The Delaware Valley Child Care Council (DVCCC) developed this booklet to help Philadelphia school principals plan and develop privately run after-school centers in their schools. First, an executive summary documents the need for school-age day care nationwide and in the Philadelphia area. Section I offers guidance on planning a school-age child care program, including information on surveying parents to determine the need for the program and on collaborating with school administrators, teachers, and parent groups. The following areas related to collaboration are highlighted for attention: (1) in-kind services and facilities; (2) provision of the basic agreement with the child care provider; (3) lines of communication between school, provider, and parents; (4) staffing; and (5) assurance of quality. Next, guidance on developing and distributing a request for proposal (RFP) is provided, including an outline of the information the RFP should elicit. Guidelines on evaluating proposals and selecting a child care provider are also included. Section II lists three agencies that can help in the planning process and identifies sources of information on start-up funding, food costs, subsidized day care funding, and Title IVA monies. This section also includes a sample parent survey and a sample RFP. Finally, section III presents an eight-item bibliography. Information on the DVCCC is attached. (AC)

Executive Summary

A growing number of children nationwide are alone without adult supervision on a regular basis before and/or after school. The need for school age child care services has become crucial as each year more and more mothers return to the labor force. During this year, the percentage of mothers with minor children who are employed outside the home is expected to reach 85%.

A study of Philadelphia school age children documented that over 25,000 children are home alone before and/or after school, and it is estimated that in the Delaware Valley 60,000 to 100,000 school age children are left unsupervised (SePSACCP, 1988).

In June, 1990, the Philadelphia School District announced plans to "systematically initiate the development... of privately run after school centers in as many schools as possible and as soon as possible" (MEZZACAPPA, 6/26/90). Although school principals will not be involved in the daily operation of the proposed after school centers, the planning and development of these programs will require the guidance and expertise of building principals. As a result, the Delaware Valley Child Care Council developed this booklet as a guide for Philadelphia School Principals interested in addressing the need for school age child care services.

A. DOCUMENTING THE NEED

Demonstrating that there is a need for school age child care is the first step in planning for a program. A survey of parents will provide evidence of the need as well as a strong indication of potential participation.

A questionnaire should be developed which is easy to answer and compile once they are returned. Questions should be clear and concise to uncover the following information:

1. the number of children who might participate
2. the grade(s) of children who might participate
3. the times that care would be needed
   - before/after school
   - summer break
   - school holidays
   - teacher in-service
4. the fee parents would be willing to pay or are paying now
5. the activities parents would like the program to offer

B. COLLABORATING WITH SCHOOL ADMINISTRATION, TEACHERS AND PARENT GROUPS

In order to obtain support for the development of a school-based child care program, it is important to present the documented need to the district superintendent, building staff and the school parent group. School personnel and parents should collaborate and develop an agreement on the relationship between the program, school and parent group. The following are areas of concern that should be addressed in collaboration with the district superintendent, school parent group and staff:

1. In-Kind Services/Facilities:

   - What facilities/equipment can the program use?
     classrooms outside play area
     lunch room audio-visual equipment library, gym refrigerator for storage copy machine use of kitchen to prepare snacks computers closet/storage space

   - Will the program have access to telephone services?
   - Can the program incorporate news items in school newsletter?
   - Can the program order milk for snacks through the cafeteria?
2. Basic Agreement:

- What will be the length of the agreement with the provider? One school year? Two years?
- How will the contract be renegotiated?
- Under what circumstances can the agreement be negated?
- Should agency apply for all available funding? Should the agency offer a sliding fee scale?

3. Communication:

- Who will be the primary liaison for the school? Principal? Parent Group?
- How much authority will the liaison have?
- How often will the school and program communicate? Weekly? Monthly? Bimonthly?
- How will the school, program, & home communicate? Reports? Meetings? Parent handbook?

