Class Activities; Elementary Secondary Education; English (Second Language); Language Skills; Learning Modules; Limited English Speaking; Skill Development; Social Studies; United States History; Vocabulary Development

A set of 20 learning modules in early U.S. history for students of English as a Second Language are presented. They are intended for use in alternative classes for limited-English-speakers or in mainstream U.S. history classes as individualized assignments, to give students a basic foundation in U.S. history, introduce them to some of the reading and thinking skills needed to understand social studies materials, and reinforce the English instruction the students are getting elsewhere. Units cover pre-Columbian history, discovery and exploration, the colonial period, and the American Revolution. The content and language have been simplified. Each unit contains a vocabulary section, a short reading, history activities, language activities, and a key to the activities. The vocabulary section includes a word list, definitions, and sentences illustrating word-usage and previewing the reading. Maps and illustrations are provided. (MS2)

INTRODUCTION

Purpose of the Packets

These packets were written to be used with ESOL students in alternative ESOL classes or in mainstream U. S. history classes as individualized assignments. They are intended to give the student a basic foundation of U. S. history, to introduce him/her to some of the reading and thinking skills needed to understand social studies materials, and to reinforce the English instruction the student is getting in his/her English class.

Description of the Packets

The twenty packets that have been developed cover American history from pre-Columbian Indians through the American Revolution. The content has been simplified, but hopefully, distortion of the facts has been avoided. Each packet contains a vocabulary section, a short reading, history activities, language activities, and a key to activities.

The vocabulary section includes a list of words likely to cause problems for ESOL students, a definition of those words, and sentences showing how the words are used. The sentences are designed to preview the reading as much as possible.

The reading in each packet attempts to present the topic clearly and directly. The vocabulary is simplified and complex grammatical structures have been avoided. The approximate grade level of the readings is grade three according to the Fry Readability Formula. The reading should not be difficult for the average intermediate or advanced ESOL student, although a low intermediate student may have some difficulty with the English. A beginning ESOL student, however, will not be able to understand the material without additional help.
The history activities are planned to check comprehension of the reading material and teach some basic skills related to reading and understanding social studies materials. The language activities are intended to reinforce the language instruction the ESOL student is receiving in his/her ESOL class.

Use of the Packets

Although these packets were designed mainly for use in U. S. history classes for ESOL students, it is hoped that mainstream teachers will also find the packets useful. The packets may be used, in mainstream U. S. history classes, with ESOL students or students with reading problems. In some cases, a teacher may want a student to work on a packet with a tutor or student resource teacher. In other cases, a student may be able to participate in a regular class but work on a packet as an individualized homework assignment. A student who uses a packet should be tested from the material in the packet.

The Key to Activities at the end of each packet may at times be used by a student when the teacher feels that he will benefit by checking his own work.

THE FIRST AMERICANS
The First Americans

A. New Words to Learn and Use

bridge  tribe  Indians  farmers hunters  to settle  nomads

1. bridge - something that connects two pieces of land
   To go from Virginia to Washington, D.C., you must drive your car on a bridge over the Potomac River.

2. tribe - a small group of people that live together and speak the same language.
   The name of a tribe of Indians that lived in Florida was the Seminole tribe.

3. Indians - the name we give to the first people who lived in North and South America

4. farmers - people who live and work on a farm
   Many Indians were farmers.

5. hunters - people who kill animals for food and other uses.
   The hunters killed buffalo for food and clothes.

6. to settle in a place - to be the first people to live in a place
   The Mohawks settled in the eastern part of North America.

7. nomads - people who move from one place to another
   The Seminole Indians were nomads.
The First Americans

B. Mini-Reading

The first people who lived in America came from Asia. Thirty thousand years ago there was an ice and land bridge between Asia and America. Many believe that people from Asia walked across this bridge and came into North America and settled in different parts of North and South America. Look at the map below.
The First Americans

B. Mini-Reading (continued)

These people who came from Asia are called "Indians." The Indians lived in groups and spoke different languages. These groups are called "tribes." The names of some of the Indian tribes in North America are the Dakota, Seminole, Comanche and Cheyenne. Look at the map below and you will see the names of some of the other Indian tribes in North America and where they lived.
The Indians that lived in places that were good for farming became farmers. Some Indians lived in places that were not good for farms. They became hunters and followed the animals for their food. These Indians were "nomads" who moved their homes when the animals moved to find water. Some Indians lived near water and they became fishermen.
C. History Activity C1

Mini-Reading Questions

Answer the following questions with complete sentences. The questions are about information from the mini-reading "The First Americans".

1. Where did the first people who lived in America come from?

2. How did they get to North America?

3. What do we call the first people to come to America?

4. Some of the Indians were farmers. What were others?
Look at the map above and label the following sentences: true or false.

1. ____ The ice and land bridge touched Asia and South America.
2. ____ The ice and land bridge is not there today.
3. ____ The map above shows how the Indians crossed the Pacific Ocean by boat.
4. ____ According to the map some Indians traveled into South America.
5. ____ The map does not show the continent of Europe.
The First Americans

C. History Activity #3

Cardinal Directions on a Map

People use cardinal directions to show direction on a map. On the map below, the cardinal directions are on the right side of the map. "N" means north, "E" means east, "S" means south and "W" means west.

Each direction, north, south, east and west, has an adjective form that can be used in English to show location. For example, if something is in the north, it is in the northern part. See the map above.
The First Americans

C. History Activity #3 (continued)

Use the map below to fill in the blanks with the adjective form of the direction words (northern, eastern, southern, and western). The first one is done for you.

1. The Dakota lived in the northern part of what is now the United States.
2. The Seminoles lived in the __________ part of what is now the United States.
3. The Powhatan lived in the __________ part of what is now the United States.
4. The Chinook lived in the __________ part of what is now the United States.
5. The Mono lived in the __________ part of what is now the United States.
6. The Iroquois lived in the __________ part of what is now the United States.

