Developed as part of the ABCs of Construction National Workplace Literacy Project, these instructional modules are designed to help low-level readers develop paragraph composition skills. The first module is a list of 10 topics about which students are daily to write several paragraphs related to their craft. The second module consists of 10 frames. Each frame contains a paragraph consisting of open-ended sentences along with instructions for students to complete each of the sentences and recopy the completed paragraph into their notebooks. The paragraphs deal with the following work- and training-related topics: my job, work and school, classroom preparation, asking questions in class, classroom behavior, planning time at work and school, answering questions in class, active listening, listening to myself, and listening problems.

In this frame, you will write about your job. Read the paragraph below carefully before writing anything. Change any words you wish. Get this rough draft just the way you want it. Then recopy it in your notebook. Choose a new title if you wish. Write your title in the middle of a line. Then skip two lines before starting your paper. You may use as many words as you want to complete the sentences.

MY JOB

I spend many hours each day at my job. I work for _______. My job is _______. Each day I _______ at work. The thing I like most about my job is _______. If I could change any part of my job, I would change _______.

My boss's name is _______. When I talk with my boss, I feel _______. That's because _______. One thing I like about my boss is _______. One thing I dislike about my boss is _______. When I get to be a boss, I will _______. I want to be a boss whose workers like to come to work.
Work and school are much alike. I need to be on time for both work and school. Having the tools I need is a second way they are the same. At work, I need ______. At school, I need ______. If I don't have my tools, I ______. One way I get my tools to work is by ______. I get my books and homework to school by ______. A third way school and work are alike is ______.

If I miss work, I ______. Likewise, if I miss class, I ______. There is a fourth way they are alike involves others. When a friend needs help at work, I ______. When someone needs help at school, I ______. School can help what I do at work. The lessons I study in school are ______. The work I do is ______. Someday I hope to work as ______. School helps me get ready for work by ______. Work and school have much in common.
In this writing frame, you will write about the best way to show you are ready for class. The way you enter and begin class affects what teachers think of you. So does the work you do in class. Read the paragraph below carefully before writing anything. Change any words you wish. Get this rough draft just the way you want it. Then recopy it in your notebook. Choose a new title if you wish. Write your title in the middle of a line. Then skip two lines before starting your paper. You may use as many words as you want to complete the sentences.

CLASSROOM PREPARATION

Asking questions takes two steps. Step one is to ______ what you already know before speaking. Telling this to your teachers is also part of step one. Step two is ______. When your teachers answer you, then they know what you know and where you are confused.
In this writing frame, you will write about classroom behavior. How you behave in class affects what teachers think of you. Read the paragraph below carefully before writing anything. Change any words you wish. Get this rough draft just the way you want it. Then recopy it in your notebook. Choose a new title if you wish. Write your title in the middle of a line. Then skip two lines before starting your paper. You may use as many words as you want to complete the sentences.

CLASSROOM BEHAVIOR

What teachers think of you comes from the way you act in class. Sitting ______ helps the teacher see you better. I like to sit ______. If you show you are interested, teachers feel ______. Your face and your body movements show interest. For example, smiling, ______, ______, and ______ are ways to show interest. Another way to show interest is ______. Class clowns are ______. On the other hand, joining in class discussions ______. Thinking about your classroom behavior helps both you and your teacher.
In this writing frame, you will write about planning your time for school and work. How you manage your time affects the work you do. Read the paragraph below carefully before writing anything. Change any words you wish. Get this rough draft just the way you want it. Then recopy it in your notebook. Choose a new title if you wish. Write your title in the middle of a line. Then skip two lines before starting your paper. You may use as many words as you want to complete the sentences.

PLANNING TIME AT WORK AND SCHOOL

Planning my time at work and school affects the work I do. I plan my work time by ______. I plan my school time by ______. One way these plans are different is ______. One way these plans are alike is ______. I feel I need to plan my time better at ______. I can do this by ______. If I plan my time better, I ______. Planning time is an important thing to do.
In this writing frame, you will write about answering questions in class. Read the paragraph below carefully before writing anything. Change any words you wish. Get this rough draft just the way you want it. Then recopy it in your notebook. Choose a new title if you wish. Write your title in the middle of a line. Then skip two lines before starting your paper. You may use as many words as you want to complete the sentences.

ANSWERING QUESTIONS IN CLASS

Answering questions tells my teacher I am ready for class. I feel ______ about answering questions in class. I like to answer when ______. When I answer questions in class, sometimes I worry about ______. I could change this by ______. Or, I could talk to ______. He/she would be able to ______. I want to ______. Answering questions in class helps me and others learn.
In this writing frame, you will write about active listening. To be a good listener you need to make an active effort to understand what is said. Read the paragraph below carefully before writing anything. Change any words you wish. Get this rough draft just the way you want it. Then recopy it in your notebook. Choose a new title if you wish. Write your title in the middle of a line. Then skip two lines before starting your paper. You may use as many words as you want to complete the sentences.
