The 1993 annual national survey of state supervisors of foreign languages concerning language enrollments, language offerings, state supervisor's responsibility, cooperation between language departments and other education offices, and educational reform efforts is reported. Thirty-nine states responded to the survey. Of these, 34 received funding from the federal Foreign Language Assistance Program (FLAP), which provides funding support for instruction in Arabic, Korean, Spanish, Russian, Japanese, Chinese, French, and German. In ten states, English-as-a-Second-Language (ESL) and/or bilingual education programs are administered through their offices. The survey also gathered information on primary responsibilities of state supervisors for federal language programs, grant applications, curricula, teacher certification, monitoring of student progress, policy formation, teacher training, instructional materials selection, technical assistance, and other functions. Following a summary of findings, the report contains summaries of each state's survey response. These citations include the name and title of the respondent, foreign and bilingual education enrollment figures, FLAP and other federal program involvement, innovative language program offerings, state supervisor responsibilities, and nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and state offices. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The 1993 State Survey on "Cooperation Among Second Language Specialists" by the Joint National Committee for Languages (JNCL) has produced some useful and compelling data. Language specialists collaborate with some regularity, enrollments continue to increase modestly, the Foreign Language Assistance Program (FLAP) supports a number of programs, and education reform efforts are creating major changes in some states.

In collaboration with the National Council of State Supervisors of Foreign Languages (NCSSFL), JNCL surveyed state education departments to determine the extent of cooperation among foreign language, English as a Second Language (ESL), and bilingual education departments in each state. Thirty-nine states responded, providing information concerning programmatic and administrative responsibility, organizational structures, the frequency of cooperation among foreign language departments and other education offices, and the nature of that cooperation. The survey also sought information about current language enrollments, which languages are offered statewide for elementary and secondary students, the status of the Foreign Language Assistance Program (FLAP) in each state, and innovative language programs. The resulting document is both empirical and normative, based primarily upon the comments of the respondents.

The State Supervisors provided JNCL with the most recent elementary and secondary enrollments available from their state education agencies. We compared these numbers with the 1991 JNCL Enrollment Survey, "Dreams, Realities and Nightmares", and to a lesser extent, with ACTFL's Foreign Language Enrollments in Public Secondary Schools, Fall 1989 & Fall 1990. Using a sample of the ten states providing the most current data, we found that between the 1990-1991 school year and the 1992-1993 school year, there was a modest average increase of 2.06% in secondary language enrollments. Significantly, we found that thirty-four of the responding states are benefiting from FLAP funding. In fact, FLAP monies provide support for a variety of programs in each state: Thirty-one states offer Japanese programs, twenty-one states offer Russian language programs, seventeen states offer Chinese programs, eight states offer Spanish, five states offer French, four states offer Arabic programs, four states offer German, and three states offer Korean. Without this funding, many of these programs would not be available. In addition, twenty-four states described some creative and innovative language programs, which are discussed in greater detail in the state-by-state analysis.

The respondents also provided valuable information about their programmatic and administrative responsibilities. Twenty-four Foreign Language Supervisors reported that FLAP was the only federal language-related program they administered. While their responsibilities were quite diverse, a large proportion write and administer grant applications (31), develop curriculum frameworks and standards (30), development teacher certification requirements (26), and evaluate and monitor student assessment (22). The majority of foreign language departments are housed within the Curriculum Divisions of each state education agency (16). Most others fall under the purview of Education and Field Services (7), or in the School Improvement Section (6).

Ten Foreign Language Supervisors reported that ESL and/or bilingual education programs are administered by the same office. Twenty-five Supervisors are engaged in varying degrees of cooperation with the ESL or bilingual offices within their respective state education agencies, with only five reporting "frequent" cooperation, eleven communicating "regularly", twelve collaborating "sometimes", and seven interacting "infrequently". The nature of this cooperation varied significantly, with the most common area of coordination involving teacher certification (28), followed by staff development (27), program development (23), grant writing (22), program evaluation (22), student assessment (21), language policy development (20), curriculum materials development (18), teacher training (14), and staff evaluation (7).