D. Language Activity #2

Using Adjectives

Adjectives are words that go in front of nouns or after linking verbs. The most common linking verb is be (am, is, are, was, were, etc.) Other linking verbs are "seem," "taste," "feel," and "become."

Example of an adjective in front of a noun:

The Indians lived in good places for farms.

Example of an adjective after a linking verb:

Some Indian tribes were large.

Fill in the blanks with any appropriate adjective you can think of.

1. The Indians spoke _______________ languages.
2. The _______________ people who lived in America came from Asia.
3. The Indians lived in _______________ tribes.
4. Crossing the ice and land bridge was a _______________ trip.
5. Indians hunted for many _______________ animals.

Columbus Discovers America

B. Mini-Reading (continued)

The people who lived in Europe liked to buy things from Asia. Traders from Europe traveled across Europe and Asia on land and sea. They wanted to bring things from India and China and sell these things in Europe. But the trip was very long and dangerous. The map below shows some of the trade routes to Asia.

Trade Routes to Asia in 1490.
Christopher Columbus was a sailor from Italy. He thought about India and China. He believed the earth was round and he believed a ship could sail from Europe to Asia. Asia was east of Europe. But Columbus thought that he could go there by sailing west.

Christopher Columbus tried very hard to get ships to sail west to Asia. In 1492, the Queen of Spain, Queen Isabella, gave Columbus three ships, the "Nina," "Pinta," and "Santa Maria." In August of 1492, Columbus and his men started on their voyage. They sailed for many weeks but did not see land. The men became afraid because they did not know where they were going. Finally, in October, 1492, they saw land. Columbus and his men believed they were in India. Columbus called the first people he met "Indians." But Columbus was not in India. He was in the place we now call America.

Making Yes/No Questions in the Simple Past

One type of question that people ask in English is the question that can be answered with yes or no. For most verbs, to make questions in the simple past, you must use the word "did" and change the verb to the simple form.

Example:

Statement: Columbus asked the queen of Spain for help.

Question: Did Columbus ask the queen of Spain for help?

The verb be is different. To make yes/no questions you must put the verb in front of the subject. Do not use "did."

Example:

Statement: Columbus was from Italy.

Question: Was Columbus from Italy?

Write the questions that the teacher would ask to get the following answers from the students. The first two are done for you.

1. Teacher: Did Columbus know about Asia? ____________________________
   Student: Yes, Columbus knew about Asia.

2. Teacher: Was Isabella the queen of Spain? ____________________________
   Student: Yes, Isabella was the queen of Spain.

3. Teacher: ____________________________
   Student: Yes, the people who lived in Europe liked to buy things from Asia.

4. Teacher: ____________________________

Pronouns

Pronouns are words used in place of nouns. We use pronouns so that we don't have to repeat nouns.

Some pronouns are used as subjects in a sentence.

Example: "I," "you," "he," "she," "it," "we," and "them"

Some pronouns are used as objects of verbs or prepositions.

Example: "me," "you," "him," "her," "it," "us," and "them"

Rewrite the following paragraph changing the underlined words to the correct pronouns. Write this activity on a separate piece of paper.

In 1492, the Queen of Spain was Isabel de Castilla. Isabel de Castilla was one of the best queens of Spain. Christopher Columbus went to Spain to see Isabel de Castilla. Christopher Columbus asked the queen to give him some money for a trip to find a sea route to India. Isabel de Castilla decided to help Columbus and gave Columbus three ships. The ships were the "Nina," the "Pinta," and the "Santa Maria." In August of 1492, Columbus and his men started on their voyage. Columbus and his men saw land in October of 1492.

B. Mini-Reading

After Columbus discovered America, other men from Europe came to explore this new land. They wanted to see what was in this land. Some wanted to find things that they could bring back to Europe and sell. Some wanted to find gold.

Men from Spain, France, and England came to explore North America. In 1497, a man named John Cabot, who represented England, explored the eastern coast of North America. In 1513, Ponce de Leon, from Spain, discovered and explored Florida. Coronado explored the western part of what is now the United States in 1540. Four years later, another man, Cartier from France, discovered and explored the St. Lawrence River in the northern part of North America.

Main Idea of a Paragraph

A paragraph is a group of sentences about one main idea. The main idea of a paragraph is the most important thing that the writer of a paragraph wants the reader to think about. Often the writer tells the main idea of a paragraph in the first sentence.

Choosing the Main Idea

1. Put an X next to the main idea of the first paragraph of the mini-reading "Europeans Explore North America."

_______ Columbus discovered America.
_______ Men from different countries in Europe came to explore North America after Columbus.
_______ Some explorers wanted to find gold and some wanted to bring things to Europe to sell.

2. Put an X next to the main idea of the second paragraph of the mini-reading.

_______ Spain, France, and England sent men to explore North America.
_______ John Cabot represented England.
_______ Ponce de Leon discovered Florida.

3. Put an X next to the main idea of the third paragraph of the mini-reading.

_______ France and England claimed land on the eastern coast of North America.
_______ Spain claimed some of the land in North America.
_______ Spain, France, and England claimed land in North America.
Europeans Explore North America

B. Mini-Reading (continued)

After the explorers came, Spain, France, and England claimed land in North America for themselves. Spain claimed the southern parts. France claimed the northern and central parts. England claimed the eastern part.

Scale

0 1000 2000 miles

These maps show a smaller and larger part of the United States. We say that these maps have a different "scale." The line below each map tells us the scale of the map. In Map A, each inch is 500 miles. In Map B, each inch is 1,000 miles. Every map has a scale which we can use to measure distances from one place on the map to another place.
How to Use a Scale to Measure Distances on a Map

Step 1: Place the border of the paper so that it touches each of the 2 points you are to measure.

Step 2: Mark the paper at the place it touches each of the 2 points you are measuring.

Step 3: Place the marked edge of the paper against the scale in the key and read the distance. Measurements always read from left to right.

