in genuine danger from lack of fuel.

Section 202 of H.R. 4151, as amended, provides "forward funding" for LIHEAP by funding it on a program year basis. The program year will start on July 1 of the fiscal year for which appropriations are being made. The legislation creates a special framework for the appropriation of fiscal year 1992 funds which will enable the program to make the transition to forward funding during that fiscal year.

Forward funding will allow states to identify clients, provide assistance, and put them on responsible budget payment plans in the summer or fall to avoid the development of life-threatening situations. This funding method also will enable states to determine benefits and eligibility in the plans submitted to the Department. Finally, forward funding will permit an orderly program planning and administrative system for more efficient program management and for programs which reward households which budget their income and expenses based on realistic expectations about assistance.

Authorization of appropriations

Section 203 of H.R. 4151, as amended, authorizes appropriations for an additional four years, setting levels at $2.15 billion for fiscal year 1991, $2.3 billion for fiscal year 1992, and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 1993 and 1994. In addition, this section makes the basic authorization for LIHEAP subject to the forward funding provisions. It assures that the authority is available to appropriate sufficient funds to cover the additional months in the transition period. The Committee intends that funding for the transition year and the subsequent fiscal year will be at the levels authorized for fiscal years 1992 and 1993.

Authority to transfer funds

Under current law, states are allowed to transfer up to ten percent of the LIHEAP Block Grant to other human services block grants. The reductions in LIHEAP since fiscal year 1987 equal or exceed the reductions in most other health and social service block grant activities. LIHEAP can no longer meet energy needs and provide other important services as well. Therefore, the Committee believes that the transfer provision should be eliminated.

Nevertheless, the Committee is aware that 28 states transferred LIHEAP funds to other programs in fiscal year 1989. For some of the programs receiving funds, the transferred funds represent a significant portion of program resources. Accelerated withdrawal of the LIHEAP funds, before states have adequate opportunity to find replacement funds, would be detrimental to the various programs' ability to provide the human services they deliver.

Therefore, section 204 of the legislation provides for elimination of all transfers in 1994, permitting states three years to find alternative funding for the other programs that would be affected.
The Committee notes that the Community Services Block Grant programs that have used LIHEAP funds for critical, comprehensive family services, including energy and other housing needs, will be especially affected by withdrawal of LIHEAP funds. The need for additional CSBG funding at the levels authorized in this bill is thus even more dramatic.

The Committee has received considerable information indicating that its historic concerns for the provision of services to “working poor” and elderly households have not been satisfied in all states. In previous reauthorizations, the Committee amended section 2605(b)(6) of the Act to encourage the states to more effectively reach the non-welfare poor. Many states have accomplished this goal by using community action agencies, aging organizations, and other public or nonprofit agencies, but some have not. Therefore, the Committee believes more direct legislative language is warranted.

Section 205 of the legislation is aimed at addressing both inadequate outreach efforts and lack of appropriate intake locations. Some states provide outreach and intake for heating and cooling assistance and crisis situations only through those states and county offices which administer the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program. The amendment requires that, beginning in fiscal year 1992, such states must designate additional methods of and entities for providing these functions. Alternative entities could include other state or local government agencies or community-based organizations.

The Committee strongly believes that all states should ensure that their ongoing outreach efforts and intake procedures are effective in providing viable access to their programs, especially for the elderly and working poor. The Committee expects that, to the extent possible, all eligible households in every region of a state will have access to alternative service sites to process applications. However, if the state finds no alternative in some areas, after engaging in an open solicitation process, there is no requirement to create new entities. In addition, local entities now providing such services voluntarily are expected to maintain comparable levels of effort in addition to the new activities which may be contracted to them pursuant to this provision.

The Committee believes that intake, or application processing tasks, generally are best provided through the local agencies which administer LIHEAP crisis and/or low-income weatherization programs. This ensures both that experienced service providers with approved federal and state grant management systems handle income determination and verification tasks. It also ensures that these critical services may be packaged together in order to provide the most effective aid to households. If states are already offering alternative intake sites in some areas, this section does not require them to modify their system of program management.

Moreover, the Committee believes that in order to be effective, outreach efforts need to be varied and targeted to the different populations eligible for LIHEAP benefits. For example, more concerted efforts may have to be taken for some households, such as the elderly and working poor, to assure that those households have an effective way to learn about the program and how to apply for benefits. Available options through which such outreach can and should be performed include other state and local government entities or community-based organizations. States are encouraged to use as many of these local institutions as practicable, as well as public utilities and churches, in their outreach efforts. Public utilities in particular have information as to payment-troubled customers and could be a valuable resource in providing early identification and outreach assistance to these customers.

The Committee expects that a reasonable share of the outreach and intake functions of the regular heating and cooling assistance program will be administered through the alternative agencies. The Committee also expects that the states will consult with low-income individuals and advocates as well as other interested parties in implementing this requirement.

State LIHEAP programs are expected to use LIHEAP administrative funding for any additional LIHEAP activities required by this section, rather than relying on other federal funds in local agencies. The Secretary is expected to require evidence of implementation of this section as part of the assurances provided by the State and to provide guidance on compliance with this section.

This amendment should be administered in a manner which is consistent with the current provision of the LIHEAP statute (at 42 U.S.C. 8624(b)(5)) which requires that (1) "the highest level of assistance will be furnished to those households which have the lowest income and the highest energy costs in relation to income, taking into account family size" and (2) "the state may not differentiate in implementing this provision between households which are categorically eligible and those which are income-eligible". The Committee strongly urges all states to consider better targeting their resources toward these neediest households.

Complaint process

H.R. 4151, as amended, contains a provision designed to respond to concerns regarding the need for a more expeditious and effective response to complaints about state implementation of this program. Section 205 sets a time limit for a written response to such complaints. Section 2605 of the statute requires states to make a number of assurances in their annual applications for LIHEAP funds, and it is assumed that a factual basis exists for each of these assurances. In order to make a finding regarding the specific nature of complaints made under this section, the Secretary shall ascertain that the assurance(s) which is the subject of the complaint is indeed based on fact. Nothing in this section or the Act, however, restricts parties from proceeding directly to obtain a court remedy.

