This guide contains social studies curriculum standards for grades K-12 that are meant to be used by school district administrators and teachers in Delaware to develop their local social studies program. The guide is not meant to offer day-to-day lesson plans; rather it is intended to be used by administrators and teachers as a guide to the selection of strategies and materials to achieve the included goals and objectives. Standards are included for grades K-3; grades 4-6; grades 7-8; grades 7-12 consumer education; and for grades 9-12 U.S. history, civics, and government, economics, psychology, sociology, and world history. For each grade grouping or curriculum subject, lists of what the program should provide in instruction and what students will be expected to learn or do, are given. (DB)

In addition, several members of the State Social Studies Advisory Council and representatives from related organizations reviewed drafts of the document and made recommendations which were included in the final copy.

A debt of gratitude is owed to several states including Arizona, Wisconsin, Oklahoma, Michigan, and California for sharing their curriculum materials which contributed to the development of the standards.

The committee is most grateful to the National Council for the Social Studies for providing additional curriculum suggestions and the Chart of Essential Skills for Social Studies, located at the end of the document.

Geography standards and student expectations which appear throughout the document were provided by the Joint Committee on Geographic Education of the National Council for Geographic Education and the Association of American Geographers in the publication, "Guidelines for Geographic Education."
FOREWORD

Social Studies education is a basic component of the K-12 curriculum that (1) derives its goals from the nature of citizenship in a democratic society that is closely linked to other nations and peoples of the world; (2) draws its content primarily from history, the social sciences, and in some respects, from the humanities and science; (3) is taught in ways that reflect an awareness of the personal, social, and cultural experiences and developmental levels of learners; and (4) facilitates the transfer of what is learned in school to the out-of-school lives of students.

The foregoing definition focuses the purposes of social studies on individual and group participation in social-political affairs and stresses the importance of application of school learning to every day life. The definition shows a need to deal with the social studies content from a global perspective. The study of history, the social sciences, and the humanities is not an end in itself. The definition also calls for teaching procedures that link the social studies to the backgrounds and developmental levels of learners.
INTRODUCTION

The professional consensus is that today's social studies programs should include the following three goals: (1) acquisition of knowledge; (2) skills development; and (3) understanding of democratic principles, values, and practices. It is essential that these three goals be viewed as equally important. The relationship among knowledge, skills, and values is one of mutual support.

1. Knowledge

Knowledge is derived from encounters students have with the subject matter of the social studies. Knowledge makes it possible for students to understand human affairs and the human condition. Knowledge provides a basis for values and beliefs and is the vehicle for the development of skills. To increase their storehouse of knowledge, students need good sources of information, along with the skills required for using them.

Information gained in the classroom should be helpful in understanding events and conditions in the world outside of school. Information must also be linked with experiences encountered by students in their daily lives. This can be accomplished through social and civic observation, analysis, participation, and community service. The following are essential sources of subject matter from which knowledge goals for social studies should be selected: History, Geography, Government, Law, Economics, Behavioral Sciences, and Humanities.

2. Skills

Skills development is the second category of social studies goals. A skill is defined as the ability to do something proficiently in repeated performances. Skills are processes that enable a student to link knowledge with beliefs that lead to action. Skills are developed through sequential systematic instruction and practice through the K-12 years. Skills can be grouped in a problem-solving/decision-making sequence in the following major categories: (a) skills relating to acquiring information (reading skills, study skills, reference and information-search skills, technical skills unique to the use of electronic devices); (b) skills relating to organizing and using information (thinking skills, decision-making skills, metacognitive skills); and (c) skills related to interpersonal relationships and social participation (personal skills, group interaction skills, social and political participation skills).

3. Democratic values and beliefs

Democratic values and beliefs constitute the third category of social studies goals. Values are the standards or criteria against which individual behavior and group behavior are judged. Beliefs represent commitments to these values. Social studies programs should not indoctrinate students to accept values blindly, but rather have students learn about their historical roots and show their contemporary application. Ideas should be analyzed in context as they relate to topics studied and to current affairs. Teachers should model these values in their classrooms and they should be reflected in a school’s daily operations. Some of these values are as follows: justice, equality, responsibility, freedom, privacy, international human rights, human dignity, fairness, integrity, honesty, consideration for others, loyalty, authority, rule of law, and diversity.

The State of Delaware has announced several educational goals that affect all subject disciplines and curricula. Two of these goals – critical thinking skills and multicultural education have a great impact on the social studies curriculum. The social studies curriculum standards contained in this document reflect these two goals throughout the K-12 program.

Additionally, professional organizations and state social studies councils have called for an increased emphasis on history and geography in a comprehensive K-12 curriculum. These Delaware standards include a specific emphasis in these areas. The standards are also in compliance with a state mandate for a required number of hours of instruction in consumer economics in a 7-12 curriculum.
HOW TO USE THE CURRICULUM STANDARDS

These standards are meant to be used by school district administrators and teachers in developing their local social studies program. The standards are a resource guide for curriculum development. They are also a statement of the goals and objectives of the State social studies program. This guide is not meant to offer day-to-day lesson plans. Rather, it should be used by administrators and teachers as a guide to the selection of strategies and materials to achieve these goals and objectives. Local curriculum development efforts should be directed towards those ends while making adaptations which meet local needs.

Key sections to this booklet for Delaware's Social Studies Curriculum Standards are as follows:

I. The first area lists social studies curriculum standards for grades K-12 in the following categories: K-3, 4-6, 7-8 and 9-12. Each set of standards includes:

A. PROGRAM OBJECTIVE - listing on the left side of the page which describes the area of instruction.

B. STUDENT EXPECTATIONS - listing on the right side of the page of what the student will be expected to do in these instructional areas.

II. The second component of the standards contains an extensive essential skills listing for a K-12 program with suggested degrees of strength of instructional efforts at selected grade levels.

*Additional Standards have been added for those schools which have elective or required courses in Economics, Psychology, Sociology, and World History.

CURRICULUM STANDARDS POLICY

The State Board of Education believes that the curriculum in the public schools of Delaware must be systematically reviewed and refined on a periodic basis to ensure that it remains relevant to the needs of students in a rapidly changing society as well as in their respective communities.

In order to guide statewide curriculum development it is the responsibility of the Department of Public Instruction to establish and maintain state Curriculum Standards for all subject areas in grades K-12. Those Standards shall consist of general objectives for the instructional program and student performance expectations. The state Curriculum Standards shall serve as a base for the development of district curriculum. The Department shall establish and publish its multi-year schedule for the revision of specific Standards.
It is the responsibility of each school district to develop curriculum guides for each subject area in grades K-12. By September 1994, each district shall revise its curriculum guides in accordance with the State Curriculum Standards. Thereafter, the district revisions shall be completed within two years of the adoption of the revised State Curriculum Standards by the State Board of Education. All curriculum guides shall be approved by local school district boards of education on an annual basis.