Step 4: Many times the distance you are measuring is longer than the scale in the key. When this happens, mark your straight edge as far as the scale shows and move your paper over so that the mark you just made is touching the zero on the scale. Re-mark your scale for as many times as necessary to get to the distance you are measuring.

Step 5: Add up the scale marks on your straight edge to get the total distance you are measuring.

Writing Information Questions in the Simple Past

Questions that begin with the words "who," "what," "when," "where," "how," and "why" are called information questions. Each example below shows an information question about a word or group of words that comes after the verb in the statement. The word order for information questions like these is:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Question Word</th>
<th>&quot;Did&quot;</th>
<th>Subject</th>
<th>Simple Form of the Verb</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>What</td>
<td>did</td>
<td>the explorers</td>
<td>want to find?</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Examples:

Statement: The explorers wanted to find gold.
Question: What did the explorers want to find?

Statement: The Indians crossed the ice and land bridge on foot.
Question: How did the Indians cross the ice and land bridge?

Statement: The explorers came from Europe.
Question: Where did the explorers come from?

Statement: Columbus sailed west to get to China.
Question: Why did Columbus sail west?

When we use "who" or "what" to ask a question about the subject of a sentence, we do not use the word "did."

Example:

Statement: Explorers from Europe explored North America.
Question: Who explored North America?
Now it is your turn. Write questions about the circled word or words in the sentences below. Each of the questions should begin with "who," "what," "where," or "how." The first one is done for you.

1. Columbus wanted to find a short route to India.
   What did Columbus want to find?

2. Some explorers wanted to find gold.

People from Europe Come to Live in America

B. Mini-Reading

When the different explorers from Europe returned to their countries, they told their rulers about the new lands in America. The leaders of Spain, France, and England decided that they wanted people to live in America and find things, especially gold, that would make their countries wealthy. The people who came to live in America were called colonists or settlers. The places where they lived were called colonies or settlements.

The Spanish were the first settlers in North America. They started the first settlement, St Augustine in Florida, in the year 1565. In 1609 they started Santa Fe in what is now New Mexico. The Spanish wanted to find gold and teach the Indians the Christian religion.

The first French colony, Quebec, was started in what is now Canada in the year 1635. After the French explored the Mississippi River, they started another settlement at New Orleans. The French started many small

In the spring of 1607, three ships from England came to the coast of a large piece of land in North America that the English called Virginia. There were about 100 men on these ships.

These men came to Virginia and found a place to build a settlement. The name they gave to their settlement was Jamestown, named after King James, the King of England.

At first, the settlement of Jamestown did not do well. Many of the settlers wanted to find gold and did not want to start farms. Because of this, the settlers didn't have a lot of food. Bad water and houses with little protection from the weather made many people sick. Sometimes the Indians attacked the settlers because they were unhappy about losing their land.

A soldier named Captain John Smith became the leader of Jamestown and helped the settlement a lot. He made the people work hard. They planted crops and made the houses stronger to protect the settlers from the weather and the Indians. Jamestown did not die. It continued and grew, and more people came to the colony of Virginia to start new settlements. Virginia became the first permanent English colony in North America.

Pie Graphs

A graph is a drawing with words. It explains facts visually. This means that people can "see" the facts, or at least understand them more easily. Here is a kind of graph that is called a pie graph.

An Estimate of American Indian Population - 1400's

In a pie graph, the circle represents the total number of something. The graph above represents the total number of Indians living in North and South America in the 1400's. The parts of the circle tell something about the total Indian population. In this graph the different parts of a circle tell us that 45% of the Indians lived in what is now Mexico, 24% in what is now Peru, 16% in the rest of South America, 9% in Central America and 6% in what is now the United States.

B. Mini-Reading

The Second English Colony

In 1620 another group of colonists, called Pilgrims, wanted to start a settlement in Virginia. They left England because they could not pray to God the way they wanted. However, their ship, the "Mayflower," did not get to Virginia. A storm pushed them north of Virginia to a place called Plymouth, in what is now Massachusetts.

Before the new colonists left their ship, they signed an agreement called the Mayflower Compact. In the Mayflower Compact, the Pilgrims and others on the "Mayflower" agreed that they would make laws that helped their settlement and that everyone would obey these laws. The Mayflower Compact was important because it was a beginning of self-government in America.

It was winter when the Pilgrims came to America and this made it difficult to start their settlement. However, the nearby Indians helped them and, because of their help, the settlement survived. At the end of the first year the colonists invited the Indians to a feast to give thanks for the good things that had happened to them. That was the first Thanksgiving Day, which is a holiday that people in the United States still celebrate.

Why Colonists Came to America

Why did people leave England and go to an unsettled and unknown place like America? There were many reasons. The Pilgrims and many others wanted freedom of religion. They wanted to pray to God in their own way. In England people didn't have freedom of religion. Another reason for coming to America was people were poor and could not find jobs in England. They wanted to try to start a new life in America. Another reason was some people just wanted adventure. They wanted to do something different and exciting.

Then he sailed across the ocean and asked Queen Isabella for three ships.

Paragraph 2
First Columbus got three ships from Queen Isabella. Then he sailed across the Atlantic Ocean and discovered a "New World."

Paragraph 1 is not in correct chronological order because it is not in the order that it happened in time. Paragraph 2 is in the correct chronological order.

Read "The Pilgrims Come to America" and put the following sentences in correct chronological order. Number them 1, 2, 3, 4, or 5 according to what happened first, second, and so on.

1. It was winter when the Pilgrims started to build their settlement.
2. Before they left their ship, they signed an agreement.
3. The Pilgrims left England in September, 1620.
4. In the spring, the Indians helped them and taught them new things about living in their new land.
5. At the end of the first year, the colonists invited the Indians to a feast.

B. Mini-Reading

The New England Colonies

After the Plymouth Colony was founded, a group of people called Puritans started a new colony called the Massachusetts Bay Colony. Later, Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay joined together as one colony called Massachusetts. The leaders of the Puritan Church were the leaders of the government of Massachusetts. No other religion was permitted in Massachusetts except the Puritan religion. This made many people leave the colony.