Current law provides that this provision will apply only to complaints about the implementation of the program which are of a serious nature and related to federal law.

Public hearings

Section 205 also adds language intended to make sure effective the participation of the public in the development of a state plan.
The Committee intends that a state provide timely and meaningful opportunity for interested parties to be involved in the development of the state plan. For example, in addition to public hearings, states may want to hold meetings with parties known by the state to have an interest in energy assistance or related issues as the plan is being developed. Such parties may include representatives of community action agencies, legal services, public utilities, church organizations, and senior organizations. The Committee envisions a similar state process for the development of amendments to a state plan.

When the state holds public hearings on these plans, the Committee intends that the notice regarding such hearings clearly identify that the LIHEAP state plan for the following fiscal year (or an amendment thereto) is being considered at such hearing. The hearing notice should also be made available in a manner that provides the public in general and interested parties in particular, ample time to participate in the process.

The legislation adds a similar requirement that the review of state plans be “meaningful and timely.” The Committee intends that the states provide ample time and opportunity for the general public and interested parties to review and comment upon a state’s plan or a substantial revision to the plan.

Weatherization

H.R. 4151, as amended, expands the flexibility states have to provide energy assistance benefits in the form of energy conservation improvements. The Committee believes long-term benefits can accrue to clients and the nation’s energy security from weatherization improvements. These reductions in home energy costs also can be a major supplement to the limited support provided by energy assistance payments.

Under current law, states may use up to 15 percent of their funds for low-cost weatherization or other energy-related home repair for low-income households. Section 206 of the legislation permits the Secretary to grant, under certain conditions, a waiver of that 15 percent limit, allowing a state to use up to 25 percent of funds for such purposes.

The Committee recognizes that LIHEAP resources historically have been far less than the amounts needed, and conservation investments involve higher initial costs than LIHEAP payment benefit levels. The amendment provides that these investments, to the extent they exceed 15 percent of program resources, can only be made if the state maintains at least its previous levels of payment program efforts. In making a determination to grant a waiver to a particular state, the Secretary should not necessarily be guided only by the submissions from the state. For example, submissions by low-income advocates and other interested parties in the state on this issue may also provide relevant information for the Secretary in making his or her determination.

In granting a waiver where the state has shown good cause for not meeting the prior year’s maintenance of service requirement, the Secretary should require the state to document the reasons it intends not to maintain service levels. The Committee believes that a waiver under this provision should be granted only when the state has demonstrated compelling reasons for the utilization of such conservation funding.

Leveraging Incentive Program

The Committee found that the federal government, through the LIHEAP Block Grant, is a reliable large volume purchaser of residential energy supplies. However, most state programs are currently paying the same price for oil or gas as individual households. Innovative approaches in several states have shown that, if the LIHEAP program uses its purchasing power (or "leverage") to acquire the full economic value of its resources, it can acquire substantial additional energy assistance resources and services for the poor from state energy market sources.

Section 208 of the legislation authorizes, beginning in fiscal year 1992, the establishment of an incentive program to match a portion of the resources states and their LIHEAP programs "leverage" from non-federal sources. Such resources are state-appropriated funds, quantifiable payments, discounts, credits, energy conservation improvements or other measurable benefits to eligible households in excess of the energy that could be purchased by the LIHEAP program at commonly available residential rates. The incentive program is subject to a separate appropriation and is meant to augment the LIHEAP allocation to the states.

Such benefits may be the result of state legislation, regulation, or arrangements with energy suppliers, but may not include federal funding or benefits. The Committee believes there are very limited circumstances under which Petroleum Violation Escrow Funds should be considered as leveraged resources. Therefore, if the Secretary chooses to count Petroleum Violation Escrow Funds as leveraged resources, he or she may only count funds that are distributed after October 1, 1990, and that were not previously required to be allocated to low-income households. The Committee intends for the leveraging incentive program to reward states that make voluntary efforts to create a net increase in resources over and above available federal funding. Leveraged resources must be directly integrated with LIHEAP programs and procedures, policies, and eligibility requirements.

The Secretary shall establish regulations for the determination of amounts leveraged by each state and shall determine each qualifying state's share of the incentive funds appropriated under this section. The Committee intends that the shares will be determined by the level of a state's leveraging effort as a percentage of the total leveraging efforts of all states, weighted by the proportional size of the state's LIHEAP allotment.

Matching funds secured by the state from the incentive fund may be used only to increase or maintain benefits to eligible households. Given that funds authorized for LIHEAP fall short of the real need for energy assistance, the Committee hopes the availability of such incentives will encourage all states to undertake leveraging initiatives appropriate to their energy markets and policy requirements.

The Committee expects the Secretary to increase the Department's assistance to states in developing such programs and in making available detailed and operational information about effective initiatives using the training and technical assistance resources available to the Office of Energy Assistance.

The leveraging incentive program has been designed as a separate program activity with a separate authorization provision because the Committee views this initiative as a supplement to full funding for the Block Grant and should not be the basis of a reduction in LIHEAP distributions to the states.

Reporting and data collection

The Committee notes the extremely high quality and usefulness of the annual reports published by the Department. In the future, the Department should include in that report, text and tables showing total home energy expenditures. The Congress has never intended to exclude such essential energy uses as heating of hot water or refrigeration and cooling from the eligible heating costs covered by the program.

The Committee also believes a full report on the characteristics of the LIHEAP eligible population as a whole and of those eligibles not receiving LIHEAP benefits is required to assess the impact of the program. The Department should require all states to provide data on the source of income, the family size and characteristics, housing type, and participation in other programs of their FY 1992 program participants as well as such other energy or demographic information as may be essential to a full profile of the LIHEAP participant in that year. In reporting on this information, the Department is to compare it to information available on all eligible households and the eligible households not receiving assistance.