On a crucial note, thirteen states mentioned that their positions and/or offices had been impacted by either recently-passed state reform legislation or by major restructuring efforts in their state's education department. Reform is bolstering some foreign language departments and is fostering greater communication, as in the case of South Carolina. However, more often than not, "reform" seems to be straining resources, acting as a barrier to communication, turning foreign language specialists into education generalists, and has even led to the loss of foreign language supervisors and consultants in a number of states. While detecting this trend was an unanticipated result of this study, it has defined the 1994 State Survey. As such, the succeeding survey will examine the impact of outcomes-based education, site-based management, agency reorganization, and "systemic" reform on specialized disciplinary consultants and programs, particularly Foreign Language Supervisors.
States Receiving Federal Funding from the Foreign Language Assistance Program (FLAP)

Of the thirty-nine states surveyed, thirty-four reported receiving funding from the Foreign Language Assistance Program (FLAP). The five states that do not receive FLAP funding include: Arkansas, Louisiana, Puerto Rico, Tennessee, and Virginia. The chart below gives a breakdown of the language programs supported by FLAP in each state. According to this data, FLAP funding provides support for the following programs in each state: Thirty-one states offer Japanese* programs, twenty-one states offer Russian* language programs, seventeen states offer Chinese* programs, eight states offer Spanish, five states offer French, four states offer Arabic* programs, four states offer German, and three states offer Korean*.

A = Arabic  J = Japanese
K = Korean  C = Chinese
S = Spanish  F = French
R = Russian  G = German

*While all of the above languages are considered "critical languages", the asterisks designate those languages afforded priority by the U.S. Department of Education.

C. Other federal programs used to supplement and/or support foreign languages, bilingual education and ESL programs: Chapter 1, ESEA funds.

RESPONSIBILITIES AND COOPERATION AMONG DEPARTMENTS

A. Program responsibility: Foreign languages.

B. Position office or department holds in state education department’s organizational structure: The Foreign Language Supervisor (FLS) works with a number of colleagues in the Curriculum Development Section, which is responsible to the Assistant Superintendent for Student Instructional Services. Alabama’s state education agency is currently concentrating on implementing a state reform plan.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Frequently

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state’s education agency: In the past, the FLS has provided on-site visits with suggestions to personnel in schools with LEP students and has worked with ESL personnel on workshops and conferences. While FLAP has helped the FLS facilitate cooperation among the six local education agencies participating in the program, she has generally found that federal funds tend to separate departments rather than to encourage cooperation. The FLS reported frequent cooperation with other departments and anticipates more with the implementation of the state reform plan, of which the principal aim is to bring instructional programs together. Finally, the FLS believes that lack of time is an impediment to cooperation.

B. The languages FLAP monies fund: Received waiver to offer Spanish.

C. Other federal programs used to supplement and/or support foreign languages, bilingual education and ESL programs: Emergency Immigrant Education Program, Carl Perkins Vocational Education Act, Migrant Education Program - Chapter 1.

D. Innovative language programs offered: One school district in Arizona is receiving Title VII funds for a developmental bilingual education program. Numerous other districts use the students' native languages as part of their transitional bilingual education programs.

RESPONSIBILITIES AND COOPERATION AMONG DEPARTMENTS

A. Program responsibility: Foreign languages, bilingual education, and ESL.

B. Position office or department holds in state education department's organizational structure: The FLS works in the Bilingual Unit which is part of the Educational Services Division. This division is responsible to an Associate Superintendent who reports directly to the Superintendent of Public Instruction.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Sometimes.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: Since the FLS of Arizona administers all language-related programs, there is some support and expert coordination regarding training, dissemination of information, and support in joint ventures. While federal funds allow Arizona to provide training and other activities that would otherwise not be available, the FLS believes that a session to conduct planning and sharing of information between other departments would be a useful means of cooperation.

