In 1989, the Community Partnership: Child Care and Early Education was formed to examine policies and make recommendations with respect to early childhood care and education (ECCE) in Ramsey County, Minnesota. The Partnership established a Task Force to develop a long-term vision for ECCE consistent with community values and to create a blueprint for action regarding the services needed by children, parents, communities of color, and employers. Task Force recommendations included the following: (1) increasing community awareness of the importance of ECCE; (2) providing children with "seamless" service by providing resources for new programs; (3) supporting parents by addressing needs for workplace flexibility and improving consultation and referral services; (4) improving service to communities of color by establishing neighborhood-based advocates of ECCE, increasing the sensitivity of providers and agencies, and addressing housing and transportation issues; (5) increasing employer involvement in ECCE; (6) improving the quality of services by providing training and development opportunities for providers and supporting accreditation and certification programs; (7) resolving financial difficulties by increasing assistance to parents; and (8) establishing an effective collaborative structure to implement recommendations. The Community Partnership's accomplishments over the 2-year planning and development period were in the areas of service development, changes in service delivery, committee development, collaborative grant proposals and fundraising, events and activities, and increased information dissemination and exchange. This four-part report includes a rationale for ECCE, the Task Force's draft action plan, detailed recommendations comprising the bulk of the report, and an overview of accomplishments. An appendix provides child care statistics for Ramsey County. (AC)

The Community Partnership:
Child Care & Early Education

No resource is more important to the future of our community than our children.

In 1989, the United Way of St. Paul determined that a community-wide effort was needed to address child care and early education issues, and the Community Partnership: Child Care and Early Education was launched.

All of the key players were invited to participate. A Leadership Committee of public, private, religious and non-profit leaders funded and guided the planning process. A Task Force of front-line experts was the work group that identified and researched the issues and made specific recommendations to address the needs of our children.

The recommendations that follow are the fruit of the Task Force's two years of work: over 2,500 hours of volunteer time contributed by over 125 people representing a cross-section of our community. Although specifics may change, the recommendations provide a guide for several years of work to ensure the future of our community by meeting the needs of our young children now.

Implementation has begun. Funders have already used these recommendations as a guide to action. Leadership and Task Force representatives are completing negotiations on a collaborative structure and specific action plan that will carry us forward in partnership.

On behalf of the Leadership Committee and the community, we thank you for your dedication. This report stands as yet another reflection of our community's heritage of commitment to our children and our quality of life.

Sincerely,

Leonard Wilkening

APPENDIX ........................................................................................................ 145
Introduction

This is the final report of the Partnership's Task Force, summarizing the work of the planning and development phase of this community-wide effort. It presents a comprehensive set of recommendations for service development and policy change in the early childhood care and education system in Ramsey County and summarizes the accomplishments of the Partnership's two-year planning and development effort.

Task Force members represent a cross section of the community: parents, employers, family child care providers, non-profit, for-profit and church-related child care centers, the public schools, Head Start, foundations, United Way, all levels of government, neighborhood organizations, communities of color, religious groups, children's advocates, women's groups, child care resource and referral agencies, University faculty and others in Ramsey County.

Structure and Process

The work of the Partnership took place on two levels: the Leadership level and the Task Force level. The Partnership's Leadership Committee is comprised of chief executives and policymakers from the public, private and non-profit sectors of the community. The support, commitment and financial resources of this group made the planning and development phase of this project possible.

The Task Force was the working group for the Partnership, and generated the recommendations and accomplishments outlined in this document. The Task Force met on a regular basis throughout the two-year planning process to identify early childhood care and education issues and needs, and to develop specific recommendations to address them. Task Force participation has been intense and committed, both at the large group level and also in subcommittees that were developed to focus more specifically on six perspectives on early childhood care and education: parents, quality services, communities of color, employers, planning and revenue.

Toward the end of the planning process, a Steering Committee consisting of key Task Force members and subcommittee chairs was formed. This group was responsible for compiling and organizing all of the Task Force recommendations, and assisting staff in preparing this written report.

The organizational structure of the Partnership and the membership lists for the various committees and subcommittees may be found in the Appendix, p. 146.
Scope

The Partnership attempted to address early childhood care and education issues comprehensively, and included in its scope the perspective of parents and all public, private, for-profit, and non-profit programs and services designed for the care and/or education of young children. It also considered the child care needs of school-aged children. Issues such as health, medical care and nutrition were considered only as they interface with early childhood care and education services. The structure that the Partnership establishes for the future will allow for other early childhood care and education issues to be brought to the table for consideration through a continual process of community needs assessment and prioritization.

A Word About Language

After much discussion on how to describe the service system as a whole, the Task Force settled on the term “early childhood care and education” to emphasize the comprehensiveness and inclusiveness of the Partnership’s focus, and the importance of integrating child care and early education services. This term is also gaining acceptance in other parts of the country. The Glossary of Terms contains definitions of other terms and abbreviations as they are used throughout the report.

Contributors

The true “partnership” nature of this project is demonstrated by the multiple funders who made it possible. Contributors have included: the City of St. Paul, First Bank System, F.R. Bigelow Foundation, Mardag Foundation, Norwest Bank, Ramsey County, The St. Paul Companies, The St. Paul Foundation, St. Paul Public Schools, 3-M and United Way of St. Paul Area.
Acknowledgments

This broad-based, long-term, community-wide planning and development effort would not have been possible without the significant contributions of hundreds of concerned citizens of Ramsey County. In fact, these recommendations came directly from the community, and would not exist in this written form without the commitment, expertise, talent, time, effort and resources contributed by many dedicated individuals. Our thanks are extended to all who have been involved in this remarkable effort on behalf of Ramsey County’s young children.

Partnership membership lists indicating all committee and subcommittee participants may be found in the Appendix, and clearly illustrate the extent of community involvement in this process. Our indebtedness to all involved cannot be overemphasized.

In particular, the Partnership would like to acknowledge the following people, whose significant contributions made this planning process and final report possible:

Staff, Consultants and Fiscal Management

Glossary of Terms

Accreditation: a nationally recognized standard for high quality programming for young children developed by the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC). Child care centers, preschools, kindergartens, before/after school programs may achieve accreditation by meeting specified quality standards for: administration, staffing, curriculum, staff/child interaction, staff/parent interaction, staff qualifications and development, multiculturalism, physical environment, health and safety, nutrition and food services and program evaluation.

Basic Sliding Fee: see Child Care Fund.

CCDBG (Child Care Development Block Grant): the first major federal child care bill, passed by Congress and the President in 1990, based on the proposed “ABC” Child Care Bill. Minnesota folds this federal block grant into the state Child Care Fund.

Certification: general term used to describe different credentialing systems for early childhood service providers, particularly family child care providers. Certification programs include the Child Development Associate credential, National Association of Family Day Care Providers (NAFDC) credential and other local certification programs. Certification is differentiated from teacher/provider licensure through the state Department of Human Services or Department of Education.

Child and Dependent Care Tax Credit: a Minnesota tax credit for low income families needing child and/or dependent care services in order to work or attend school.

Child Care Fund: the umbrella for child care assistance programs under Minnesota statutes sections 256H.01. Consists of federal, state and county funds, and includes:

- Basic Sliding Fee Program: child care subsidies for low and moderate income families for parents who are employed or in education/training programs. Amount of subsidy is determined on a sliding fee basis, based on family size and income.

- STRIDE child care subsidies: for STRIDE participants during education/training and job search phases of the STRIDE program. (see STRIDE)

- ACCESS child care subsidies: for AFDC recipients (not in STRIDE) who are engaged in education/training and job search activities. (created in 1992)

- Resource and Referral: funding for local child care resource and referral services.

Other funding: various grants for child care programs.

Community: general term used to describe a group of people who may be affiliated due to cultural or ethnic heritage, or geographic proximity. Also used generally to refer to all residents of Ramsey County.

Community Reinvestment Act (CRA): federal legislation requiring banks to reinvest a specified amount in low and moderate income neighborhoods in which they do business.

D-CAP (Dependent Care Assistance Plan): part of federal tax code which allows employers to set up programs through which employees can set aside some of their earnings into an account that can be used for child care and dependent care expenses. (A similar account can be set up for medical expenses.) Neither the employee or employer pays taxes on the set-aside amounts.

Dependent Care Tax Credit: federal tax credit for low and moderate income families needing child and/or dependent care services in order to work or attend school.
developmentally appropriate: term used to describe activities, curriculum, or practices which are geared toward the ability level of the child. High quality programs incorporate developmentally appropriate practice.

early childhood care and education (ECCE): inclusive term used throughout report to indicate the full range of child care and early education programs, including public (school-based and Head Start), private, church-affiliated, for-profit and non-profit services, and child care services for school-aged children.

ECCE Council (Early Childhood Care and Education Council): the body that the Partnership’s Task Force recommends be established to implement the Partnership recommendations. (see also Minnesota Early Childhood Care and Education Council) early childhood service providers: term used throughout report to be inclusive of the full range of service providers/teachers working with young children, including: child care providers, family child care providers, early childhood teachers in child care centers and homes, nursery or preschool programs.

ECFE (Early Childhood Family Education): a parent and family education program established in the early 1970s by the Minnesota legislature which combines parent education, early childhood education and parent/child interaction sessions, offered through the community education programs of the public schools.

Early Childhood Special Education: services provided through the public schools to children, ages birth through six, identified as being handicapped or disabled, according to state criteria. Mandated by federal P.L. 94-142 and P.L. 99-457.

Early Intervention: services provided early in a child’s life, designed to address potential problems early and prevent later developmental, educational or social problems. Services may include: speech and language therapy, occupational or physical therapy, public health nursing, special education, psychological services, county social services, family and child focused developmental activities and others as necessary.

EITC (Earned Income Tax Credit): a federal tax credit for working families with incomes less than $21,000, for which families are eligible regardless of tax liability or whether the children receive child care services. Credit was expanded by Congress in 1990.

ESOP (Employee Stock Option Plan): a stock participation plan for employees.

Head Start: federal and state funded preschool program for families with children aged 3-5 at or below the federal poverty level. Offers comprehensive services including: educational (usually classroom-based, part-time, during school year), health, nutritional, social services and parent involvement.

Learning Readiness: the school language for recent legislation which provided state Department of Education funds for services focused on preparing four year olds for school. More generally, the term can refer to high quality, developmentally appropriate, educational activities and/or services for all preschool-aged children.

mainstreaming: the practice of placing children identified as handicapped or “at-risk” in programs serving majority populations of children. (see also seamless service)

MnAEYC (Minnesota Association for the Education of Young Children): the Minnesota chapter of the National Association for the Education of Young Children. (See NAEYC.)

Minnesota Early Childhood Care and Education Council: an independent state council established by the 1991 Minnesota legislature for the purpose of coordinating and planning early childhood care and education services at the state level.
NAEYC (National Association for the Education of Young Children): the largest national professional association for early childhood teachers, family child care providers and academics. (See MnAEYC.)

parent preparedness: term used to describe parents' education, knowledge and awareness of how to locate, choose, use and manage high quality early childhood programs for their children.

providers: shorthand term used casually throughout report to describe early childhood service providers including child care center staff, family child care providers, and early childhood teachers.

quality: general term used to refer to the overall standards of early childhood programs. Research has confirmed that a number of factors are related to quality in early childhood care and education programs, including: group size, staff/child ratio, staff education and training levels, staff turnover, staff wages, staff/child interaction, and developmentally appropriate practice. Commonly accepted measures of high quality include NAEYC Accreditation for programs and Certification for providers. Current state licensing requirements are considered to reflect only minimal quality standards.

seamless service: term used to describe services which are organized and coordinated to reduce fragmentation, categorization and discontinuity. Service delivery is coordinated and simplified, so that families and children do not have to move from one service setting to another in order to obtain needed services. (For example, a child needing both Head Start and full day care services may receive both at one site.) Coordination may involve combined funding from various funding streams, but simplified access for parents so that only one application/registration process is needed. At present, the concept of seamless service is a vision for early childhood service delivery, and is implemented only on a very small scale. (see also mainstreaming and wrap-around child care) special needs: general term used to refer to a delay or disorder in one or more areas of development (motor, social/emotional, language, cognitive) or behavior, or a diagnosed syndrome or condition such as Down Syndrome or Cerebral Palsy. Does not imply eligibility for specific programs or services, because different programs have different definitions of "special needs."

STRIDE (Success Through Reaching Individual Development and Employment): the Minnesota program which fulfills the requirements of the 1988 Federal Welfare Reform Act, and helps AFDC recipients gain the skills necessary to become economically self-sufficient through education and training programs. The STRIDE program has a child care subsidy component.

wrap-around child care: the practice of adding additional hours of programming to part-day programs in order to meet full-day care needs of children. The wrap-around service may be funded using a different revenue source than the part-day program. (see also seamless service)
PART I
The Executive Summary
The Case for Early Childhood Care and Education
Recommendation Summary
Executive Summary

In the last 20 years, we have experienced dramatic changes in our economy, our families and our workforce. These changes have made old ways of raising and educating our children obsolete and have resulted in at least three major challenges to our communities:

1. Increasing numbers of children are reaching school age without adequate preparation, and without the benefit of a high quality early childhood care and/or education experience.

2. Lack of access to affordable high quality child care services presents barriers to parents’ economic advancement and self-sufficiency.

3. Parents experience stress as they try to balance working to support their families with providing care and education for their children.

In Ramsey County, there have been many creative responses to the early childhood care and education needs of our children and families. The sum total of these efforts, however, has fallen far short of the needs of our community in at least two important respects:

1. The overall investment in our children has been insufficient, and

2. Public and private sector responses to early childhood issues have been separate and uncoordinated, and not always in the best interest of children and families.

The result here, as elsewhere in our county, is what Prof. Sharon Lynn Kagan has described as a child care and early education system characterized by “discontinuity, inequity and fragmentation.”

The Community Partnership: Child Care and Early Education was created to tackle early childhood care and education service system issues comprehensively. The Partnership’s mission was to develop a vision and a “blueprint” for a system that would “ensure that high quality child care and early education services are accessible and affordable for all children in St. Paul and Ramsey County.”

The Partnership has established four goals, corresponding to the problems highlighted above:

1. By the year 2007, children entering K-12 will have had access to high quality affordable early childhood care and education services to prepare them for school and life;

2. By the year 2002, high quality, affordable early childhood care and education services will be available to all parents, thereby eliminating this barrier to employment, advancement or achievement of self-sufficiency;

3. By the year 2002, working parents will report significantly reduced work and family stress due to improved workplace leave and flexibility policies; and,

4. By the year 1997, the major institutions in Ramsey County will plan and deliver early childhood care and education services in a collaborative and coordinated manner so that fragmentation of services to children will be eliminated.

The Partnership’s Task Force has developed a comprehensive set of recommendations to achieve these goals, and has charted a course to develop a leadership structure and a funding plan for action.
Guiding Values and Principles

The Task Force began its work by defining a set of guiding values and principles. These core values served as the foundation for the ongoing work of the Partnership, and are visible throughout the recommendations.