TITLE III—AMENDMENTS TO THE FOLLOW THROUGH ACT

The reauthorization legislation includes several important changes to the Follow Through program designed to enhance its ability to improve the education of disadvantaged elementary school students. First, a portion of funds are set aside for program improvement and research, including a portion earmarked for development of new Follow Through models. Second, schools are limited in the number of years in which they may receive technical assistance, in order to make room for more schools to benefit from Follow Through. Third, a new dissemination mechanism is included to publicize the Follow Through models. Finally, the legislation ties the program more closely to the Chapter 1 program, with Follow Through providing targeted technical assistance to help needy schools implement model programs which, once successfully adopted, can then be continued using Chapter 1 funds.

The Committee intends that Follow Through realize its statutory mission, of a comprehensive approach to making schooling more effective for low-income children and improving their life chances by building on the gains made in programs such as Head Start. Therefore, the legislation, while retaining its strong curriculum development component, also includes provisions to improve parental involvement, to ensure that low-income children receive the supportive services they need, and to require coordination with local Head Start agencies serving children who will enroll in elementary school.
The Secretary of Education will coordinate with the Secretary of Health and Human Services to enable schools to receive both Follow Through and Head Start Transition Project grants through a single application process, or to enable a grantee receiving one program to avail itself of the special expertise, in curriculum and social services respectively, of the two agencies administering the programs. These complementary programs are administered through different agencies because their differing purposes are best served by utilizing the expertise of the two agencies. Follow Through, with its emphasis on educational curriculum, appropriately should be administered by the Department of Education. The Head Start Transition Project Act, as primarily a social services program, should be administered by the Administration on Children, Youth, and Families in the Department of Health and Human Services. Nonetheless, the programs should be coordinated at the federal level to best serve the needs of disadvantaged children.

TITLE IV—AMENDMENTS TO THE STATE DEPENDENT CARE DEVELOPMENT GRANTS ACT

H.R. 4151, as amended, authorizes the program at $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1991 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 1992 through 1994. It also makes several changes to give states more flexibility in using the grant funds. The legislation allows grant funds currently used only to establish before and after school child care and resource and referral programs to be used for operating costs as well. Many such programs have difficulty finding funds to operate once they are established. In addition, studies have shown that many low-income parents do not have the resources for their children to attend after-school programs. The Committee believes these programs are key links for parents who need child care arrangements and should be able to use their grant funds for ongoing activities and subsidies for parents who cannot afford care for their children. The legislation also strengthens reporting requirements for program activities.

H.R. 4151, as amended, also eliminates the requirement that before and after school services be located only in public or private school facilities or in community centers. This provision recognizes that there may be circumstances in which a local community desires to locate such services in a facility other than a public or private school or community center. However, it is not intended to shift the focus away from the use of these facilities. Public or private schools and community centers often can provide convenient facilities and play areas that keep the cost of services affordable for low-income parents.

TITLE V—AMENDMENTS TO THE COMMUNITY SERVICES BLOCK GRANT ACT

Authorization

The Committee believes that the continuing erosion of CSBG funding places a great burden on communities' capacity to carry out new initiatives, raise non-federal funds, and manage programs effectively. Section 501 provides authorization levels of $451,500,000 in fiscal year 1991, $460,000,000 in fiscal year 1992, $480,000,000 in fiscal year 1993, and $500,000,000 in fiscal year 1994. These levels reflect the minimum needed to sustain the unique functions funded by the block grant.

State allocations

The Committee recognizes the need to expand the range and availability of services in the smallest states where resources fall far short of meeting the needs of low-income persons. Currently under the block grant formula, the twelve smallest states each receive less than one-half of one percent of available block grant funds. The local agencies in these states have increased their coverage areas, have been forced in recent years to cut back on hours of operation as well as the number of outreach staff particularly in rural areas.

Section 503 of the legislation provides for an increase in the minimum allocation to the small states to one-half of one percent, but only when annual appropriations exceed $360,000,000. The legislation provides that this increase in the minimum small state allocation shall not result in a decrease in the level of block grant funds for the larger states. In addition, increases for states in any one fiscal year are limited to 40 percent of their previous year’s allocation. However, local agencies throughout the entire DSBG network are in need of additional resources, and the formula change is intended to be part of a general expansion of resources to the entire network.

Data collection

The Committee notes the continuing improvements in the voluntary collection of CSBG program data in recent years. Section 506 strengthens data collection for the program by requiring that certain basic data (including unduplicated counts of individuals served by the program) be provided by all States and on a more timely basis than in the past.

The Committee also has provided authority to the Secretary to collect additional information after giving due notice to State grantees. The General Accounting Office and members of Congress have brought to the Committee’s attention two problems with CSBG data: (a) the relationship between CSBG activities and other activities managed by the local agencies, and (b) the demographic characteristics of the individuals served. The Committee urges the Secretary to require collection of this information.

Community Food and Nutrition Program

The Committee believes that Community Food and Nutrition Program (CFNP) authorization levels should be increased significantly since hunger—particularly among low-income children—is a serious national problem. There are more than 12 million children living in poverty. One national study estimates that there are 2 to 5 million children hungry at any given point in time and that as many as 8 to 9 million children are hungry or at risk of hunger. CFNP is designed to alleviate hunger in the general population, and specifically among children, through expanded participation in child nutrition programs in unserved and underserved areas.
CFNP also functions as a catalyst to attract other public and private resources in the fight against hunger. In fiscal year 1990, $2.4 million in CFNP funds leveraged more than $6 million from other public and private funds. Section 501(b) of H.R. 4151, as amended, authorizes the program at $10,000,000 in fiscal year 1991, $15,000,000 in fiscal year 1992, $20,000,000 in fiscal year 1993, and $25,000,000 in fiscal year 1994.

