TO THE STUDENT

We wrote this book for you. We hope you will think the lessons are interesting. We hope you will enjoy learning about U.S. history. The lessons can help you become better residents and citizens of the U.S.

Each lesson has a title. It tells you the subject of each lesson. Under each title there will be one or two objectives. These objectives say what you will learn from the lesson.

You will practice all your English skills - listening, speaking, reading and writing. Most of the lessons have 5 parts:

1. Pre-Reading
2. Information
3. Reading
4. Testing skills
5. Review

I. Pre-Reading

At the beginning of every lesson, Pre-Reading, you will find some questions to discuss with a partner, in a small group or with the class. These questions will be about some pictures, a map or some ideas about history.

After the discussion or map, you will find some new vocabulary words. Their definitions will help you understand the lesson. Some of the words have other definitions, too. Sometimes you will have a written exercise to do.

Some exercises will tell you to guess. Guessing means you do not really know the answers. You give your ideas about what you think the answer will be.
Other exercises will tell you to scan a paragraph. When you scan, you do not read everything. You look for specific information to answer the questions. You can check your answers to the guessing and scanning exercises at the end of the lesson.

II. Information

The Information is always on a chart, map, timeline, or in a diagram. It shows you the main points of the lesson.

First, think about the title. Next, read the information on the page carefully. Ask yourself questions about the information. For example:

Who were the first settlers?
Why did they come to the U.S.?
Where did they settle?

Finally, do the exercises — Using the Information. Look at the Information page to help you complete the speaking, listening and writing exercises.

III. Reading

The Reading is usually one to five paragraphs long. Sometimes the Reading will give you more information about the main points. Sometimes the Reading will give you new information.

First, think about the title.
Next, read the paragraphs quickly for a general idea.
Then, read the paragraphs carefully.
Finally, do the exercise(s) — Using the Reading. Look at the Reading to help you complete the exercise(s).
IV. Testing skills

The Testing skills help you test yourself. Can you answer the questions without looking at the Information and Reading? If you cannot answer the test questions, you should look back at the Information and Reading again.

You will learn about many different types of tests. Some of the tests are oral and some are written. We included some ideas about how to answer oral questions. This section will help you prepare for the citizenship test.

V. Review

The last part of every lesson is the Review. The Review has the most important things for you to remember. There are usually 1 - 5 questions. If you cannot answer the review questions, you should look back at the Information and Reading again. If you can answer the review questions, you can go on to the next lesson.

What should you do if you are not in a class? What should you do if you are studying alone?

If you are studying alone, show the lessons to your friends, or someone in your family, or someone at work. Ask people to help you practice your English. Ask them to be your partner for the speaking exercises. Ask them to do the group discussions with you.

You can also read the section: To The Instructor. This section gives some more important information to the instructor about the lessons. It also explains how to do some of the different exercises.
Answer Key

There is also an Answer Key in the back of the book. After you finish the exercises, you can look at the Answer Key to check your answers. If your answer is wrong, look at the Reading and Information again. Try to find the correct answer.

Sometimes there is more than one possible answer. For example, the discussion questions can have many answers. These questions do not have answers in the Answer key. Also, the Pre-Reading Oral and Review questions are not in the Answer Key. You need to learn those answers yourself.

Study Questions

After you finish the lessons, you will find a list of study questions. By answering these questions, you can prepare yourself for a citizenship exam. An INS official may ask similar questions during a citizenship interview.

Vocabulary Index

In the back of the book you will see a vocabulary index. All the words from the Vocabulary section of this book are listed with the lesson number where you can find the word.

People came to the "New World" for many reasons. Four important reasons were:

B. Read sentences 1 - 3 to your partner. They are all false. Your partner tells you the true sentence. Use the map and chart to help you.

Here is an example:
You read: Pilgrims settled in 1607. (False)
Your partner says: Pilgrims settled in 1620. (True)

4) The second colony was the Jamestown Colony.
5) The English traders came to America to have religious freedom.
6) Plymouth is on the west coast of North America.
Jamestown and Plymouth Colonies

English traders settled at Jamestown in Virginia in 1607. It was on the east coast of North America. These men wanted to trade with England. Their life at the Jamestown Colony was hard. At first, they did not have enough food. Many men died. They planted many things. Tobacco was the best plant. They traded it with England. They made money.

The Pilgrims left England in 1620. They wanted religious freedom. They sailed to America. They settled at Plymouth Colony in Massachusetts. Their life was hard, too. Their winters were very cold. They did not have enough food. Many people died.

The Pilgrims did two important things:

1) They wrote the Mayflower Compact (an official paper). It said:
   a) the people decide the government rules, and
   b) the people follow the majority (51%) decision.

2) They celebrated the first Thanksgiving. They had a big dinner with the Native Americans. They wanted to thank the Native Americans for helping them. They were happy to be alive. Thanksgiving is the first American holiday.
Using the Reading:
C. Write answers to the questions below.

1. Where was the first permanent English colony?

2. Was it easy to live at Jamestown and Plymouth?

3. What important plant did the settlers grow at Jamestown?

4. The Pilgrims wrote a paper to let the people decide about the government. What was the name of the official paper?

5. What holiday did the Pilgrims celebrate with Native Americans?

Testing skills
Sometimes you will have an oral exam. You must listen carefully to the questions. You will see a set of two possible questions below. Your teacher will only read one of those two questions. Listen carefully. Circle the letter of the question your teacher reads.

Example:  a) Who went to Virginia?
          b) Who went to Massachusetts?

The teacher asks:  Who went to Virginia?  (listen)
You circle a

1a) When did the traders go to Jamestown?
   b) Why did the traders go to Jamestown?

2a) What colony was north of Plymouth?
   b) What colony was south of Plymouth?

3a) What did the Jamestown settlers trade with England?
   b) Who did the Jamestown settlers trade with?
4a) Who celebrated Thanksgiving with the Indians?
b) What did Pilgrims celebrate with the Indians?

Review
Name the first 2 permanent English colonies in North America.
What holiday did the Pilgrims celebrate?
Name 1 important thing about the Mayflower Compact.
LESSON 3  THE THIRTEEN COLONIES

Objectives
Identify the 13 colonies
Identify the early forms of government in the 13 colonies

Pre-Reading

Oral: Look at this map. It is similar to the map in Lesson 2. That map had two colonies. This map has all thirteen colonies on it.

Work with a partner. Try to fill in the names of all these colonies. They are states in the U.S. now. You can use a map of the U.S. to help you.

Compare your answers with the class.
Vocabulary:

Read the following definitions.

representative assembly - a type of democracy. Settlers of a colony chose people to represent them at special meetings (assemblies). These people made some laws for the colony.

Voters - Male owners of property in the colonies could vote. Some colonies said a voter must be a certain religion.

(to) veto - to say "no"

King's Governor - the representative for the King of England in the colonies. Governors ruled all the colonies, but Connecticut and Rhode Island. They could veto laws from the assemblies.

Puritans - another group of settlers in Massachusetts. They wanted religious freedom.

Quakers - a group of settlers in Pennsylvania and parts of Delaware and New Jersey. They wanted religious freedom.

Separation of church and state - The church and government are separate. The government does not decide the rules of the church. The church does not decide the rules of the government.

Find the words on the left in the puzzle. Circle them.

Democracy in the Colonies

There were two types of democracy in the colonies. Some colonies, like Virginia, had representative assemblies. The settlers did not vote directly. The settlers chose people (representatives) to go to the assembly meetings. These people represented the settlers. They voted about laws for their colony.
Other colonies, like Massachusetts, had direct democracies. Voters went to town meetings. They all voted about the laws for the town.

The colonists had two problems.
1) The King of England sent governors to 11 colonies. The governor could veto some laws from the assemblies and town meetings. The King could make other laws too.
2) Some settlers could not vote. Voters needed to own property. Sometimes they had to be a certain religion to vote.

Using the Reading:
B. Unscramble the following sentences. Look at the Reading to help you. The first word for each sentence is circled. The first sentence is done for you.

1) had / assembly / Virginia / representative / a.
   Virginia had a representative assembly.
2) voted / representatives / about laws / colonies / the / for.
3) meetings / direct democracies / examples / Town / are / of.
4) The / some laws / colonies / King of England / made / for / the.

C. Imagine your class is in a town in the Massachusetts Colony. Think about some problems in your town. For example: Some neighbors let their dogs run free. The dogs are running all over yards and killing plants.
Think of 3 more problems:

3)

Hold a town meeting. Try to solve one of the problems. Discuss possible solutions. Have a class vote.

Using the Information:

A. Timelines are useful for studying history. They show you the order of events. When you look at a timeline, you can see what happened first, second, etc.

1. Look at the Information timeline. The dates on the left show the time period. This timeline shows some important events from 1490 to ______.

