This training module was designed to assist career and vocational counselors to help students with disabilities develop job search skills. The module includes workshop content (with side notes to the trainer in italics), overheads, and many handouts. Preliminary information includes module purpose and overall learning objectives, a module outline, a list of materials needed for the workshop, and suggested adaptations for individuals with disabilities. A section on statistics notes the numbers of people with disabilities and their underemployment and unemployment. A section on legislation explains Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act and the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), including its purpose and its various titles, focusing specifically on Title 1 on employment. The next section defines terms used in the ADA: "disability," "otherwise qualified," "job functions," "reasonable accommodations," and "undue hardship." The section specifically on the job search process considers self-assessment and job choice, decisions regarding disclosure of a disability, resumes, obtaining job leads, job applications, job interviews, the job negotiation process, and people to contact. The past workshop survey is included. (DB)

Directions For Use

This module was designed to train, educate, and empower Career Service personnel to better serve the needs of students with disabilities. According to a Lou Harris Poll (1986) there are approximately 43 million people with disabilities in the United States. Sixty-five percent of the people with disabilities between the ages of 16-64 are out of work.

This module can be used in a different order or parts can be deleted to meet the needs of the audience. If time is a problem, then the activities or the video can be deleted.

This module was designed to provide comprehensive information. The trainer should not read the script verbatim. This would restrict discussion with the audience. The trainers should also feel free to incorporate their own ideas and concepts.

The training objectives for this workshop are:

1. Basic knowledge of Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act and the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).
2. Definition of a disability/impairment.
3. Job Search issues for an individual with a disability including: accommodations, disclosure, resume and interviewing.

Below is an outline of the module:

I. Introduction
   A. Purpose
   B. Objectives

II. Statistics
   A. The Number of Disabilities
   B. Underemployment/Unemployment

III. Legislation
   A. Section 504
   B. Americans with Disabilities Act

VI. Conclusion-Questions

This module contains handouts and overheads which can be used to illustrate points. Cues are given on the right side of the page on the proper time to use or refer to the overheads and handouts. The handouts and overheads are located in the back of the module. Notes to the trainer are in italicized script. This is meant to be used as a tool and not read aloud to the audience. When conducting the training there are a few things to remember:

PRIOR TO TRAINING:
- Know your audience and know the number of participants.
- Have the handouts ready and in packets.
- Determine if alternative formats will be needed (i.e. enlarged print, interpreter).
- Rehearse, Rehearse, Rehearse.
- Check over equipment.
- If possible, check out the facility to familiarize yourself.
- Be early.

DURING THE TRAINING:
- Have fun, be relaxed. Allow for interaction. Put in examples from your own life.
- Begin and end on time.

WHEN USING THE EQUIPMENT:
- When using the overhead, use a sheet to cover information until it is disclosed.
- Use a pointer or pen to point to information.

ADAPTATIONS FOR INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES:
- Make sure all participants are included in the activities.
- Make available if necessary, large print, braille, or taped copies of presentation.
- Ask the individual what type of accommodation is needed.
- Repeat questions from the audience.
- Speak in a normal voice to the audience.
- If not using the overhead, turn it off. It can be distracting.
MATERIALS NEEDED FOR THIS TRAINING SESSION:

- Pre/post Survey
- Sign-up list
- Folder packets for handouts
- Pencils/pens
- Name tags (optional)
- Overhead Projector/Projector Screen
- Video equipment (If recording training session)
- Video (Part of the Team)
- Podium
- Food/Drink (optional)
- Pay Day candy bar
- TV/VCR
- Evaluation/Feedback Form
The Job Search

I. INTRODUCTION

A. PURPOSE

This module was developed to train, educate, and empower Career Service personnel to better serve the needs of students with disabilities. There are approximately 43 million people with disabilities in the United States. According to a Harris poll conducted in 1986, sixty-five percent of individuals with disabilities between the ages of 16-64 were unemployed.