Roger Williams, a pastor of a church in Salem, was one of the people who left Massachusetts. In 1634, he had a disagreement with the leaders of the Puritan Church. He left Massachusetts and started the colony of Rhode Island where there was freedom of religion for everyone. Roger Williams also made a rule that said that the leaders of the church could not be the leaders of the government. This is called "separation of church and state" and later became an important idea in the making of the United States government.

Other groups of people left Massachusetts and started the colonies Connecticut and New Hampshire. The colonies of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New Hampshire were called the New England Colonies.

The Middle Colonies

The Middle Colonies were between the New England Colonies and the Southern Colonies. New York was one of the Middle Colonies. It was founded by the Dutch and was first called New Netherlands. When the English took it from the Dutch in 1664, they changed the name to New York.

Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania were the other Middle Colonies. Delaware and New Jersey were part of New Netherlands. These colonies were governed by many different countries and people before they became separate English colonies.

B. Mini-Reading (continued)

Pennsylvania was founded by William Penn who was a leader of a group of people called Quakers. He wanted Pennsylvania to be a place for people of all religions to live in peace.

The Southern Colonies

South of the Middle Colonies were the Southern Colonies. They were Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia.

In 1632 the King of England gave a piece of land to George Calvert, the Lord Baltimore. Calvert wanted to start a colony for English Catholics who did not have freedom of religion in England. He called this colony Maryland.

North and South Carolina were started as a business by eight Englishmen. They wanted to make money by growing and selling crops to England.

Georgia was the last of thirteen English colonies. It was started in 1733 to give poor people an opportunity to start a new life.

Reading a Bar Graph

A bar graph is another kind of a graph that helps explain facts.

Look at the bar graph below.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Years</th>

</table>

The graph tells us about the number of colonies started in the eastern part of North America. It says that from 1600 - 1610 only one colony was started. From 1611 to 1620 only one colony was started. From 1621 to 1630 three colonies were started. From 1631 to 1640 five colonies were started.

On the next page, you have an opportunity to read and test your understanding of another bar graph.

Active and Passive Sentences in the Simple Past

Usually we read and write sentences that are active. In active sentences the subject does the action of the verb and the direct object receives the action of the verb. Look at the sentences below:

Active Examples:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Does the Action (subject)</th>
<th>Action (verb)</th>
<th>Receives the Action (object)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Columbus</td>
<td>discovered</td>
<td>America</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>John Cabot</td>
<td>explored</td>
<td>America</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Sometimes, though, we want the receiver of the action to be the subject. Then we make our sentences passive. Writers of history books often use the passive.

Passive Examples:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Receives the Action (subject)</th>
<th>Action (verb)</th>
<th>Does the Action (agent)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>America</td>
<td>was discovered by Columbus</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

To form the passive, we use the proper tense of the verb "to be" ("was" or "were" for the simple past tense) and the past participle of the main verb in the active sentence. The past participle of regular verbs has the same form as the past tense.

Example:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>simple form</th>
<th>past</th>
<th>past participle</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>reach</td>
<td>reached</td>
<td>reached</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>permit</td>
<td>permitted</td>
<td>permitted</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Some irregular verbs may have the same form for the past and past participle, and others may have different forms.

Example:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>simple form</th>
<th>past</th>
<th>past participle</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>feel</td>
<td>felt</td>
<td>felt</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>send</td>
<td>sent</td>
<td>sent</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>have</td>
<td>had</td>
<td>had</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>be</td>
<td>was, were</td>
<td>been</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>see</td>
<td>saw</td>
<td>seen</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>draw</td>
<td>drew</td>
<td>drawn</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Other English Colonies Begin in North America

D. Language Activity (continued)

Remember that every passive sentence in the past tense has "was" or "were," but every sentence with "was" or "were" is not passive. "Plymouth was founded in 1619" is passive, but "Plymouth was a colony" is not passive. If the sentence has "was" or "were" plus the past participle, then it is passive.

The sentences below were taken from the reading "Other English Colonies Begin in North America." Some of them are passive and some are active. If a sentence is passive put a "P" on the line. If it is active put an "A" on the line. The first two are done for you.

1. ___ A The Puritans started the Massachusetts Bay Colony.
2. ___ P The Plymouth Colony was begun in 1619.
3. ___ Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay joined together as one colony.
4. ___ Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and New Hampshire were called New England Colonies.
5. ___ New York was started by the Dutch.
6. ___ The English took it from the Dutch in 1664.
7. ___ Pennsylvania was founded by William Penn.
8. ___ North and South Carolina were started as a business.
9. ___ Georgia was started to help poor people in England.

Life in the Colonies

B. Mini-Reading

We have read about the three groups of English colonies in America, the New England Colonies, the Middle Colonies and the Southern Colonies. The way of life in these three areas was different.

In New England, many colonists had small farms, but farming was difficult. The ground was rocky and the growing season was very short. But there were two things about New England that were very important. One was that New England had many forests with wood that was good for building ships. The other thing was that New England had good harbors. Because of the forests and harbors, New England was most important for its industry, especially ship building and fishing. Some of the other industries were tool making and weaving. Boston, Massachusetts became a very important port for New England and the other colonies.

The Middle Colonies were called the "bread basket" of the English colonies. Farms did well there because the weather and soil were good. Two important crops that farmers grew were wheat and corn. They made the wheat and corn into flour and sent it to the important ports of New York and Philadelphia. From these ports, goods were shipped to other colonies and to England.

The Southern Colonies were also good for farming but they didn't have many large cities or good ports. Most of the farms were very large. The large farms were called plantations. On the plantations they grew a lot of tobacco, rice, and indigo, a plant used to make a blue dye. People in Europe and the colonies wanted these crops, but the plantation owners needed a lot of workers to grow them. To do this work they used people from Africa and made them into slaves.

