The U.S. Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources met to report on the referred bill (S. 2231) to amend the Public Health Service Act to reauthorize nurse education programs established under Title VIII of such act. It reported favorably without amendment and recommended that the bill be passed. The bill reauthorizes the nurse education programs for both undergraduate and graduate nursing students and creates a nursing shortage relief demonstration program to increase the recruitment and retention of nurses for long-term care, home health care systems, and nursing homes. A summary of the bill looks at Title I special projects and Title II assistance to nursing students. The text of the bill includes special project grants and contracts, advanced nurse education, nurse practitioner and nurse midwife programs, nursing shortage relief programs, traineeships for advanced education or professional nurses, nurse anesthetists, traineeships for undergraduate education of professional nurses, and loan provisions. Committee views and action on each topic are discussed, noting the bill was considered and reported favorably without amendment by unanimous vote. The cost of the bill will fall within budget function 550. The Committee determined that there will be minimal or no increase in the regulatory burden of paperwork as a direct result of the bill. Changes in existing law are noted. (SM)

I. SUMMARY OF THE BILL

As reported by the Committee, the bill revises and extends the authorities under title VIII of the Public Health Service (PHS) Act for programs to support the training and education of nurses. Title I of the bill extends and amends existing special project authorities and authorizes new authorities for innovating nursing practice models and nurse recruitment centers. Title II of the bill amends existing authorities which provide assistance to nursing students... and authorizes a program of scholarships for undergraduate nurse education.

TITLE I—SPECIAL PROJECTS

The bill amends the authority under section 820 of the PHS Act for Special Project Grants and Contracts. In addition to extending the authority for this program through fiscal year 1991, the bill amends section 820 to include support for grants and contracts for faculty development directed at retention of individuals from disadvantaged backgrounds and for promotion of occupational health care. It also amends existing authority for programs to upgrade skills of licensed vocational or practical nurses, nursing assistants, and other para-professional nursing personnel to give priority to programs providing rapid transition towards achievement of undergraduate nursing degrees by such personnel. The amendment also authorizes assistance to provide education and training to develop curricula for the achievement of baccalaureate or masters degrees in nursing by registered nurses or individuals with baccalaureate degrees in other fields.

The bill amends section 821 of the Act for Advanced Nurse Education to extend the authority through fiscal year 1991 and to authorize an additional priority under the authority for programs with innovative curriculum that permit individuals with registered nursing degrees to rapidly achieve advanced degrees.

The bill extends the authority under section 822 of the Act for Nurse Practitioner and Nurse Midwife Programs for 3 years and amends the minimum enrollment provision to require that such a program have not less than 6 full-time equivalent students. It also amends the service obligations requirement to include service in an Indian Health Service or Native Hawaiian health center, a long-term care facility certified under Medicare or Medicaid, or migrant or community health center.

The bill establishes a new section 823 authorizing two new nursing shortage relief programs. Subsection (a) of the new section 823 authorizes grants and contracts for projects to demonstrate and evaluate innovative nursing practice models in home health care systems and nursing homes. Section 823(b) authorizes grants and contracts for the development, establishment, and operation of regional model nurse recruitment centers to recruit individuals to enter education programs to train professional nurses.

TITLE II—ASSISTANCE TO NURSING STUDENTS

The bill amends section 830 of the Act authorizing Traineeships for Advanced Education of Professional Nurses to extend the authority through fiscal year 1991 and to add a new subsection (c) authorizing grants and contracts for traineeships for nurses pursuing graduate degrees in other disciplines. A recipient of such a traineeship must enter into a commitment to serve for one month for each month of the traineeship in a health manpower shortage area, a long-term care facility certified under Medicare or Medicaid, a community or migrant health center, the Indian Health Service, a Native Hawaiian health center, or a public health care facility.
The bill extends through fiscal year 1991 the authority under section 831 of the Act for nurse anesthetist traineeships. It also expands the existing authority under section 831(b) which authorizes grants to institutions to improve education programs for nurse anesthetists to include also planning, development, and operation of such programs.