The Congress established CFNP as a separately authorized program within the Community Services Block Grant Act (CSBG) so that funds could be utilized by statewide anti-hunger organizations and local agencies to effectively alleviate hunger across the country. Currently, sixty percent of funds appropriated for CFNP must be distributed exclusively to statewide agencies for statewide programs. CSBG provides the mechanism for distribution of this portion of CFNP funds, but CFNP funds to statewide entities are not intended as additional CSBG dollars to be equally divided up among current CSBG grantees within a State. Nor are they to be a substitute for previously granted CSBG funds to a statewide program. Forty percent of CFNP funds are set aside for a national HHS competition for local and statewide groups.

The Committee is concerned that in a limited number of states, CFNP funds that were set aside for "statewide entities" were in fact substituted for other CSBG funds or simply divided up among local agencies. This practice conflicts with the stated purposes of CFNP. The Department is directed to inform States that potential statewide grantees must: demonstrate that proposed activities are statewide in scope; conduct activities which represent a comprehensive and coordinated effort to alleviate hunger within their State; involve a broad range of organizations within the State also committed to alleviating hunger; and, to the extent possible, have a demonstrated track record of successful programs designed to alleviate hunger.

The legislation also clarifies that hunger is a significant national problem and that resources need to be allocated to alleviate hunger on a local, state and national basis. Section 505 sets aside limited funding for nationwide programs to be awarded on a competitive basis. This set-aside only goes into effect if program appropriations exceed $5,000,000 for a fiscal year. In awarding these grants, the Secretary should take into consideration the nutritional needs of Native Americans and migrants and the organizations that serve them. Although the Committee does not specify what types of projects are to be funded, it notes as one possibility work such as that undertaken by the Community Childhood Hunger Identification Project in identifying the breadth and depth of hunger among children.

The Committee recognizes that small or sparsely populated states need minimum CFNP grants to organize effective efforts to meet the nutritional needs of their low-income population. Therefore, this legislation establishes minimum small state allocations so that each State will receive a reasonable level of funding. The minimum state allocation becomes effective only when appropriations equal $7,000,000 and increase as appropriations increase.
The legislation requires the Department to submit an annual report detailing which groups received CFNP funds and the accomplishments supported by these funds.

TITLE VI—AMENDMENTS TO THE CHILD DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATE SCHOLARSHIP ASSISTANCE ACT

Qualified staff, trained in child development and early childhood education, is a key component in a quality program for young children. Such staff, however, are in short supply. The Child Development Associate credential is one way of encouraging staff in early childhood programs to obtain training, providing recognition when they do so. Therefore, the reauthorization doubles the modest authorization level for the scholarship program.

The legislation makes two changes to make the program more responsive to people who need it to obtain their CDA credential. First, it gives states the option of using up to 50 percent of their funds to pay for the training necessary to qualify for the credential. Currently, the funds may be used only to pay for the cost of the actual credentialing process, which is $325. The training leading up to the credential can be expensive, with an average cost of $1,420. In testimony before the Subcommittee on Human Resources of the House Committee on Education and Labor, the Department indicated that those who meet the income guidelines for the scholarship assistance are often so poor that they are unable to pay for the necessary training.

The Committee also is concerned that many potential low-income applicants for scholarship assistance are unable to take advantage of it because their total family income makes them ineligible. Under current law, eligibility is set at 50 percent above the poverty line. However, this low limit on eligibility has severely limited the pool of potential applicants, excluding many people who wish to improve their skills and become better caregivers, but cannot afford to do so. To encourage more people to obtain needed training, the Committee has increased to eligibility level to 250 percent of the poverty line.

TITLE VII—AMENDMENTS RELATING TO DEMONSTRATION PARTNERSHIP AGREEMENTS ADDRESSING THE NEEDS OF THE POOR

H.R. 4151, as amended, includes a new initiative to develop innovative approaches to address the pressing problems and needs of disadvantaged youth. Section 701 of the legislation creates programs to develop such approaches and provide avenues to develop leadership and community involvement opportunities for youths aged 17 to 25 from populations experiencing conditions such as a high poverty rate, high unemployment, low labor force participation, a high incidence of involvement in violence, and a high rate of incarceration.

The populations experiencing these conditions are disproportionately minority. The black and Hispanic poverty rate is twice that of the white poverty rate and has remained so for the past 20 years. For the last twenty years, minority unemployment has continued to be 2 to 3 times greater than that of the white population. Further, while only 22 percent of the white population lack a high school diploma, 36 percent of blacks and 48 percent of Hispanics lack such a degree.

The Committee believes that an investment in programs for disadvantaged persons from these special populations is critical to our country’s future. Moreover, CSBG grantees, especially Community Action Agencies, are familiar with the target population and in some areas have already developed innovative approaches targeted to the needs of disadvantaged youth. Under the programs authorized in this section the Secretary may make grants to provide services to the target populations which may include remedial education, life skills instruction, community service and employment training, placement and follow-up, among others.

Section 702 authorizes the Demonstration Partnership Agreements for an additional four years, increasing the authorization from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 in fiscal year 1991 and providing such sums as may be necessary for subsequent years. This section also authorizes the programs for special populations at $10,000,000 in fiscal year 1991 and such sums in fiscal years 1992 through 1994.

TITLE IX—COORDINATED SERVICES FOR CHILDREN, YOUTH, AND FAMILIES

Title IX of this legislation incorporates a number of proposals intended to improve the integration and coordination of programs serving children, youth, and families. The Committee is concerned that the current system of services is fragmented and disjointed, making it difficult, if not impossible, for children and families who are being served in one system to access needed services from another. This creates a situation in which problems of children and families not only go unmet but undetected and unresolved.