It is important to remember that a good education improves all employment prospects. It is even more important in meeting the vocational needs of people with disabilities. Many times Career Services staff may have limited experience working with people with disabilities and may feel uncomfortable addressing certain areas.

Our agenda for this workshop is:

I. Introduction
   A. Purpose
   B. Objectives
II. Statistics
   A. The Number of Disabilities
   B. Underemployment/Unemployment
III. Legislation
   A. Section 504

VI. Conclusion-Questions

B. Objectives

1. Basic knowledge of Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act and the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).
2. Definition of a disability/impairment.
3. Job Search issues for an individual with a disability including: Accommodations, disclosure, resume and interviewing.

To Trainer: If pretest is to be completed, hand out now.

Please fill out this survey. This will be used to gauge knowledge prior to entering the workshop.

II. STATISTICS

A. THE NUMBER OF DISABILITIES

Two-thirds of Americans with disabilities are unemployed or underemployed. Many of these individuals are well educated with some college experience. It is important that the Career Services Center be prepared to assist individuals with disabilities in their job search. According to the Americans with Disabilities Act, there are approximately 43 million people in the United States with a disability. This means that approximately 1 out of every 10 people has a disability. 13.4 million people between the ages of 16-64 have a work related disability. (JAN, 1992)

B. UNDEREMPLOYMENT/UNEMPLOYMENT

To Trainer: Activity - Everyone represents adults with disabilities. Determine how to mark participants packets by Employment Statistics Activity listed below, (i.e. 20 participants- 13 will get red color, 5 will get blue color and 2 will get yellow color). Have all participants stand to begin activity. If people are in wheelchairs, ask them to raise their hands instead of standing.
I would like to provide you with some statistics on the employment of individuals with disabilities through an activity. Would everyone stand. Those with red dots on your packet may sit down. You represent the 67% of individuals with disabilities who are unemployed. Those with blue dots on your packets may also sit. This represents 75% of individuals with disabilities who are unemployed. The people still standing represent those that are employed. You receive a Pay Day candy bar.

Employment Statistics Activity

67% are unemployed. To Trainer: Participants with red color are asked to sit down. 75% of those employed are underemployed. To Trainer: Participants with blue color are asked to sit down. This is 75% of those still standing

To Trainer: Those who are left standing, receive a Pay Day candy bar. Those left standing represent employed individuals with disabilities. They receive a Pay Day candy bar.

III. LEGISLATION

We will now discuss the legislation that brought many of these issues to the forefront. Legislation has been passed within the last 20 years that protects the civil rights of people with disabilities. It is important that we understand this legislation to better serve individuals with disabilities. We will begin by looking at Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

A. SECTION 504 OF THE REHABILITATION ACT OF 1973

This Act is viewed as being the first "civil rights" legislation for people with disabilities on a national level. This Act covers all agencies that receive federal assistance. Section 504 deals directly with higher education institutions. It mandates that those institutions may not discriminate against individuals with disabilities and that appropriate and reasonable academic adjustments be provided to students. This means that the institutions provide students extra time on exams, tests that are formatted differently, and other assistance when their disability requires it. This act was a major stepping stone for individuals with disabilities. Twenty years later another piece of legislation affecting the individuals with disabilities was passed. It is the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (Jarrow, 1992).

B. AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT, 1990 (ADA).

Purpose

The ADA is the most comprehensive civil rights legislation passed in over twenty years. This Act extends past that of Section 504 in which only federally funded organizations were affected. ADA encompasses not only federally funded organizations but also the private sector.

All Titles

ADA consists of five titles that address four major areas: Transportation, Employment, Telecommunications and Public Facilities. Our main emphasis will be on Title I Employment.