1. Valuing of Parenting: Parents are children’s first and most important teachers; their contribution and involvement in the care and education of their children should be encouraged and supported for all parents.

2. High Quality: All types of early childhood care and education environments should be safe, healthful, and educational, and provide activities and nurturing appropriate for the child’s level of intellectual, physical, and social-emotional development.

3. Diversity: The community should ensure healthy diversity in the types and sponsors of early childhood care and education services, including cultural diversity, family and center settings, and public, private, religious, and non-profit sponsorship.

4. Continuity: The system should work so that all children, and particularly low income children, can have stability and continuity in their early childhood care and education arrangements.

5. Parent Choice: Parents should be able to choose from the diverse range of quality early childhood care and education settings and be offered education and support in making their choices.

6. Equal Access: Quality and choices must be equally accessible to all families, regardless of income, background or special needs of the child.

7. Valuing of Caregivers: Caregivers and staff should be trained, well compensated, and valued by the community.

8. Community Collaboration: The system should combine many segments of the community in an inclusive, collaborative and coordinated network of services.

9. Workplace Support: Workplace flexibility and support should assist parents in their early childhood care and education responsibilities.

on the high priority recommendations. The Leadership Committee has begun work to develop an Action Plan, and an early draft of this plan is included in Part II of this report.

The recommendations of the Task Force provide:

- a long-term vision for an early childhood care and education service system that is consistent with our guiding values and principles; and
- a blueprint for action to accomplish our goals.

The Task Force recommendations address 5 questions:

1. What is the community’s vision for the early childhood care and education system?

2. What services are needed:
   - for children,
   - for parents,
   - for communities of color,
   - for employers?

3. How do we ensure that services are of high quality?

4. How do parents pay for services for their children, and how does the community finance the service system?
5. What kind of leadership and system structure is needed for action to take place?

The recommendations of the Task Force propose answers to these questions.

Summary of Recommendations

What is the community’s vision for the early childhood care and education system?
- a coordinated system that meets the early childhood care and education needs of all children and families;
- high quality, affordable, accessible services;
- integration of child care and early education services;
- collaborative leadership, planning, and action; and,
- a long-term community awareness campaign.

What services are needed for children? (200)
- ensure a full range of services that meet the needs of all children and families, addressing current gaps and shortages in service;
- provide "seamless" services that effectively link early childhood services with one another; and,
- provide resources and technical assistance necessary for start-up of new services.

What services are needed for parents? (300)
- improve workplace flexibility and parental leave policies;
- increase parent education and awareness efforts to improve parents' preparedness to purchase high quality services for their children; and,
- improve parent consultation and referral to early childhood services.

What services are needed for communities of color? (400)
- establish neighborhood-based early childhood advocates to provide a voice and service link for each community;
- increase the sensitivity, responsiveness and language capacity of public and private early childhood agencies;
- increase the sensitivity and responsiveness of early childhood service providers; and,
- ensure an adequate supply of qualified service providers of color.

What services are needed for employers? (500)
- establish leadership and technical assistance to support employer involvement in early childhood care and education issues;
- establish a network of human resource professionals involved in work/family policies and issues; and,
- recognize and reward employers that best support families.
THE COMMUNITY PARTNERSHIP: TASK FORCE REPORT & RECOMMENDATIONS

How do we ensure that services are of high quality? (600)

- improve education and training and career development opportunities for all early childhood service providers;
- establish compensation and benefits which are fair and adequate to attract and retain qualified providers;
- improve support services and outreach for licensed and unlicensed providers;
- promote accreditation and certification programs; and,
- ensure that licensing, rules and legislation are consistent with the goal of providing high quality services.

How do parents pay for services for their children? (700)

- increase financial assistance for parents, ensure adequate funding for Head Start and Basic Sliding Fee, and increase the use of Dependent Care Assistance Plans and tax credits;
- coordinate existing financial assistance programs for parents to improve access and continuity; and,
- increase the effectiveness of the child care financial assistance component of the STRIDE (welfare reform) program.

How does the community finance the service system? (800)

- generate necessary short-term startup and leverage funding through major fundraising, better use of existing funding streams, and changes in rules and regulations to increase the flexibility of existing funding; and,
- generate long term continuing funding through establishing a long-range vision and funding priorities, expanding the level of funding in current funding streams, and creating new public and private funding streams.

What kind of leadership and system structure is needed for action to take place? (900)

- establish a county-wide Early Childhood Care and Education Council with staff and strong community advisory groups;
- establish mechanisms for data collection, monitoring and evaluation;
- establish commitment to ongoing collaborative planning; and,
- strengthen advocacy efforts for early childhood care and education.
The Case for Early Childhood Care and Education

The Situation

Life today for young children is very different than it was for most young children in the 1950s and 60s. Fewer than 10% of today’s families look like the kind of family many of us knew or assumed was usual as children—a family with two parents, and a stay-at-home mom who could focus full time on raising and caring for their children.¹

Today, most parents of young children are employed outside the home. Two-thirds of all married couples are two-earner families.² They work because they need to—economic self-sufficiency for many families today requires two wage-earners.³ In addition, the number of single parents has increased dramatically, and many women are providing the sole source of financial support to their children.⁴ In 1989, nearly one-fourth of U.S. children lived in single-parent households.⁵ In Minnesota in 1979, 17.1% of all births were to unmarried mothers.⁶ In Ramsey County, 27.7% of children under 6 live in a single-parent home.⁷

Today in Minnesota, 62.4% of mothers with children under age 6 are in the work force. That means that there are 252,092 children under 6 in our state who need child care.⁸ That number is projected to grow. Today, 57% of preschool children in America have mothers in the work force. That number is expected to increase to 70 percent by the year 2000.⁹

Life is changing for American children and families in other ways, too. Many families today are under tremendous financial and emotional stress. Almost 12 million Americans lost their jobs in the 1980s, and real family income of most American families declined significantly between 1974 and 1985.¹⁰¹¹ During that same period, the median annual earnings for young parents with children declined 39%.¹² In Minnesota, welfare dependency increased by over 400% for children in two-parent families during that time.¹³ And children living in a female-headed family now have a one in two chance of living in poverty.¹⁴

Parents are experiencing tremendous stress as they struggle to balance their need to work to support their families and to provide for the daily care and education of their children. The average workweek for full-time employed adults jumped from under 41 hours in 1973 to nearly 47 hours in 1989.¹⁵ Because of this, parents simply have less time to spend with their children. One study showed that the “total contact time”—time parents spend with children while also doing other things—has dropped by 40% in the last 25 years.¹⁶ That affects children, and it affects their parents. One local study showed that even among relatively well-off parents, worries over how to care for and educate their children was a major source of stress and distraction for 40 percent of all parents and over 60 percent of employed women.¹⁷

Low income parents face even more stress, as they attempt to negotiate major obstacles in obtaining quality care for their children. These include the cost of care, limited access to information about services and poor linkages of child care and other family or parent support services. In fact, the availability and affordability of child care is a crucial factor in determining whether young mothers are able to become economically self-sufficient. Two-thirds of single mothers receiving AFDC benefits report that difficulty in finding adequate child care interfered with their ability to seek or keep a job. And 76% of women who had “given up” looking for work cited child care difficulties as the reason.

All this stress and change is negatively affecting our community’s children. Today, for the first time in our nation’s history, children are literally the poorest group in society. In 1989, nearly 25 percent of children under age 6 lived in poverty. In Minnesota, the child poverty rate statewide is 16.3%, with an estimated 186,000 children living in poverty. And over 21% of the pre-school children in Ramsey County are growing up in families with incomes below the poverty line.

Increasing numbers of children in our nation and in our state are reaching school age unprepared for school. They are arriving at school already weakened by multiple risk factors, including: family poverty, disabling conditions, the extra stresses that families who are members of a racial or ethnic minority face, having limited proficiency in English, and the economic and social stress associated with growing up in a single parent family.

The proportion of children at risk for school failure is high. At least 40% of American children are affected by one or more risk factor. And these numbers are projected to increase steadily through the next several decades, due to steady increases in factors associated with low student achievement. Poverty, family stress, chemical and other abuse are literally undermining families’ ability to care for their children and to prepare them for school and adult life.

In addition, increasing numbers of children are growing up in multi-problem families, and increasing numbers of children are at risk for abuse or neglect. There were 17,900 suspected cases of child abuse or neglect reported in Minnesota in 1987. Of these, 6,604 were substantiated, representing a 60 percent increase from 1982 to 1987. These children, too, are at risk for long-term problems.

These facts—the reality of life for today’s children and families—have tremendous long term consequences for our society. Children who don’t have positive early childhood experiences are at-risk for problems in adult life. Already today, nearly 25% of our nation’s students drop out of high school before graduation. Nationally, there are four million young adults between the ages of 16 and 24 who have not completed school and are not enrolled. Some 23 million American adults are functionally illiterate and another 47 million are marginally literate. In Minnesota, the high school dropout rate is slowly increasing and some question whether graduation requirements are stringent enough. Only one-third of Minnesota school districts have policies on minimum reading or math skills required for graduation. By the year 2000, it is predicted that one-third of all jobs will require a college education. However, even today, the lower third of job applicants are reported to be unqualified for even the least skilled jobs.

The Solution

As a society, we must find a way to more adequately support young children and their families. One clear strategy with a documented ability to make a difference in the lives of children is high quality early childhood education. Quality child care and early education programs can help ensure that all children enter school prepared to learn, and that all children have the opportunity to grow up as whole, healthy, productive and creative human beings.

We know that quality early childhood programs work, and that they have substantial benefits for children, families and for society. For every $1.00 invested in quality preschool programming, society can save $5.75 in later costs. Economic analysis reveals benefits in terms of reduced costs for remedial education, increased earnings (and therefore increased taxes), decreased welfare payments, and less crime. The Committee for Economic Development concluded in 1985 that "it would be hard to imagine that society could find a higher yield for a dollar of investment than that found in preschool programs for high-risk children."

Disadvantaged children who have attended high quality preschool programs are more likely to graduate from high school and find employment, and are significantly less likely to be assigned to special education programs, have children during their teenage years, commit crimes, or receive welfare assistance. There is evidence that in terms of children's social and emotional development, high quality relationships with caregivers can significantly compensate for insecure mother/child relationships.

Quality in child care and early childhood education is something we can define and specify.
Quality programs for all young children should include: a stable relationship between child and caregiver, a low child/staff ratio, appropriate group sizes, qualified and well-trained personnel, developmentally appropriate programming, adequate space and parent involvement. Programs that serve high-risk populations should also provide comprehensive services including health, nutritional and social services, and support services for parents.

By 1995, it is projected that two-thirds of preschool children and three-quarters of school age children will have mothers in the labor force, and most will require some form of child care or early childhood education. However, for many children, that care may not be quality care. Low quality child care and early childhood programs can actually have a negative impact on children. Children attending lower-quality programs, and programs with high staff turnover rates, have been shown to be less competent in language and social development, and demonstrate poor learning readiness skills. A supportive family environment cannot necessarily mitigate the effects of poor quality early childhood programming.

The quality of services provided by most child care centers in our country today has been found to be "barely adequate." In Minnesota, our current state regulations do not yet meet the quality standards set by the National Association for the Education of Young Children. That means many preschool children spend their day in centers or day care homes that fail to provide the conditions for high quality service and positive child outcomes. Some of them will have negative experiences.
Disproportionately fewer low-income and minority children receive quality preschool education and care than do children of higher-income families. In effect, those children most at risk for long-term problems in school and life are also most at risk for receiving poor quality child care and early education services—despite the fact that those very services hold such tremendous potential to help them.

The response of public and private institutions to the need for early childhood care and education and new systems of support for families has been fragmented, without vision, and woefully inadequate. Though there have been attempts to address early childhood care and education needs, "most state and local initiatives have been piecemeal, conflicting, and have lacked a true understanding of the complex needs that affect children's ability to learn.\textsuperscript{46} Public and private service providers face seemingly insurmountable systemic barriers as they try to meet the needs of children and their families. Complex social problems transcend the auspices of single agencies, and require interagency collaboration in order to effectively respond to needs.\textsuperscript{47} In Ramsey County, there are currently over 55 different funding streams in the early childhood care and education service delivery system, most of which are administered and regulated by different public and private agencies or departments.\textsuperscript{48} Funding for programs such as Head Start and the Child Care Basic Sliding Fee is grossly inadequate. Less than 30 percent of children eligible for Head Start in Minnesota are currently being served, and only an estimated 32.1 percent of families eligible for child care sliding fee subsidies receive assistance.\textsuperscript{49}

As a community, we need to work together to address the real needs of today's children and families. We need to work together to ensure that today's children are ready for school when they get there, and that they have a real chance to learn and succeed in life. We need to help families—families of all social and economic levels, from all cultural communities—gain both the support and the economic self-sufficiency they need to care for their children.

We must go beyond making rhetorical statements on the importance of investing in our children, and commit to concerted, long-term, collaborative efforts to improve the early childhood experiences of our children. We must transcend our own agendas, inertia, business as usual, and come together to make a real change in our community. In partnership—for the life of our children, the health of our families and the sake of our community.

PART II
Draft Action Plan
The Community Partnership:
Child Care and Early Education

The Vision

A partnership between families and the community, ensuring high quality, affordable, accessible, early childhood care and education for all children, benefiting everyone.

Draft Action Plan

This Action Plan highlights the priority recommendations of the Task Force of the Community Partnership: Child Care and Early Education.

Note that this is an early draft of an Action Plan. Actual plans for implementation will be finalized Fall 1992.

(Draft Spring 1992)
The Situation

Minnesota and Ramsey County have given more attention to early childhood care and education than most parts of the country and we have many strengths to build on. Despite this, community leaders and service providers recognize that significant change and improvement are still needed in the way early childhood care and education (ECCE)* services are delivered in Ramsey County. The Community Partnership was established to respond to this need.

We began by identifying these problems in our current situation:

- The system itself. Our services are fragmented, with a complex pattern of funding streams, a piecemeal approach to addressing problems, and significant service gaps in the system. Many employers have not addressed the ECCE needs of employees, resulting in a less productive workforce and high levels of work/family stress. The system does not adequately support parents who wish to stay home to care for their children. A shared vision of the future is needed, with organized leadership structures at the state and local level to identify, advocate, and garner support for improvements for children and families.

- Inclusion. The formal service system does not respond adequately to ECCE needs and concerns at the individual and neighborhood level. Vital community networks are either not in place, or are not effectively linked with the larger service system. In particular, we have failed to hear the voices of communities of color.

- Quality. Early childhood care and education is generally undervalued as a profession, which makes it difficult to keep a sufficient number of qualified people in the field. Because we under-value providers, supports for quality service (such as compensation, benefits, education and training, support services, etc.) are inadequate. In addition, programs to assure quality (such as accreditation, certification, and licensing) are ineffective or underused.