2. The dates on the right show the years of the events. We can see Colombus came to the Americas between 1490 and 1500. What was the exact year? ______

Look at the timeline and try to answer these questions.

3. Which colony started first, Jamestown or Plymouth?

4. Did colonies start in America between 1500 and 1600 or between 1600 and 1700?

5. In what year did the French and Indian War start?

6. How long did the French and Indian War last?

7. Which happened first, the Boston Tea Party or the Navigation Acts?

B. Find a partner. Make one timeline for both of you. Here are some ideas for dates:

Life in the Colonies before the War for Independence.

Many French were trappers and fur traders in the north (Canada). Many American colonists lived on farms and in towns in the south (U.S.). They were farmers, store owners, etc. The French and the English wanted the same land between the U.S. colonies and Canada. They fought the French and Indian War. The French and Indians were on one side. The English and the American colonists were on the other side. The English won the war. The French lost most of their colonies. Then England controlled Canada.

The war was expensive. The English wanted the colonists to help pay the costs. The English started new taxes. One tax law was the Stamp Act. Other laws were the Navigation Acts. The colonists were angry. They did not want to buy stamps for all documents. They wanted to trade with several different countries. They could not say "no" to the laws. They could not vote on the laws. They had no representative in Parliament.

The colonists took action. They boycotted English goods. They tried to buy manufactured goods from other countries. They had demonstrations. They wrote letters to the newspapers. In 1773, the English also put a tax on tea. The colonists went on the tea ships in Boston and threw all the tea into the water. This was the "Boston Tea Party."
Using the Reading:
C. Read the first sentence in the following questions. Look at the two choices. Which choice means the same as the first sentence? Circle the letter of the better answer.

Example: Many French were fur traders in the north.
   a) Many English were farmers in the south.
   b) Many French worked as fur traders in the north.
   The correct answer is (b).

1) The French and the Indians were on one side.
   a) The French and the Indians fought together against the English.
   b) The French fought the Indians.

2) The American colonists wanted to trade with several different countries.
   a) The American colonists only wanted to trade with England.
   b) The American colonists wanted to trade with England and other countries.

3) They had no representatives in Parliament.
   a) The colonists did not have a representative in the English legislature.
   b) The colonists voted for new tax laws.

4) The colonists boycotted English goods.
   a) The colonists did not buy things from England.
   b) The colonists paid taxes on English tea.
Testing skills

Sometimes the INS official asks you questions aloud. You have to listen very carefully. You should think about the question and then answer it. Sometimes you do not understand the question or forget the answer. What should you do?

Read (or listen to) this conversation.

INS official: Mrs. Singh, I will ask you some questions about the problems between the colonies and England.
What happened after the French and Indian War?

Mrs. Singh: After the war...?

INS official: Yes. What did the English do to the colonies after the war?

Mrs. Singh: Oh, I understand now. The English started new taxes.

INS official: Yes. Can you tell me one of the taxes?

Mrs. Singh: Let me think... I think one tax was for...for...for newspapers?

INS official: Right. That was the Stamp Act. Let's continue.
What did the colonists do?...

Think about these questions:
1) Did Mrs. Singh answer the question the first time?
2) Do you think Mrs. Singh understood the question at first?
3) Why did she repeat "after the war...?"
4) Why did she say "Let me think?"
5) Do you hear people say "Let me think?" Is it a good expression to use?
6) If you do not know an answer immediately, what do you say?

Outlines are useful for studying. You can see the main points with an outline. You can also get examples or additional information for the main points. The outline form is easy to read. Usually outlines have Roman numerals for the main points. These are like numbers: I = 1 (one), II = 2 (two), III = 3 (three), IV = 4 (four), etc.
Look at the information. There are five main points in the Declaration of Independence. These points are:

I. All men are created equal
II. All people have certain ______ rights.
III. Governments exist by following the wishes of the ________.
IV. A list of ________ complaints.
V. The colonies are ________ and ________ states.

The Declaration of Independence tells 3 examples of basic rights. Look at part II. What are the three examples?

Look at part III. This part gives more information about one of the main points.

d) What must governments do?

e) Can the people form a new government? ______

The Articles Of Confederation

After the war, the U.S. was an independent country, but life was not easy for Americans. Some representatives to the Continental Congress wrote the Articles of Confederation. The Articles describe the new government. The states had a lot of power. The central government had a little power over all the states.
After the peace treaty, foreign countries knew the U.S. was an independent country.

The country was united. Many states and the central government printed different kinds of money.

The Articles of Confederation had strong points and weak points.

9 of the 13 states had to meet to pass national laws. The central government could not tax to get money for defense or make laws to recruit soldiers. All 13 states had to agree to amend the articles.

Settlers could go to the land in the west.

There were no courts to solve problems between states.

The central government could not control trade between states or with foreign countries. The central government had too much individual power.
Using the Information:
A. Answer the following questions from the diagram.

1) In which direction did settlers move after the war?

2) How could the central government get money?

3) How many states had to meet to pass laws?

4) Is it a bad idea for states to have different money? Why or why not?

5) Why do you think there was no executive head of the government?

B. Form a small group. Choose 2 of the problems below. Discuss ways to solve the problems. Share your ideas with the class.

1) The central government needs money, but it cannot collect taxes. What can it do?

2) The army needs more soldiers. How can it get them?

3) Some representatives want to make a new law. They ask all states to send representatives to the Congress, but they do not tell the reason. Only 8 states send representatives. What can they do?

4) Connecticut, New York and New Jersey have their own money. You cannot use New York money in Connecticut. You cannot use New Jersey money in New York. It is difficult to travel or trade in different states. How can this problem be fixed?
5) Virginia grows tobacco and wants to sell it in Maryland. Maryland puts a tax on it. The tobacco is very expensive with the tax. People in Maryland do not buy Virginia tobacco. What can farmers and representatives in Virginia try to do?

LESSON 8  THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

Objectives: Explain the reasons for writing the Constitution
Explain the compromises in the Constitution

Pre-Reading

Written: Read the questions below. Scan the following paragraph quickly and answer these questions. Circle yes (Y) or no (N).

1) Did the states want to change the Articles? Y N
2) Did the representatives to the convention meet in Washington, DC? Y N
3) Did all 13 states send representatives to a convention? Y N
4) Did the central government have problems with the Articles of Confederation? Y N

The states decided to change the Articles of Confederation. The central government had too many problems. The states acted like individual countries. Representatives from 12 states met in Philadelphia for a convention. They had many discussions about new ideas for the government. They wrote new rules. They called these rules the "Constitution."
Vocabulary:
Read the definitions of the following words.

Constitution - the official document of the rules for the U.S. government convention - a large meeting of people, usually for several days or a week compromise - a difficult agreement; different groups use only parts of their ideas for the final decision debate - a discussion between two people or groups with different ideas or opinions; both people or groups tell their ideas slavery - keeping people as workers without paying them or giving them freedom; having slaves tariff - a tax on foreign goods sold in the U.S.

loose Interpretation of the Constitution - a plan for understanding and following the Constitution. The Constitution does not list all the rules for the government. A loose interpretation lets the central government have more powers when necessary than the ones listed in the Constitution.

strict Interpretation of the Constitution - a plan for understanding and following the Constitution. The Constitution does not list all the rules for the government. A strict interpretation tells the central government it can only to use the powers listed in the Constitution. Other powers are for the state governments and the people.
Information

Constitutional Convention Compromises

The representatives at the Constitutional Convention wanted to change the Articles of Confederation. They decided to write the Constitution, but it was not easy. Different states had different ideas about a new government. The representatives had many debates. They told their opinions. They tried to think about good things for the country.

These are some ideas and compromises made at the convention:

from each state

Compromise: Have a Congress with two houses

Debate About The Constitution

It was not easy to write the Constitution. Different representatives had many ideas. They had discussions and debates about the situations in the U.S. Sometimes the South wanted one thing and the North wanted another thing. The men wrote the Constitution slowly and carefully. They wanted it to last for a long time.

The Constitution was not accepted by all Americans immediately. After the representatives at the convention agreed to it, each state government had to vote on it. Now all the people could discuss the ideas in the Constitution. People wrote letters to the newspapers about their opinions.

Many people were interested in the Constitution. Two groups formed. They were the Federalists and the anti-Federalists. The Federalists wanted the states to accept the Constitution. They believed in a loose interpretation of the Constitution. The anti-Federalists wanted to make sure their rights and liberties were included in the Constitution. They wanted a strict interpretation.

The representatives signed the Constitution in 1787. The debate in the 13 states lasted 3 years. Finally, all the state governments accepted the Constitution by 1790. The Constitution became the official rules of the U.S. government.
Using the Reading:
C. All the following sentences are false. Write the true sentences.