The bill establishes a new section 832 of the Act to authorize grants to nursing schools for scholarships to full-time undergraduate nursing students in financial need. Priority in awarding such scholarships, which will cover tuition and fees, shall be given to individuals of disadvantaged backgrounds.

The bill amends the authority for nursing student loans under section 836 of the Act to remove the requirement that such loans be made to students in exceptional financial need and provide that loans may be made to students in need.

II. BACKGROUND AND NEED

Nearly 79 percent of the hospitals in the United States had vacancies for registered nurses [RN's] during 1987, a recent survey reports. Of the nearly 1,500 hospitals responding to a survey last December, 78.6 percent reported a need for more nurses. According to the survey, 75 percent of hospitals relied on nurses working overtime and 41 percent employed temporary nurses to meet their needs. The survey, conducted by the American Hospital Association, found that, although some regions of the country are harder hit than others, every State showed a shortage of full-time RN's. An average of 11.3 percent of registered nurse positions were vacant last year, compared with 11 percent the year before. Only 17.6 percent of hospitals reported no openings for nurses. Hospitals have particular difficulty in attracting RN's to high-stress nursing jobs, such as medical/surgical, emergency, psychiatric, and critical and intensive care units. Hospitals report delays of 60 days and more in filling such positions. Hospital administrators trying to hire nursing personnel are increasingly having to travel to such foreign countries as Canada, Ireland, the United Kingdom, Australia, and the Philippines to recruit English-speaking nurses to fill their personnel needs.

In the past, one of the chief reasons for nursing shortages was the large numbers of nurses who were no longer working in the profession; one of the major ways to deal with shortages was to lure these non-practicing nurses back into the health care field. Current statistics, however, show that the numbers of non-practicing RN's are decreasing. In 1977, for instance, there were 1.4 million RN's in the United States, and only 70 percent of them were working in the profession. Currently there are nearly 2 million RN's in the United States and 1.6 million of them, 80 percent, are working in nursing. Those not working include younger women taking time off to start families and older women who haven't worked as nurses for years and who are unlikely to return to the profession.

Declines in nursing school enrollments over the past 5 years are a matter of great concern. The American Association of Colleges of Nursing reports that enrollment in its member schools dropped by 21 percent between 1983 and 1987. The decline in nursing school enrollment has led to the closing of many nursing education programs, including some major university nursing schools.

Salary is a major factor in finding and retaining sufficient numbers of nurses in the profession. The average starting salary for RN's is over $21,000, but the average salary level peaks at about $29,000 after less than 10 years. In addition, nurses, hospital nurses in particular, often work under difficult conditions and receive little professional recognition for the importance of the job they perform. With many other careers open to women that were not readily available to them 20 or 30 years ago, it is probably not surprising that so many women choose to leave the profession or not to enter it.

The Federal Government has supported nurse training since the 1930's but the first comprehensive Federal legislation to provide funds for nursing education was enacted in 1964 with Public Law 88-581, the Nurse Training Act. This legislation added a new title VIII to the PHS Act, and authorized grants to assist in construction of teaching facilities, grants for special projects to strengthen nurse education programs, formula payments to diploma schools of nursing, and the extension of an existing professional nurse traineeship program. Subsequent legislation in ensuing years extended these authorities and established new programs of support for nurse training. Increases in the overall supply of nurses over the past 20 years led to changes in the focus of the nurse training program under title VIII. Although the authority provides essentially two kinds of assistance—institutional support for nursing schools and financial assistance for nursing students, the nature of such assistance has changed. Such programs as grants for construction and formula payments to diploma schools have been dropped, and the focus of the program in recent years has been on advanced nurse training, such as training for nurses as educators, supervisors, administrators, researchers, and nursing specialists.