- Community awareness/education. The community as a whole doesn’t agree on what children need during their early years, or what the consequences are when they don’t get what they need. Many employers are unaware of the vital link between work/family needs and productivity. Even more sobering, many parents are inadequately prepared to recognize, select, and demand quality care and education for their children.

- Money. The majority of the money in the current ECCE system comes directly out of parents’ pockets (an estimated $72 million of $125 million in Ramsey County.) The public monies aimed at ECCE are insufficient, and service providers are subsidizing the system by accepting low wages. The consequences of this financial structure are that many parents can’t afford the services they need, and the system doesn’t generate enough money to provide high quality services.

ECCE is used throughout as shorthand for early childhood care and education.
What We Want to Happen

This is what we'd like to accomplish for children and families in Ramsey County within ten years:

- All children will have access to high quality*, affordable early childhood care and education services which provide a safe, nurturing environment and adequate learning readiness.

- The availability of high quality, affordable early childhood care and education services for all families will eliminate a significant barrier to employment, advancement, and economic self-sufficiency.

- Improved family-friendly workplace policies will be in place, increasing working parents' productivity and decreasing work/family stress.

In order to realize these goals, we as a community are committed to the following values:

- That all families should have equal access to high quality early childhood services;

- That lack of money should not force any family to settle for low quality services;

- That families of all ethnic, racial and religious heritages should be able to find child care and early childhood services that share their values and their cultures.

* In order to measure success, the desired outcomes in terms of quality, accessibility, and affordability will need to be defined. These policy decisions must be made by the Early Childhood Care and Education Council early on.
How We Get There

(Highlights of The Workplan)

For our ten-year vision to be realized, we must begin today. The priority initiatives for the Partnership fall into three major categories:

- collaboration and inclusiveness
- serving all children and families
- high quality and learning readiness.

This is how we start, in 1992:

- Build new collaborations and greater inclusiveness in the early childhood care and education system.

  The Partnership calls for a substantial change in the way decisions are made and funds are distributed for early childhood care and education services. New collaborations must be forged, with input from the community. Key funders must consult with one another regarding the way resources for young children are spent. The Partnership also calls for increased self determination at the neighborhood level and an effective way to include groups which have traditionally been excluded. Leadership and assistance must be developed to challenge and help employers to meet the early childhood care and education needs of their employees.

1. Fund neighborhood-based early childhood advocates, first in communities of color, for the purpose of providing local support and effective links with the larger service system.

   OBJECTIVE: Four advocates operating and plans for two more in place by 1/93.

   (Recommendation 401)

2. Provide continuity of services for children with full-day care needs by linking child care services and funds to other programs serving young children, beginning with Head Start and Early Childhood Special Education.

   OBJECTIVE: Part-day service will become full-day for (#) of children by 1/93.

   (Recommendations 201, 202, 203, 204 & 205)

3. Develop a means to coordinate all financial assistance programs related to early childhood care and education services, so that children and families do not experience interruption in service.

   OBJECTIVE: Initial plans for coordination in place by 1/93.

   (Recommendation 704)

4. Help employers develop family-friendly workplace policies, including parental leave, by establishing leadership, assistance and incentives for employer involvement.

   OBJECTIVE: Establish an employer-friendly leadership organization to facilitate employer involvement in early childhood care and education by 1/93.

   (Recommendations 301, 302, 501 & 502)

5. Increase inclusivity and sensitivity by providing multi-cultural training for early childhood staff, and establishing multilingual, multi-cultural staff at key service agencies.

   OBJECTIVE: All Ramsey County early childhood care and education providers will have access to training in implementing a culturally sensitive curriculum by 1/94.

   (Recommendations 403, 404 & 405)
How We Get There (Cont'd)

- Ensure all children and families have access to the services they need.

  The Partnership calls for changes which will result in improved access to quality early childhood care and education for ALL children and their families. We want to make our existing service structures more effective, and create new services where necessary, to bridge the gaps in services for children and families.

6. Increase consumer education efforts for all parents, starting with the development of multilingual, multi-cultural staff for consultation and referral services.

   OBJECTIVE: Resource and referral services will have multilingual staff in place by 1/94.

   (Recommendations 308 & 313)

7. Increase effectiveness of the STRIDE (welfare reform) child care component, starting with individualized consultation and referral services.

   OBJECTIVE: Individualized consultation and referral services will be available for all Ramsey County STRIDE participants by 1/94.

   (Recommendations 211, 310, 706 & 707)

8. Start a 3-year effort to help employers and parents increase use of salary re-direction programs (Dependent Care Assistance Plans) and federal and state tax credits for ECCE services.

   OBJECTIVE: The number of small employers offering D-CAPS will increase from 10% to 15% by 1/96. The total number of employees using D-CAPS will increase from 5% to 7.5% by 1/96.

   (Recommendation 703)

9. Establish early childhood care and education centers in the Native American and Southeast Asian communities, and develop model programs to serve children with special needs.

   OBJECTIVE: 150 early childhood slots will be created by 1/94 to serve these three populations, which are currently unserved.

   (Recommendations 207, 208, 209 & 409)

10. Expand high quality before- and after-school program options through collaborative efforts of schools, child care providers, and youth-serving agencies.

    OBJECTIVE: Initial plans for expansion of before- and after-school programs will be in place by 1/93.

    (Recommendation 212)

11. Lobby for full funding of Head Start and the state Child Care Fund.

    OBJECTIVE: 100% of eligible families will be served by the year 2000.

    (Recommendation 701)
How We Get There (Cont'd)

• Commit to high quality services and learning readiness.

  The Partnership calls for immediate, substantial action to mobilize the needed supports that will increase the quality of early childhood care and education services. High quality services that appropriately meet developmental, nurturing and educational needs also address the learning readiness needs of our young children.

12. Improve compensation and benefits for early childhood care and education providers through development of a comprehensive human resources plan.

  OBJECTIVE: A link for child care providers to an existing benefits plan will be established by 1/94, with 50 providers participating in the first year.

  (Recommendations 604, 605 & 606)

13. Establish assistance and support to accredit ALL early childhood care and education programs, including all publicly-funded programs.

  OBJECTIVE: 75% of all Ramsey County ECCE programs will be accredited or in the process of accreditation by 1/96.

  (Recommendations 611 & 612)

14. Create an ECCE career development plan for all providers, including the coordination of licensing requirements and post-secondary education and training.

  OBJECTIVE: The Minnesota Council will contact higher education and training institutions to discuss collaboration and consistency by 1/93.

  (Recommendations 601 & 602)
How We Pay For It

In order to implement the Partnership's priority initiatives, we must do three things:

1. redirect new and existing public funds to better use;
2. lobby state and federal governments for increased funding, and;
3. raise start-up and leverage funding from public and private sources.

The cost of the recommendations for the first year is $2,279 million. $1,485 million of this can come from the redirection of new and existing public funds. Public-private fundraising will generate the remaining $794,000.

Similar amounts will be needed over the next several years. A detailed budget showing the cost and potential source of funds for each recommendation has been prepared. The recommended contributions and potential revenue sources for each funder are detailed in separate documents.

The fundraising goal is only about 1% of the total amount spent for child care and early education services, which in Ramsey County amounts to about $125 million annually.

Each year, parents spend an estimated $72 million out of their own pockets for child care and early education services in Ramsey County. An additional estimated $53 million is spent through public and private programs including Early Childhood Special Education, Head Start, United Way, tax credits, child care sliding fee, and over 40 other sources.

Priority Levels

Priority levels for the recommendations were set by the Task Force and Steering Committee members based upon many considerations including feasibility, resources, political climate, timeliness, urgency of need, etc. It is expected that further prioritization may take place before decisions regarding implementation are made.

The priority rating scale reveals the sense of urgency with which action must be taken.
- A+ = should have been done yesterday
- A = must be done today
- B = should be done today
- C = can wait until tomorrow

Most of the service recommendations rated at A+ or A level of priority are incorporated into “Highlights of the Workplan” in the Draft Executive Summary found in Part 1 of this report. The high priority recommendations for Community Awareness, Finance and Structure and Leadership were assumed to be necessary for the implementation of any of the Partnership recommendations.

Lead Agencies

The Task Force made suggestions on which community agencies or organizations could take a lead role in implementing some of the recommendations. For many recommendations, the Lead Agency has yet to be determined. For some initiatives, Partnership staff should play a lead role, and this is indicated as “Partnership Staff”.

Affiliates

For many of the recommendations, the Task Force made suggestions on which community agencies and organizations should be included in implementation efforts and/or further planning and development. Lists of affiliates are not intended to be exclusive, and should not be considered complete.

Estimated Cost

The cost estimates that are attached to the recommendations are very rough estimates, and are provided for the purpose of estimating the overall cost of the package of recommendations. The first number indicates the cost for the first year of implementation, and the second number estimates a total cost for the first five years. In several cases, long term costs are unknown. For each recommendation, further refinement of actual cost and a plan for generation of funds will be required.

Status Quo Statements

Status Quo statements and Need/Barriers outlined for the recommendations provide background information and context on the nature of the problems and issues that are being addressed. These statements were developed based on published and unpublished research, the expert knowledge of Task Force members and community input. A Report Supplement which summarizes research and program models pertinent to Partnership recommendations is available. (See p. 169 for information on how to obtain Supplement.)

Structure and Leadership

Unlike the rest of the recommendations, those regarding Structure and Leadership are not likely to be implemented as they appear in this report. As indicated in the introduction to the Structure and Leadership section (p. 131), the Partnership is currently in the process of determining its future structure for leadership and implementation. The recommendations presented here represent only one structure option under consideration.

Further Development of Recommendations

Many of the recommendations will require further planning and development before implementation. In fact, some recommendations call specifically for further study and planning. It is expected that implementation plans for each individual recommendation will be accomplished through the efforts of staff, lead agencies, affiliates and the Partnership's leadership structure.

Issues That Have Been Resolved

Some of the issues for which recommendations were proposed were resolved over the course of the two-year planning process. In cases where issues had been resolved at the time this report was published, this is indicated in the text.
Common Vision

"It takes a whole village to raise a child."

The Partnership envisions a coordinated early childhood care and education service system which assures a full range of high quality, affordable, accessible services for all children and families, with community-wide vision, policies and leadership. In order to realize this vision, the whole community must work together collaboratively to meet the needs of our children.

Status Quo

The characteristics of the early childhood care and education system in Ramsey County are as follows:

- Child care and early education services constitute a mixed service delivery system with significant levels of both private and public sector involvement and money. Of $125 million spent annually in Ramsey County on early childhood care and education services, $72 million comes directly from parents.
- Different players in the community have become involved in early childhood care and education for different reasons:
  - the education system is involved to improve learning readiness and educational achievement;
  - the human service system is involved in order to facilitate economic self-sufficiency, reduce welfare dependency and ameliorate the effects of poverty on children;
  - Head Start was created as part of the War on Poverty to ensure the American promise of equal opportunity;
  - employers are involved to assure a productive and skilled workforce; and,
  - private child care centers and family child care homes are involved in response to parents’ needs for care for their children while they are working or in education/training programs.
- Planning, policy-making, funding and service delivery have been carried out independently by these individual players, according to their various institutional missions and regulations. As a result, we lack a comprehensive and common vision for service for young children, and the early childhood service system suffers from inequity, discontinuity and fragmentation.
- The institutions which have established early childhood services and policy have operated in isolation from the community itself, resulting in services which do not effectively respond to community needs. Community members (especially parents, people of color, and service providers) who often have the best understanding of needs, are not included in decision-making processes.
- The various players have failed to take into account that "child care" and "early education" represent two dimensions of the same need for young children. 62% of children under age 6 have working mothers, and need full day care services. Other children have parents who are in education/training programs or looking for jobs, and these children need care while their parents are not able to care for them. Children who need some type of educational or specialized service (such as Head Start, early intervention, learning readiness, or special education) may also have full day care needs. Currently, most children who need both some type of specialized service and full day care cannot get them both in the same location.

- The working relationships that have been established through the two year planning and development effort of the Community Partnership provide a solid base upon which to build a collaborative community strategy to implement the Partnership blueprint.

Recommendation for a Common Vision

All public and private agencies in Ramsey County involved in funding or delivery of early childhood care and education services should agree to:

- work to accomplish their own institutional missions in ways which are consistent with the shared community vision for young children;
- establish policies and services in ways that ensure that child care programs have a high quality early education/learning readiness component, and that education programs and specialized services are available in full day care settings;
- collaborate in planning, funding, policy-making and service delivery with other key public and private sector players; and
- include groups that have not been fully included in decision-making processes in the past (especially parents, people of color and direct service providers.)
Community Awareness

Successful implementation of the Partnership recommendations depends upon a greatly increased awareness and understanding in the community of the importance of high quality early childhood care and education. A successful community awareness effort will determine the community's ability to make educated, informed decisions and will ensure the commitment of necessary resources for early childhood care and education services.

Need/Barrier

Community awareness and understanding about the importance and impact of quality early childhood care and education services is not sufficient to generate support and mobilize action for necessary service improvement and increased funding. In addition, lack of public awareness about the issues and barriers in early childhood care and education has been a barrier to addressing the needs of our young children effectively.

The Task Force identified a number of issues that may be incorporated into the final design of the Community Awareness Campaign:

- the current situation in early childhood care and education.
- the necessity of increased investment of resources.
- the consequences of poor quality care and education, and the benefits of a high quality early childhood experience,
- child development norms and the early identification of children with potential developmental concerns,
- the link between adequate education, training and compensation for providers and the quality of services for children,
- licensing, accreditation and certification standards,
- financial assistance programs for families, including: the Child Care Fund, Head Start, D-CAPs, and federal and state tax credits.

The agencies/organizations potentially involved in implementation
• the benefits of coordinating services for children, parents, providers and funders.
• current legislative mandate regarding parental leave.
• current legislative mandates regarding services to young children with special needs.
• the importance of early childhood experiences in building a productive adult work force.
• the necessity and advantage of employer responsiveness to the child care and family needs of employees.
• ways in which parents, providers and employers can become active in advocacy and lobbying efforts for children and families.

The Task Force also discussed possible ways of implementing the campaign:
• Hire a marketing/public relations firm to design and launch the campaign.
• Initiate discussions on incorporating child development education/training into public school curricula and programming through youth-serving organizations.
• Develop strategies with United Way's Success by Six Initiative, in order to find ways to link the Partnership's priorities with their Ramsey County community awareness efforts.
• Begin discussions with corporate and charitable sponsors to determine possible cooperative initiatives.

Services for Children

With children as the #1 priority, the Task Force developed a plan for service development and policy change which had the needs and best interests of our children at the core.

Ramsey County has a strong base of early childhood care and education services upon which to build. Many different services addressing different levels of family and child need are available. Unfortunately, many successful specialized programs are underfunded and can serve only a limited number of families and children. Gaps and shortages in service exist, and the system is characterized by a lack of coordination among existing public and private programs.