Through the inclusion of these proposals, the Committee hopes to articulate a national commitment to our nation’s children, youth, and families and to encourage greater cooperation at federal, state and local levels. The Committee expects such cooperation to lead to more comprehensive and less duplicative services for families. Some analysts have attributed fragmentation to differing eligibility requirements for the variety of federal and state programs; others have blamed the categorical structure of service delivery, inadequate mechanisms for coordinated planning, or the logistical difficulties faced by families who seek multiple services. The Committee expects the measures contained in this title to improve services directly and to generate greater understanding of the problems—and the solutions—in this area.

Chapters 1 and 2 of Subtitle A and Subtitle C in its entirety were introduced as S. 1911, the Young Americans Act of 1989. Chapter 4 of Subtitle A was introduced as S. 1761, the Family Resource Act. Chapter 1 of Subtitle B was introduced as S. 2054, the Primary Pediatric Outreach and Care Program of 1990. The other portions—Chapter 3 of Subtitle A and Chapter 2 of Subtitle B—were added during Committee action on H.R. 4151.
SUBTITLE A—ESTABLISHMENT OF ADMINISTRATION AND AWARDING OF GRANTS FOR PROGRAMS

The findings of this Subtitle (the Young Americans Act) outline the framework for a cohesive national policy for children, youth and their families.

Chapter 1: Administration of children, youth, and families

Chapter 1 establishes in statute the current Administration of Children, Youth, and Families (ACYF) within the Department of Health and Human Services and defined the role of the ACYF Commissioner. To the maximum extent practicable and consistent with the scope of his or her authority, the Committee expects the Commissioner to coordinate activities related to children, youth and families within the Department of Health and Human Services. In addition, the Committee expects the Commissioner to encourage coordination of such activities with those carried out by other Federal departments and agencies. Except for the Subtitle B health care programs, all of the grant programs in this title are to be administered by the Commissioner.

Chapter 1 also creates a new Federal Council on Children, Youth and Families. The purpose of the 15-member body is to advise the President on matters relating to special needs of young individuals (defined as individual under age 21, including young children). The Council is specifically directed to make recommendations concerning policy changes that can encourage coordination and reduce duplication of services. The Committee expected this Council of experts to examine the question of barriers to service delivery for families and children, especially the extent to which inconsistent requirements in categorical programs impede coordination of services for multi-problem families. From the Council’s review of the status of children, youth and families and the Federal programs that serve them, the Committee expects the Council to recommend ways to ensure that Federal programs are responsive and as comprehensive and coordinated as possible.

Chapter 2: Grants for State and community programs for children, youth, and families

Chapter 2 provides incentives to states to coordinate all programs and systems serving children, youth and families within the state to ensure comprehensive and coordinated public and private service delivery. The Committee expects such activity to allow states to adopt well-planned anticipative programs to ensure that policies and programs affecting children, youth and families will be foresighted rather than reactive.

Under section 31, states are eligible for grants to develop a service coordination plan for the state. The plan is to be developed by an independent state body appointed by the chief executive officer of the State. In order to facilitate coordination among state-level program, the independent body must include cabinet-level representation of all agencies with responsibility for programs affecting young individuals. In addition, the chief executive officer may appoint other experts from among a list of seven categories. The independent body may be an existing entity, as long as the existing entity is composed of the same parties and has the same scope of authority as specified in this bill. For example, an interagency body composed only of two agencies for the limited purpose of coordinating substance abuse prevention programs would not suffice;
but an interagency body composed of all relevant state agencies (as well as other appointees from the categories specified in section 929) with a broad coordination mandate could be utilized to carry out the function of this section.

Plan development must include a needs assessment, the compilation of an inventory of existing services, and identification of service barriers and service gaps. For purposes of the needs assessment, data available to the state with respect to categories designated in section 930 should be compiled and analyzed in a report entitled the “State of the Child”. The plan should contain recommendations for ways in which barriers can be reduced, options to fill gaps in services, and to generally increase collaboration among state agencies and in local service delivery.

Under section 32, states are eligible for grants to provide services identified as necessary through the planning process described above. Funding is available for services which are community-based and coordinated in nature and which address the categories of young individuals’ needs addressed by the Young Americans Act as a whole. Because these funds are made available to fill identiified service gaps, and because the interagency state entity will be involved in developing funding distribution proposals for inclusion in the state plan, the Committee expects these funds to be carefully targeted and not to be used to duplicate services funded by other means.

Chapter 3: Family resource and support program grants

Chapter 3 establishes a new program for competitive grants to states to fund local family resource and support programs. These family resource programs are designed to coordinate local service delivery for families by providing access to a range of services at one location, through both direct service delivery and referral.

The programs are to provide “core services” intended to strengthen families: services to assist parents in parenting, early developmental screening for children, and outreach, community referral and follow up services. Such programs are operating successfully in a number of states. Examples include Family Support Centers throughout Maryland, Family Focus programs in inner-city locations in Illinois, and Avance in San Antonio, Texas. In addition, the Committee is familiar with Parents as Teachers programs and expects that such programs may be appropriate as providers of the parenting skill services (by contract with the community-based organization) or as providers of the family resource and support servces as a whole. The Committee intends funding under this chapter to be available for expansion of existing programs and for the establishment of new programs.

The Committee expects that these programs will be planned and operated at every stage in collaboration with health, social service d and education programs, so that a less categorical and more comprehensive system of services to families will result. In addition, the Committee expects that these programs will ensure strong parental involvement in their design and operation. Although no income eligibility or location is specified for these programs (since their services are of value to a wide range of families), priority in awarding local grants should be given to programs serving low-income communities and new parents.

Chapter 4: National clearinghouse

Chapter 4 promotes the establishment of successful local family resource programs by making available information and technical assistance. This will be done by a national center which will serve as a clearinghouse and will develop appropriate methods for disseminating information (such as staff training opportunities, materials, and state-wide networks of programs). The Committee expects that this function will be carried out by an organization which has expertise in providing assistance to family support and parenting programs in a variety of communities and states throughout the country.