The Administration has proposed for several years eliminating funding for title VIII nurse training programs, contending that such Federal support was no longer needed because of projected national surpluses of nurses and their improving geographic distribution. The Congress, however, has rejected this view and has consistently supported nurse training programs. Last year, this Committee, increasingly concerned about a nursing shortage more severe and widespread than any previously reported, reported a bill, S. 1402, which was designed to reduce the shortage of professional nurses in the United States. The bill, which was passed by the Senate, established a new Part D of title VIII—Initiatives to Reduce Nursing Shortages. In addition to authorizing grants and contracts to demonstrate and evaluate innovative nursing practice models and establish model professional nurse recruitment centers, the bill directs the Secretary of HHS to establish a special advisory committee to develop a plan specifying long-term solutions to the problems of hospitals and other health care institutions in recruiting and retaining professional nurses.

S. 1402 received no further action during the first session of the 100th Congress, but in December of 1987, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, Dr. Otis Bowen, appointed a blue ribbon commission chaired by Carolyne Davis, former head of the Health Care Financing Administration, to identify nurse shortage problems and recommend solutions. The Commission's final report to the Secretary is due in December of this year.

IV. COMMITTEE VIEWS

When the Committee reauthorized the Nurse Training Act Amendments in 1979, the legislation commissioned a study by the Institute of Medicine to (in part), "determine the need to continue a specific program of Federal financial support for nursing education." The results of this study, released in early 1983, pointed to geographic misallocations of nursing personnel, and for the first time, noted that a shortage of registered nurses possessing graduate degrees in nursing specialties was apparent. Subsequently, the Nurse Education Amendments of 1985 (S. 1284) provided a new focus for Title VIII programs to reflect this demand. Support for specialized nursing education in the areas of administration, research, primary care, geriatrics, pediatrics, home and community-based nursing, and other areas were addressed in order to recognize the advances in technology and increasing breadth of the nursing sciences.

In the three years subsequent to enactment of S. 1284, the nation has observed an increased demand for the services of nurses in both the acute care environment as well as in home and community-based nursing organizations. The vacancy rate for nursing positions in U.S. hospitals has more than doubled between 1985 and 1986 (from 6.3 to 13.6 percent) according to data released by the American Hospital Association. Findings by the AHA reveal that only 17 percent of U.S. hospitals had no vacancies for registered nurses in 1986. In 1985, more than 35 percent of the hospitals surveyed had no such vacancies. Compounding this increased demand for nurses is a decline in nursing school enrollments. A federal projections model predicts that the demand for baccalaureate-prepared nurses in 1990 will exceed supply by 340 percent, and that the projected shortfall for the year 2000 will be even greater.

The Committee recognizes that many other factors impact upon current shortages of registered nurses, and S. 2231, the "Nurse Education Reauthorization Act of 1988" provides for increased funding levels in areas of nursing education programs where the Committee has identified the greatest need. A total of $94.6 million is authorized for fiscal year 1989, as compared to a fiscal year authorization of $55.6 million. While nursing shortages have tended historically to be evident in certain categories of nursing specialties, the current shortage spans across all specialties as well as geographical areas. In response, the Committee has increased funding for entry-level nursing programs. In addition, to meet the increased demand for nursing specialty services, the legislation maintains support for nursing specialties such as nurse midwifery, nurse practitioners, and gerontological nursing.

While it is the current nursing shortage that has drawn the attention of Congress, the public and media, the Committee continues to recognize the significance of the original Nurse Training Act; namely, federal support for professional nursing education. The programs under Title VIII are provided not only to assure the nation of an adequate supply of registered nurses, but to assure that educational opportunities for general as well as specialty areas of nursing are made available to all qualified students.
S. 2231 has refocused the emphasis of the programs provided under Title VIII. More funds are authorized for undergraduate education of entry-level nurses, emphasizing the need to draw more disadvantaged students to professional nursing, encourage educational opportunities for nursing students pursuing specialty studies in shortage areas such as critical care and gerontological nursing, and to maintain adequate support for nurse practitioners and nurse midwives. In addition, S. 2231 provides for demonstration projects to help assess both the environment nurses work within as well as demonstration projects aimed at increasing the future enrollment rate of registered nurses.