RESPONSIBILITIES AND COOPERATION AMONG DEPARTMENTS

A. Program responsibility: Foreign languages.

B. Position office or department holds in state education department's organizational structure: The FLS works in the Field Services Division of the Arkansas Department of Education.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Regularly.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: There is regular cooperation with other departments and Title VII grant monies underwrite activities which address the needs of LEP students. Cooperation could be accomplished effectively if there was "a shared sense of values about the incredibly rich resource newcomer children are to our public school system, and our responsibilities as educators to see different language traditions as an essential component of required educational standards. Communication is difficult when assumptions about such values are not shared."

A. Federal language programs for which the State Supervisor is responsible: FLAP

C. Other federal programs used to supplement and/or support foreign languages, bilingual education and ESL programs: Funds from the Adult Education Act and Title VII supplement ESL programs.

D. Innovative language programs offered: There are several programs in Spanish for Spanish-speakers and two-way bilingual immersion programs which promote language maintenance in Korean, Chinese, and Japanese.

RESPONSIBILITIES AND COOPERATION AMONG DEPARTMENTS

A. Program responsibility: Foreign languages.

B. Position office or department holds in state education department's organizational structure: The Language Arts and Foreign Languages Office is part of the Curriculum, Instruction, and Assessment Division with direct responsibility to the Executive Deputy Superintendent of Public Instruction.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Sometimes.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: The FLS acts as a liaison to other units and serves on task forces for LEP issues. In turn, the FLS expects to be updated on second language acquisition concerns and to give input when necessary. While FLAP funds have encourage cooperation in the initial stages of implementing the program, more shared planning and information regarding the projects of other units dealing with language minority issues would be helpful.

*This figure is the estimated number of students receiving Spanish bilingual education support services.

A. Federal language programs for which the State Supervisor is responsible: Has administered Title VII for almost 6 years. Presently administers FLAP and works closely with the .5 FTE specialist in LEP programs.

B. The languages FLAP monies fund: One Chinese and one Japanese program.

C. Other federal programs used to supplement and/or support foreign languages, bilingual education and ESL programs: Vocational Education, Adult Education, and Chapter 1 support services for eligible LEP students. Chapter 2 funds have supported one international education/foreign language activity.

D. Innovative language programs offered: The new Chinese program at Dickinson High School has a partnership with the Chinese School of Delaware. The teacher at Dickinson is the principal of the Chinese School which maintains a language and culture program for their ethnic Chinese students. Chinese students are being encouraged to enroll in the new program.

RESPONSIBILITIES AND COOPERATION AMONG DEPARTMENTS

A. Program responsibility: Exclusive responsibility for foreign languages and shared responsibility for bilingual education and ESL.
B. Position office or department holds in state education department's organizational structure:

The Delaware State Board of Education recently underwent a major and innovative restructuring that became effective in July, 1993. The FLS will be spending 90% of her time in the Curriculum, Instruction, and Professional Development Team under the Standards and Curriculum Branch. The .5 FTE Limited English Proficient Specialist, formerly working in the Instruction division will spend 30% of her time on the Equity and Special Program Team under the Improvement and Assistance Branch and 20% of his/her time in the Curriculum, Instruction, and Professional Development Team. The foreign language/second language supervisor will also serve as a consultant to the Assessment and Task Development Team, the Equity and Special Programs Team, the Frameworks and Standards Team, and will spend 10% of her time on the Monitoring Coordination and Assistance Team.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Regularly.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: The FLS frequently networks with Chapter 1 office, the migrant specialist, and the Title IV office. The Title VII SEA grant provides for a Statewide LEP Advisory Council made up of members from IHEs, LEA teachers and administrators, and representatives from community agencies. Delaware has the advantage of being small, so communication is facilitated regularly. The new teaming organization is likely to further promote cooperation.