1. The representatives wrote the Constitution quickly.

2. The representatives did not have any disagreements about the Constitution.

3. When all the representatives signed the Constitution, it became the official rules for the U.S. government.

4. The Constitution is important because it tells about the U.S. war for independence.

The U.S. Constitution

We have a living Constitution. It explains our system of government. The main document is the same today as it was in 1787. But we made some changes and additions in the amendments. The main part of the Constitution has seven articles (I - VII). By 1791 there were 10 amendments. They are called the Bill of Rights.

Reading

The Bill Of Rights

Three years after the representatives signed the Constitution all the states ratified it. The states had different reasons for debating if the Constitution was good or bad. In one debate, some states did not want the President to become like a king. In another debate, some states wanted to make sure their states had some powers.

One of the biggest debates was about guaranteeing rights and freedoms to the people. The representatives decided to add 10 amendments to the Constitution immediately. They wrote the Bill of Rights. All the states quickly agreed to these amendments.

We speak about some of these amendments more often than the others. The First (1st) Amendment says we have freedom of religion, speech, press and assembly. We can follow any religion, say or write our thoughts, and meet in groups. The Second (2nd) Amendment says we can have guns for our protection, but Congress can make laws about buying and selling them. The Fourth (4th) Amendment says police must have a court paper before they can search our homes. The Fifth (5th) Amendment says you do not have to talk against yourself at a trial in court. The Sixth (6th) Amendment says if someone accuses you of a crime, you have the right to a fair and speedy trial. You can also have a lawyer to help you.

The Life of George Washington

George Washington was born in 1732. He grew up in the Virginia Colony. During the French and Indian War, he fought with the British. He was a good soldier.

Washington wanted the American colonies to be independent. When the representatives at the Continental Congress asked him to be the chief of the militia, he agreed. He taught the men in the militia many things about fighting. He trained the men well. The colonies won the war with help from French soldiers.

Washington knew the Articles of Confederation were not very good for the U.S. He agreed to lead the Constitutional Convention. He helped form compromises during the debates. He wanted the states to ratify the Constitution, so he wrote letters and spoke to people in different states about it.

In 1789 Washington became the first President of the U.S. All the representatives voted for him. No one voted against him. His election was unanimous. His vice president was John Adams.

He did not want to be like a king. He asked people to help him. They were his advisors, or Cabinet members. Now every President has a Cabinet. Washington's Cabinet had four Secretaries: State, War, Treasury, and Attorney General. The number of Secretaries can change. In 1987, the Cabinet had 13 members.

Washington was elected for a second term. But, he decided to leave the office of President after the second time. Washington also gave an important Farewell Address. In his talk, he gave ideas for U.S. foreign policy. He suggested American Isolation. He did not want the U.S. to become part of European problems. He knew the U.S. had problems itself, and Americans had to help make their own country better first.

George Washington lived at Mount Vernon in Virginia after the presidency. He died in 1799. Washington was a great man. Americans call him the "Father of Our Country." We remember him and another great president, Abraham Lincoln, on Presidents' Day. It is a national holiday in February.

LESSON 11  THE BEGINNINGS OF POLITICAL PARTIES

Objective: Identify the first major political parties in the U.S., their characteristics and their leaders.

Pre-Reading

Oral: Discuss these questions with the class.
- What is a political party?
- Do you have political parties in your country?
  Some countries, like Zaire, have one political party.
  Other countries, like Lebanon, have many parties.
- How many parties do you have in your country?
- Do you or did you belong to a political party?
  What is/was the name of it?

Written: Scan this paragraph from the Federal Citizenship Text Series - U.S. History 1600-1987. Circle the following words as you read.

Democratic-Republican  other political parties two-party system  open

"The Federalists and the Democratic-Republicans formed the first political parties in the U.S. and the two-party system has provided the basis for the U.S. government. Two of today's parties have roots in these early parties. They are the Republicans (Federalists) and the Democrats (Democratic-Republicans). There are other political parties, also. Having more than one party keeps the political system open and balanced."

Think about this: Why are political parties important?
Two Political Parties: Federalists and Democratic-Republicans

Many Federalists were rich people like bankers and they lived in the northern states. They wanted to have a strong central government. They thought a loose interpretation of the Constitution was important. They followed a neutral position of foreign policy (this means they did not help one side or the other during a war), but they liked England. Two leaders of this party were Alexander Hamilton and John Adams.

Most Democratic-Republicans were not rich people. They were farmers and small store owners. They usually lived in the southern and western states and territories. They wanted the states and the people to have power and to have a weak central government. They believed in a strict interpretation of the Constitution. They also followed a neutral position on foreign policy, but they liked France. Thomas Jefferson and James Madison were two leaders of the Democratic-Republicans.

The Monroe Doctrine

Americans were proud of the U.S. after the War of 1812. All the states worked together during the war. In the North, people built factories. In the South and West, farmers produced food. The country became stronger.

Many Latin American countries became independent between 1814 - 1824. The U.S. and the Latin American countries had the same idea—"independence". The U.S. wanted to help these countries stay independent.

In 1823, President Monroe made an important speech. This speech is called the Monroe Doctrine. Monroe said:

1) European countries should not interfere with the independent countries in North and South America.
2) European countries should not start any new colonies in the Americas.
3) The U.S. would not interfere with any European colonies still in the Americas.
4) The U.S. would not interfere with problems in Europe.
Monroe wanted a policy of isolation. He told the European countries to leave all the North, South and Central American countries alone. If the Europeans attacked an American country, the U.S. would act against them. The ideas of the Monroe doctrine are still used today.

Manifest Destiny

There were many changes in the 1800's. The country became stronger and more important. There were more people in the country. Americans believed the country should reach the Pacific Ocean. People believed it was their "right" to have all the land between the two oceans. They believed it was their destiny, or fate.

There are many reasons the U.S. expanded in the 1800's. Many Americans wanted farmland in the West. They wanted land to raise cattle. Americans wanted to transport goods on the Mississippi River to New Orleans. Some people were tired of factory work. They wanted to go west. Others went west because they heard there was gold in California and Alaska. The U.S. government wanted to control all the land from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific Ocean. They wanted all foreign countries to give up their land in the U.S.

The move west was good for the settlers. But, there were many problems too. There was a lot of fighting between the settlers and the Indians. The U.S. government and the Native Americans signed many treaties. Native Americans lost most of their land to farmers and the railroad.

The U.S. got the new territories from different countries. Sometimes, the U.S. bought the land. The U.S. bought the Louisiana Territory from France, Florida from Spain, and Alaska from Russia.
Sometimes, the U.S. fought a war for land. The U.S. fought Mexico for Texas and the Southwest. Other times, the U.S. signed a treaty for land. The U.S. signed a treaty with England for half of the Oregon country.

The Problem of Slavery

There were many differences between the North and the South. One important difference was slavery. In the 1800's, the South needed many people to work on the plantations. Plantation owners bought slaves to do this work. Slavery was important to the economy of the South. Some people in the North did not like slavery. They said slavery took away individual freedoms. These people wanted to abolish slavery. They were called abolitionists.

The problem of slavery grew with the country. The North wanted new states to be free states (without slavery). The South wanted new states to be slave states (with slavery). In 1820 there were 11 free states and 11 slave states. The North and the South had the same number of senators in Congress. Then Missouri asked to become a state. If Missouri became a free state, the North would have more senators. The South did not want the North to have more senators and more representatives. The men in Congress had many discussions about this problem. It was very difficult for both sides to agree. Finally, they compromised. The Missouri Compromise made Missouri a slave state and Maine a free state.

The problems did not stop with the Missouri Compromise. In 1850 California asked to become a free state. There were 15 slave states and 15 free states at that time. Congress had to make a new compromise. In the Compromise of 1850, California became a free state, but the other parts of the Mexican Cession could be slave states or free states. The people in the new states would vote and decide.

There were problems in other areas, too. Slave owners and abolitionists tried to settle the lands of Kansas and Nebraska. The slave owners wanted the people to vote for Kansas and Nebraska to be slave states. The abolitionists wanted people to vote to be free. Sometimes the two sides fought. The problems were growing.
Using the Reading:
C. Use these words to write questions. Later you can ask a partner to answer the questions.

Abraham Lincoln

Abraham Lincoln was born in a log cabin in Kentucky. Later his family moved to Illinois. They were poor. He went to school for only one year. He learned by reading all the time. He studied hard and became a lawyer.

Abraham Lincoln was elected the 16th President of the U.S. in 1860. The people in the South did not like Lincoln because he was from the North. Lincoln did not want slavery in the new states. The South was afraid he would abolish slavery.

We remember Lincoln because he was a strong President during the Civil War. He believed the country should stay together. He said the Confederate states could not secede. His goal during the Civil War was to keep the Union together.