For children with full day care needs, other needed services should be delivered in coordination with the child care setting. For example, a child with special needs who is eligible for Head Start but also needs full day child care service, should not be required to travel to three different service settings for Head Start, Early Childhood Special Education and child care services.

Our early childhood care and education system must effectively respond to the individual needs of our children. This requires a full range of high quality, affordable and accessible services that address needs for early learning and development, as well for care during the hours that children’s parents are unable to provide care for them. Services must be provided in a culturally sensitive manner and must respond to the individual needs of the child and family.

All of the initiatives presented throughout this report have the needs of our children at the core. Those that are summarized in this section include:

- providing “seamless service” by linking various early childhood service options with one another to better serve the children.
- ensuring a full range of services to meet the needs of all children by addressing the gaps in service, particularly with respect to services for children with special needs,
- addressing the shortages in service, especially for drop-in care and before-and after-school programs, and,
- providing resources and technical assistance necessary for program start-up.

Seamless services

Status Quo

Children and families face a fragmented array of services for early childhood care and education. Part-day services such as Head Start and Early Childhood Special Education are not effectively coordinated with full-day early childhood care and education programs. This creates problems for young children with full-day care needs, who must be transported from one service setting to another in order to take advantage of services that are needed. Children are expected to come to the service, rather than the service responding to the child in the setting which is most appropriate.

At the heart of the problem is the fragmented array of categorical services designed, funded, administered and delivered by different public and private agencies for different but overlapping purposes. Because the complete removal of categorical restrictions governing the current system will not happen in the immediate future, our recommendations focus on coordinating funding streams and service delivery in order to create seamless service for children and families.

By "seamless service" we mean services that are organized and coordinated to reduce fragmentation, categorization and discontinuity. Service delivery should be coordinated so that families and children do not have to move from one service setting to another in order to obtain services that are needed. Funding streams should be coordinated and combined in order make best use of limited resources and to simplify access for parents.

Need/Barrier

In Ramsey County, Head Start programming typically is offered for only 12 hours a week, for only 32 weeks in the year and is primarily center-based. Because an estimated 35% of Head Start enrollees need full-day child care, many of these children must be transported to child care programs before or after their part-day Head Start service.

Need/Barrier

In Ramsey County, Early Childhood Special Education services are offered for only a few hours per week. Though some home-based services exist, services are primarily school site-based, particularly within the city limits of St. Paul. Some of the children receiving Special Education services have full-day child care needs and must be transported, creating instability in their environment and interrupting their day.

Develop and implement methods in the St. Paul and suburban public school districts for delivering Early Childhood Special Education services to eligible children in their child care setting through contract for service, traveling staff or other means.

Need/Barrier

The private child care system could benefit from linking with public school funds to improve staff/child ratios and increase quality of service. A successful program in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, has placed public school early childhood teachers in private early childhood programs, resulting in improved staff/child ratios and increased quality of service and learning readiness.

Develop and implement model programs whereby St. Paul and suburban public school staff are placed in private early childhood programs, using public school funding.

Service gaps

Status Quo

Children and families require a full range of early childhood services to meet varying levels of individual need. Our current system does not provide the full range of services that are needed. Early Intervention specialists and early childhood service providers statewide have expressed concern about a major gap in services for young children with special needs. Specifically, we refer to the children who do not qualify for Early Childhood Special Education services under current eligibility guidelines and definition of “special needs.” These children are “at-risk”, and have special needs such as mild/moderate developmental delays and behavioral and social/emotional concerns, and are frequently in need of some type of specialized therapeutic or preventive service. For many of these children, traditional early childhood care and education programs are the only service option, and these programs need additional resources in order to address fully and effectively the needs of these children.

Another major gap in the service system identified by the Task Force is the lack of early childhood programs designed to serve the needs of Native American and Southeast Asian populations. Recommendation 409, p. 79, addresses this concern. Gaps in financial assistance programs for parents are addressed in Recommendations 701-704, pp. 102–104.

Need/Barrier

Eligibility criteria for Early Childhood Special Education services are very restrictive, and as a result, many children with mild or moderate developmental delays or social/emotional or behavioral problems are not eligible for services under these guidelines. These children require more intensive specialized service than is available through standard early childhood care and education programs, but no funding stream currently exists to address the service needs of these children.

Need/Barrier

The state Child Care Fund could potentially be used to pay for child care services for children with special needs, with a higher rate of reimbursement for service that is more intensive and thus more costly. This would be particularly beneficial for children with mild/moderate developmental delays and behavioral and social/emotional concerns who are not eligible for Early Childhood Special Education, but are currently served in traditional early childhood care and education settings. At present, this higher reimbursement rate is not being accessed. The barriers include: the lack of an established market rate for serving this population, the lack of programs/providers to serve children with special needs, the lack of appropriate training for providers, and the lack of awareness among providers that they can charge a higher rate for serving this population.

Service shortages

Status Quo

In addition to the specific service gaps identified above, there are a number of service shortages in the early childhood care and education system, including: infant care, drop-in care, sick child care, school-age child care, services for homeless children, services for children in foster care or otherwise involved with Child Protection, services for children living in extreme poverty, and services for children born to teenage mothers.

Need/Barrier

Early childhood care and education professionals have identified a lack of appropriate early childhood care and education services for children who are at-risk due to homelessness, extreme poverty, teen parenting, or placement in foster care.

Services for Parents

The Partnership envisions a community in which parents are supported in their role as the most important and influential educators and caregivers in their children's lives. Parents' need for assistance in their efforts to locate and provide quality early childhood care and education experiences for their children must be addressed, and parents who wish to care for and educate their own children should be supported to that end.

Of primary concern to many parents is the high cost of quality early childhood care and education services. Parents are largely responsible for covering the cost of care and education for their young children, and high quality services are not affordable for many parents. A comprehensive set of recommendations regarding financial assistance for parents may be found in section 700, p. 99.

Three important strategies presented here are:

- addressing needs for improved workplace flexibility and parental leave policies and practices, while also supporting parents who wish to care for and educate their own children,
- developing parent education and awareness efforts to increase understanding of child development and parenting issues and to increase parent preparedness to purchase high quality service for their children, and,
- improving parent consultation and referral services to assist parents in locating quality early childhood care and education services for their children.

Workplace flexibility and parental leave

Status Quo

Workplace flexibility and parental leave are critically important and complex issues. Improvement in current policy and practice is essential to progress in addressing families' needs. The Task Force recommends an employer leadership group (see Recommendation 501, p. 82) which will assist employers in addressing these and other work/family issues from a business perspective.

Minnesota currently has a mandated parental leave policy which requires employers with 21 or more employees to offer 6 weeks unpaid parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child. Health insurance coverage must be made available to the parent during the leave, but employers are not required to contribute to the cost. Though Minnesota is ahead of other states with respect to this issue, our parental leave policy fails to meet the needs of all parents adequately. Recommendations follow which focus on improved parental leave policy and practice, and more extensive strategizing than has been done to date.

Need/Barrier

Many parents and employers are unaware of the Minnesota law regarding parental leave.

303

B Develop detailed recommendations and an implementation strategy for improving parental leave policy and practice.
Possible components of a parental leave strategy:

- Study the impact of various corporate and European parental leave policies, and the possibility for replication.
- Organize key players to study and develop strategies on how to expand the flexibility and effectiveness of parental leave options, carefully considering these possibilities:
  - advocating for an increase in the Minnesota Dependent Care tax credit,
  - advocating for an extension of the Minnesota tax credit to include parents who stay at home during the child's first year,
  - studying the possibility of an expanded state leave policy,
  - developing creative strategies to finance paid parental leave, including these possibilities:
    - making public and private disability insurance available, especially for the six-week medically recommended leave,
    - establishing a tax credit for employers who offer paid parental leave, and
    - establishing a mechanism whereby employees could set aside some of their wages on a pre-tax basis into a "sabbatical fund," which could be used for parental leave or sick-child care. (Employers could contribute to this fund as well.)

Parent education and awareness

Status Quo

Though a number of excellent parent education and support services are available in Ramsey County, they are not all accessible, affordable or delivered in such a way as to appeal to and reach all parents who could benefit from them. In addition to the need for support for parent education programs, we must also increase parents' preparedness to locate and purchase high quality early childhood care and education services for their children.

Though parent fees account for a substantial portion of the child care industry budget, parents are generally not well-informed and discerning consumers of early childhood care and education in the same way that they are informed consumers about other purchases and investments. Parents may not realize that since their dollars drive the system, they have choices, and can effectively encourage and support quality providers by becoming discerning consumers.
Need/Barrier

Early Childhood Family Education and other parent education services are not accessible to all parents, and lack the resources to reach out effectively to the neediest families.

Need/Barrier

Many parents are unable or unwilling to participate in traditional parent education classes and lack general knowledge and understanding of child development. Further, many parents do not access resource and referral services for assistance in locating quality early childhood care and education services, in part due to lack of awareness and cultural barriers. Little attention has been paid to the development of alternative methods for educating and reaching parents in a culturally sensitive manner.

Parent consultation and referral services

Status Quo

In Ramsey County, child care consultation and referral services for parents are provided by several agencies. In most cases, referral is limited to child care resources, rather than to a full array of early childhood care and education services.

Some employers contribute to the cost of referral services for their employees. More often, parents must pay for consultation and referral themselves. The state Child Care Fund provides some money for subsidized referral services for low-income parents, and in Ramsey County, Resources for Child Caring carries this contract.

For all consultation and referral services, accessibility, affordability, cultural sensitivity, and multi-lingual staff are critical issues. Because many parents do not perceive the need for the consultation services which should accompany referral, they may be reluctant to pay fees for the service. Thus, in order to locate early childhood care and education services, many parents rely on want ads, phone books, and word of mouth, and receive no preparation in how to identify quality service.

Need/Barrier

There is no community agency which currently serves as the major clearinghouse of all referral information on early childhood care and education services.

Services for Communities of Color

The early childhood care and education needs of communities of color must be met with equity, sensitivity and respect. This will require services targeted at specific needs of these communities, involvement of these communities in planning and decision-making processes, and constant effort to ensure responsiveness from the larger community.

The initiatives presented throughout this report under the headings of services for children, parents, employers and those related to quality and finance are focused on all children and families, including those of various cultural backgrounds. However, there are issues specific to the early childhood care and education needs of communities of color, and these are addressed in this section of the report.

The Partnership envisions a future in which all early childhood care and education services in Ramsey County:

- convey to children of color a strong positive message about the value of their cultural heritage.
- help all children value the culture and heritage of all communities, and specifically of communities of color.
- provide young children of color with an early education that fully prepares them for K-12 schooling and life.
- are fully accessible to families of color.

The Partnership has identified five primary strategies for moving toward this vision:

- establish neighborhood-based Early Childhood Advocates in each of the communities of color.
- increase the sensitivity and responsiveness of public and private agencies involved in early childhood care and education to the needs and values of children and families of color.
- increase the sensitivity of early childhood service providers to families and children of color.
- ensure an adequate supply of high quality early childhood service providers of color.
- address housing and transportation issues which have particular impact on low-income families and children of color, and which also affect other families.

Early Childhood Advocates

Local needs assessment, service development and improved access to the larger system will be accomplished through the establishment of neighborhood- or community-based Early Childhood Advocates. This recommendation is central to the Partnership's vision for all children and families in Ramsey County, and is found in this section of the report because Early Childhood Advocates are to be established first in communities of color, to assure that the unique and varied needs of these communities are addressed.

Neighborhood- or community-based Early Childhood Advocates are designed to empower and assure quality services for communities of color. Early Childhood Advocates will serve as a local source of service and support to parents and early childhood service providers and offer assistance in accessing other needed services. Advocates will serve as a voice for the local community or neighborhood in larger community-wide discussions and decisions regarding early childhood care and education issues.

Need/Barrier

Families and early childhood service providers have no local source of support, advocacy or service related to early childhood care and education. Accessing the formal service systems for financial assistance, consultation and referral services, and licensing can be intimidating and sometimes impossible, particularly if these services lack multi-lingual, multicultural staff. Families or early childhood service providers who live in relative isolation, or who feel alienated or discriminated against by the service system need a source of support, assistance and advocacy to access larger service bureaucracies, and to develop services which respond appropriately to the unique needs of their community.

Early Childhood Advocates will be located in community-based agencies, and will be planned, developed and established by members of these communities based on their own perspectives and needs. Early Childhood Advocates will develop and offer services designed to meet the specific needs of the children, parents and early childhood service providers in the community or neighborhood. Possible services to be developed include:

- offering informal community-based referral services for family child care providers and parents,
- implementing strategies to recruit, train and license culturally diverse child care providers,
- developing neighborhood-based family child care homes in areas of shortage to address transportation barriers,
- reaching out with linkage and support services to unlicensed homes,
- assisting providers in marketing their services,
- operating public awareness efforts that capitalize on the effectiveness of informal networks (friends, family, and word of mouth).
linking with community-wide agencies to facilitate their service in communities of color, offering means of connecting parents and providers to other support systems such as warmlines and support groups, linking parents and providers with necessary resources and financial assistance, working with state and county licensing departments and advocating for neighborhood providers, investigating delays in county and state licensing, ensuring that these are not due to cultural insensitivity, and taking necessary action to solve any problems, and,

studying and developing services to meet the needs for infant care, drop-in care, sick care, after-school care, and services to single or teenage parents.

Housing and transportation

Need/Barrier
Residents of public housing are required to meet income requirements that have been developed with no understanding of family child care. The effect of these requirements is often to drive family child care providers out of public housing as soon as they become successful, or conversely, to discourage them from entering the field at all. Families who live in rental housing are faced with the unwillingness of landlords to invest money to bring the housing up to standards required for licensing. Since rental and public housing tend to be concentrated and to serve large proportions of families of color, children and families in these neighborhoods are deprived of stable child care.

Services for Employers

Full implementation of the Partnership Recommendations requires substantially increased involvement of employers in early childhood care and education issues. The Partnership envisions a future in which all employers in Ramsey County will be well-informed about and actively supportive of early childhood care and education services which meet business, employee and community needs.

In particular, employers need information about:

- employees’ child care needs and the challenge of balancing work and family responsibilities,
- child care program models and family-friendly workplace policies which have been found to yield positive workforce benefits, and,
- the relationship between quality early childhood care and education services and the readiness of tomorrow’s workforce.

There are multiple approaches an employer may take to support the early childhood care and education needs of their employees and the community. These options are outlined in the supplement to this section, found on p. 85. Employers are urged to seek employee input, initiate one or two program options to start, and broaden their efforts over time. These program options include:

- offering early childhood care and education benefits or services to employees,
- offering employees flexibility in arranging work schedules, career paths, and parental leave,
- working to enhance early childhood care and education services in the community,
- providing leadership in consortium program models for groups of employers.