Title I Unemployment

ADA - Employment
Title I of the ADA prohibits discrimination in any terms or conditions of employment for qualified individuals with a disability. It requires that managers base employment decisions on the ability to perform the job, not on the person's disability or limitations. The person must have the same qualifications for the position as other applicants and they must be able to perform the essential functions of the position. However, they may use reasonable accommodations to perform those functions. Title I became effective for companies with 25 or more employees in July 1992 and will become effective for companies of 15 or more employees in July of 1994.
IV. Definition of Terms Under ADA

A. DEFINITION OF A DISABILITY

Let's first make sure we understand who is covered under ADA. ADA defines a person to be considered disabled if they fit into any of the three categories:

Disability Definition
1. Has a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities. (Major life refers to caring for one's self, performing manual tasks, walking, seeing, hearing, sitting, speaking, breathing, learning, working and participating in community activities. It also includes cognitive skills and the capacity to remember and reason.);
2. has a record of impairment; or
3. is regarded as having an impairment.

Impairment under ADA includes:
1. Any physiological disorder or condition, cosmetic disfigurement, or anatomical loss, and
2. any mental or physiological disorder, (i.e. cerebral palsy, HIV, or cancer) (Pimental et al. 1992).

Please Note: Temporary disabilities (i.e. pregnancy, broken limbs) are not covered under ADA. If a person cannot read because of a disability, their illiteracy is covered under ADA; if the person cannot read because they never had the opportunity to learn, that illiteracy is not covered.

B. OTHERWISE QUALIFIED

How one determines whether a person with a disability is "qualified" requires a two-step process:
1. Determine if the person is "otherwise qualified." Does the person meet the pre-requisites, (i.e. educational background, employment experiences, skills, licenses, technical knowledge, or other job related requirements).
2. Can the person meet the essential functions of the position with or without a reasonable accommodation? (Pimental et al. 1992)
C. JOB FUNCTIONS

ADA states that it is unlawful to discriminate against a person with a disability who can perform the job with or without a reasonable accommodation. However, we need to discuss the term "essential job function." When identifying an essential function of the job, the employer must ask themselves whether it is a basic, necessary and integral part of the job. If it is then it is an essential job function. If the task is a peripheral incidental, or minimum part of the job, it is considered marginal. Another way to look at this is, if the function of the job was removed, would the basic purpose of the position be destroyed, or would it be an inconvenience?

An example:
- If a person is hired to file, reaching the file cabinets is an essential function. Even if the task is rarely performed it may be essential. A fire-fighter must be able to carry an unconscious adult from a burning building (Pimental, 1992). Assessing essential and marginal functions of a position can be tricky. This is another reason the applicant should be aware of the job description and be able to verbalize and be a self-advocate. If an employer has not written a description or is unsure of what the essential job function is, then the applicant needs to be prepared to self-advocate and work with the employer.

D. REASONABLE ACCOMMODATIONS

ADA gives a rather general definition: Any modification or adjustment to a job or the work environment that will enable a qualified applicant or employee with a disability to participate in the application process or to perform essential job functions. Employers are also obligated to provide accommodations only if there is "known physical or mental limitation."

Types of accommodations may be as simple as putting a desk on blocks, flex time or modified work schedule, producing materials in enlarged print, or readers and interpreters. Once a person has decided to disclose their disability, they need to be aware of what accommodations are needed in order to be effective at the position. As indicated earlier, an accommodation is a modification or assistive technology that allows a person with a disability to complete the essential functions of the job. Accommodations vary for each situation. It might be something as simple as putting a desk on blocks for a person who uses a wheelchair, a modified work schedule, or purchasing assistive technology.

Examples of job accommodations are:

- A plant worker who was hearing-impaired was able to use a telephone amplifier designed to work in conjunction with hearing aids, allowing him to retain his job and not be transferred to a lower paying job within the company. Cost: $23.95
- A clerk with limited use of her hands was provided with a "Lazy Susan" file folder for her desk. This prevented her from having to reach across her desk and allowed her to remain in her job as before. Cost: $85.00
- An individual with the use of only one hand needed to be able to use a camera as part of his job. A tripod had proven to be too cumbersome. By providing a waist pouch (such as is used in carrying flags), he was able to manipulate the camera and keep his job. Cost: $50.00
- Changing a desk layout from the right to the left side for a person with a visual impairment who worked as a data entry operator enabled her to be more efficient. Cost: $0.
- A receptionist who was blind was provided a light-probe which allowed her to determine which lines on the telephone were ringing, on hold, or in use. Cost: $45.00.
- A headset for a phone was rented that allowed an insurance salesperson with cerebral palsy to write while talking. Cost: $49.95. (Pimental, 1992)

According to the Job Accommodation Network (JAN), the majority of accommodations are inexpensive.