Lincoln was a great speaker. He is famous for the Emancipation Proclamation. In the Emancipation Proclamation, Lincoln started to abolish slavery. He said all slaves in the Confederate states were free. He said blacks could fight in the Union Army.

Lincoln's most famous speech was the Gettysburg Address. He made the speech in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania in 1863. Lincoln told the people to remember these important words from the Declaration of Independence: "all men are created equal ...". He also said, "...a government of the people, by the people, for the people..." will stay together.

The Civil War ended in 1865. Lincoln was elected President again. He had great plans to reunite the country. But Lincoln did not live to reunite the country. He was assassinated five days after the election.

President Lincoln was assassinated in 1865. Vice-President Andrew Johnson became President. Johnson wanted to use Lincoln's plan to reunite the country. He said the Confederate states could be part of the Union again if they ratified the 13th Amendment, and if they obeyed federal laws.

Congress did not like Johnson's plan. They said the Confederate states had to ratify the 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments before they could reunite with the Union. The 13th Amendment abolished slavery. The 14th Amendment said all Blacks were citizens of the U.S. The 15th Amendment gave Blacks the right to vote. Congress also said the Confederate states had to write new state constitutions.

Reconstruction (1865 - 1877) was a difficult time in the U.S. It was very difficult for the South. Many things in the South were destroyed in the war. The South had to make many changes. Congress tried to help the South rebuild. Congress tried to help the ex-slaves get food, housing, and education.

The Industrial Revolution

There were many changes during the Industrial Revolution. New inventions made life easier. Goods made in factories were cheaper than goods made by hand. The U.S. had more goods to sell to other countries. There were more jobs in the factories.

There were also many problems during the Industrial Revolution. Working in the factories was not easy. Men, women and children worked about 12 hours a day, six days a week. The factories were noisy. There were accidents and workers often got sick. The pay was very low. The factory workers could not complain. If they did complain, they could lose their jobs. Many other people wanted to have their jobs.

It was very expensive to build factories and to buy machines. The factory owners had a lot of money. They became very powerful; they set high prices for the goods and did not pay the workers well. Soon the big companies took control of many smaller companies. The factory owners became very rich.

The workers were poor. They wanted better pay and working conditions. They wanted an 8-hour workday. They didn't want children working in the factories. In the late 1880's, they began to form groups. They were stronger as a group. These groups were called unions. Unions are still important today in many industries.
Using the Reading:
C. Form a small group. Discuss the following questions.

1) How do you think the factory owners lived in the 1800's?
2) How do you think the factory workers lived in the 1800's?
3) Are there more laws to help the workers now?
4) Are you a member of a union?
5) What are some advantages (good points) and disadvantages (bad points) of unions?

THE PROGRESSIVES

Objective  Identify important changes the Progressives made

Pre-Reading
Vocabulary:
Use your dictionary to find definitions for the following words.

Progressives  ________________________________ income  ________________________________ monopoly  ________________________________ reform  ________________________________ secret  ________________________________ honest  ________________________________

Written:  Scan the reading on the next page. Circle the following words.

honest  monopolies  Amendment reforms  secret  income taxes
The Progressives were a group of people asking for reforms. They wanted to help farms, factories and small businesses. They wanted to improve life for poor people. The Progressives wanted democracy for all people.

The Progressives helped make laws to control business. There were new laws to stop monopolies (1890). These laws said big businesses could not buy all the small companies. Big companies could not control the prices. The government also made laws to control the railroads (1894). These laws said railroads could not make prices too high.

The Progressives also helped make changes about voting and elections. State laws made all voting secret. Elections became more honest. The 17th Amendment (1913) changed the election of senators. Before the 17th Amendment, state governments chose the senators. After the 17th Amendment, the people in the states voted directly for senators. Finally, the 19th Amendment (1920) gave women the right to vote.

The Progressives also helped write the 16th Amendment (1913) about income taxes. These were taxes on the money people made. If people made a lot of money, they had to pay higher taxes. The government used this tax money to improve things. They built more roads and schools.
There were many other laws to help people. The central government became much stronger during the late 1800's and the early 1900's.

In the beginning of WWI the U.S. was a 1) __neutral____ country. The U.S. sold goods to both the 2) _____________ and the 3) _____________ Powers. (2) War hurts the economy of a country.

One group will argue for sentence (1). The other group will argue for sentence (2). Each group should prepare a list of ideas for the debate. Think about WWI and the U.S. economy. Think about WWI and the economy of the European countries. Think about wars in your countries.
Reading

The Treaty of Versailles

The war was over. President Wilson had a plan for peace. He met with leaders of England, France and Italy in Versailles, France. They tried to negotiate a peace treaty based on fourteen points. The 14 points were:

1. no secret treaties
2-3. freedom of the seas and trade
4. less military equipment (guns, ships, tanks, etc.)
5. fair decisions about all colonies
6-13. self determination for the people in all countries
14. to establish the League of Nations

The European countries did not like all the points. The leaders had to make many compromises.

The League of Nations (an association of countries) was the most important point. The leaders said all countries should join the League. All countries should talk about problems and negotiate at the League of Nations. If countries talked and negotiated, they could prevent war. Later, the ideas from the League of Nations helped start the United Nations.

Unfortunately, the U.S. Senate did not ratify the Treaty of Versailles. The U.S. did not join the League of Nations. Many Americans wanted isolation to be the foreign policy. They wanted the country to be neutral.
Using the Reading:
C. Some of the 14 points are in the left column. Read the points on the left and the sentences on the right. Find the sentence with the same meaning. Put the letter of the sentence next to the correct point.

___ 1) self-determination  a) Countries cannot spend too much money on guns.
___ 2) freedom of trade  b) Countries come together to talk. They should not fight.

Franklin D. Roosevelt was elected President in 1932. He wanted the central government to help the people. The New Deal was Roosevelt's plan to help the people and to end the Depression. The government made many changes during the New Deal. Some of the most important ways the government helped were:

-- providing jobs to build roads, bridges, schools, government offices, parks, etc.
-- providing loans to help people buy and keep houses and farms.
-- establishing regulations for banks and businesses.
-- setting up the Social Security system

Some people did not like Roosevelt's plan, but he was elected again in 1936. The Depression continued until 1939. Another war began in Europe and the U.S. started to produce goods for WWII. There were jobs in the factories again. The U.S. economy started to improve.

The Beginning of WWII

There were many economic problems in the world after WWI and during the Depression. Germany had a very difficult time. A new group, the Nazis, came to power in Germany in 1933. Their leader was Adolf Hitler. A similar group came to power in Italy. Their leader was Benito Mussolini. These two countries wanted to use military power to get more territory and to end the economic problems. At the same time, Japan wanted more territory and power in Asia. These 3 countries invaded other countries and fighting started in the 1930's.

The U.S., France and England did not want to fight another war. France and England tried to negotiate with Hitler and other leaders. The U.S. Congress passed laws to keep the U.S. neutral. The laws said the U.S. could not sell war goods or make loans to any country fighting a war.

Japan attacked and took control of parts of China between 1931 and 1939. Italy invaded Ethiopia in North Africa in 1935. Hitler wanted to control all of Europe, and Germany invaded Poland in September 1939. France and England (the Allies) declared war on Germany -- WWII began.

In the beginning the U.S. stayed neutral. Later the U.S. Congress passed new laws so the U.S. could help England and France. In December 1941 the Japanese attacked the U.S. Navy at Pearl Harbor. The U.S. joined the Allies and declared war against Japan.

Reading

The Vietnam War

Vietnam was a French colony. After World War II, Vietnam wanted to be all independent. But, there were two political parties in the country. Both wanted power. Vietnam had a civil war. Communist troops in the north fought with anti-communists troops in the south.

The Vietnam War was very unpopular in the U.S. Public opinion was split into two sides. Some people thought the U.S. should fight against communism in other countries. Other people thought Vietnam was not the responsibility of the U.S. They did not want U.S. soldiers to die there.
President Nixon promised to end the war. He helped negotiate a peace treaty with the North Vietnamese in 1973. Americans soldiers started to come home. But, in 1975, the North attacked the South again. This time the North defeated and controlled the South. Communists ruled all of Vietnam.

Because the Vietnam War was unpopular, many Americans did not honor Vietnam veterans. Many veterans were depressed. It was not easy for them to adjust to life in the U.S. again. In the 1980's a memorial was built for the Vietnam veterans. It is in Washington, DC. In the mid 1980's, people began to honor the Vietnam veterans more.

Reverend Martin Luther King, Jr. was a famous leader of the Civil Rights movement. He believed Blacks could change the opinions of many Americans with non-violent demonstrations. He wanted to stop segregation, but he did not want fighting or violence. One law said Blacks had to sit in the back of buses. This was not fair.