In addition to outlining and encouraging these program options for employers, the Partnership proposes a number of more specific recommendations with respect to employer involvement in early childhood care and education. These include:

- establishing leadership for employer involvement in early childhood care and education issues,
- creating a network of human resource professionals,
- distributing information on family-friendly workplace policies, and
- recognizing employers who best support families.

Quality Services

The vision of high quality early childhood care and education services for all children in Ramsey County has been the driving force behind the Partnership effort. Since the Partnership recommendations call for a major investment in our children, we must be sure that we are investing our resources in high quality service, and we must have measures by which quality will be determined. The Partnership is committed to improving the quality of existing services and ensuring that new services which are developed meet high quality standards.

There is a significant body of research and widespread professional agreement on the factors associated with high quality early childhood programming. It is widely agreed that a critical factor in quality programming is the quality of the interaction that takes place between staff and children. The quality of staff-child interaction is dependent upon how well-trained, sensitive, well-supported and stable the staff is. In light of this, many of the recommendations focused on quality are aimed at improving training, compensation and support services for early childhood service providers.

Research shows that better trained, better paid staff are more stable and provide higher quality service for children. The Partnership’s vision is that early childhood service providers have the training, education, competence, support, commitment, and enthusiasm necessary to be effective, and to improve outcomes for our children. Providers should be adequately supported, fairly compensated, and able to access resources and support services they need in order to provide high quality service.

We need measures by which we can determine that the services in which we are investing are of high quality. The Partnership recommends that nationally recognized standards for high quality such as accreditation and certification be widely used by providers to upgrade quality, by parents to identify quality service, and by policy makers to encourage and fund quality services. Awareness of the benefits of high quality programs and the detrimental effects of poor quality service should result in a willingness to make significant investment in quality improvements.

At the same time, the community must be realistic about the fact that many children receive less formal care and education from relatives and neighbors. Although the quality of some of this care is excellent, much of it could be improved by outreach to provide maximum support to service providers.

Strategies to move toward the vision of high quality care and education services for all young children include:

- education/training and career development opportunities for early childhood service providers,
- compensation and benefits which are fair and adequate to attract and retain qualified early childhood service providers,
- support services to enable providers to offer quality services,
- outreach to unlicensed providers,
- support for accreditation and certification programs as standards for high quality programming, and
- ensuring that legislation, rules and licensing standards are consistent with the goal of providing high quality service.

Education/training and career development

Status Quo

Research has consistently shown that higher education and training levels for service providers are associated with higher levels of quality in service for children, and positive child outcomes.

Yet the educational requirements for working with young children differ drastically depending on the setting in which one works. Continuing education training requirements for family child care providers are minimal. The rules for child care center licensing outline staff training requirements which differ from those for family child care providers. Both of these sets of requirements are established by the Department of Human Services, and differ substantially from the educational requirements for teacher licensure through the Department of Education, which is required for early educators in the public school system. Head Start staff training requirements are governed by yet another set of regulations.

Early childhood service providers seeking education and training are faced with a confusing array of choices and a multitude of post-secondary education and training institutions in the metropolitan area. Most institutions operate independently of one another, and there is little or no transferability of educational credits across schools. There are no widely accepted educational or career development paths, particularly for family child care providers.

Thus, for professionals working with young children, there is little opportunity for transferring credits among training institutions, difficulty in movement from one work setting to another without facing differing and conflicting educational requirements, and no source of support or guidance for education and career path decisions.

Need/Barrier

Conflicting licensure, certification, and employment regulations of the human service, education and Head Start systems create barriers to career development within the early childhood care and education field, and to the efficient flow of qualified staff from one part of the field to another. Training and education programs reflect these conflicts.
Lobby the newly-established Minnesota Council on Early Childhood Care and Education to develop a career development plan for the entire early childhood care and education system, and then negotiate with the state agencies involved to integrate licensure, certification, and employment regulations in order to fit this plan.

Need/Barrier
Problems regarding inconsistent education and training requirements for providers are compounded by the lack of coordination between post-secondary and other training institutions. This further impedes the career development and efficient movement of qualified personnel.

Compensation and benefits

Status Quo

Low compensation and limited benefits are a significant barrier to attracting and retaining qualified professionals in the early childhood care and education field. In 1990 in the Twin Cities metropolitan area, the average starting wage in a full-day center for a teacher was $13,270. Average starting wage for an assistant teacher was $11,003 and $9,506 for an aide (Child Care Works Profile of Child Care in the Seven County Metropolitan Area, 1991, Resources for Child Caring.) Based on limited local surveys, Resources for Child Caring’s best estimate is that family child care providers receive about $10,000 net income annually with a typical work week of 50 hours.

In contrast, according to Minnesota Salary Survey 1990, public school preschool and kindergarten teachers average $29,640 annually, and elementary school teachers average $44,720. Even paraprofessional teacher’s aides fare better than child care providers, with annual salaries of over $16,000.

In “The Status of Minnesota’s Child Care Profession: Results of the MnAEYC/CCWA Early Childhood Practitioner Survey, March 1989,” 93% of the workers surveyed reported they had no retirement benefits, 80% had no health insurance, 63% had no paid vacation, and 55% had no paid sick leave. Comparably significant percentages had no benefits such as worker’s compensation, life insurance, job protected maternity leave or overtime pay.

A significant consequence of low pay and limited benefits in the child care field is that worker turnover is extremely high. As a result, children often experience disruptions in their relationships with their caregivers and the quality of service for our children is compromised. These appalling compensation and benefits figures for those to whom we entrust the care and education of our young children must be considered seriously in light of the fact that research has demonstrated a link between higher worker wages, lower staff turnover, higher quality of service and better outcomes for children.

Need/Barrier

Low compensation presents a significant barrier to attracting and retaining qualified early childhood service providers. Low pay contributes to a high staff turnover rate and compromises quality of service. The community has yet to study and develop a comprehensive long-term plan to address these issues.

Conduct a comprehensive human resource study addressing compensation issues, including these elements:

- study current compensation levels of early childhood service providers.
- define relationship between compensation levels and recruitment and retention of qualified personnel.
- analyze job responsibilities to define necessary knowledge, skills and abilities.
QUALITY SERVICES 600

* conduct market analysis comparing current early childhood care and education pay levels with other industries for jobs requiring similar knowledge, skills and abilities,

Support services for early childhood service providers

Need/Barrier

Though Ramsey County has some technical assistance and support services for early childhood service providers, those that do exist are not coordinated, and significant gaps in service remain. The availability of support services to providers is critical to the provision of high quality service to young children.

See Key at the beginning of this section for information on how to interpret recommendations.
Identify existing resources and gaps in support service to providers. Develop a plan for coordinating these services, developing new services and increasing availability of existing resources.

The plan should include:
- the identification of an agency to develop a central clearinghouse of information and resources on support services for providers,
- the establishment of a resource library,
- assistance to providers in linking families with other services,
- the development of support services for serving special needs populations,
- the development of on-site consultation services on issues such as health care, child development, cultural diversity and family support services,
- the establishment of mentoring programs to link providers with experienced educators and caregivers for support, information and guidance,
- a means for assisting current and prospective early childhood care and education professionals with education and training decisions.

These services may be provided by, or in cooperation with, the neighborhood-based Early Childhood Advocates (see 401.)

Outreach to unlicensed providers

Status Quo
Minnesota has a fairly effective family child care licensing system, and as of July 1992, there were 1,285 licensed family child care homes in Ramsey County. Despite this, we know that there are many unlicensed providers caring for children, either legally or illegally. If a provider is caring for children from just one other family, this is considered legal unlicensed care. It is estimated that in Minnesota, for every two children in licensed care, there is one child in unlicensed care.

Unlicensed care for children is particularly an issue in low-income communities and in communities of color. (See also recommendations 401, 402, 408 addressing these concerns.) There was a tension within the Partnership between the goal of advocating for high quality service, while also being responsive to parents and providers who are operating outside of the licensed system.

We must be realistic about the fact that many parents choose unlicensed care and/or care by relatives or friends for their children. At the same time, the Partnership recommends increased efforts to reach these unlicensed providers in order to improve the quality of service for our children, and to improve child outcomes.

Need/Barrier
No systematic efforts exist to identify relatives and neighbors who are providing unlicensed family child care, or to encourage them to participate in training and support services and to become licensed.

610
Develop and implement ongoing outreach efforts to unlicensed family child care providers (see also Recommendation 401 regarding neighborhood-based Early Childhood Advocates.)
Accreditation and certification

Status Quo

In order to be sure that we are making wise investments in high quality services for young children, we must have standards by which we can measure quality. The Partnership focused on increased use of accreditation and certification standards, because they are nationally recognized standards for high quality service for young children.

The accreditation process was developed by the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC) and is nationally recognized as a standard for high quality programming for young children. Accreditation standards outline quality elements for early childhood programs addressing: administration, staffing, interaction among staff and children, curriculum, staff-parent interaction, staff qualifications and development, physical environment, multiculturalism, health and safety, nutrition and food service and evaluation. As of July 1992, 21 of the approximately 190 early childhood care and education programs in Ramsey County were accredited.

Participation in becoming accredited is strictly voluntary, and requires that interested centers or programs take initiative and obtain resources necessary for attaining quality standards. Financial and technical assistance for attaining accreditation is limited; the State Department of Human Services has a small fund which can be used to cover half of the cost of materials and validation fee for accreditation. Publicly funded programs such as Head Start or those offered through the public schools, and many private for-profit programs typically do not seek accreditation.

A process equivalent to accreditation for family child care providers has not yet been developed. However, several different certification programs do exist and have been implemented in Ramsey County to a certain degree. NAEYC has chosen the Child Development Associate (CDA) credential as the mechanism for certifying family child care providers. The CDA credential can be attained through Resources for Child Caring, and the Wilder Foundation offers another certification program for family child care providers. The National Association of Family Day Care (NAFDC) has also developed a certification program, which has yet to be implemented in Ramsey County. There is currently no community consensus on which certification program(s) should be used as a standard for high quality.

Legislation, rules and licensing

Status Quo

Current Minnesota legislation affecting early childhood care and education services establishes minimum standards for the health and safety of children. The legislation and accompanying rules are often established without thorough consideration of the impact on quality of service and without the involvement of parents. Further, over the past 15 years, Minnesota licensing requirements have gradually loosened, and reflect lower levels of quality than they did previously. Current licensing standards do not reflect quality standards recommended by the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC).

Some parents mistakenly assume that licensing is synonymous with quality and place their children in licensed facilities where the care is marginal. In addition, many family child care providers operate outside the formal licensing system, and therefore may not meet the minimum standards for health and safety, and do not have ready access to services which are available to licensed family child care providers.

Concerns have also been expressed about duplication of licensing systems (state, county and city) and the inconsistency with which infractions are cited and consequences applied. Child care centers are currently licensed by the Minnesota Department of Human Services, and family child care providers are licensed by Ramsey County Licensing Department, based on requirements established by the Department of Human Services. Centers in the city of St. Paul must meet both city and state licensing requirements with different regulations and paperwork and different licensing personnel. Moreover, licensing workers’ caseloads vary considerably and can contribute to inconsistencies in the way centers and family child care providers are licensed, and the length of time providers must wait to complete the process. Early education programs operated through the public schools do not need to be licensed, but teachers must have teacher licensure through the Department of Education.

Two dimensions of the issue of financing early childhood care and education services are addressed through Partnership recommendations:

- how families pay for services for their children, and
- how the community finances the early childhood care and education service system.

The Partnership's Task Force studied and analyzed the revenue structure of Ramsey County's early childhood care and education system in depth, and revealed an incredibly complex, fragmented, categorical system of public and private funding streams. The working draft of the Partnership's financial analysis of the service system may be found in the Finance Section Supplement, p. 113. (See Working Draft: Current Annual Expenditures for Child Care and Early Education Services in Ramsey County: By Funding Source and Function.)

It was estimated that in 1989-90, roughly $125 million was spent on early childhood care and education services, including Head Start and Early Childhood Special Education. The majority of the money in the system ($72 million or 58%) came directly out of parents' pockets.

This financial structure creates at least two significant problems: families face a substantial financial burden in trying to pay for services for their children, and the system does not generate sufficient revenue to adequately compensate service providers and provide high quality services for children.

Despite the fact that there are some public funds aimed at early childhood care and education services, these funds are grossly insufficient, as indicated by the low percentages of eligible families being served by fundamentally important programs such as Head Start and Basic Sliding Fee.

The Partnership's vision for financing of Early Childhood Care and Education services is as follows:

- there is adequate revenue from the combination of parent fees and public and private sources to ensure high quality early childhood care and education services for all children and families who need services.
- the early childhood service funding streams from different public and private sources are well coordinated to ensure continuity of services for children and simple access for both parents and providers.
- public funds are targeted on a sliding fee basis to children and families based on income and the special needs of the child. All eligible children receive service on an entitlement basis.
Partnership recommendations regarding Finance are found in the following two sections of this report:

- Financial Assistance for Parents, and
- Revenue Generation, addressing the need for short-term and long-term funding for the early childhood care and education system.
Financial Assistance for Parents

As previously mentioned, the Partnership vision is that early childhood care and education services for children should be available to families on a sliding fee basis, according to family income and based on the special needs of the child. Diagram 1 in the Finance Section Supplement, p. 113, clearly illustrates this concept.

Three strategies are presented:
- increase financial assistance for parents.
- coordinate existing financial assistance programs for parents to assure easier access and continuity in service.
- increase the effectiveness of the child care financial assistance component of the STRIDE program.

Increase financial assistance for parents

Status Quo

The cost of early childhood care and education service presents substantial problems for many families. The programs which have been designed to assist parents in paying for services are grossly underfunded. Federal and state funding for Head Start and the Child Care Fund, which are the two major sources of financial assistance to parents are available to only a small percentage of the children and families who are eligible. In 1990-91, Ramsey County’s Head Start program served only 747 (or 25%) of the county’s estimated 2,960 eligible three and four year olds. In the state of Minnesota, it is estimated that 30% of the children eligible for Head Start are served, though this figure is based on outdated poverty statistics. Statewide estimates are that only 32.1% of Minnesota’s families eligible for the Child Care Fund Basic Sliding Fee program are served.

(Before 1990 Census data was available, the Partnership made estimates on the number of children in poverty, and the estimated cost of full funding for Head Start. These estimates may be found in the report supplement. See p. 169.)

The cost of child care totals a significant portion of most families’ budgets, usually exceeded only by the cost of housing and food. For some low-income families, child care costs can amount to 25% of the monthly income. All child care subsidy programs are designed as reimbursement programs, which create cash flow problems for low-income parents and providers. Affordable child care is a crucial factor in determining whether young parents, particularly single mothers, are able to become self-sufficient, and subsidies are not always available. In one study, 76% of mothers on AFDC reported that they quit looking for work due to child care availability and affordability issues.

For illustration of the Task Force’s vision for financing new early childhood care and education services, see Diagram 1 in the Finance Section Supplement, p. 113.