31% of accommodations cost little or nothing.
19% of accommodations cost $1 - $50
19% of accommodations cost $51 - $500
11% of accommodations cost $501 - $1000
1% of accommodations cost $5000 and up
(Job Accommodations Network - JAN, 1994)

It is the employees responsibility to disclose their disability and then ask for an accommodation. If the accommodation proves to be an undue hardship for the employer, it does not have to be purchased.

E. UNDUE HARDSHIP

Factors that determine an undue hardship to an organization are determined by the nature and net cost of the accommodation, overall financial resources, type of organization, and how the accommodation will affect the business. A reasonable accommodation to one employer may prove to be an undue hardship for another employer. For example, a large university would have to provide just about any accommodation, even if the accommodation is needed in a small department with limited finances. The reason is the university has large amounts of resources. It is seen to have sufficient resources (Pimental et al. 1992). In looking at an accommodation, it does not necessarily have to be the employee's first choice. If what the employee asks for proves to be a hardship, an alternative accommodation may be considered (Witt, 1992).

F. VIDEO

To help you have a better understanding of accommodations, we are going to look at a video, "Part of the Team." This video looks at how people with disabilities can be accommodated in the workplace. While viewing the video, look for the various accommodations that occur in the workplace. Afterwards, we will begin to look at the job search. The examples given in the video will give a general overview of possible accommodations.

Discussion Questions:
1. What are your reactions to the video?
2. What are the accommodations that have been made for a person that you are acquainted with?

V. JOB SEARCH/SIMILARITIES AND DIFFERENCES

There are many similarities in the job search of people with and without disabilities. When a person begins a job search they need to do a self-assessment in which they look at their interests, education, and experience. Other similarities include the job search itself, with the development of a resume, cover letter, job leads, filling out applications and attending interviews. Again, there are many similarities between a person with a disability and a person without a disability who are looking for a job. We are here to discuss the differences that occur for people with disabilities.

A. NO "RIGHT" JOB/ SELF-ASSESSMENT

Many people believe that individuals with disabilities are suited for certain jobs. Examples would be: a blind piano tuner, or that a person with a disability should go into social work or rehabilitative services. It is important to remember when assisting persons in determining career goals, not to push them into one field, or tell a person they should not go into a field due to their disability. Some examples are: a person with a learning disability interested in becoming a lawyer, or a person with a visual disability becoming a secretary. As indicated earlier, there are many similarities in a job search by individuals with and without disabilities. One of the first things every individual should do prior to implementing a job search is a self-assessment.

1. What are my interests?
2. What do I want most from work?
3. What is important to me?

A person with a disability needs to continue self-assessment issues regarding their disability such as:

1. If, when, and how should I disclose my disability?
2. What accommodations are needed?
3. What are my strengths and weaknesses?

We will discuss disclosure and accommodations and how it relates to the job search.

B. DISCLOSURE - IF, WHEN AND HOW?

If Disclosure may be one of the most important issues for a person with a disability during a job search. The real question of whether or not to disclose is "Will it support the objective of getting hired?" If an employer will view the disclosure as a positive, then do so as soon as possible. If the employer will see it as a negative, wait. Examples of when an employer would see a disclosure as a positive:

- Companies that have established programs or policies to recruit individuals with disabilities.
- Companies that serve people with disabilities.
- Some companies with federal contracts.