The following selection, which is written in the simple present tense, is about one day in the life of a colonial family. The Johnson family lives on a farm in Maryland. Mary Johnson is telling what happens at different times of one day in the year 1700. Read the selection and then answer the questions at the end of the reading.

One Day in the Life of a Colonial Farm Family a.m. 5:00 I wake up. I start a fire and cook breakfast. My husband wakes up too. He feeds the animals and milks the cow.

5:45 My family and I eat breakfast. We usually eat cornbread for breakfast.

6:15 The children and I clean the house. My husband starts to plow part of the field.

10:00 I work in the small garden near the house. My children help me. We plant onions, beans, carrots, melons, radishes, and pumpkins.
11:30 I go back to the house and start to prepare the lunch. The children bring wood for the fire. My husband comes back from the field and works in the barn.

12:30 I eat lunch with my family. We eat fruit, cornbread, and pork.

1:00 I make clothes for the children. My husband goes to work in the orchard. The children go fishing.

4:00 The children come home with some fish. I clean the fish and cook it for supper.

5:30 I eat supper with my family. After supper, my children and I do the dishes. My husband milks the cow and feeds the animals.

7:00 Everyone prays. The children go to bed. I sew some clothes.

8:30 My husband fixes a broken chair.

9:00 My husband reads the Bible.

9:15 We go to bed.

veto laws

1. to govern - to rule a small or large group of people
2. governor - a person who governs
3. government - a group of people who make rules
4. assembly - the group of people who made laws for a colony

The governor and assembly governed a colony. They were the government of the colony.

Parliament did not make many laws for the colonies.

6. democratic - a kind of government in which the people rule themselves.

The government in the colonies was very democratic.

7. tax - money people pay to the government

Taxes are necessary for every government.

8. to appoint - to choose someone for a job by naming him or her

The King appointed the governor of a colony.

9. to elect - to choose someone for a job by voting

The people did not elect a governor of a colony.

The year is 1760. A visitor from Spain has gone to see Governor Hutchinson of Massachusetts.

Visitor: Hello, Your Excellency.
Governor: Hello.
Visitor: Have you heard from the King recently?
Governor: No. As you know, England is very far from the colonies. We don't hear from the King or Parliament very often.
Visitor: Doesn't the Parliament make laws for the colonies?
Governor: Parliament makes a few laws, but not many. In the colonies we govern ourselves.
Visitor: Are the governments in the colonies democratic like the government in England?
Governor: Yes, we are very democratic here. The people in the towns and villages meet regularly in town meetings to make their own laws and taxes.
Visitor: Who makes the laws for the whole colony?
Governor: Each colony has an assembly that makes the laws and taxes for the whole colony.
Visitor: Do you, as the governor of Massachusetts, appoint the members of the assembly in this colony?
Governor: No. I said we are democratic. The colonists elect members of the assembly in their town meetings.
Visitor: If the government is democratic here, then the colonists elect you too, right?

Fact and Opinion

A fact in history is something that actually happened. For example, "Jamestown started in 1607" is a fact. We know that it really happened.

An opinion is something that some people believe, but other people might disagree with. For example, "Spain had a better government than England" is an opinion. Some people might believe that is true, but other people might not agree.

Read the following statements about the conversation between the visitor and the Governor. Decide if each statement is a fact or opinion and write "fact" or "opinion" on the line in front of each statement. The first two are done for you.

1. ___________ fact In 1760 the King and Parliament did not try to control the colonies very much.
2. ___________ opinion The King did not control the colonies enough.
3. ___________ The colonial governments were democratic.
4. ___________ It was good that the people did not elect the governors.
5. ___________ The colonial assemblies made laws for the whole colony.
6. ___________ A democratic government is the best kind of government.
7. ___________ The colonists elected people for the assembly in their town meetings.

Using "Do" and "Does" in Yes/No Questions

The questions below are in the simple present tense.

Does the King live in England?
Do the colonists obey the King?
Do you understand this unit?
Do they want to learn more words?

Notice that the first question begins with "does" and the other questions begin with "do." We use "does" if the subject is third person singular (she, he, it, Mary, the king, etc.). We use "do" for all other subjects (I, you, we, the colonies, the colonists, etc.).

When making questions in the simple present tense, the verb is always in the simple form. But when writing a statement, remember that the verb has an "s" or "es." Look at the examples below.

Question - Does the King live in England?
Statement - The King lives in England.

In the following activity a teacher in a school in colonial Massachusetts is asking one of his students some questions about the government in the colonies and in England. There are blanks in the teacher's questions. Fill in the blanks with "do" or "does" and the correct form of the verb. The first one is done for you.

1. Teacher: Does the King rule England?
   Student: Yes, the King rules England.

2. Teacher: _______Parliament_______ laws for England?
   Student: Yes, Parliament makes laws for England?

3. Teacher: _______Parliament_______ any laws for the colonies?

B. Mini-Reading

In 1755 people in Europe didn't know very much about the land in America. For this reason some of the land was claimed by both England and France. The map below shows the colonial claims of each country.

In 1755, French soldiers started to build a fort on the land claimed by both countries. The governor of Virginia sent a young soldier named George Washington to tell the French to leave. There was a fight between Washington's soldiers and the French soldiers. This battle started a war. This war was called the French and Indian War because the Indians were helping the French fight against the English colonists. Spain also gave some help to France in the war.

The French and Indian War lasted seven years. England won the war and France lost almost all of its land in the new world. The war ended in 1763 when England, France, and Spain signed a treaty in Paris.

The results of the war were:

1. Spain got control of the lower part of the Mississippi River.
2. France was no longer important in North America.
4. England had many new debts.

England Makes New Laws for the Colonies

B. Mini-Reading

When the French and Indian War ended in 1763, England had a very large debt. The King and Parliament thought that the thirteen American colonies should help pay this debt because England fought the war for them. For this reason, Parliament started to pass new laws and taxes for the American colonists.