Need/Barrier

Several different tax benefits exist which can help parents with their child care costs but they are currently underutilized. Federal and state Earned Income Tax Credits and Dependent Care Tax Credits are not being claimed by all eligible parents. Dependent Care Assistance Plans (D-CAPs), which allow working parents to set aside some of their income on a pre-tax basis for child care costs, are not available through all employers. When D-CAPs are available to parents, they may not be utilized due to lack of information on this benefit.
Initiate a three year project to increase employer and parent use of Dependent Care Assistance Plans (D-CAPs), and parent use of federal and state tax credits, including Earned Income Tax Credits (EITC), and Dependent Care Tax Credits.

Coordination of financial assistance programs

Status Quo

Parents’ difficulties in financing early childhood care and education services for their children are exacerbated by the complicated requirements that accompany many of the programs for financial support. Programs are administered by different public and private agencies, with differing eligibility criteria and complicated application processes. Parents may be eligible for only a given period of time or may be placed on waiting lists for service. When their eligibility status changes, they may be qualified for a different source of support, only to discover that there is a long waiting list for that service. For example, a family that is eligible for Head Start service may find that there is a waiting list for the Basic Sliding Fee program for the child’s full day care that is needed for the parent to maintain employment. Further, many social service programs that families need are not connected to necessary child care resources which would allow parents to participate.

When new federal and state programs are created, it usually involves the creation of new categorical funding streams, new eligibility requirements and regulations, and further complication and confusion for parents and service providers. New programs are often developed without regard for their relationship to other programs, and whether they will make access easier or more difficult for parents and children.

Need/Barrier

The early childhood care and education system involves a complex pattern of multiple funding streams, most of which are administered by different government agencies or departments, are not coordinated, have differing eligibility criteria and have complicated application processes for parents. Further, all child care subsidy programs are designed as reimbursement programs, which create cash flow problems for low-income parents and providers. This complex financial structure results in significant service gaps in the system, confusion for parents and service providers, and service discontinuity for children. (See “Working Draft: Current Expenditures in Child Care and Early Education” in the Finance Section Supplement, p. 113, for a clear illustration of the complexity of the system.)

- Lobbying to increase funding stream flexibility and reduce restrictions on use of funds.

STRIDE

Status Quo

STRIDE (Success Through Reaching Individual Development and Employment) is the Minnesota program which fulfills the requirements of the 1996 Federal Welfare Reform Act. The goal of the program is to help AFDC recipients gain the skills necessary to become economically independent through training and employment services. Child care subsidies are available to STRIDE participants on a regulated basis during all phases of the program, and also for a "transition year" as parents move off AFDC to take jobs. The STRIDE program is administered by the Department of Human Services and the Department of Jobs and Training. The child care component of the STRIDE program has sufficient subsidies, but there are many concerns about logistics, bureaucratic hurdles and problems in administration and service delivery.

Need/Barrier

At peak school enrollment times, STRIDE participants often experience delays in the child care approval or payment process. Ramsey County Community Human Services procedures do not allow for the additional workload during these times, creating payment delays to providers and contributing to providers' hesitancy to serve STRIDE parents.

Develop policies and procedures in Ramsey County Community Human Services which will reduce STRIDE child care payment processing delays at peak school enrollment times, such as re-allocating staff or hiring temporary assistance if necessary.
Need/Barrier

Parents leaving AFDC or STRIDE because of increased income or earnings may not be aware of their eligibility for “transition year” child care funding. As a result, appropriate paperwork may not be completed, and transition year child care funding is not accessed by all eligible families.

A+ Develop policies and procedures in Ramsey County Community Human Services which will ensure that AFDC and STRIDE parents will not lose child care assistance for which they are eligible. (A 1991 administrative change addressed this concern.)

Need/Barrier

STRIDE participants frequently have only one week’s notice of the starting date and schedule of educational programs. Many child care providers are unwilling to provide care until they receive approval of financial assistance for child care costs from the County, which can take up to 30 days.
Establish a County procedure for preliminary approval of child care assistance for STRIDE participants to accommodate the need for rapid approval of financial assistance at the beginning of semesters.

For other recommendations regarding the STRIDE program see:
- Recommendation 211, regarding developing drop-in child care services for STRIDE participants, and
- Recommendation 310, regarding enhanced consultation and referral services for parents in the STRIDE program.
The Partnership's Revenue Subcommittee has estimated that fulfillment of the Partnership's mission (ensuring affordable, accessible high quality early childhood care and education for all children) will require approximately doubling the current annual public, private and parent expenditure of $125 million on early childhood care and education services in Ramsey County. This would include such major expenses as: roughly $15 million to fully fund Head Start, $30-35 million to fully fund Basic Sliding Fee, a $10 million increase for every 10% increase in wages for providers, and substantial increases in funding for children at-risk and with special needs.

Many Partnership recommendations call for making better use of existing resources, especially those related to seamless services (p. 60) and coordination of financial assistance programs for parents (p. 103).

Because there is little flexibility in current revenues (see analysis of Flexibility for Revenue Redirection, Finance Section Supplement, p. 113), the majority of the increase in expenditures will need to come from new revenue, requiring a long-term effort through which all current funders will need to increase their investments in our children.

To accomplish this, two strategies are presented:

- generating sufficient short-term start-up and leveraging funding to initiate implementation of the Partnership Recommendations, and
- generating sufficient long-term continuing revenue that will ensure the implementation of the Recommendations over time.

Short-term Start-up and Leverage Funding

The primary immediate role of the Early Childhood Care and Education Council (see Recommendation 902) will be to raise the start-up and leverage funding to begin implementation of the Partnership Recommendations. The Partnership recommends four strategies in this effort:

- initiate a multi-million dollar fundraising campaign,
- maintain current base level of funding for services,
- expand the use of existing funding sources, and
- advocate to change rules and regulations to make existing funding sources more flexible.

Fundraising

Need/Barrier

A significant increase in revenue in the early childhood care and education system is needed over the next five years for start-up and leveraging costs for implementation of Partnership recommendations. Future service operation costs will also require substantially increased revenue.

801  A+
Initiate a multimillion dollar fundraising campaign to generate the funds necessary to implement the Partnership recommendations.

Cost: 100 | 300
Lead Agency: Partnership Staff

(Maintain base funding

Need/Barrier

Current early childhood care and education services form a base upon which new initiatives must be built. If funders reduce funding for current services in order to fund new initiatives, this will jeopardize our stable service base, which in turn will jeopardize our new initiatives.

802  A+
Encourage funders to establish a policy not to reduce funding for effective early childhood services in order to fund new initiatives.

Cost: * | *

Expand use of existing funding

Need/Barrier

The state Child Care Fund reimburses at a 10% higher rate for child care services offered through accredited programs. Many accredited programs do not charge these higher rates because they are trying to remain competitive, and therefore they are not able to access this bonus.

803  A
Ensure that all accredited providers receive the 10% accreditation bonus allowed for in the state Child Care Fund.

Cost: 5 | 10
For other recommendations addressing expanded use of existing funding streams, see:
- Recommendations 208 and 209 regarding services to children with special needs,
- Recommendations 605 and 606 regarding benefits for early childhood service providers, and
- Recommendation 703 to increase use of D-CAP's (salary redirection) and other tax credits.

Increase flexibility of existing funding

Need/Barrier

Many HMOs and insurance companies do not cover costs for pediatric therapeutic services for young children with developmental delays or special needs. Many of these children are unable to access public funds for therapy and may also be ineligible for Early Childhood Special Education services.

804
Lobby the state of Minnesota to require HMOs and private insurance companies to cover pediatric therapeutic services for young children with mild/moderate developmental delays, and/or are otherwise ineligible for publicly subsidized service.

*Cost: 5

Need/Barrier

The federal Dependent Care Tax Credit is available to families with children in child care. However, if the parent is a family child care provider and also cares for her own child, she may not claim the tax credit. (The Minnesota Child and Dependent Care Tax Credit will be extended to family child care providers effective 1992.)

805
Lobby the federal government to extend the federal dependent care tax credit to the children of family child care providers.

Need/Barrier
The availability of the state Child Care Fund for children with special needs applies only to those parents who are employed, in school, or are STRIDE participants. In cases where parents do not meet these criteria, the County is solely responsible for child care costs associated with Child Protection and other environmental circumstances such as parents with mental illness, disability, chemical dependency, etc.

A Lobby to extend the state Child Care Fund for children with special needs to include all children involved with Child Protection, regardless of their parents' employment or educational status.

For other recommendations regarding increased flexibility of existing resources see:
- Recommendations 201-205 regarding seamless service, and
- Recommendation 704 regarding coordinating and addressing gaps in financial assistance to parents.

Long-term Continuing Revenue
In the longer term, the major task of the Early Childhood Care and Education Council will be generating the continuing revenue for full and permanent implementation of these recommendations.

The Partnership recommends four strategies to accomplish this goal:
- Establishing a long range vision of the appropriate funding role of each major funder,
- Expanding the level of funding in current funding streams through state and federal advocacy,
- Creating new public and private funding streams, and
- Continuing efforts to generate new creative ideas for financing services and generating revenue.

Establish long-range vision

Need/Barrier
The major funders of early childhood care and education services have never engaged in a collaborative, long-term planning effort and as a result, the system suffers from duplication and overlap, service gaps, and poor use of limited resources.
Establish a collaborative planning and decision-making process among the major funders on their primary focus for long-term funding responsibility for early childhood care and education, in order to minimize unnecessary duplication, address service gaps and to make more effective use of existing resources.

(Diagrams 1 - 4 further illustrate the Partnership’s vision on how early childhood care and education services for children, parents, and the system infrastructure should be financed in the future. See Finance Section Supplement, p. xx.)

Expand current funding

Federal Child Care and Development Block Grant funds are not sufficient to address child care needs.

Create new funding streams

Need/Barrier

The child care system relies almost exclusively on parent fees and underfunded public streams. The generation of new and/or expanded public streams is critical to the survival of the early childhood care and education system.

See Key at the beginning of this section for information on how to interpret recommendations.

Generate new ideas

B Continue to explore and develop new creative methods to bring revenue into the early childhood care and education system.

The following ideas were generated by the Task Force, and require further exploration:

- "pay now, repay later" concept, demonstrating that investment in young children now saves in the long run,
- increase the county levy limit for early childhood care and education,
- place a surcharge on utility bills,
- linking early childhood services to other investments, especially for start-up and expansion costs, including:
  - interest subsidies from banks for child care in low income housing developments
  - CRA credits from banks
  - neighborhood development funds
  - real estate development
  - interest on capital (50% tax exempt) for ESOPs,
- utilizing the bonding authority of the state, public schools, city and port authority for capital costs, and
- employer guaranteed loans to early childhood care and education programs for start-up and expansion.
- modeling the Partnership's leadership structure on the Twin Cities Family Housing Fund model.

Working Draft: Current Annual Expenditures for Child Care and Early Education Services in Ramsey County: By Funding Source and Function

Note: This document is a working draft outlining estimates on the 1990 public and private expenditures on early childhood care and education services in Ramsey County. The “functions” outlined across the columns on the top reflect the early Task Force categorizations of recommendations. (These correspond roughly with the sections of recommendations in this report.) In a number of cases, funds were known to exist in certain categories, but estimates of totals were not obtainable. In other cases, funds indicated in one category also cover service functions in other categories. Some sources of funds listed in the column on the left have no dollar figure indicated; these are funds which were projected to be available for the next fiscal year.

Though this document estimates a total of $120.4 million in the county’s system, rough estimates, which include guesses on the “unknown” amounts, place the figure closer to $125 million for Ramsey County’s total annual expenditures on early childhood care and education services.

Major conclusions which may be drawn from study of this chart are that:

- the majority of the funds in the system are direct parent fees for service ($72 million of $120.4 million, or 60% of total expenditures.)
- the early childhood service system is characterized by an incredibly complex pattern of uncoordinated, discontinuous, categorical funding streams, most of which are administered by different public and private agencies, and have different eligibility criteria and application processes.

Ramsey County Child Care and Early Education Current Revenue: Flexibility for Redirection

Note: This document was developed in response to the Leadership Committee’s concern that before we embark on an effort to raise substantial new resources, we should be sure that we are making the best use of resources that currently exist. Therefore, the Task Force’s Revenue Subcommittee completed this analysis of the flexibility of existing funds in the early childhood care and education system.

It should be noted that the dollar figures in this document differ from those in the “Working Draft: Current Annual (1990) Expenditures for Child Care and Early Education.” This is due to the fact that this is a later draft (Fall 1991), more dollar figures were available, and new monies (including Federal CCDBG) were figured in.

Conclusions that may be drawn from this analysis are that:

- for the funds that have a moderate level of flexibility (including CCDBG, Child Care Fund, and Head Start), there are some ways to make better use of these resources. Several of the Partnership recommendations address coordination of funding streams and making better use of existing resources. (See especially Recommendations 201-205, 704, 805-808.)

- there is very little flexibility for redirection of existing funds, and new resources will be required to fund most new initiatives.

The Money Flow

Note: This document illustrates the complex nature of the flow of early childhood care and education funds to parents and service providers through federal, state and local funding streams.
Diagram 1

Note: Diagram 1 illustrates the Task Force's vision for who should pay for early childhood care and education services for children, according to family income and the special needs of the child. This diagram shows the basic concept that children should not be denied service due to parents' inability to pay. All children, regardless of family income, should have access to high-quality affordable services. The lower the family income and the greater the special needs of the child, the larger the public share of the cost. Parents in upper income brackets should be expected to pay a higher percentage of the cost of service for their children than parents in lower income brackets. This diagram is intended to indicate the concept, not show the specific dollar sharing for sliding fee. (see also Diagram 2)

Vision: Who Should Pay for Continuing Early Childhood Care and Education Services for Children

Diagram 2

Note: Diagram 2 adds further detail to Diagram 1 by indicating specifically who should pay for early childhood care and education services for children. In each category, funders are listed in rank order according to percentage contributed to total cost. The percentage of the cost that parents are expected to contribute varies according to family income. (see also Diagram 1)

Other funders will exist (e.g., churches, United Way, foundations) but they will represent less than 2% of the total. Every program for children will combine several services. For example, the Sliding Fee Income guideline of eligibility for a family of three is $26,693 (75% of State median income). For example, the Head Start income guideline of eligibility for a family of three is $11,140 (federal Poverty Guidelines). Federal and state tax credits. Human Services includes federal, state and county money through the Human Service System. Schools includes local state, and federal education funds. Head Start includes federal and state Head Start funding. Health includes public health money or HMO and private insurance payment for services.

The major services for parents outlined here are: early childhood care and education consultation and referral, parent education, workplace flexibility and parental leave. In each category, funders are listed in rank order according to percentage contributed to total cost. The percentage of the cost that parents are expected to contribute varies according to family income.