King helped plan a boycott of buses in Montgomery, Alabama. Blacks did not ride on the buses for more than one year. Finally, segregation on buses stopped. King also led non-violent protests, demonstrations, sit-ins and marches all over the U.S. He wanted to help all poor Americans. He gave many famous speeches.

In 1964 King received the Nobel Peace Prize for his non-violent movement. This was a great honor. In 1968, King was assassinated. The U.S. lost a great leader, but the Civil Rights movement continued and new laws gave more equality to Blacks.

In January we celebrate Martin Luther King, Jr. Day. It is a national holiday.

Reading

Watergate

During the 1972 election campaign, some people entered the offices of the Democratic Party in the Watergate building in Washington, D.C. They took some information. This action was illegal. President Nixon, a Republican, said he did not know about the action. Some people found audiotapes from Nixon's office. These tapes had conversations of Nixon with some advisors. The conversations were about the illegal action. So, Nixon did know about the action. He lied to the American people and tried to stop the public from learning the truth. Some writers for The Washington Post, a newspaper, wrote articles to tell the story to the public.

Members of Congress and many Americans were angry. Congress started impeachment hearings. Nixon's advisors resigned or were removed from their positions. Nixon resigned in 1974 before the House of Representatives impeached him.

There were good and bad sides of Watergate. The good part was:

- We knew our system of government worked. Congress was able to check on the President and stop him.
- The First Amendment--Freedom of the Press--was also important. The newspapermen found out Nixon was doing something wrong. They could write about it in the newspaper.
The bad side of Watergate was:

- The executive branch did some illegal things.
- The public did not trust the government for several years.

Using the Reading:

C. Answer the following questions.

1. What happened at the Watergate Building?

Reading

The Immigrants

The U.S. is a country of immigrants. People started to immigrate to the U.S. in the early 1600's. People still immigrate today. The immigrants come from all over the world. They bring their families, foods, languages, religions, and cultures.
People immigrate to the U.S. for many reasons. The early settlers (mostly from England) came for religious, political, or economic reasons. Other early immigrants were the black slaves from Africa. Their situation was different. Other people brought them to the U.S. They did not want to come.

As the country grew in the 1800's, more immigrants from Northern and Western Europe came to the U.S. They wanted jobs in factories or land to farm. Many Chinese also came to help build railroads across the U.S.

After 1880, many Southern and Eastern Europeans started immigrating. They had many problems in their countries and wanted to leave. One problem was the discrimination against Jewish people in Russia. Another problem was the lack of many opportunities for people in Europe to have a good life. The cities were too crowded and there was very little land for farms.

Between 1900 and 1920 about 14 million immigrants came to the U.S. In 1907 there were more than 1 million immigrants. Some Americans thought there were too many immigrants. They said the new immigrants were different. The U.S. cities were getting crowded. There was not much new land for farmers. People asked Congress to pass new immigration laws.
The Immigration Act of 1917 excluded all Asians (except from the Philippines) and said all immigrants must be able to read and write. In the 1920's Congress passed more laws to limit the numbers of immigrants from each country. These laws put strong limits on immigrants from many different parts of the world.

Immigration decreased during the Depression and WWII. After the war, the U.S. said refugees of WWII could immigrate to the U.S. Later, a new law let some Asians immigrate. Some people did not want laws to discriminate against people from different countries. President Johnson signed the Immigration Law of 1965. It opened immigration from all parts of the world. This law did not discriminate.

The Immigration Law of 1986 (IRCA) was very different from the earlier laws. IRCA gave amnesty to over 1 million illegal immigrants. (See lesson 27 for more information.)

*Using the Reading:

1. Before 1880, where did most of the immigrants come from?

F. Read the paragraphs below. Then complete the following outline.

The Expansion of the United States

The U.S. grew from two small colonies to a very large country. It began with the Jamestown and Plymouth colonies. They were on the east coast of North America in the early 1600's. More people came to settle until Colonial America had 13 colonies. At first, the 13 colonies were part of England. Then the men fought a war for independence in 1776. After the Revolutionary War, the colonies became 13 states.
The United States of America did not stop growing. In the 1800's settlers moved west, south and north from the first 13 states. Many immigrants came to the U.S. in the 1800's. They needed land for their homes. They settled in the new territories.

The U.S. got more land in two ways:
1) The U.S. bought land, like the Louisiana Purchase; and
2) The U.S. got land from treaties after the U.S. Army won some wars.
   The U.S. got the territories of Texas, New Mexico and Arizona from the Mexican-American War.

Also in the 1800's transportation helped the country grow larger. Men built railroads across the U.S. People could move more easily then. In the late 1800's Henry Ford started producing cars. People used cars to travel.

During the 1900's the U.S. did not get many new territories. The territories from the 1800's became states.

TO THE INSTRUCTOR

General Guidelines

Of The People: U.S. History, By The People: U.S. Government Structure, and For The People: U.S. Citizenship Education and Naturalization Information have been created for limited English proficient students who are applying for citizenship or permanent resident status. The books were developed for the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) of the U.S. Department of Justice. The contents are based upon the INS' federal citizenship textbook series.

These books have been written for advanced beginner/low intermediate English as a Second Language (ESL) students. For those teachers and administrators familiar with the SPL (Student Performance Level) ratings, these books address level 4 students, with some less difficult exercises for level 3 students and some more challenging ones for level 5 students. Instructors can use these texts to create their own lessons for students at SPL 1 and 2. The lessons in these books incorporate all four skills: listening, speaking, reading and writing. The lessons become progressively more difficult as the students continue through the course.

Our past experience with this student population indicates that many students in the citizenship classes have stronger oral skills than literacy skills. We sought to build upon those oral/aural skills when developing these lessons. Each lesson begins with a discussion exercise to provide background information to the content that will be presented, as well as to elicit any information the students already have about the subject. In addition, these discussions offer the students opportunities to compare their countries and cultures with the U.S. Furthermore, within each lesson there are paired and group activities that encourage speaking practice and opinion-sharing among the students.
Most teachers will find not only students with strong oral skills in their classes, but also students of mixed levels and abilities. These heterogeneous, multi-level classes are frequently the most difficult to teach. Our awareness of this fact led us to include a wide variety of exercises and presentations of the information. The opportunities for cooperative learning approaches exist with written and oral group work, peer teaching and problem-solving activities.

Besides the inclusion of much oral practice, these books have another unique feature. Each lesson contains a testing section that helps prepare students for oral and written exams. The students have the opportunity to learn how to pause or stall and request clarification or repetition when confronted with oral questions which they do not hear correctly or understand at first. The written testing exercises expose students to the diverse types of exam questions commonly found in American schools and training programs. This testing section is also important because it reinforces the material learned in the lesson.

The instructor’s role should be that of a facilitator, while doing these lessons. The aim is to guide the instruction and the subsequent comprehension as the information is conveyed through the charts, diagrams, pictures, maps and readings. The salient points of the material are emphasized and should be reinforced by the instructor. However, we hope the students will learn how to read these charts, et. al., on their own after some initial guidance.

The instructor does however provide a crucial link for the students between the classroom and the outside world. It is with the instructor’s experience and resources that the students will be able to move beyond the book. The instructor should use authentic materials from newspapers, radio and TV news, and community centers (e.g., libraries, historical landmarks, government offices) while conducting the classes. It is most important to demonstrate to the students how the government and history subjects affect their lives today.

The instructor is also best suited to gear the instruction to the appropriate level of the class. Knowing the composition of the student body, the instructor can decide which exercises to complete in the lessons. Not all of them need to be done, nor must all of them be done with the methods we have suggested. For example, if all the students would understand an exercise better when done together as a class, then the instructor should feel free to utilize the material in that way. We have deliberately built into the lessons and exercises methodological flexibility.

It is also important for instructors to remember that these textbooks are content-based. They have been designed to present history, government and civics in a comprehensible manner to limited English speakers, encouraging their participation and skill development. They have not been designed to teach survival or academic ESL. Using these books alone will not teach basic English to beginning students.

Furthermore, the authors have assumed that the instructors using these textbooks have had some experience teaching ESL and/or this adult population already. The following teacher's notes are guides to instruction and not a text in general methods and techniques of teaching ESL to adults. They do not explain each exercise, nor tell the instructor how to address students, divide classes into pairs or groups, generate discussion, or judge which sections to embellish and which to disregard. That knowledge comes from the instructor's own experience and attentiveness to the students being taught.