Additions to the Navigation Acts were part of the new laws and taxes on the colonies. The Navigation Acts said that the Americans could trade only with England, not with any other countries. The Americans didn't like this law. Americans had traded with other countries for a long time. Why should they stop now? Many American businessmen didn't obey the Navigation Acts. They traded illegally with other countries and many did not pay the taxes that they were supposed to pay.

The English government was angry that the Americans were not obeying the laws of Parliament. For this reason they sent soldiers to collect the taxes and stop the illegal trade. But there were not many forts in the towns where the soldiers were supposed to work. England solved this problem by making another law called the Quartering Act. This law said that the people in the towns had to give the soldiers food and a place to stay.

Another English tax law to get money was the Stamp Act. This law said that if a colonist bought a newspaper or a book or needed a legal document such as a birth certificate or a marriage license, he had to buy a special stamp. This meant that if a colonist bought a newspaper, he also had to buy a stamp for the newspaper. The stamp showed that he paid his tax to England. Before the Stamp Act, any tax a colonist paid was included in the price of the thing he bought.

Fact or Inference

A fact in a reading is something that the words in a reading tell us. For example, the first sentence in the mini-reading tells us, "When the French and Indian War ended, England had a very large debt." That sentence tells us two facts. One fact is that the French and Indian War ended in 1763. Another fact is that England had a large debt in 1763.

An inference from a reading is something that the words in a reading do not say, but something that a person might think to be true because of the facts in the reading and other things that he or she knows. For example, from the same sentence, "When the French and Indian War ended in 1763, England had a large debt," we can make an inference. We might say that the sentence tells us that the war was very expensive and England probably didn't have enough money to pay for all of it. The words don't tell us that, but we can say that because of other things we know.

On the next page there is an exercise that gives you practice with facts and inferences.

C. History Activity #2 (continued)

The following sentences are about the information in "England Makes New Laws for the Colonies." Read each sentence and decide if it is a fact or inference. Write "fact" or "inference" on the line in front of each sentence. The first two are done for you.

1. Inference Before the French and Indian War, the English government didn't want to make many laws for the colonies.
2. Fact The French and Indian War ended in 1763.
5. The soldiers who were sent to make the people obey the laws probably stayed in large cities in the colonies.
6. The Quartering Acts said that the people in the town had to give the soldiers food and a place to stay.
7. Some of the towns probably built large houses for the soldiers to stay in.
8. More soldiers went to New England and the Middle Colonies than to the Southern Colonies.
9. The Stamp Act made the colonists pay a new kind of tax.
England Makes New Laws for the Colonies

D. Language Activity

"Might" - "Should" - "Could"

"Could" indicates ability in the past tense.

For Example:
Parliament could pass laws.

"Should" indicates obligation.

For Example:
The King thought that the colonies should pay the taxes.

"Might" indicates possibility.

For Example:
If the colonies don't pay the taxes, the King might get angry.

Combine the two groups of words and make a sentence with "could" or "could not." The first one is done for you.

1. (the King and Parliament)
   (pass laws to collect taxes from the colonies)
   The King and Parliament could pass laws to collect taxes from the colonies.

2. (after the Navigation Acts, the colonies)
   (trade with other countries)

3. (the English soldiers)
   (stop the illegal trade)
Combine the two groups of words into one sentence using "should" or "should not." Follow the same pattern as sentences 1, 2, and 3.

4. (the American businessmen thought that they) (obey the Navigation Acts)

5. (England thought that the colonies) (pay England's war debt)

Combine the two groups of words into one sentence using "might" or "might not." Follow the example of the previous sentences.

6. (the King said that he) (send more soldiers)

7. (the colonists said that they) (trade illegally)

TAXATION WITHOUT REPRESENTATION
New Words to Learn and Use

1. boycott - stop buying something
   The colonists boycotted things from England because they didn't like the stamp tax.

2. representative - one person who speaks for many people at a meeting
   Representatives from each colony went to a meeting in New York called the Stamp Act Congress.

3. congress - a big meeting

4. to protest - to speak against something
   The Stamp Act Congress protested the Stamp Act.

5. taxation - making tax laws
   The colonists were unhappy about the taxation of Parliament on the colonies.

6. committee - a small group of people who have a special job to do for a larger group of people

7. correspondence - writing letters

8. concerning - about
   The Committees of Correspondence wrote letters to other colonies concerning the problems with England.
The colonists were not happy about the Stamp Act that Parliament passed. Usually a tax was hidden in the price of something a colonist bought. But the stamp tax was a direct tax and was not hidden. The colonists could see the tax and they didn't like it.

The colonists did two things to fight against the Stamp Act. One was they started a group called the "Sons of Liberty." This group tried to get people to boycott English goods. They wanted people to stop buying things from England.

The colonists also sent representatives from the colonies to New York City to a special meeting called the Stamp Act Congress. The representatives in this meeting protested to England about the Stamp Act. They said that it was "taxation without representation." By that they meant that the colonies had no representatives in Parliament who could vote for or against tax laws that Parliament made.

England was not happy about the boycott of English goods and the protests from the colonial representatives. The government decided to stop the Stamp Act in 1767. But they imposed other taxes on glass, paint, lead, paper and tea.

The colonists, however, didn't like these taxes either. It was still taxation without representation. A man named Sam Adams, a leader of the Sons of Liberty in Massachusetts, started another boycott of English goods. Also, the Sons of Liberty started a new group called the Committees of Correspondence. There was a Committee in each colony. The Committees wrote letters to each other about things that were happening in their colonies concerning the problems with England.

Earlier you learned about pie and bar graphs. Another kind of graph we use is a line graph. The information is put on the graph as a series of dots that are connected by a line. Look at Graph "A" below for an example. It shows that at age one, John weighed 20 pounds. At age two, he weighed 30 pounds and grew to weigh 40 pounds at age 3.