7. FLORIDA

State Respondent: Bernardo Garcia, Director Office of Multicultural Student Language Education (OMSLE)

| Foreign Language Enrollment Figures: | Elementary: | 172,932 |
| Percentage of Elementary Enrollment: | 11% |
| Secondary: | 207,716 |

| ESL: | NA |
| Percentage of Total Enrollment: | NA |

A. Federal language programs for which the State Supervisor is responsible: FLAP, Title VII, and the Cuban/Haitian Refugee Entrant Program.

B. The languages FLAP monies fund: Japanese and Chinese

C. Other federal programs used to supplement and/or support foreign languages, bilingual education and ESL programs: Bilingual and ESL programs are supported or supplemented through other federal programs. Foreign language education is not.

D. Innovative language programs offered: Spanish for Spanish speakers has a very large enrollment. Next year, Haitian-Creole for Haitian-Creole-speakers will be implemented. Both of these programs function more as a language arts curriculum for native speakers of the languages than as a foreign language program. However, in their curricula, there are approaches that encompass but are different from a pure language arts program or a foreign language program.

RESPONSIBILITIES AND COOPERATION AMONG DEPARTMENTS

A. Program responsibility: Foreign languages, bilingual education, and ESL.

B. Position office or department holds in state education department's organizational structure: The Office of Multicultural Student Language Education (OMSLE) reports directly to the Deputy Director of the Division of Public Schools. The Deputy Director reports to the Director (Deputy Commissioner) for Public Schools.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Frequently.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: The level of cooperation and communication on the state level works very well, particularly with regard to Migrant Education, Chapter 1 and Chapter 2. Florida uses a state Title VII grant, a FLAP grant, and a Cuban/Haitian Refugee Entrant grant directly to assist with the facilitation of cooperation in the state with other federal and state programs. Florida also has a satellite office in Miami which concentrates on foreign language and bilingual education to better serve the needs of the Southern region of the state. The Miami supervisor reports directly to the OSMLE office in Tallahassee.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Sometimes.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state’s education agency: The FLS works closely with foreign language and ESOL supervisors in districts and when appropriate, with the state ESOL unit (which is not part of the Curriculum and Instruction). Federal funds do not support such cooperation, and the FLS maintains that stronger and more directed leadership could help facilitate better communication.

RESPONSIBILITIES AND COOPERATION AMONG DEPARTMENTS

A. Program responsibility: Foreign languages.
B. Position office or department holds in state education department's organizational structure: The FLS works out of the Program Development and Delivery division of the Springfield Office of the Illinois State Board of Education. Bilingual Education is part of the Student Development Services division in the Chicago office.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Infrequently.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: The only real cooperation and/or coordination between foreign languages and bilingual education occurred in the late 1970's when a Foreign Language Task Force was formed. The bilingual education coordinator would like to increase cooperation through 2-way bilingual education in conjunction with foreign language staff at the state level and remarked: "What a natural setting [elementary school] to introduce second language education to English-dominant students. Yet, after 25 years, this tremendous resource that we have throughout the country -- children who are native speakers of so many of the world's major languages -- has been virtually ignored."

C. Other federal programs used to supplement and/or support foreign languages, bilingual education and ESL programs: Technology grants have gone to at least one school that has implemented a Spanish and German interactive video/computer program based on software from the Air Force Academy.

D. Innovative language programs offered: Currently there exist several Saturday Japanese schools for the children of Japanese nationals in the state.
RESPONSIBILITIES AND COOPERATION AMONG DEPARTMENTS

A. Program responsibility: Foreign languages.

B. Position office or department holds in state education department's organizational structure: Foreign languages are administered out of the Office of Program Development within the Center for School Improvement and Performance, which is responsible to the Deputy Superintendent and Superintendent.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Infrequently.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: The only other section that deals in some way with language learning is the bilingual section with whom the FLS cooperates whenever the opportunity arises. Currently, the FLS is working with the school accreditation section in devising curricular criteria for school accreditation. However, very little opportunity exists for cooperation with other sections of the department unless it concerns curricular issues. The FLS believes that a smaller and more efficient bureaucracy would be more conducive to cooperation.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Regularly.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: Because the foreign language and bilingual education offices are adjacent to each other, their proximity makes cooperation easy. The two offices often collaborate on workshops and use federal funds to put on workshops using nationally known speakers/facilitators and National Diffusion Network programs as well. The FLS recommends that foreign language teachers try to attend ESL conferences. In addition, state foreign language associations can be encouraged to offer ESL or bilingual sessions or more language acquisition sessions.