SUBTITLE B—COORDINATED HEALTH CARE FOR CHILDREN

Chapter 1: Primary pediatric outreach and care

Chapter 1 supports coordinated outreach programs to assist homeless and disadvantaged children. It recognizes that many families are too dysfunctional or deprived to provide for their children's most basic needs (health care, immunization, food supplementation). This chapter fosters an important intervention arm to the coordinated services provisions of Title IX by finding and reaching these otherwise isolated children. Support is directed to programs centered at major hospitals or community health centers that provide mobile health and social services. An example of such programs is the New York Children's Health Project, which was described at the October 4, 1989, hearing on homeless children conducted by the Subcommittee on Children, Family, Drugs and Alcoholism.

Chapter 2: Grants for access to health care

Chapter 2 establishes a $10 million Federal grant program to fund demonstration projects to increase the enrollment of eligible pregnant women and children in Medicaid. Grant recipients would be private non-profit organizations and local public agencies with strong community support and demonstrated linkages to other community programs serving low-income women and children.

Projects would be designed to make personal contacts with potentially eligible persons, including coordinated efforts to identify eligible persons, facilitate their Medicaid enrollment, and provide follow-up assistance. In addition, these projects would collect valuable data, for example, regarding barriers to enrollment and the numbers of eligible, but non-enrolled, women and children in need.

SUBTITLE C—WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE ON YOUNG AMERICANS

This subtitle requires the President to call a White House Conference on Young Americans in 1991. The purpose of this conference is to examine existing programs for young individuals and to develop recommendations for national policy in this area. The Committee expects the conference to bring together experts and representatives of all levels of government, of the public, and of children, youth and their families. The Committee expects the conference to be structured in such a way that proposals for addressing fragmentation of services and for developing a more coherent national youth policy will emerge. Within 180 days after the conference, the Secretary is required to prepare a report with the findings and policy recommendations of the conference for forwarding to the President.

The costs of this bill fall in function 500.

Basis of estimate: H.R. 4151 reauthorizes the Head Start Act (Title I) and the Community Services Block Grant Act (Title V) for fiscal years 1991-1994 at the specific amounts shown above. The bill authorizes $50 million a year in 1991-1994 for the Comprehensive Child Development Centers Act (Title VIII). Because these centers currently are authorized through 1993 at $25 million a year, only the increase is shown in the table. The bill also reauthorizes the Follow Through Act (Title III), the State Dependent Care Development Grants Act (Title IV), the Child Development Associate Scholarship Assistance Act (Title VI), and the Demonstration Partnership Agreements (Title VII) for specific 1991 amounts and such sums as may be necessary for 1992-1994. The estimated authorizations for these four programs for 1992-1994 are the 1991 levels adjusted for projected annual inflation. A discussion of the estimates for other programs within Title I and for Titles II and IX follows.

Title I—Section 115 requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to conduct a longitudinal study of the effects of participation in Head Start Programs. Several provisions pertaining to the design of the study are mandated with the bill: the study shall cover a minimum of 20 years, an advisory council shall be established, control groups must be used, and the study shall be based on a sample representing the national population and subpopulations.

For this estimate, CBO made several assumptions regarding the design of the study. Since H.R. 4151 does not specify a sample size, CBO has assumed that 4,000 participants in the Head Start program will be necessary to constitute a credible comparison. Because of potential problems of tracking children over time, CBO assumes that only two-thirds of the initial sample could be located at the end of the study. Therefore, the estimate assumes an initial sample of 6,000 Head Start participants would be used to produce an approximate final sample of 4,000.
CBO assumes an annual evaluation of the sample. Based on cost estimates of comparative studies and on estimates suggested by several consulting firms, the estimated authorization is $2 million for 1991. The authorizations for 1992-1995 are the 1991 amount adjusted for projected annual inflation.

Title II—H.R. 4151 also amends the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Act of 1981. Section 202 amends the current law to make funds available for obligation by the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) on a program year basis beginning in fiscal year 1992. Amounts appropriated to LIHEAP would be made available for obligation on the basis of a program year beginning on July 1 of the fiscal year for which the appropriation is made. Amounts appropriated in 1992 would be available to fund activities for the year beginning October 1, 1991 (fiscal year 1992) and for the first 9 months of fiscal year 1993. Section 203 reauthorizes funding of LIHEAP in the amounts of $2,150 million in 1991, $2,230 million in 1992, and such sums as are necessary in fiscal years 1992, 1993, and 1994. The 1992 estimate includes both the specific authorized amount of $2,230 million and $2,180 million for 9 additional months of funding. The figure for 9 months reflects authorizations for a comparable period in the previous 12 months, adjusted for projected inflation. The 1993 and 1994 figures were computed in a similar fashion, except that the amounts fund the program for a full 12 months.

This estimate assumes full appropriation of the authorized amounts. The estimated authorization for LIHEAP appropriations assumes full forward funding in fiscal year 1992. Outlay estimates are based on historical spending patterns for this program, adjusted to reflect new program years.

Section 2607.A would establish an incentive grant program for states to help low-income households meet energy needs. This section authorizes the appropriation of $25 million in 1992 and $50 million in each of the succeeding two years.

Title IX—This title of the bill establishes several new programs to provide for the provision and coordination of services for children, youth, and families.

Chapter 1 authorizes $1 million in 1991 to establish an Administration on Children, Youth, and Families. This program would be funded one year in advance. Therefore, outlays related to the 1991 authorization would not begin until fiscal year 1992. The estimated authorizations for 1992-1994 are the 1991 level adjusted for projected annual inflation. Also, this chapter authorizes $200,000 in each of the years 1991-1994 for the salaries of the staff and council, as well as funds to prepare an annual report.

The 1991 authorization level for Grants for State & Community Programs, instituted under Chapter 2, assumes the minimum allotment to each state of $300,000 and the minimum allotment of $75,000 to each eligible territory as stated in the bill. The 1992-1994 estimated authorization levels are the 1991 level adjusted for annual inflation. Also, this chapter authorizes $200,000 in each of the years 1991-1994 for the salaries of the staff and council, as well as funds to prepare an annual report.