SPECIAL PROJECT GRANTS AND CONTRACTS

S. 2231 reauthorizes the existing provisions and provides support for faculty development directed at improving their ability to retain disadvantaged students in their programs. It has long been a goal to recruit disadvantaged students into nursing programs. The Committee seeks to maintain the emphasis on facilitating the entry of such individuals into schools of nursing. The provision of support for faculty development is equal in importance to the efforts to recruit and admit disadvantaged students into nursing programs, toward the goal in increasing the representation of these individuals in the nursing profession.

Further, S. 2231 amends existing law to promote occupational health care services, a new and growing area of nursing. In support of initiatives to encourage the ongoing education of all nursing personnel, S. 2231 amends current law to include a complete educational ladder for nursing personnel. S. 2231 provides the opportunity for educational advancement of licensed vocational/practical nurses, nursing assistants, and other paraprofessional nursing personnel with priority given to rapid transition programs which provide for articulation of past nursing experience and knowledge. The aim of these programs is to foster the education of nursing personnel toward the achievement of an undergraduate degree in nursing.

In addition, S. 2231 provides for rapid transition programs for both associate degree and diploma degree graduates as well as programs which provide for the development of curricula for the achievement of baccalaureate degrees in nursing or masters degrees in nursing by registered nurses or individuals with baccalaureate degrees in other fields. The Committee strongly supports and encourages the educational advancement of nurses at all levels; better trained nurses will provide improved quality of care for patients in hospital and other health care settings.

Other programs maintained under this section of the bill include: continuing education for nurses; appropriate re-training opportunities for nurses not currently practicing nursing; geriatric training in preventive, acute and long-term care; efforts to resolve geographic inequities in the distribution of registered nurses; support for clinical nursing programs which combine educational curricula and clinical practice in health care delivery organizations, including acute care facilities, long-term care facilities, and ambulatory care facilities.
Recognizing the importance of special project grants and contracts, S. 2231 authorizes $15 million in fiscal year 1989, $1 million in fiscal year 1990, and $17 million in fiscal year 1991.

ADVANCED NURSE EDUCATION

The Committee continues its commitment to support nurses pursuing advanced education, especially in the area of geriatrics. Support for programs leading to masters or doctoral degrees which prepare nurses to serve as nurse educators, administrators and researchers have proven to be a valuable investment. To reverse the trend of declining enrollments in nursing programs and improve their quality, the Committee recognizes the critical need for highly trained nurse educators and researchers. And nursing environments in hospitals and other health care settings can be greatly enhanced by the employment of well trained nurse administrators. S. 2231 provides $19.5 million for fiscal year 1989, $20.5 million for fiscal year 1990, and $21.5 million for fiscal year 1991.

NURSE PRACTITIONER AND NURSE MIDWIFE PROGRAMS

S. 2231 maintains grants and contracts for schools of nursing, public health, and medicine, hospitals, and other entities to plan, develop, operate, and expand programs for nurse practitioners and nurse midwives. This section supports one of the faster growing specialties in nursing. Nurse practitioners and midwives practice in underserved areas, in community and migrant health centers. Traineeships for both practitioners and midwives are continued. Section 822 (b) (3) of the PHS has been amended to allow for the inclusion of migrant and community health centers, the Indian Health Service, Native Hawaiian health centers and long-term care facilities certified under title XVIII or XIX of the Social Security Act in addition to public health care facilities as eligible facilities where a traineeship recipient may fulfill their service obligation. It's the Committee's intent that the areas eligible for payback be as wide as possible since nurse practitioners and midwives provide healthcare to the underserved population in most, if not all, practice settings.

Recognizing the important role that nurse practitioners and midwives play in providing good quality care to underserved and other communities, the Committee has authorized $19 million in fiscal year 1989, $20 million in fiscal year 1990 and $21 million in fiscal year 1991.

NURSING SHORTAGE RELIEF PROGRAMS

The Committee is aware of the several factors influencing the current shortage of nurses. Of these factors, increased salaries to attract students into nursing, enhanced efforts to recruit students into nursing programs, and improved working conditions in hospitals, long-term care and other health care facilities are of critical importance. Two of these factors are addressed by S. 2231, which adds new authority to the current Title VIII to support long-term care nursing demonstrations and nurse recruitment centers.