Due to recent passage of legislation through the Kansas State Legislature, the state is moving to a system of "Quality Performance Accreditation" in which schools accreditation will now be based on results rather than inputs. As such, there are no longer any Education Specialists (except for four disciplines -- Math, Science, Social Studies, and Communications [of which foreign languages is part]), but Co-Consultants. Spanish, French and German (in that order) are widely taught throughout Kansas, while some districts (3 or 4) offer Latin, Chinese, Japanese, and Russian. There has been no interaction between the Foreign Language Specialist (now a Co-Consultant) and the Bilingual Education Coordinator.

A. Program responsibility: Foreign languages, bilingual education, and ESL.

B. Position office or department holds in state education department's organizational structure: The Bureau of Academic Support is comprised of three sections -- foreign languages, bilingual education/ESOL, and distance learning. This Bureau is part of the Office of Academic Programs.

Louisiana has formal agreements with the governments of France, Belgium, Quebec, and Mexico which provide teachers from these countries in addition to study programs for Louisiana teachers. They also view parents and community members as essential to the success of their ESL programs with children. To this end, the State provides language classes to adults through Adult Education, Title VII districts have Parent Advisory Councils, and the Bilingual Education/ESOL Section provides information to parents through community functions.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: The FLS provides and expects sharing of expertise, resources, ongoing dialogue about language learning, attendance and presentations at state conferences with colleagues in the ESL/Bilingual Education Office. As the ESL/Bilingual Education Office is part of the office of the Commissioner, a restructured organization of the State Education Agency might promote and encourage more communication and cooperation. Additionally, an increase in integrated activities efforts that cross Division and Bureau lines, and common planning time and common goals would likely facilitate more cooperation.

*Based on 1989/90 ACTFL Foreign Language Enrollment Survey.

A. Federal language programs for which the State Supervisor is responsible: FLAP and Title VII.

B. The languages FLAP monies fund: Japanese and Russian.

C. Other federal programs used to supplement and/or support foreign languages, bilingual education and ESL programs: No
D. Innovative language programs offered: ACA Manchester Linguistic Camp between Quebec and New Hampshire (French), German Saturday School in Manchester, Association Canada-Américaine, Franco-American Ethnic -- Insurance Mutual Co. (French for Children and Adults), Gilbert French Language Foundation French Contest, Manchester.

RESPONSIBILITIES AND COOPERATION AMONG DEPARTMENTS

A. Program responsibility: Foreign languages, bilingual education and ESL.

B. Position office or department holds in state education department's organizational structure: New Hampshire is currently in the process of reorganizing its education department. At this time, the FLS is divided between the Unit for Effective Programs (foreign languages) and Instructional Practice and the Bureau of Governance, Environment and Equity (bilingual education/ESL).

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Regularly.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: Until now, there has been excellent planning, coordination, and cooperation of services with other departments. However, only time will tell if the new organizational structure will be conducive to cooperation and will provide better services to the local school districts. Federal funds provide extensive support for the FLS, who shares a space with the National Diffusion Network Director and operates a statewide resource center for educators with T-7 ESEA funds. In addition, the FLS has an office at the State Education Agency with funding for supplementing services, e.g. in-service for ESL-Bilingual, etc. Finally, the FLS has set-up a resource center and has hired a part-time coordinator to operate it with supervision from his office.

B. The languages these FLAP monies fund: Russian

C. Other federal programs used to supplement and/or support foreign languages, bilingual education and ESL programs: Yes (not specified).