The 1991 authorization level for Grants for State & Community Programs, instituted under Chapter 2, assumes the minimum allotment to each state of $300,000 and the minimum allotment of $75,000 to each eligible territory as stated in the bill. The 1992-1994 estimated authorization levels are the 1991 level adjusted for annual inflation.

Chapter 3 is authorized $60 million for 1991 and such sums as necessary for the years 1992-1994. The amount for each of the years 1992-1994 is the 1991 authorization adjusted for projected inflation.
Also, section 60 authorizes $2.3 million for 1991 to establish a national center for the collection and provision of programmatic information and technical assistance. Finally, $700,000 is authorized in 1990 and such sums as necessary for 1991-1994 to conduct evaluations of the programs carried out under Chapter 3. Because this is the only 1990 authorization in the bill, it is not displayed in the table.

Subtitle B would authorize the Secretary of Health and Human Services (HHS) to make grants or enter into contracts with non-profit organizations to provide primary pediatric care to economically disadvantaged children. The bill provides $10 million in 1991 and such sums as may be necessary thereafter for this provision. CBO estimated the authorization levels for fiscal years 1992 to 1995 by increasing the 1991 authorization by projected inflation.

This subtitle also would authorize the Director of the Bureau of Maternal and Child Health and Resources Development to make grants for demonstration projects to assist pregnant women and children in establishing eligibility for Medicaid assistance. The Secretary of HHS would have to conduct a study of the impacts of these demonstration projects and report the results to Congress by the end of fiscal year 1993. Authorization levels for these provisions were stated in the bill.

Subtitle C authorizes the President to call a White House Conference on Young Americans in 1991. CBO assumes the expenses for this conference to be similar to a conference held in 1988. Therefore, the estimated authorization level for 1991 is the total cost of the 1988 conference adjusted for inflation.

Outlay Estimates.—Estimated outlays for all titles assume full appropriation of authorized amounts and reflect the current spending patterns of the similar programs.

6. Estimated cost to state and local government: Head Start Demonstration Grants, Follow Through Grants, Demonstration Partnership Agreements, and Family Support and Resource Programs would require a state to file an application for consideration to receive federal funds. If federal funds were to be given to any state, these funds would cover only 80 percent of the total program cost. The remaining 20 percent would have to be provided by state and local governments or private entities.

Section 2607.A, the incentive program in the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Act for leveraging non-federal resources, might result in additional costs for state governments. The magnitude of these costs is uncertain.

Chapter 2 (Grants for State and Community Programs for Children, Youth, and Families) requires each state to submit a state plan. The state or local public sources must provide a minimum of 25 percent of the cost of the state plan. Federal funds would be provided for the remaining cost.

7. Estimate comparison: None.

8. Previous CBO estimate: On May 7, 1990 CBO prepared an estimate for H.R. 4151 as ordered reported by the House Committee on Education and Labor. This bill differs in a number of ways from H.R. 4151, as ordered reported by the House Committee on Education and Labor.

VI. REGULATORY IMPACT STATEMENT

Pursuant to Section 602 of Senate Resolution 4 concerning the regulatory impact of proposed legislation, the Committee has determined that there will be a minimal increase in regulatory burden or paperwork imposed by the bill.

VII. SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

Title I—Head Start

SUBTITLE A—AMENDMENTS TO THE HEAD START ACT

Section 101 provides the short title of the title, “The Head Start Expansion and Quality Improvement Act”.

Section 102 amends section 636(b) of the Act to include non-English language background children in the administrative arrangements used by HHS for special groups.

Section 103 amends section 639 of the Act to authorize appropriations for an additional four years: $2.386 billion in fiscal year 1991; $4.273 billion in fiscal year 1992; $5.924 billion for fiscal year 1993; and $7.660 billion for fiscal year 1994.

[(1) (A) the Secretary makes a finding that the agency involved fails to meet program and fiscal requirement established by the Secretary; and

(B) except that if there is no such agency because of any change in the assistance furnished to programs for economically disadvantaged persons, then the Secretary shall give priority in the designation of Head Start agencies to any successor agency which is operated in substantially the same manner as the predecessor agency which did receive funds in the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made.

The provisions of clause (2) shall apply only to agencies actually operating Head Start programs.]

(B) except that, if there is no agency of the type referred to in subparagraph (A) because of any change in the assistance furnished to programs for economically disadvantaged persons, the Secretary shall give priority in the designation of Head Start agencies to any successor agency that is operating a Head Start program in substantially the same manner as the predecessor agency that did receive funds in the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made.

(c) Each Head Start program operated in a community may provide more than one year of Head Start services to children from age 3 to the age of compulsory school attendance in the State in which the Head Start program is located. FOLLOW THROUGH ACT

SHORT TITLE

Sec. 661. This subchapter may be cited as the ＂Follow Through Act．"  P A R T I — D I R E C T S E R V I C E S

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE FOR FOLLOW THROUGH PROGRAMS

Sec. 662. (a) The Secretary of Education (hereinafter in this subchapter referred to as ＂Secretary＂) is authorized to provide financial assistance in the form of grants to local educational agencies, combinations of such agencies, and, as provided in subsection (b), any other public or appropriate nonprofit private agencies, organizations, and institutions for the purpose of carrying out Follow Through programs focused primarily on children from low-income families in kindergarten and primary grades, including such children enrolled in private nonprofit elementary schools, who were previously enrolled in Head Start or similar quality preschool programs. Other children in kindergarten and primary grades, including such other children enrolled in private nonprofit elementary schools, who were previously enrolled in preschool programs of a compensatory nature which received Federal financial assistance may participate in such Follow Through programs. For the purpose of making grants under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to any local educational agency that requests the grant for purposes of carrying out a Follow Through program in a school that—
(1) is designated for a schoolwide project under section 1015(a) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965; and
(2) has a high concentration of children described in the first sentence of this subsection.