Note: Diagram 4 illustrates the Task Force’s vision for who should pay for the continuing costs of the infrastructure of the early childhood care and education system. Infrastructure is defined as all of the services which do not fall into the categories of direct services to children or parents (which are outlined in Diagrams 1, 2 and 3.) Recommendations are summarized by section of this report, but Early Childhood Advocates are presented separately because they are recommended to be part of the continuing infrastructure of the service system.

Structure and Leadership

Note: As of this writing, the Partnership is in the process of determining the composition, role and function of its future structure for leadership and implementation. The structure proposed in the following section of this report is based on the work of the Task Force, and in particular the Planning Subcommittee, and reflects only one of the options currently under consideration. A final agreement on structure and leadership is expected to be completed in the fall of 1992. Written copies of the final structure will be available to the public at that time and may be obtained by contacting Partnership staff. (See p. 169)

Successful implementation of the Partnership recommendations requires that an effective collaborative structure for community leadership and fundraising be in place. The Partnership's vision is that early childhood care and education services will, and should, continue to be delivered and funded by multiple public and private institutions and agencies in the community. The challenge in this situation is to organize funders, policy-makers, employers, service providers and parents in collaboration so that:
- there is leadership, shared vision and direction,
- multiple funding sources are coordinated to ensure seamless service for children and easy access for parents and providers, and
- the community does not create a new and inaccessible bureaucracy.

There are five major tasks that a leadership structure must accomplish:
- generate and commit resources to implement the Partnership’s recommendations,
- ensure the continued collaboration of funders, service providers and parents,
- represent the cultural diversity of the community,
- maintain a holistic view of the early childhood care and education needs of children and families, and
- continue to apply and adapt the Partnership vision to changing social forces and community needs.

To accomplish these tasks, the following strategies are recommended:
- establish a leadership structure consisting of an Early Childhood Care and Education Council, staff and community advisory groups,
- establish mechanisms for data collection and monitoring, and evaluation of progress in meeting Partnership objectives,
- establish commitment to ongoing collaborative planning,
- report to the community on early childhood care and education needs and progress in implementing Partnership recommendations, and
- strengthen advocacy efforts for early childhood care and education.

The Partnership's future leadership structure will be uniquely positioned to establish relationships and work with other state and county early childhood initiatives. It is expected that the Partnership will work closely with the Minnesota Early Childhood Care and Education Council, established by the 1991 Minnesota Legislature. The Partnership is also expected to be a critical player in other efforts for greater coordination in the planning and delivery of human services in the Twin Cities metropolitan area.

Leadership structure

| 901 | A+ | Establish a three-part leadership structure, including an Early Childhood Care and Education Council, staff, and community advisory groups. |
| 902 | A+ | Establish the Early Childhood Care and Education Council in Ramsey County.
The primary responsibilities of the Early Childhood Care and Education Council are to:
- raise leverage and start-up funds necessary to launch implementation of the recommendations,
- generate funds necessary for the long-term implementation of the recommendations,
- assure continued collaboration of the key public and private funders, and
- monitor and evaluate progress over time and adjust plans as needed. |
| 903 | A+ | Establish agreement among Early Childhood Care and Education Council members to:
- use the Council as their forum for addressing early childhood care and education issues and unmet needs, for problem-solving and for information-sharing,
- select a CEO-level representative to the Council who can act on behalf of the organizations on the Council,
- use the Partnership recommendations as a guide in developing plans, annual budgets and new initiatives for their own agencies, and
- instruct staff from their agencies to work collaboratively with staff hired or contracted by the Council. |
| 904 | A+ | Contract with an existing community agency for primary staff to implement the Partnership recommendations under the direction of the Early Childhood Care and Education Council. |
The primary responsibilities of the staff are to:
- work with public and private agencies to implement the Partnership recommendations,
- provide necessary fundraising support for the Council,
- provide necessary finance and revenue expertise for effective management of multiple funding streams, and to develop plans for long-term operating revenue,
- develop and maintain a database that will track the need for services, changing child and family needs, and progress in implementing recommendations,
- prepare an annual early childhood care and education report for the community, and
- recommend to the Council an annual plan based on Partnership recommendations, community input and current data on need and supply of services.

Cost: 200 \( \text{1 500} \)

Lead Agency: to be determined

| 905 | A+ | Establish collaborative agreements between the Early Childhood Care and Education Council and community agencies for staff to lead implementation of certain specific Partnership recommendations. |

| 906 | A+ | Appoint eight to fifteen persons to serve as members of an Advisory Group for Staff in implementing the Partnership recommendations or Council actions. |

| 907 | A+ | Appoint ad hoc advisory groups as needed to assist in implementing specific Partnership or Early Childhood Care and Education Council recommendations. |

Data, monitoring and evaluation

| 908 | A+ | Select an evaluator to measure community progress in implementing the recommendations, and the effectiveness of the leadership structure in facilitating community progress. |

Cost: 40 \( \text{1 120} \)

Lead Agency: Wilder Research Center

See Key at the beginning of this section for information on how to interpret recommendations.
Create and maintain a database, using existing public and private data sources, to measure the need and supply of early childhood care and education services, and community progress in achieving Partnership goals.

Cost: 40 $100

Lead Agency: Resources for Child Caring and Wilder Research Center

Affiliates: to be determined

Planning

Commit to joint cooperative planning regarding funding, information collection and distribution, policy-making and service development in early childhood care and education.

Reporting to the community

Prepare and distribute regular reports to the community on early childhood care and education needs, opportunities for investment, community progress in implementing Partnership recommendations, and upcoming plans of the Council.

Cost: in 904 1 in 904

Advocacy

In order to implement Partnership recommendations successfully, effective advocacy efforts will be needed on many levels. The Partnership should focus its advocacy efforts on areas which are most critical, including the generation of long-term revenue, and developing continuing collaborative agreements among the many public and private players in the early childhood service system. Where strong early childhood advocacy efforts already exist, these should be supported by the Partnership. Because individual Partnership players will have legislative/political agendas of their own, the Partnership should work to encourage these efforts to incorporate advocacy for the Partnership’s collective agenda and vision.
Establish an annual state legislative agenda for the Early Childhood Care and Education Council.

Establish a collaborative agreement with existing advocacy groups to organize support for the Partnership legislative agenda.

PART IV
Early Accomplishments of the Community Partnership:
Child Care and Early Education
Early Accomplishments of the Community Partnership: Child Care and Early Education

Introduction

The work of the Community Partnership: Child Care and Early Education resulted in significant accomplishments over the course of the two-year planning and development period. In addition to generating comprehensive recommendations for service development and policy change, many services were developed, modified and improved as a result of the Partnership process itself. The accomplishments of the Partnership outlined below attest to the high levels of expertise, commitment and enthusiasm among members that characterized the early phase of the Partnership process.

Accomplishments fall into these categories:
- Service Development
- Changes in Service Delivery
- Changes within Participating Agencies
- Committee Development
- Collaborative Grant Proposals/Fundraising
- Events/Activities
- Increased Awareness/Knowledge/Information Exchange and Referral
  - Increased understanding of early childhood issues and community resources
  - Opportunities for members to clarify and provide outreach for their own services
  - Increased referral sources, and increased resources for professionals
  - Increased “personalization” of referral and interagency collaboration

Service Development

The work of the Partnership’s STRIDE Ad Hoc Committee resulted in significant accomplishments related to service development and delivery, including the following:

- The Committee developed a training session for STRIDE case managers, Ramsey County Child Care Fund staff and Resource and Referral staff. Three training sessions have been held, and approximately 100 people have been trained, resulting in a significantly increased interagency understanding of the complexities of the STRIDE program and the child care needs of participants. Training sessions have been videotaped.
• The Committee created and produced a clever skit ill-tating the complexities and bureaucracy of the STRIDE program from the perspective of program participants. One committee member wrote and produced "The STRIDE Rap," a rap video which creatively pokes fun at all of the acronyms associated with STRIDE and other public assistance programs. These productions have had a statewide impact.

• The Committee advised and provided training for a project at Resources for Child Caring whereby customized (enhanced, more intensive) child care referral services were offered to a select number of STRIDE participants. This was a time-limited project funded through a grant from the Sheltering Arms Foundation, and the committee has recommended that this customized referral service be made available to all STRIDE participants.

• STRIDE Ad Hoc Committee discussions contributed to action taken at the Minnesota Department of Human Services regarding a policy change for STRIDE participants. Through this action. STRIDE participants will be allowed increased child care funding for necessary study time.

• Based on Committee discussions and identified need, STRIDE parents now participate in an orientation/information program at Resources for Child Caring focusing on child care needs and resource and referral services.

• Committee members have developed a service model for drop-in child care for STRIDE parents.

• Ramsey County Child Care Fund staff have participated in joint training sessions with STRIDE case managers resulting in better working relationships among staff and a smoother intake process for participants.

• Ramsey County Child Care Fund staff have adopted a procedure for more aggressive outreach to young mothers in order to alleviate the STRIDE paperwork processing crunch at school enrollment times.

Other service developments resulting from the Partnership include:

• Minnesota Extension Service-Ramsey County is developing an audio-tech computer with voice board service whereby callers can access any one of a number of tapes on child care and parenting issues using a touch-tone telephone. There are likely to be approximately 50 child care/parenting related tapes. The development of additional technologies for reaching parents was a specific Partnership recommendation, and this helped staff to sell the project within Extension Services.

• The Working Parent Resource Center and Minnesota Extension Service-Ramsey County have developed a collaborative newsletter for working parents entitled "Life Balance Digest: for Employees Balancing Work, Personal and Family Life." It will be distributed six times a year and is available for purchase by employers for a nominal fee.

• Corporate representatives involved in the Partnership decided to take action on the recommendation to establish a work and family professionals' network, an association of human resource professionals involved in developing work and family programs and policies. The Twin Cities Work and Family Network was established during the summer of 1992.
Changes in Current Service Delivery

- The Working Parent Resource Center is now offering classes at Capitol Child Care Complex.
- The St. Paul Public Library has collaborated with both Wilder Early Childhood Development Services and Resources for Child Caring to present classes for providers.
- The St. Paul Public Library has offered programming for parents at the Downtown Family Resource Center.
- Working Parent Resource Center newsletter/calendars are now being distributed through the Library branches.
- The Working Parent Resource Center has been using information gathered by the Partnership to educate employers regarding work/family issues.
- Staff at the St. Paul Public Library report that their resources have been much better used because of their greater exposure to service providers through the Partnership, especially the "Launch a Young Reader" program, which brings library resources to children in child care settings.

Changes within Participating Agencies

As a result of participation in the Partnership, many agencies made internal changes in response to things they had learned through the process.

- Capitol Community Services is considering changes in its employee benefits package due to greater technical knowledge of financing issues, especially regarding Dependent Care Assistance Plans.
- MnAEYC has been motivated to work more diligently to draw more agencies into their decision-making processes and to increase the diversity and representation on its Board.
- As a result of greater awareness of cultural issues, Resources for Child Caring has instituted a cultural diversity initiative for staff and board members.
- St. Paul Companies has used the Partnership list of resources/members for networking and resolving issues related to early childhood care and education.
- Resources for Child Caring has made changes in its Resource and Referral, Sliding Fee and Family Child Care services to better serve neighborhoods and reach communities of color.

Committee Development

In addition to all of the Partnership committees and subcommittees that were developed throughout the process, a number of other community committees were established to address other early childhood issues. Because of the increased community awareness, working relationships and trust that were established through the Partnership process, other committees have been easily assembled, and critical players are known and invited to participate.

- A focus group addressing the child care needs of the Hispanic community has been established, and has involved many Partnership players. The chair reports that due to the trusting working relationships previously established among Partnership members, this committee has been effectively putting the needs of the community first. Advised by this focus group, Wilder Family Child Care Services is implementing a successful initiative on the West Side of St. Paul providing support services for Hispanic family child care providers.

- Ramsey County has developed an interagency child care planning committee which will advise the County on planning, policy and service development related to child care. Many Partnership members are serving on this committee.

- Congregations Concerned for Children has assembled an advisory committee consisting of Partnership members to assist them in putting together a parent resource packet for congregations.

- Partnership staff and members have been involved in the St. Paul and North St. Paul/Maplewood/Oakdale public school districts’ Learning Readiness Advisory Committees. As a result, these districts have developed Learning Readiness service plans which are consistent with the Partnership’s vision for coordinated early childhood services.

- Partnership staff have participated in an advisory committee for CLUES Child Care Research Team.

Collaborative Grant Proposals/Fundraising

- The Partnership assembled a Special Needs workgroup which developed a grant proposal for new child care funds available through the Minnesota Department of Human Services. The proposal is for a collaborative effort between Wilder Child Guidance Clinic and Resources for Child Caring to provide services to children with social/emotional and behavioral concerns. The grant was approved for funding in May 1992, and service delivery will begin in the fall of 1992.

- The United Way of St. Paul Area has used child care experts from the Partnership in reviewing grant requests/proposals.

- The Partnership vision and recommendations were incorporated into a major collaborative grant proposal to the New American Schools Project, submitted by the St. Paul, Roseville and Blue Earth County Public School Districts.

- Partnership staff and members have supported other community agencies in their efforts to develop services and obtain funds by writing letters of support for grant proposals.

Events/Activities

A number of community events, activities and forums were hosted by the Partnership throughout its two-year planning and development effort.

- The Partnership hosted Governor Carlson’s Action for Children Commission’s St. Paul community forum and service provider meetings.

- The Partnership hosted several community forums designed to solicit input on the specific early childhood care and education concerns of minority groups and communities of color.

- The Partnership has hosted several meetings for exchange of information among all Ramsey County school district personnel involved in developing and administering Learning Readiness service plans for four year olds.
Increased Awareness, Knowledge, Information Exchange and Referral

Virtually all Partnership members report an increased level of awareness and understanding about early childhood care and education issues and services in the community. This increased knowledge and awareness is reflected in several ways. Verbatim quotes from Task Force members are found below:

- Increased understanding of early childhood issues and community resources and services

  “Increased awareness of child care needs and resources, and increased sensitivity to the child care needs of all families and children.”

  “Greater awareness of the problems in trying to provide quality services and yet how essential this is in order to better serve children.”

  “Issues were clearly defined, various agencies became committed to working together to deal with them and obtaining resources to solve or diminish problems.”

  “Greater awareness of the differing needs of differing parts of the community, and acknowledgment that there is no one answer for any problem. I think more about my solutions and whether or not they are addressing my needs or the needs of the other person.”

  “The dialogue with others has helped increase understanding of what’s going on in the community and how our program fits into the big picture.”

  “Increased awareness and clarification of other agency roles, responsibilities and regulations.”

  “Have become more aware of the high level of competence in the human services/child care area, and the frustrations due to limited resources that constrain movement toward program quality.”

  “Greater awareness of the expertise in the community and the potential for collaboration which exists.”

  “We’ve all developed a broader vision for child care and early education, gained different perspectives on child care system and programs, and issues related to communities of color.”