D. Innovative language programs offered: Of particular interest to other Language Supervisors are a number of programs designed to serve the approximately 23 different tribes of Native American students.

RESPONSIBILITIES AND COOPERATION AMONG DEPARTMENTS

A. Program responsibility: Foreign languages.

B. Position office or department holds in state education department's organizational structure: The Modern and Classical Languages Consultant position at the New Mexico State Department of Education is currently vacant. According to the respondent, Bilingual and Multicultural Education is administered through the Learning Services Division of the Department, answering directly to the Deputy Superintendent of Public Instruction.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Sometimes, time permitting.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: For the past three years, coordination between the FLS and bilingual/multicultural education colleagues has been good, including collaboration on immersion institutes. In addition, the two department representatives brainstorm, design, and implement special training plans for teachers by professionals from Spain, Mexico, and other countries. Federal funding makes some resources available to design and carry out the activities, but more cooperation could be facilitated if the FLS was part of the bilingual/multicultural education unit instead of apart from it, particularly "in a state like New Mexico, where 44% [of the students] are Hispanic, and 10% are Native American and where those languages spoken at home and in communities should not be considered "foreign" but should be considered a resource for the sound intellectual development of children."

25. NORTH CAROLINA

B. The languages these FLAP monies fund: French, Japanese, and Spanish.

C. Other federal programs used to supplement and/or support foreign languages, bilingual education and ESL programs: NA

D. Innovative language programs offered: NA

RESPONSIBILITIES AND COOPERATION AMONG DEPARTMENTS

A. Program responsibility: Foreign languages, and ESL (no bilingual programs).

B. Position office or department holds in state education department's organizational structure: The North Carolina Department of Public Instruction is currently being reorganized. As such, foreign languages are considered "enhancement curriculum areas". As the core of the new Program Services division, four professional personnel now serve as second language consultants on three interdisciplinary teams -- elementary, middle, and high school. The interdisciplinary teams are responsible to the Assistant State Superintendent for Program, Research and Development Services, who is in turn responsible to the Deputy State Superintendent.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Frequently.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: While there are no other offices responsible for second languages, there is frequent cooperation with other departments, particularly with the Division of Media and Technology. The second language coordinators are currently participating in staff development in total quality management, and the FLS anticipates increased cooperation once the reorganization is complete. Federal funding does not help facilitate cooperation in North Carolina.

B. Position office or department holds in state education department's organizational structure: Second language acquisition is administered under the Department of Curriculum and Instruction, while bilingual education is administered under Federal Programs.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Frequently.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: Most activities are coordinated with school districts, while the lines between departments "in-house" seem to be breaking down. The FLS also works with the higher education community and participates in a steering committee representing K-16 that considers input on language policy. Federal funds are used to support workshops. In addition, Oregon is in the midst of developing a second language acquisition program for all students as called for in House Bill 3565, the Oregon Educational Act for the 21st Century. This looks to be a gradual implementation with an initial proficiency testing beginning in the 1996-97 school year.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Frequently.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: Federal monies help Puerto Rico serve a small portion of their bilingual population but there is a need for more funding to support more teacher positions. Federal funding also helps with English as a first and second language books and texts, but Puerto Rico needs help with developing curricular materials for bilingual teachers.

A. Program responsibility: Foreign languages.

B. Position office or department holds in state education department's organizational structure: Foreign languages are part of the Division of Curriculum and Instruction, within the Office of Education Design.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Regularly.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: The FLS works closely with other divisions and offices within the agency including Professional Development, Collaboration, Instructional Technology, and Organizational Development, on teams to provide services to school districts. The foreign language division also provides opportunities for training, technical assistance, curriculum materials, and language assessment information for offices that deal with LEP students. Due to a recent major restructuring effort, divisions previously isolated now work closely with one another to provide collaboration and better services for districts. Communication among divisions is open and strongly encouraged, although very little federal funding fuels this effort.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Sometimes.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: The FLS reports that cooperation is limited because ESL funds are provided by federal programs, while no such monies are available for foreign languages. While some cooperation exists with regard to statistical data (i.e. state testing) and through guidance from other programs, more cooperation could be encouraged with a better understanding of how programs overlap and can complement each other.