(c) Programs to be assisted under this section shall provide such approaches for which financial assistance is provided under section 664A and shall provide, directly or through referral, or through the program established under subchapter B or under the Head Start Transition Project Act, comprehensive educational, health, nutritional, social, and other services as will aid in the continued development of children described in subsection (a) to their full potential. Such programs shall provide for the direct participation of the parents of such children in the development, conduct, and overall direction of the program at the local level. If the Secretary determines that participation in the program of children who are not from low-income families will serve to carry out the purposes of this section, the Secretary may provide for the inclusion of such children from non-low-income families, but only to the extent that their participation will not dilute the effectiveness of the services designed for children described in subsection (a).

(d) The Secretary shall not refuse to provide financial assistance under subsection (a) to an applicant solely because such applicant proposes to carry out a Follow Through program during a period in which school is not in regular session, at more than one site, or both.

(e) In making grants under subsection (a), the Secretary shall provide sufficient funds to enable programs to meet the requirements of subsection (c).

(f) Notwithstanding subsection (c), any local educational agency that receives a grant under subsection (a) for purposes of carrying out a Follow Through program in an elementary school that—
(1) receives funds under part A of chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965; and
(2) is designated for a schoolwide project under section 1015(a) of such Act;
may use such grant to serve all children attending such school in kindergarten through grade 3.

Sec. 663. (a) There are authorized to be appropriated for carrying out the purposes of this subchapter $7,500,000 for fiscal year 1987, $7,800,000 for fiscal year 1988, $8,112,000 for fiscal year 1989, and $8,436,000 for fiscal year 1990.

(b) Financial assistance extended under this subchapter for a Follow Through program shall not exceed 80 percent of the approved costs of the assisted program or activities, except that the Secretary may approve assistance in excess of such percentage if the Secretary determines, in accordance with regulations establishing objective criteria, that such action is required in furtherance of the purposes of this subchapter. Non-Federal contributions may be in cash or in kind, fairly evaluated, including plant, equipment, or services. The Secretary shall not require non-Federal contributions in excess of 20 percent of the approved costs of programs or activities assisted under this subchapter.

(b) No project shall be approved for assistance under this subchapter unless the Secretary is satisfied that the services to be provided under such project will be in addition to, and not in substitution for, services previously provided without Federal assistance. The requirement imposed by the preceding sentence shall be subject to such regulations as the Secretary may adopt.

SEC. 663. CONSIDERATION OF APPLICATIONS.

(a) In General.—A grant under this part shall be made only to an applicant that submits an application to the Secretary that contains such information, including that required under subsection (b), as may be required by rule by the Secretary.

(b) Contents of Application.—Each application submitted under this section shall—

1. provide that the program for which assistance is requested will be administered by or under the supervision of the applicant;

8. provide for the direct participation of parents, as provided for in section 662(c), and include a certification that such application has been approved by a committee (established in accordance with rules issued by the Secretary) that represents parents of children who participate, and parents of children who are likely to participate, in such program;
(9) describe the manner in which the applicant proposes to coordinate services provided under this part with services provided under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, the Bilingual Education Act, and the Education of the Handicapped Act;

(11) describe the expected or, if possible, actual impact of such program on the regular school program of the applicant; and
(12) contain—

SEC. 664B. RESOURCE AND EXPANSION.

Such comparison shall be made to determine whether the comprehensive services provided to the children who receive services under a Follow Through grant through the model Follow Through approach had a positive effect on their educational progress and overall developmental progress. To the extent practicable, such comparison shall be made on the basis of results of evaluations conducted under such chapter and evaluations conducted under this subchapter, and shall take into account the amount of funds provided to the project.

Sect. 2607A. INCENTIVE PROGRAM FOR LEVERAGING NON-FEDERAL RESOURCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Beginning in fiscal year 1992, the Secretary may allocate amounts appropriated under section 2602(d) to provide supplementary funds to States that have acquired non-Federal leveraged resources for the program established under this title.

(b) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, the term “leveraged resources” means the benefits made available to the low-income home energy assistance program of the State, and to Federally-qualified low-income households, that—

(1) represent a net addition to the total energy resources available to State and Federally-qualified households in excess of the amount of such resources that could be acquired by such households through the purchase of energy at commonly available household rates; and

(2) result from the acquisition by the State program of quantifiable benefits that—

(A) are obtained from energy vendors through negotiation, regulation or competitive bid; or

(B) are appropriated for distribution through the program by the State.

(c) DISTRIBUTION.—

(1) FORMULA.—Distribution of amounts made available under this section shall be based on a formula developed by the Secretary that is designed to take into account the success in leveraging existing appropriations in the preceding fiscal year as measured under section 2607(b)(2). Such formula shall take into account the size of the allocation of the State under this title and the ratio of leveraged resources to such allocation.

(2) BY STATE.—A State may expend funds allocated under this title as are necessary, not to exceed .0008 percent of such allocation or $35,000 each fiscal year, whichever is greater, to identify, develop, and demonstrate leveraging programs. Funds allocated under this section shall only be used for increasing or maintaining benefits to households.

(d) QUANTIFICATION.—Each State shall quantify the dollar value of leveraged resources received or acquired by such State under this section by using the best available data to calculate such leveraged resources less the sum of any costs incurred by the State to leverage such resources and any cost imposed on the Federally-eligible low-income households in such State.

(e) REPORT.—Not later than July 31, of each year, each State shall prepare and submit, to the Secretary, a report that quantifies the leveraged resources of such State in order to qualify for assistance under this section for the following fiscal year.

(f) STATE SHARE.—The Secretary shall determine the share of each State of the amounts made available under this section based on the formula described in subsection (c) and the State reports. The Secretary shall promulgate regulations for the calculation of the leveraged resources of the State and for the submission of supporting documentation. The Secretary may request any documentation that the Secretary determines necessary for the verification of the application of the State for assistance under this section.