Sometimes we give information about more than one thing on the same graph. We still use straight lines but we use different kinds of lines for each source of information. Look at Graph B for an example of this. Graph B compares John's weight and Joe's weight. At age one, Joe weighed ten pounds. At age two, he weighed twenty pounds.
Answer the questions using the graph above. Underline your answer.

1. What was the largest amount of money collected by the Navigation Acts?
   (a) $110,000  (b) $400,000  (c) $540,000  (d) $340,000

2. In which year did the taxes on glass, paper, and tea collect about $460,000?
   (a) 1769  (b) 1771  (c) 1773  (d) 1767

3. Why is the symbol for the Stamp Act very short?
   (a) It was a small tax.  (b) It lasted for only a year.
   (c) It was not very important.

4. Which tax law gave England the most money in 1773?
   (a) the Navigation Acts  (b) the Stamp Act  (c) the taxes on glass, paper, and tea.

The Boston Massacre

B. Mini-Reading

England sent soldiers to the colonies to make the people obey the laws of Parliament. The people of Boston hated the soldiers who were sent to their city. The colonists had to give the soldiers food and a place to stay. Some of the soldiers took part time jobs that the colonists needed.

On March 5, 1770, an angry group of people surrounded some soldiers and started to throw snowball and rocks at them. Suddenly the soldiers started shooting and five of the colonists were killed.

The following is a conversation that might have happened between a young boy and his father after the shooting in Boston.

Boy: Dad, did you hear about what happened today?
Father: Yes. The English soldiers killed five colonists.
Boy: Did you know any of the people who were killed?
Father: One of them was Crispus Attucks, a black member of the Sons of Liberty.
Boy: Why did the soldiers do it?
Father: I heard that the people were throwing snowballs and rocks at them.
Boy: But the people didn't have guns!
Father: Maybe the soldiers were afraid, or maybe the whole thing was an accident. Isn't it a terrible thing to happen to us?
Boy: Yes. I heard that Sam Adams called it a massacre. But it wasn't really a massacre. Why would he say it was?
Father: I think he wants to make the colonists angry. None of us like the soldiers or the taxes from England. We have always ruled ourselves and we want to continue ruling ourselves.

Point of View - Patriot or Loyalist

A patriot was a person who was not happy about the new English laws and didn't like the soldiers that the English government sent to the colonies. A loyalist was a person who supported the King and Parliament. He was not against the laws or the English soldiers.

Sam Adams was a patriot. His opinion about the death of the five colonists in Boston was different from the opinion of a loyalist. Another way to say opinion is "point of view." From his point of view, or in his opinion, it was a massacre. But from the point of view of a loyalist it wasn't a massacre.

On the next page there is an exercise that gives you practice with point of view.

C. History Activity #2 (continued)

The following statements are all about the Boston Massacre. Some show the point of view of a patriot and some show the point of view of a loyalist. Read each statement and decide whose point of view it is. Write "patriot" or "loyalist" in front of each statement. The first two are done for you.

1. __loyalist____ "We need to pay these taxes to help England pay its debts."
2. __patriot____ "England did not make tax laws for us before. It can't do it now."
3. ___________ "We need the soldiers to make the people obey the laws."
4. ___________ "The soldiers shouldn't be here and I'm not going to give them any food."
5. ___________ "Those soldiers are taking jobs from us."
6. ___________ "Those people were going to kill the soldiers who have come to protect us."
7. ___________ "The people were only throwing snowballs, but the soldiers started to shoot at them with their guns."
8. ___________ "I hope they send all of those soldiers to jail."
9. ___________ "I hope they send more soldiers and put the Sons of Liberty in jail."

Point of View

In the dialogue, about the Boston Massacre the father is trying to explain to his son what happened. The man and his son are Americans, and they believe that the English soldiers should not be in the colonies. That is their opinion or point of view.

However, there were other people in Boston with a different point of view about the trouble in Boston. They believed that the soldiers were right for doing what they did.

Think of yourself as a soldier who was in the middle of the shooting in Boston when the five people were killed. Another soldier, who is a friend of yours, is asking you questions about what you saw and what you did. On the lines below complete the dialogue between the two soldiers. Try to show a point of view that was different from Sam Adams and the Sons of Liberty.

B. Mini-Reading

The second boycott of English goods which was started by the Sons of Liberty worked well. The English stopped the taxes on glass, paint, lead, and paper. But Parliament kept one tax - a tea tax - to show that it still had the power to tax the colonies.

The American colonists thought that the tea tax was wrong. One night in December, 1773, members of the Sons of Liberty who were dressed like Indians went on a ship in the Boston harbor. The ship had a cargo of English tea. The Sons of Liberty took the tea and threw it into the harbor. The Americans called this the "Boston Tea Party."

The King and Parliament were very angry about this. They passed new laws to punish Boston for the Boston Tea Party. The colonists called these laws the "Intolerable Acts." The Intolerable Acts did four things to the colony of Massachusetts.

1. They closed the port of Boston to all trade.
2. They stopped all town meetings.
3. They sent more English soldiers and told them to stay in the colonists' homes.
4. They told the government of Massachusetts to pay for the tea.

These acts made life in Boston very difficult. With the port closed, businesses lost a lot of money and people could not get the things they needed. But the other colonies helped the people of Boston with food and other supplies. They knew that this might happen to them also.

The Committees of Correspondence also got busy again. They asked representatives from all the colonies to come to a meeting in Philadelphia in 1774. They called this meeting the First Continental Congress. The Congress asked all colonists to boycott English goods. It also sent a letter to King George III of England and asked him to stop the Intolerable Acts. If these actions didn't help Boston, the members of the Congress planned to meet again in May of the following year.

7. to inspire - to give ideas to; to give courage to
   The American Revolution inspired people in other countries who also wanted governments that were democratic.
After Parliament passed the Intolerable Acts, the leader of the English soldiers in Boston, General Gage, told his men to find any guns or ammunition that the colonists might have. In April, 1775, he heard that the colonial soldiers had guns and ammunition hidden at Concord, Massachusetts. This town was only twenty-one miles from Boston. On the road from Boston to Concord was a little town called Lexington. Look at the map below to find these places.