S. 2231 provides for grants and contracts with public and non-profit entities to develop, establish and operate five regional nurse recruitment centers. These centers would target individuals between the ages of 12 and 14, high school students, and college students who have yet to declare a major of study.

A new program for long-term care nursing practice demonstrations is also established. The Committee recognizes the importance of improving the working environment for nurses in long-term care facilities if staff vacancies are to be filled. The legislation stipulates that contracts can be made for such models with public and non-profit private collegiate schools of nursing. Collegiate schools of nursing are able to provide faculty which have joint appointments and advance degrees in clinical specialties such as case management.

The Committee has provided $2.5, $3.0 and $3.5 million for fiscal years 1989 through 1991 for the long-term care nursing practice demonstrations, and the same amounts for the nurse recruitment centers. The Committee encourages the Secretary to explore other ways the private sector and federal government may positively influence the working conditions of nurses, and increase enrollments in nursing programs. The Secretary may choose to utilize the expertise of the Commission on Nursing, appointed in 1987, in developing these strategies.

TRAINEESHIPS FOR ADVANCED EDUCATION OF PROFESSIONAL NURSES

The Committee continues to support graduate education for nurses, and recognizes the important role that nurse administrators, educators and researchers play in nursing education and the health care system as a whole. Financial support for nurses pursuing graduate degrees and training in nursing specialty areas is obviously required. Federal dollars allocated for advanced education for nurses represent a good investment in the overall quality of the nursing professions and in the quality of care received by all Americans.

This section has been expanded to include a provision to support traineeships for nurses pursuing graduate degrees in other disciplines. This provision will allow nurses to pursue graduate studies—law, psychology, public health, business administration, public policy—in other disciplines in order to positively influence the health care system on behalf of their nursing colleagues. This provision contains a payback requirement which demands full-time service with or without compensation, for a period equal to the period which the recipient receives such traineeship. Sites eligible for the service payback are similar to those for the nurse practitioner and nurse midwife programs, and include health manpower shortage areas, long term care facilities, community and migrant health centers, the Indian Health Service, a Native Hawaiian health center, or public health care facility.

To support traineeships for the advanced education of nurses, the Committee has authorized $18 million for fiscal year 1989, $19 million for fiscal year 1990, and $20 million for fiscal year 1991. To support traineeships for nurses pursuing graduate degrees outside of nursing, the Committee has authorized $1.1 million for each of the fiscal years 1989 through 1991.
NURSE ANESTHETISTS

S. 2231 expands on the existing section 831 to include additional funding for support of nurse anesthetist projects to improve, plan, develop, and operate programs for the education of nurse anesthetists. Recognizing the important role nurse anesthetists fulfill in underserved areas, especially rural areas, the Committee supports additional funding for the development of new training programs.

Recognizing the importance of nurse anesthetist training programs, the Committee has increased the authority to $1.8 million for each of the fiscal years 1989 to 1991.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR UNDERGRADUATE EDUCATION OF PROFESSIONAL NURSES

Federal support of nurse education has been an important method of increasing the supply of nurses. Much of the reason for the current shortage is the decline in undergraduate admissions to nursing schools. To address this decline, S. 2231 includes a new provision initiating scholarships specifically for undergraduate students with an emphasis on assisting individuals from disadvantaged backgrounds. The Committee intends that students enrolled in baccalaureate [BSN], registered nurse [RN], associate [AD], and license practical nurse [LPN] programs will be eligible for scholarships provided under this section. These scholarships will provide the needed support to attract young people into the nursing profession.

LOAN PROVISIONS

Section 836(b)(1)(C) has been changed from "of exceptional financial need" to "in need" (as defined by regulation of the Secretary) in order to expand availability of loan funds to students which were previously too restrictive. This revision makes the requirements for nursing student loans consistent with other student loan programs administered by the Departments of Education and Health and Human Services.

V. COMMITTEE ACTION

S. 2231 was considered by the Committee on June 22, 1988, and reported favorably without amendment by unanimous vote.