These texts were developed in a very short time frame, and therefore had only limited field-testing. The authors would appreciate feedback from classroom and tutorial experience for revisions in future editions.
LESSON FORMAT

Students will practice all skill areas -- listening, speaking, reading and writing. Most of the lessons have 6 parts, including:

I. Objective(s)
II. Pre-Reading
III. Information
IV. Reading
V. Testing skills
VI. Review

I. Objective(s): Each lesson has one or more stated objectives. The objectives are written in terms that you, as the teacher, will understand more easily than the students. They will help you focus on the key information in each lesson.

II. Pre-Reading: The Pre-Reading section of the lessons is very important. The Pre-Reading exercises prepare the students for the new material in the lesson and can help you assess how much the students already know about the topic. Every lesson has two or three exercises -- Oral, Vocabulary, Map skills and/or Written.

Oral: The stimulus for the oral exercise is usually a picture or short situation statement with questions for discussion. The discussions can be conducted with pairs, small groups or the entire class. The questions are designed to stimulate some discussion and to introduce the topic of the lesson. Whenever possible, the teacher should try to build on what students already know about their own countries and the U.S. If the students work in small groups, it is always a good idea to bring everyone back together to share the group responses.

Written: There are several different types of written exercises -- scanning, guessing (or predicting), and matching. In scanning exercises, you must always make sure the students read the questions before they scan the paragraph or chart. This helps them focus on specific pieces of information. It is also helpful to give the students a time limit for completing the scanning exercise.

For the guessing (or predicting) exercises, teachers should reinforce the idea of guessing - what do the students think the answer will be? Stress that they are not expected to know the answer. Everyone should review the predictions after the lesson is completed.

Map skills: Students may not have had much practice using maps. Students with limited literacy skills might have a difficult time finding specific information on a map, so additional time and practice may be necessary. The map exercises in this book focus on directions and using a key (legend). They are included to visually reinforce the information given in the lesson.

Vocabulary: Many of the vocabulary words that are needed to learn about the U.S. history are not used everyday and will have to be taught. The most important thing to remember is to work from the known to the unknown.

Keep in mind that a lot of the vocabulary is passive - we do not need to use it, but we do need to understand it. In addition, certain abstract concepts, such as democracy and freedom, may be unfamiliar to the students; and extra care should be taken during their explanations.

When teaching vocabulary, you should try to contextualize the words as much as possible.

For example, in lesson 4, there are definitions for fur and trapper. If you show a picture of a fur trapper, the students will probably understand the words more readily.
Another way to contextualize is to give examples or situations of how the word is used in everyday speech.

For example, in lesson 6, students read the word\textit{victory}. Talk about the end of a soccer or football game. Most students will be able to visualize victory in the context of winning a game.

If your students speak a Romance language (Spanish, French, Portuguese, etc.), another good strategy for dealing with new vocabulary is to use cognates, words that are similar in both English and their native language.

For example, in lesson 2, students find the word\textit{permanent}. Spanish speakers should recognize the Spanish cognate, \textit{permanente}. Some cognates, such as \textit{guarantee} in lesson 9, will only differ in pronunciation or in spelling with one or two letters, e.g., \textit{guarantizar}.

One word of caution with cognates, though. You do not want the students to get the idea that all English words that sound or look like words in their native language are cognates. They also have to beware of false cognates [e.g., "embarrassed" in English is not \textit{embarazada} (pregnant) in Spanish].

The lessons contain different types of vocabulary exercises. In some instances, we provide the definitions and/or example sentences. In others, we suggest students use a dictionary to write the definitions themselves, complete crossword puzzles, or answer matching exercises. Encourage students to try these exercises without a dictionary first. Other types of exercises are: finding the word which does not belong, unscrambling, and sentence completions.
III. Information: The topic, or new information, is usually presented in a chart, diagram, map, or timeline. We chose this approach with the beginning student in mind. We hope that students will be able to break the Information down into parts, and therefore, be able to understand the material more easily. We also feel this format is less threatening than a page of prose. Moreover, it highlights the most salient features of the lesson.

The starting point of all the Information pages is the title. Have the students make predictions based on the title. Next, have the students skim the page quickly for some general impressions of the content. Finally, ask the students to read the Information carefully.

Some students with limited literacy skills may have difficulty focusing on the charts and diagrams. Teachers can help by guiding the students with questions.

For example, in lesson 1, you can ask students to tell you what is on the left side, in the middle, and on the right side of the chart. You might ask them to tell you the names of other explorers. You could look at a map and find where the different explorers went. You could also make this more relevant to students by discussing what different ethnic groups are in your local area and why they may have chosen to settle in that area.

Always encourage students to ask questions. Let classmates supply the answers whenever possible. Refer the students back to the Vocabulary or Pre-Reading exercise(s) when appropriate.

Using the Information: There are usually two exercises after the Information presentation. One requires writing and the other requires listening and/or speaking. Before asking the students to complete the exercises, you should make sure they understand the instructions. There are many different types of exercises, so the students will need some guidance. Each time a new type of exercise is introduced, we have explained its procedure in the lesson notes which follow.

These exercises are not for testing, so encourage the students to look at the Information page. After the students complete the written exercises, they can check their answers in groups or pairs, or they can look at the answer key in the back of the book. All the small group discussions should be reviewed with the entire class.

For example, exercise B in lesson 1, asks each pair to make a list of reasons for coming to the U.S. After the pairs finish making a list, have them report one or two of the reasons to the class.

IV. Reading: Sometimes the Reading will be a prose version of the Information. Other times the Reading will introduce new material on the same topic. Most of the Readings have been simplified from the INS federal citizenship series' U.S. History text. However, there are some paragraphs that have been copied directly from the text and are followed by simplification exercises.

The teaching strategies for the Reading are similar to those used with the Information. First, have students discuss the title. Next have them skim the paragraphs for the main idea or scan the paragraphs for specific pieces of information. Finally, have the students read the passage silently. As with the Information, encourage students to refer back to earlier parts of the lesson and to ask questions. The words in bold-face are new vocabulary words for that lesson.

Using the Reading: The reading comprehension exercise is not a test. Students should be encouraged to look at the Reading while completing the exercise. The purpose of the exercise is to help the students understand the basic concepts and to provide language practice. Again, students should check their answers before continuing on to the next part of the lesson.

V. Testing skills: The purpose of the Testing skills section is twofold. First, this section tests the students' mastery of the key points in the lesson. Second, and more importantly, it helps students prepare for test-taking situations. Our experience with this population has indicated that students frequently do indeed have the necessary knowledge to pass a test, but they are often unable to demonstrate their knowledge without appropriate test-taking skills.

In the beginning you will have to guide the students through the different types of tests. About one half are pen-and-paper type tests - Multiple Choice, True/False, Matching, Listening Discrimination, etc. The other half are simulated oral interviews. You may want to record these interviews on tape for additional listening practice. In the interviews, students will learn and practice requesting clarification, and pausing or stalling while thinking about an answer. We include these strategies in the testing section because they are used so often by native speakers in interview situations. Students should be encouraged to learn and use more clarification and stalling strategies.

Students should check their answers before proceeding. One good learning strategy is to look back through the lesson and circle (or highlight) the answers in the text.

VI. Review: The last section is very brief. The review questions focus on the key points of the lesson and restate the objective(s). The answers do not need to be written. If students are unable to answer the review questions, try to help the student identify what s/he missed. You may need to create some additional practice exercises. If students are able to answer the review questions, they are ready to begin the next lesson.
Lesson 1

Oral: Discuss the map and the boats. You can try to assess the students' map skills as you ask them questions. Note that students from North, South and Central America celebrate Columbus Day in their countries. Discuss the festivities they have seen, i.e., parades, speeches, etc.

Map skills: Many students may not have adequate map reading skills at first. The activities increase in difficulty as the students progress through the lessons. In this lesson introduce the directional arrows for N, S, E and W. Discuss these directions with local towns, states, etc. Ask questions such as:
- What city is east of our town?
- What state is north of us?, etc.

NE, NW, SE, and SE could also be explained in a similar manner. If students are unfamiliar with the multiple-choice format, you may need to explain it by providing further examples.

Exercise A: This exercise will introduce students to reading charts.

Exercise B: When the groups finish, you may want to write a master list on the blackboard.

Reading: Some students may wish to tell their reasons for coming to the U.S.

Exercise C: This is the first true/false exercise. With more advanced students you can ask them to correct the false statements.

Testing skills: This exercise focuses on the WH question words. You may want students to explain why they chose their answers (e.g., 2b is wrong because it answers the question "why?", not "where?"). Point out that "how?", "how many?", etc. are also considered WH question words.

Review: Explain to the students that they need to fill in missing letters to complete the answers. You can do some as examples.
Lesson 2

Oral: Review this map again. Read the following dictation to the students:

   English explorers left England. They sailed to the New World. They sailed across the Atlantic Ocean. They settled on the east coast of North America. French explorers left France. They went to the "New World." They settled north of the English settlers.