The purpose of the program is to recognize those elements of Spanish which the student has and to build upon those skills to develop further proficiency in Spanish. There are some dual-language or developmental bilingual education programs in Spanish as well. A statewide initiative for dual-language instruction is being planned.
RESPONSIBILITIES AND COOPERATION AMONG DEPARTMENTS

A. Program responsibility: Foreign languages.

B. Position office or department holds in state education department's organizational structure: The Languages Unit is in the Department of Curriculum and Assessment and reports to a Division Director, an Associate Commissioner, and the Commissioner. The Division of Bilingual Education is in the Department of Programs and Instruction and reports to an Associate Commissioner, a Deputy Commissioner, and the Commissioner.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Sometimes.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: The Division of Bilingual Education participates in the sharing of conference information while the Languages Unit maintains involvement in policy decisions which will have an impact of second language programs. Title VII network funding provides assistance on testing, program evaluation, and training and the FLAA is developing a network of Texas language educators with interest and expertise in teaching of Japanese and Russian. The Languages Unit advocates a team approach on language education issues as it ensures that solutions or statements of policy are generated with the consideration of the viewpoints of the various language professionals while promoting the unique contributions of the individuals on the team. The FLS also notes that while there is a state mandate to serve all LEP students, there is no student mandate for foreign language education. As such, the Languages Unit at the Texas Education Agency provides leadership in curriculum development to districts, which are all required to offer language programs.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state's education agency: Other than some support provided in the way of statistical enrollment data, very little cooperation exists between the FLS and other offices and divisions in the state's education agency. This is in large part due to the lack of financial support that might be used to facilitate cooperation.

A. Federal language programs for which the State Supervisor is responsible: FLAP

C. Other federal programs used to supplement and/or support foreign languages, bilingual education and ESL programs: No

D. Innovative language programs offered: Milwaukee's two-way bilingual program offers elementary curriculum with side-by-side English-only and Spanish-only classrooms paired at each grade level. Students switch the classroom and language everyday. The goal is to achieve functional literacy in both languages. Milwaukee also operates three total immersion elementary schools (French, German, and Spanish) delivering the full regular elementary curriculum in the second language. For grades 6-8, students receive half-day immersion instruction of core subject area content with half day in English (usually the specialized disciplines). For grades 9-12, the second language skill is maintained with a two-hour block of instruction combining language and social studies curricula. There is also Spanish for Spanish-speaker programs in several districts.

RESPONSIBILITIES AND COOPERATION AMONG DEPARTMENTS

A. Program responsibility: Foreign languages.

B. Position office or department holds in state education department’s organizational structure: As of July, 1993, the Foreign Language Consultant worked out of the Program Development Section within the Bureau for School Improvement. The Bureau is part of the Division for Instructional Services. The Bilingual-Bicultural Program/Consultant is part of the Equity and Multicultural Education Section in the Bureau for Educational Equity Programs, within the Division for Handicapped Children and Pupil Services. Both Divisions are responsible to the Deputy State Superintendent and Superintendent.

C. Frequency of cooperation with other departments: Infrequently.

D. Nature of cooperation among foreign language departments and other offices in the state’s education agency: In general, the FLS and his bilingual/ESL colleagues rarely interact. However, the Program Development Section holds regular (biweekly) international education meetings with their section chief. These involve the foreign language, international education, and German language (German Education Ministry position) consultants. Numerous projects and workshops are collaborative efforts. Another point of overlap between foreign language and ESL is that the foreign language consultant oversees both teacher preparation programs at Wisconsin colleges and universities. Therefore, contact exists between university-level ESL teacher trainers and the state FLS.