4. Program/Personnel:

- What will the lines of authority be?
- Do you want to approve prospective staff?
- What staff qualifications are desired? (Certification?)
- Are parents and/or school personnel interested in after school employment

5. Quality Assurance:

- Who will be responsible for evaluating the success of the program? Parents? Principal? School Staff?
- How will the program be evaluated? What measures will be used?

C. SELECTION OF A CHILD CARE PROVIDER

Once the program boundaries and the relationship of parents and school have been defined, a Request for Proposal (RFP) should be developed. The Request for Proposal should be developed in two parts.
Part One should be designed to convey information to interested child care providers about defined program needs, policy, expectations and requirements. Minimally, Part One should provide prospective child care providers with the following information:

1. Analysis of Needs Assessment/Types of Services Requested
2. District Licensing and Insurance Requirements
3. Terms of the Agreement
4. Staffing Requirements
5. School Facilities and In-Kind Services Available
6. Description of the Relationship between Program, School and Parents
7. Programming & Financial Expectations/Requirements

Part Two of the Request for Proposal should be designed to obtain information from the respondent to be used in the selection process. Minimally, Part Two should request the following information:

1. General Agency Information:
   - Name, address, contact person, mission statement and agency history.

2. Statement of the Problem:
   - A description of the agency's understanding of the issues and needs of school age children and the relevance of before and/or after school child care programs.

3. Program Components:
   - The purpose and design of the program; analysis of the needs assessment; sample of a typical day in the program; outline of activities offered.

4. Staffing:
   - Child/teacher ratios; education/experience requirements; resumes of director and/or teachers; job description for position; Act 34 Clearance; health appraisals; first aid training.
5. Quality Assurance:

- Develop procedures for program monitoring and evaluation; procedures for emergency situations; discipline policies; expectations for children behavior; types of in-service training.

6. Communication:

- Description of the agency's plans to create ongoing productive communication with the school administration and parents.

7. Financial:

- Commitment from the agency to apply for all available funding and comply with requirements set forth by the school; proposed fee schedule; sample budget based on a prescribed enrollment.

8. Licensing and Insurance:

- Commitment from the agency to fulfill insurance and licensing requirements set forth by the district.

On completion, the Request for Proposal should be mailed to licensed child care providers in the area. A list of licensed agencies can be obtained through the Department of Public Welfare, Division of Day Care (215-560-2541). In addition, the Request for Proposal should be advertised in local child day care newsletters and/or journals (Contact the Delaware Valley Child Care Council 215-922-7526 and the Parents Union for Public Schools 215-546-1166).

Criteria should be established for ranking the returned proposals. Once a provider is selected, the provider must apply for use of the school building through the school district's EH-45 form "REQUEST TO USE SCHOOL FACILITIES" (revised 3/89, formally known as the 707 policy). When final approval of the Request for Proposal has been granted by the School District Superintendent for the use of school facilities, the selected agency should be contacted so that implementation can begin. Letters should then be sent to all agencies who responded to the Request for Proposal.

The Delaware Valley Child Care Council (DVCCC) is a non-profit organization, composed of parents, professionals, government, labor, community and business leaders, advocating for the development of accessible, affordable, quality child care services for all children and families who seek such services.

The Council established a School Age Child Care Project in January, 1989, to confront the need for school age child care services, through a survey of school administrators to explore the feasibility and extent of school involvement in school age child care and a public outreach campaign to promote school involvement in school age child care.

Funding for the Council's School Age Child Care Project has been provided by the Southeastern Pennsylvania School Age Child Care Project of the Day Care Association of Montgomery County and the Montgomery County Foundation.

The Day Care Association of Montgomery County was awarded a grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare in March, 1986, to promote and assist in the development of new, expanded and innovative quality school age child care programs that are affordable and accessible to working families in the Southeastern Pennsylvania Region.

The Delaware Valley Child Care Council gratefully acknowledges the commitment and support of the Day Care Association of Montgomery County and the Montgomery County Foundation.