Vocabulary: This is the first crossword puzzle. Encourage students to use their dictionaries. You may need to teach some dictionary skills, such as using guide words at the top of the pages.

Exercise A: Here the students must transfer the information into a chart form.

Exercise B: This is the first exercise of this type. Later exercises may have both true and false sentences interspersed. Here, all the sentences are false and the partners must correct them orally. There can be more than one way to correct the sentences. If desired, the correct answers can also be written, individually or on the blackboard.

Testing skills: This exercise will begin to prepare the students for oral examinations by testing their listening discrimination ability. Read the following sentences to them:

   example: Who went to Virginia?

   1) Why did the traders go to Jamestown?

   2) What colony was south of Plymouth?

   3) What did the Jamestown settlers trade with England?

   4) What did Pilgrims celebrate with the Indians?

Lesson 3

Oral: Display a map of the U.S. so all students can refer to it. Like the Review section of Lesson 1, students must fill in letters to complete the words.

Vocabulary: The word search includes words from Lessons 2 and 3.

Information: Tell the students that Dutch refers to people from the Netherlands (Holland).
Exercise B: This is the first unscrambling exercise. You may want to help the students form the sentences correctly.

Exercise C: Get the whole class involved in the town meeting. They could choose one or two of the issues to solve. Since town meetings were examples of direct democracy, try to let each student give his/her opinion. Let the class vote for a solution.

Lesson 4
Map skills: The pictures on the map represent an English farmer and a French trapper. The intention of this exercise is to let students infer information from arrows and pictures. The questions ask the students to think. It is not necessary that they have the correct answers checked at this point in the lesson.

Vocabulary: Since this is the first Vocabulary matching exercise, you may want to do it in a group. Students could take turns looking up unknown definitions in the dictionary.

Information: This is the first timeline in the book. You may want to tell the students that the distance between the years is not drawn to scale. The dates on the left of the line are markers. The dates on the right of the line tell when the event happened.

Exercise A: This exercise introduces students to using timelines.

Exercise B: Encourage students to include as much information as possible on their personal timelines, but do not press them if they feel uncomfortable sharing certain pieces of information.

Exercise C: This is the first time students are asked to find a sentence with the same meaning. You may want to do the first one together. Students should refer to the Vocabulary as well as the Reading.

Testing skills: It is important that students understand that native speakers use requests for clarification and stalling/pausing strategies all the time in conversation. Have the students role play a conversation using these strategies. Think of some other examples to share with the students.

Lesson 5
Written: This is a scanning exercise. Students should only circle the words. They do not need to read the paragraph carefully. It may be helpful to set a time limit.
Vocabulary: Since this is the first exercise where students write definitions, you may want to do a few together. You may also need to explain dictionary skills, such as alphabetizing and using guide words. For more advanced students, ask them to write their own definitions rather than copy ones from the dictionary.

Information: This lesson introduces students to outlines. Here they extract information from the outlines and later they will write outlines based on information.

Exercise B: You may want to refer to this exercise later when the class studies Lesson 25 on Civil Rights.

Lesson 6

Oral: Read the following paragraph to the class. Have the students listen during the first reading and fill in the missing words during the second reading:

The second Continental Congress met in Philadelphia in 1776. The men signed the Declaration of Independence. The war with England began. George Washington was chief of the army. The militia fought battles in the colonies. The war lasted for 8 years.

Exercise A: The students use the information in the Reading to complete the timeline.

Exercise B: Most students come from countries that have had revolutions and/or wars for independence in their past. After the groups have worked together, you may want to have them report their lists of revolutions to the entire class.

Lesson 7

Information: You may wish to discuss this diagram and have the students think about the problems the weak points of the Articles of Confederation could cause.

Exercise A: Questions 4 and 5 are more challenging. They ask the students to think and make some inferences.

Reading: You may want to ask the students some comprehension questions about the Reading after they have completed the fill-in exercise.
Lesson 8
Written: Students should only scan for the specific pieces of information. You may want to set a time limit.

Information: You may want to ask the students to explain the compromises. Have them tell which ideas came from the two sides of the debate to form the compromise. If the students have studied By The People: U.S. Government Structure already, you may want to discuss their knowledge of the Congress in light of the representation compromise.

Exercise B: Encourage all students to participate in the debates. One or both of the groups may wish to present their debate to the entire class. You may want to compare the class debates with the presidential campaign debates, which usually have journalists asking questions to both candidates.

Review: With a more advanced group you may want to build upon this exercise and ask them to write a paragraph about one or two of the compromises.

Lesson 9
Note: for more detailed information on the Constitution refer to By The People: U.S. Government Structure, Lessons 3 - 6.

Oral: Some students may come from countries which do not use the term "Constitution" for their plan of government. Try to find out what term they do use. With more advanced students you may want to have them compare their governments with the U.S. government.

Reading: This reading only highlights the Bill of Rights. For more in depth information, refer to By The People: U.S. Government Structure, Lesson 5.

This is also a lesson in which to introduce ordinal numbers. For example, Amendment 1 is usually called the First Amendment.

Lesson 10
Note: This lesson only introduces students to the executive branch. More details can be found in By The People: U.S. Government Structure, Lessons 8 - 10.

Vocabulary: As of March 1989 the Cabinet will have 14 departments. The newest department will be the Department of Veterans Affairs.
Written: This is the first exercise where students find a word that does not belong. After they choose their answers, you may want to ask them to explain their reasoning. This may help determine their comprehension of the vocabulary.

Exercise B: You may want the groups to share their lists of strong points with the class.

Testing: Read the following questions to the students. You may want to repeat them two or three times.

1. When was George Washington President?
2. What precedent did George Washington start as President?
3. In which month do we celebrate the Presidents' Day holiday?
4. When did Washington suggest U.S. isolation from European problems?
5. What is one name we use for George Washington?

Lesson 11

Oral: A discussion about political parties could be lively, but some students may not want to speak about an affiliation with a political party in their home country.

Written: Have the students scan quickly. You may want to discuss the last question as a class.

Exercise B: This is the first time that an information gap exercise appears in this book. The students need to be paired and you should have them sit back to back. Encourage the students not to look at their partner's paper. They take turns asking each other questions to get the information to complete the diagram. The diagram shows the different political parties of Adams and Jefferson and also tells about two things that happened during their joint administration.

Lesson 12

B: Questions 9 and 13 are not vocabulary words from the lessons, but they are basic words all students should know.

C: Students may need to refer to earlier lessons to complete this timeline.

D: You may want to point out that some names are for cities, others for states.
E: This is another information gap exercise. Have the students use the row titles (i.e., executive, tax, Congress, etc.) when forming their questions. Or, for less advanced students you may want to give them a format like: What do the Articles of Confederation say about trade?
and What does the Constitution say about trade?

Lesson 13
Oral: The U.S. flag during the War of 1812 was different from our current flag. Focus on our current flag to generate ideas about nationalism and pride. Have the students count the stars and stripes and then try to guess the significance of these numbers to the U.S.
(13 colonies and 50 states). Question 5 can be done orally or by drawing. The best idea is to give the students the option -- some students will enjoy the opportunity to express themselves visually and others will feel more comfortable expressing themselves verbally.
Question 6 -- you might have students interview friends, neighbors, co-workers, etc. to find out when Americans sing the national anthem.
Question 7 -- if appropriate have students sing their national anthems.

Exercise B: You can sing or have a taped version of the national anthem available (possibly available from public library or local school system). This is a listening exercise -- students do not have to sing nor memorize the anthem. You could also generate a nice discussion about the ideas expressed in different national anthems. At higher levels you could discuss the controversy about changing the U.S. anthem to America the Beautiful, God Bless America, America (My Country 'Tis of Thee), etc.

Exercise C: Other ways to show nationalism are parades, wearing a particular color or type of clothing, having a picture of the President (leader) in every home or office, or the flag.

Reading: Some students may point out that the U.S. does indeed become involved with the problems of other countries. This could generate a great debate about U.S. help vs. intervention.

Lesson 14
Oral: Another way to generate ideas would be to talk about western movies. If appropriate, discuss stereotypes.

Written: Be sure students read the sentences before scanning.

Information: This is the first map with a special key so the students may need extra help.
Exercise A: Bring some extra U.S. maps to class for this exercise.

Exercise B: Remind students about the ordering of events on a timeline. In this exercise the answer to the first question should be put on the first line of the timeline.

Reading: The word "manifest" has not been defined intentionally, because we feel it is important for students to develop strategies for comprehending text without comprehending every word. Also the treatment of Native Americans is very brief and we encourage teachers to expand upon the topic of Native Americans.

Lesson 15
Map skills: "Slave state" and "free state" are explained in the Reading. Students should be able to guess what a slave state is and then deduce what a free state is.