  “Have made a shift to systematic thinking with regard to early childhood care and education and the dollars that go along with it.”

  “I’ve learned a great deal about the early childhood care and education community and issues/problems, and I expect that as parent and a citizen I will put this knowledge to use in various ways to assist in addressing these problems.”

  “This process has expanded my professional expertise considerably.”
• Opportunities for members to clarify and provide outreach for the services which their organization or agency provides

  "My participation allowed me to clarify rules and regulations for the community which had previously been misunderstood or misinterpreted. This resulted in ability to develop better cooperative working relationships in the community to the benefit of families and children."

  "It's been a good way to inform others of who we are and what we do."

  "It gave me an opportunity to share research on quality programs for young children."

  "I was able to market and promote our program through networking with other agencies."

  Partnership mailing lists have been used by a number of agencies and organizations to share information and to spread the word about various events, forums, legislative action opportunities, conferences, training programs, etc.

• Increased referral sources for parents and children, and increased resources for professionals

  "Our staff has been better able to make referrals to community agencies because of our increased awareness of what others offer."

  "I have become very aware of the services available in the county, and have been able to refer parents to programs better suited to their needs."

  "Significantly increased number of people in the community to ask questions when stuck."

• Increased “personalization” of the process of referral and interagency collaboration

  "The personal contacts have been very valuable. Getting to know people makes agencies and programs more accessible and understandable. When I'm referring someone to another agency, I know the person they'll be talking to."

  "The process has personalized the agencies, creating greater access and opportunities for collaboration."

  "We've developed much stronger working relationships with key players in the community."

Sources:
Partnership staff documented accomplishments of the Partnership process throughout the two year planning and development effort. At the April 1992 meeting, the Task Force was asked to complete an open-ended survey outlining members' perspectives on what had been accomplished through the Partnership process. Information from these two sources was combined to create this document. The preceding list of accomplishments should not be considered complete. (Draft 6/19/92)

STRIDE Ad Hoc Committee
Recommendations

Draft: January 14, 1991

The STRIDE ad hoc committee was formed by the Partnership to address child care issues in the operation of the STRIDE program (Minnesota’s welfare reform program designed to provide AFDC parents with the training and educational achievements that can enable them to become self supporting). The Partnership determined that the issues were important and merited immediate attention.

Membership on the ad hoc committee included representatives from Ramsey County and the City of St. Paul with responsibilities for the case management aspects of the STRIDE program, community representatives involved with support services to STRIDE participants, and other Partnership members.

The result of the ad hoc committee’s work is the identification of eleven child care related issues that are affecting the ability of STRIDE clients to succeed. The Partnership’s Task Force has reviewed the recommendations and considers them to be consistent with the Partnership’s guiding values and principles of quality, diversity of child care choices, and continuity of care and early education arrangements. The Task Force recommends Executive Committee approval.

Recommendations include:

1. Develop an enhanced child care referral service for STRIDE participants.
2. Implement a project to determine reasons for child care providers’ hesitance to accept children of STRIDE participants and to market STRIDE to providers.
3. Develop drop-in care options for STRIDE participants.
4. Reduce child care payment processing delays at peak school enrollment times.
5. Eliminate loss of transition year of child care funding for STRIDE participants due to inappropriate termination from AFDC.
6. Create mechanisms to ensure that STRIDE participants continue receiving financial support for their child care costs after they have completed the STRIDE program if they are still eligible for financial assistance for child care costs.
7. Improve data collection on child care issues for STRIDE participants.
8. Authorize case managers to determine the appropriate amount of study time for which child care costs can be paid based on the STRIDE participant’s course of study and ability.
9. Investigate potential for increasing child care availability for STRIDE participants at St. Paul Technical College and explore other ways to link STRIDE Technical College students with nearby child care options.
10. Evaluate alternatives to out-of-pocket child care costs for STRIDE parents at the time the parents move to the transition program.

11. Monitor processing delays that slow formal approvals to providers that child care payments have been approved for a STRIDE participant.

Ad Hoc committee members included:

Kate Ellefson
Virginia Greenman
Bob Munns
Glennis Rasmussen
Linda Thielbar
Sharon Wilson
Terry Zern

Recommendations

Issue 1: STRIDE parents often do not have the preparation for conducting child care searches, evaluating options, interviewing providers, establishing contracts, maintaining relationships with providers, getting their children prepared for child care, and developing alternative back-up care.

Solution: Expanded child care counseling and referral must be made available to STRIDE parents which is geared toward their individual needs. Some of the needed counseling assistance can be provided by STRIDE case managers if they are more fully trained in child care issues. Additionally, specialized presentations to groups of STRIDE parents should be provided as a part of the orientation program and through their career exploration groups. Additional personal assistance must be provided in one-on-one counseling with qualified child care referral counselors.

Action: Federal matching funds are available for providing enhanced referral services for STRIDE parents. By taking advantage of these available funds, Ramsey County can better prepare STRIDE parents for meeting their children’s care needs and can better protect the overall investment in the STRIDE program. The county should extend a Request for Proposals (RFP) for enhanced referral services for STRIDE participants and include child care issues in the training of the case managers.

Cost: Approximately $50,000 annually (split between the county and the federal government)

Priority: A

Consequence of no action: STRIDE clients will continue to receive the more limited child care referral service, which is not sufficient to meet the myriad of child care needs of the STRIDE client. As a result, STRIDE clients will not be well prepared to make child care choices that enhance their ability to succeed in the STRIDE program. Use of available federal dollars will be forgone.
Issue 2: Providers are often hesitant to accept children of STRIDE parents because of concerns about payment delays, shifting schedules of STRIDE parents, and potential development issues of the children.

Solution:

a. Research the degree to which provider hesitance is related to the above issues.

b. Identify and debunk the myths about STRIDE parents and children with providers.

c. Market STRIDE to providers, including unlicensed family child care providers.

d. Investigate use of financial incentives to increase willingness of providers to accept STRIDE children. (Tie to city mini-grants or state development grants.)

Action: Funding should be secured for a limited project with the scope outlined above. Because this issue is a statewide issue, not simply a county issue, funding sources could be broad and include private funding from the foundation community, multiple county or state funding. Alternatively, a partnership with the University of Minnesota with graduate student research could potentially yield the needed results. Resources for Child Caring presently has project funding to investigate strategies for marketing STRIDE to providers. The knowledge gained could be used in conjunction with an implementation effort in Ramsey County.

Cost: $25,000 to $50,000

Priority: A/B

Consequence of no action: STRIDE parents will continue to have more limited choices of child care than fee-paying parents and the negative image of STRIDE families will remain.

Issue 3: STRIDE parents are often unable to find and pay for drop-in care during several aspects of the STRIDE program including the assessment period and the job search.

Solution: Develop drop-in care options through identification of a group of center and family child care providers in locations of proximity to assessment sites who are willing to provide occasional care for STRIDE participants’ children. Update list on an ongoing basis. Create a voucher program which would provide reimbursement from the county for drop-in care.

Action: Resources for Child Caring has provided to the STRIDE ad hoc committee members a listing of family child care homes and centers identified as providing drop-in care in proximity to the assessment sites. Further actions will be taken by Ramsey County Community Human Services Department together with STRIDE program management to build an active network of drop-in care options.

Cost: ?

Priority: A

Consequence of no action: Limited choices of care for STRIDE participants during assessment.

Issue 4: Training and educational programs used by STRIDE parents in large measure begin in September and January, creating significant processing overloads for the child care payment system at the county. As a result, delays occur in payments to child care providers.

Solution: Ramsey County should apply greater resources to the processing system during these peak times of the year.

Action: Additional resources should be made available in the county’s processing system from August to October and from December to February.

Cost: $5,000 to $10,000

Priority: C

Consequence of no action: Processing delays will exacerbate provider and center hesitancy regarding acceptance of STRIDE children.

Issue 5: STRIDE parents must be officially terminated by an AFDC worker in order to qualify for “transition year” funding for their child care. Transition year funding provides a STRIDE participant with funding of child care costs for one year after the participant completes the training or education program and secures a job. Parents who take themselves off AFDC because their income is rising have a higher risk of losing the transition funding of their child care.

Solution: STRIDE parents should be continually educated about the need for official termination. Progress is being made due to better communication of this issue by case managers and AFDC processors. AFDC processors should be prepared to check for reasons for termination to catch any possible inappropriate terminations.

Action: Monitor progress for three to six months to discern whether the problem is decreasing. As a part of the recommendation for expanded referral services, child care referral counselors could assist in emphasizing this issue.

Cost: negligible
Priority: A

Consequence of no action: Some STRIDE participants will not receive the transition year funding to which they are entitled.

Issue 6: After the transition year of child care, many STRIDE parents are eligible for sliding fee support of child care expenses. Until very recently, the presence of a waiting list prevented STRIDE participants from automatically being added to the sliding fee program at the time their transition year ended. STRIDE parents’ loss of child care support contributes to their return to AFDC.

Solution: STRIDE parents should be kept in transition funding or moved to the sliding fee program if funds are available at the completion of their first year of transition funding.

Action: Relief from the long sliding fee waiting list has occurred as a result of additional county resources being put in the sliding fee system. In addition, the federal child care legislation will increase sliding fee availability further. Whether or not a waiting list will remain is not yet clear and should be monitored. Continuation of transition year funding as a possible solution should be investigated with the county.

Cost: ?

Priority: A

Consequence of no action: STRIDE’s success at returning AFDC families to work will be hindered by the absence of continued child care support for families eligible for sliding fee support.

Issue 7: Data collection about the success of the STRIDE program in Ramsey County is not presently including information about the child care component of the program. Resources for Child Caring is presently under contract with the State Department of Human Services to evaluate the child care choices and success of the child care component of the STRIDE program. Resources for Child Caring will be generating some useful data regarding Ramsey County STRIDE participants use of child care. However, continued data collection about the child care component of the program is necessary to quantify the child care issues sufficiently.

Solution: Wilder Research Center should include an evaluation of the success of the child care component of the STRIDE program.

Action: The Partnership has suggested changes in the survey used by Wilder Research Center that will yield greater information about the child care component of the STRIDE program.

Cost: less than $10,000
Priority: B

Consequence of no action: Accurate information about the child care needs and requirements of STRIDE participants will be difficult to assess.

Issue 8: Study time during which child care costs can be paid is limited to five hours per week under state regulations. This can limit a STRIDE participants’ ability to succeed in a course of study.

Solution: Case managers should have latitude to authorize study beyond the five hours per week based on the course of study being pursued and the participant’s abilities.

Action: The State of Minnesota should be asked to request a change in the federal rules that prohibit this increase in case manager latitude and study time limits.

Cost: ?

Priority: A

Consequence of no action: Absence of child care availability beyond the authorized five hours per week will affect the ability of some STRIDE participants to succeed. Alternatively, STRIDE parents may resort to lower cost and lower quality child care choices to meet study requirements.

Issue 9: Many STRIDE parents in Ramsey County, particularly those attending St. Paul Technical College, prefer their child care at on-site centers at the educational institutions at which they are enrolled. However, availability of this kind of care is limited.

Solution: Additional child care capacity should be considered at the St. Paul Technical College in St. Paul. In addition, counseling and referral services for STRIDE parents should emphasize other arrangements for child care that can be as effective at meeting STRIDE parents’ needs as the on-site care.

Action: Investigate potential for increasing capacity of child care slots at the St. Paul Technical College. Explore creative ways to link Technical College STRIDE students with nearby child care options.

Cost: ?

Priority: C

Consequence of no action: Care will continue to be limited at on-site locations.
Issue 10: At the time a STRIDE parent moves to the transition program, the parent must pay the first month of child care costs out of pocket. The transition program operates on a reimbursement basis.

Solution: The State of Minnesota should investigate alternative possibilities for reimbursement that could minimize the out of pocket costs for the first month of the transition program. Possibilities include direct monthly payment to providers rather than payments to parents, more frequent reimbursement to parents, and "up front" reimbursements to parents. Another possible avenue is to create a community fund that can "loan" the first month child care payment to the parent. The parent could then repay the loan by directing the twelfth month check back into the loan fund.

Action: The Community Partnership should ask Ramsey County to evaluate alternatives to month-end reimbursement to parents.

Cost: ?

Consequence of no action: First month child care payments will be significant financial burden on STRIDE parents who are making the move to the transition program.

Issue 11: STRIDE parents may not get their class schedules until one week before classes start. However, the process for approving child care providers for payment can take up to 30 days. Providers may not be willing to care for children of STRIDE participants until they receive formal approval.

Solution: The county is now sending preliminary approval letters to providers to address this situation.

Action: Partnership should monitor this process over the next several months to determine if the solution is sufficient to overcome provider hesitancy to accept STRIDE children.

Cost: minimal

Consequence of no action: Effectiveness of the county's solution might not be sufficient to overcome provider hesitancy.
Recommended Changes to Rule 2
Licensing of Family and Group Day Care

The Licensing/Rules subcommittee of the Quality Services Subcommittee recommends that the Partnership advocate to the Minnesota State Rules Committee the following changes to the rule as one method of improving quality of care for young children in family day care homes.

9502.0335 Subpart 6 B

A. Reinstate mental illness as a disqualifier. Mental illness within last 12 months on the part of anyone in household is disqualification. Definition on page 3 - 9502.0315 Subpart 19 A.

B. Write letter to DHS requesting they act on power they have been vested with on citations Subpart 6B - E and F.

9502.0355 Subpart 3

A and B - delete the word "substantial."

9502.0385 Day Care Training Subpart 2 - Initial Training - Required within 6 months.

A. FDC 10 hours training & CPR/First Aid
6 hours of 10 related to: Guiding Behavior, or Child Development, or Communication Skills.

B. Group FDC 20 hours training & CPR/First Aid
15 hours of 20 related to: Guiding Behavior, or Child Development, or Communication Skills.

C. (Add) Applicants have completed 6 hours of preparation training prior to licensing.

D. (Add) Requirement for training in Cultural Diversity.
Subpart 3 - Ongoing Training

A. FDC  10 hours training annually
       6 hours of 10 related to: Guiding Behavior, or Child Development, or Communication Skills.

B. Group FDC  20 hours training annually
       15 hours of 20 related to:
       Guiding Behavior, or
       Child Development, or Communication Skills.

C. CPR/First Aid every three years.

D. (Add) Requirement for training in Cultural Diversity.

Certification Rule:

1. Require Counties to have 3 visits first year. 1 of 3 is drop-in.
2. After 1st year, 1 drop-in visit, 1 annual visit.
3. Caseloads of licensers not to exceed 120.

Recommend to DHS that they continue interests of children under 2 1/2 years of age, by maintaining current staff/child ratio. (Refer to B under Subpart 6B) Staff ratios - 9502.0367 A, B, C.

Accreditation/Certification of child care providers:

The committee recommends that Rules RECOMMEND (not mandate) that child care centers and family child care providers move toward accreditation or certification to increase the possibility of providing high quality care for children.