Spies who worked for the Sons of Liberty learned that the English soldiers were going to Concord to get the guns and ammunition. Three men, Paul Revere, William Dawes and Dr. Sam Prescott, rode from Boston to tell the colonists that the English soldiers were coming. The colonial soldiers, who called themselves Minutemen, were ready to fight quickly. This was why they were called Minutemen.

In May, 1775, the colonial leaders met in Philadelphia for the Second Continental Congress. This Congress became the government of the American colonies. The members of the Congress made George Washington the commander of the army. They also sent ambassadors to other countries to ask for help in fighting England.

The members of the Congress also talked among themselves about independence from England. Some wanted independence. Others were afraid of independence. The following is a conversation that might have happened between Ben Franklin of Pennsylvania, who wanted independence, and a loyalist at the Congress who was against independence.

Loyalist: Why are we fighting this war with England? Do we want the English soldiers to leave? Do we want Parliament to stop these taxes? What do we want?

Franklin: In my opinion, we want to be free from England. We must become independent.

Loyalist: We cannot be independent. We are Englishmen and will always be Englishmen.

Franklin: But England does not rule us well. We cannot be part of a country that takes away our self-government.

Loyalist: But we will never win a war against England.

Franklin: Why not?

Loyalist: If we declare independence, England will fight until they win. Our army is too weak to fight the English for a long time.

Franklin: But we might get help from France and other countries in Europe.

Understanding the "Declaration of Independence"

Parts of the Declaration of Independence are re-written below in a short and simple form. A very important word in the Declaration of Independence is "rights." Rights means those things that a person can have and do within a country. For example, the colonists believed that they had the right to tax themselves. That means that they believed that they could make their own tax laws. This was something that they could do in their own country.

Read the simple form of the "Declaration of Independence" and answer the questions on the next page.

The Declaration of Independence (simple form)

We colonists have decided to separate from England and make a new nation. We believe that we should tell the world why.

We believe that God gave rights to all people. Some of them are the right to life, the right to freedom, and the right to try to find happiness. A government's job is to protect these rights. That's why governments have certain powers.

When a government tries to take away the rights that God gave, the people have the right to end that government and make a new one. We realize that a government that has lasted a long time should not be changed for some little reason. But what can we do when that government destroys people's rights for a long time? We believe that we must separate from that government and make a new one.

For these reasons we declare ourselves free from England.

B. Mini-Reading

The American Revolution was not easy for the Americans. England was a wealthy country with a strong army and navy. The American army was not strong and the navy had no ships of its own. Also, the American government did not have much money.

However, there were many things that helped the Americans. They were fighting in their own country and protecting their own homes. Freedom was important to them. The English soldiers, who were far from home, were fighting in a strange land. Some of the soldiers in the army were mercenaries who were not fighting for their mother country, but were fighting for money. Also, many people in England were getting tired of the war in the colonies.

The English won many battles, but they could not win the war. The Americans were able to win the last battle of the war because of the aid of France. In October, 1781, France helped the Americans defeat the English at Yorktown, Virginia. On October 19, 1781, General Cornwallis surrendered his army to General Washington. This battle ended the American revolution.

England and the new United States of America made a peace treaty in Paris on January 20, 1783. In this treaty, the English accepted the independence of the American colonies. England also gave the United States

A paragraph is a group of sentences about one main idea. Most paragraphs contain a sentence that tells the main idea of that paragraph. The sentence that has the main idea is called the "topic sentence." Often, the topic sentence is the first sentence of the paragraph.

The paragraphs below are about a famous battle in the American Revolution. They have no topic sentences. Read each paragraph and choose the best topic sentence from the choices below the paragraph. Write that sentence on the line in the paragraph. The first one is done for you.

The Battle of Saratoga

1. The Hudson River, in New York, was a very important river during the Revolution. Without the control of this river, it would have been difficult for the Americans to continue the revolution. The English controlled the American ports. The people in New England had to use the Hudson to send the goods from their industries to help the other colonies in the war.

Choose the best topic sentence and write it on the line above.

- a. The English controlled the American ports during the Revolution.
- b. The Hudson River in New York, was a very important river during the Revolution.
- c. The people in New England helped the colonies during the Revolution.
In June, 1777, the English leaders told General Burgoyne to leave Canada and march to Albany, New York. They wanted him to take Albany from the Americans. This would give the English control of the Hudson River and help them win the war.

Choose the best topic sentence and write it on the line above.

a. General Burgoyne wanted to go to New York City.

b. The English believed that the Hudson River was part of Canada.

c. The English saw the importance of the Hudson River and wanted to control it.

Burgoine's army had to go through very thick forests. It also had to cross many small rivers and swampy places. This difficult trip made many of his men sick.

Choose the best topic sentence and write it on the line above.

a. General Burgoyne was not a good general.

b. The march from Canada to New York was very difficult.

c. Burgoyne's army did not know how to get to New York.
One thing that happened was that some of the Indians who were with General Burgoyne killed an American woman. This made some of the loyalists in New York dislike the English. The other thing that happened was that the Americans killed many of his men when he sent them to Bennington, Vermont to get food and horses.

Choose the best topic sentence and write it on the line above.

a. During the march to Albany, two things happened to Burgoyne that made things more difficult for him.
b. During the march to Albany, General Burgoyne did not want the Indians to hurt the American woman.
c. During the march to Albany, General Burgoyne's soldiers became very hungry.

Some of the Americans were hiding behind the trees and the tired and hungry English soldiers could not see them very well. The Americans also had better guns than the English. These things helped the Americans defeat the English at Saratoga on October 17, 1777.

Choose the best topic sentence and write it on the line above.

a. Several things helped the Americans defeat the English in an important battle near Saratoga, New York.
b. In an important battle near Saratoga, New York, the Americans had better rifles.
c. In an important battle near Saratoga, New York, the Americans were hiding behind the trees.