Information: Have students read across the page so they see the contrast between the North and the South. Some of these differences are similar to the debates held during the Constitutional Convention (see Lesson 8).

Exercise B: You might need to give some ideas to get the role plays started, e.g., a slave and factory worker could talk about their bosses taking advantage of them and making a lot of money or about health problems due to the long hours and hard labor. Encourage creativity!

Lesson 16
Oral: Encourage guessing.

Written: You could expand this exercise to talk about antecedents or pronoun references.

Information: Teachers should be aware of the fact that the British and French did not help. In fact, the British were strongly against slavery.

Reading: You might want to review the differences between the North and the South at this point. You should point out that Lincoln's goal was unity. Although, he was personally opposed to slavery, he did not want to enrage the South by abolishing slavery immediately.

Testing skills: This is the first exercise with the option "None of the above". You may need to give other examples in class.
Review: This can be done orally or in writing.

Lesson 17
Reading: You may want to discuss Johnson's impeachment if students have covered Lesson 14 in By the People: U.S. Government Structure and/or if the students are more advanced. Remember impeach = accuse of wrongdoing. Johnson was impeached by the House, but he was not removed from office by the Senate.

Exercise A: Underlining and circling will help students focus on specific information they will need to answer the questions.

Lesson 18
Oral and Written: These are guessing activities to be done in small groups. Students will be able to check their predictions later in the lesson. The cotton gin is included because it was an important step towards the mechanization of the textile industry.

Information: The details in the boxes do not need to be memorized. The focus should be on how the country was industrializing and the role of big business in the 1800's.

Exercise A: Question 4 is intentionally challenging and requires students to think back to previous lessons about tariffs.

Exercise B: The timelines include details not included in the Information. Students should check their predictions in the inventions chart after completing this exercise.

Exercise C: You might also discuss differences of factory work and unions in the students' countries and the U.S. Question 5 can only be done if the students know something about unions.

Testing skills: This is the first time for the option "All of the above". Again, you may need to give additional examples in class. Question 5 requires students to think back to previous lessons.

Lesson 19
Written: After scanning for words, have students read "The Progressives" carefully before proceeding to exercise A.
Reading: You may want to reinforce ordinal numbers. The 18th Amendment (Prohibition) is not included in the Reading because it is not relevant to the main idea of the lesson.

Exercise A: This exercise is intended to give students additional practice in locating answers in a text.

Exercise B: You may want to develop some practice exercises with before and after clauses.

Testing: These questions are not taken directly from the lesson but have been selected as relevant to the INS oral examination.

Lesson 20
Review lesson

Exercise D: Forming the questions may be difficult. You may have to help the students or give them a question format to use.

Lesson 21
Oral: Question 5 is intentionally open-ended. You may need to guide students -- focus on clothes, U.S. military, U.S. involvement in other countries, etc.

Information: The 19th Amendment (women's right to vote) is included on the timeline because of the contribution of women during the war.

Exercise B: This exercise is intentionally controversial. We included it because we feel it is relevant for understanding why some people believe so strongly about maintaining defense spending at a specified level.

Lesson 22
Oral: These questions were not intended to assess what the students know about the Depression. Rather, they attempt to get the students thinking about simple economics. Questions 4 - 6 might be easier than questions 1 - 3. You might want to give the students some concrete examples to get them started. For example: In August there are lots of peaches at 3 local farms. The people are not buying all the peaches. One of the farmers wants to sell more peaches. What can he or she do? Question 6 -- illustrate on credit with credit cards.
Information:
Results of the War: Remember the U.S. had set up high tariffs previously.
Industry: Try to make this as concrete and current as possible. For example, the use of robots in the automotive industry has had an impact on the number of jobs. Ask students to give more examples of jobs lost to machines. Also discuss the situation of people buying a lot of goods on credit and buying mostly imported goods.
Stock Market: Students may be familiar with “Wall Street”.
Agriculture: Try to provide concrete examples of a simple supply and demand cycle. The cycle on the bottom may be more comprehensible to students from developing countries. These countries often find themselves in a vicious cycle of debt payment.

Exercise A: Correcting the false sentences can be done orally or in writing.

Exercise B: The wording does not have to come directly from the text. Accept any sentence ending that makes sense. For example:
If you borrow from the bank, you will have to pay it back.
If you borrow from the bank, you will be in debt.
If you borrow from the bank, you can buy a new car this year.

Reading: The last paragraph returns to the idea from the debate in Lesson 21. You may need to elaborate on Social Security.

Exercise C: Question 3 has two grammatically correct answers but only one correct answer when referring to the Depression.
incorrect: Factories could sell more goods than they made.
correct: Factories made more goods than they could sell.

Lesson 23
Map skills: Only includes some countries.

Vocabulary: Small groups should be able to write simple definitions for these words without the use of a dictionary.

Information: This timeline is different from others in the book. Point out that WWII was fought on two fronts. Also two important issues have been left out (the Holocaust and Japanese Internment in the U.S.) for simplification purposes. Depending on the class, they should be included.
Exercise C: Provide additional practice with until, before and after clauses.

Review: Check predictions made in written exercise.

Lesson 24
Oral: Dictation:

In April 1945, fifty Allied countries had a meeting to talk about peace. They set up the United Nations. Today the UN is in New York. Countries can meet at the UN to discuss problems and to negotiate. The UN also gives economic and educational help to many countries.

Information: The Cold War is a difficult concept to explain, but we feel it is important -- especially in terms of spheres of influence. Although many of your students may be happy with their lives in the U.S., there may be some who feel strongly about the role the U.S. has played in other countries. Be prepared for an interesting discussion.

Exercise A: Partner can answer questions orally.

Exercise C: This is another exercise where students are asked to find a sentence with the same meaning.

Lesson 25
This lesson may generate a lot of discussion. The students may wish to discuss discrimination that they have seen and/or experienced.

Map skills: You can review the students' knowledge of directions by asking additional questions about positions of countries in Asia and North America.

Exercise A: This is a new exercise. Make sure the students read the answers first. This exercise helps review question words.

Exercise B: With more advanced students you may wish to discuss other courts cases, such as Plessy v. Ferguson (which established the 'separate but equal' policy). You may also discuss some of the practices that resulted from integration laws such as busing.

Exercise C: If you prefer, have the students correct the false sentences orally.
Testing skills: Read all the questions through one time first. The second time let the students choose their answers. Remind the students the box holds more responses than necessary. These are the questions to read:

1. What is an example of non-violent resistance?
2. Tell me an example of a non-violent demonstration.
3. Who was a Civil Rights leader that planned non-violent demonstrations?
5. When did the U.S. stop fighting the Vietnam War?

Lesson 26
Oral: You may have to help the students identify the pictures. Also you can have the students make lists on the page about Kennedy and King or you can do this as a class exercise and make lists on the blackboard.

Written: These words are from the vocabulary in Lesson 25.

Reading I and II: Review the information presented in Lesson 25 while reading these selections.

Lesson 27
Written: Encourage guessing.

Vocabulary: You can refer to Lesson 14 in U.S. Government Structure for a more detailed explanation of impeachment.

Information: Gerald Ford's ascent to the presidency was very unusual. After Spiro Agnew, who was Nixon's vice-president, resigned, Nixon chose Ford as a replacement and Congress approved. U.S. citizens never voted for Ford as a vice presidential candidate.

Note: You may want to include information about the president(s) elected in 1988 (and thereafter).

Lesson 28
Oral: Question 2 -- Students should know where earliest settlers came from. Encourage guessing for later periods in time. Question 3 - some students may not want to share their own reason for coming to the U.S. Be sensitive to your students' personal situations.
Information: This is the first graph in the text. You might want to make an overhead transparency to facilitate learning about graphs. Please note that the particular numbers (details) are not essential and do not require memorization. Because we chose to date points every ten years, some of the peaks and valleys fell in between and are not dated. Our primary purpose here is to have the students use their knowledge of U.S. History to make some guesses about the effects of expansion, wars, and the Depression on U.S. immigration.

Exercise A: If appropriate, vary the types of questions. For example:
Did more immigrants come in 1900 or in 1960?
  When did the most immigrants come?
  When did the fewest immigrants come?

Reading: You might want to have world maps available to discuss parts of Europe, and the world. Note in the fifth paragraph that the Immigration Act of 1917 did not exclude immigrants from the Philippines because the Philippines was a U.S. territory after the Spanish American War through 1947. This reading can also generate a lot of discussion. For example:
  The impact of different cultures on our food, language, dress, etc.
  Is the U.S. a "Melting Pot" or a "Salad Bowl"?
  The difference between refugees and immigrants
  Should immigration be open to everyone?
  Who should be allowed to immigrate to the U.S.?