If a person is considering "if" to disclose their disability a few questions to consider are:

1. Will my disability impact my job performance?
2. Do I know what to say to people about my disability?
3. Can I deal with insensitive questions?
The issue of "if" to disclose a disability mainly deals with people who have invisible disabilities such as learning disability, visual impairment, or mental illness.

When and How

Once a person has decided to disclose, the next step is to decide when and how. The applicant must make this decision.

Questions to consider concerning when and how to disclose are:
- Will my disability impact my job performance?
- Do I know what to say to people about my disability?
- Can I deal with insensitive questions?
- Will this help me get hired?

It is important that the job applicant be aware of the job description, which may uncover certain questions regarding the position. Is travel involved? Is computer technology involved? How do co-workers communicate, E-Mail or voice mail? (Disability Spectrum, 1993).

Examples of different times to disclose are:
1. Third Party Reference. A third person (i.e. a friend, employment agency) can disclose the disability. This would best be used when the third person can "sell" the applicant.
2. An employer has called for an interview. This is a good method to use when the applicant has a visible disability and wants to avoid the "shock" and awkwardness during an interview. This is also a good time for the applicant to express concern about the accessibility of the interview room.
3. The applicant calls the interviewer him/herself to disclose the disability. This would be used to eliminate the shock effect and the person other than the interviewer calls to set up the interview. Again, this is a good time to disclose the fact the applicant needs an accessible interview room.
4. Application. This is done when the application specifically asks if there is "job performance limitations." If the applicant must answer "yes", but has not disclosed the disability, then write "will discuss."
5. During the interview or at the moment of meeting. This method is used when the applicant wants to surprise the interviewer with his/her disability. The applicant must be aware that many times employers are unable to move away from the shock factor and focus on job qualifications.
6. Interview-Pre-offer. An applicant has an invisible disability and does not require any accommodations then the applicant may choose not to disclose the disability at all (Witt, 1992).
an applicant is considering when and how to disclose, there are benefits of waiting and for immediate disclosure. A few of the benefits of immediate disclosure are:

- Reduction of stress.
- Easier to ask for accommodations, if needed.
- Alleviates the shock factor.
- Permits a person to sense how receptive the environment is.

If the applicant decides to wait to disclose, reasons might be:

1. Invisible disability, and no job accommodation is needed.
2. Surprise factor. An applicant might want to wait until the interview to disclose the disability. This does not allow the interviewer time to make any pre-conceived ideas concerning the disability. If the applicant decides to use this tactic, he/she should have a great deal of inner confidence because the interviewer might be embarrassed or hostile (Disability Spectrum, 1993).

If the person has decided to disclose, there are certain tips that one should be aware of:

1. Time the disclosure appropriately. The applicant should market themselves first. Sell the skills, not the disability. Do not mention the need for accommodations until after the employer is convinced of the person's qualifications.
2. Minimize the initial discussion of the disability. Focus on the relevant information. Once the need for accommodation is met or discussed, go back to marketing skills and qualifications.
3. Prepare for disclosure. Rehearse what will be said. Employers will take cues from the person with a disability. If the person with the disability is comfortable discussing it, the employer will be, too.
4. Job applicants do not have to disclose what their disability is but that they need accommodations. It is important to remember that it is the applicant's decision whether or not to disclose. The applicant can best answer, "Will this help me get hired?" Applicants must do what is best for them and what puts the employer at ease. (Witt, M., 1992)

C. RESUMES

When it comes to putting personal information on a resume- don't. That includes listing a disability on the resume. The only time it may be listed is when it could be seen as a benefit. But those cases would be rare. If the person is concerned about large gaps in his/her employment due to a disability, it may be beneficial to do a functional style resume versus a chronological style. In this case, experience would be the focus of attention.

D. JOB LEADS

Once the prospective employee has completed a self-assessment and developed a "selling" resume, it is time to find out what jobs are available. Job leads are difficult with or without a disability. But a person with a disability will need 10 more contacts to get an interview than a person without a disability. There are several agencies that assist people with disabilities in the job search such as: Division of Vocational Rehabilitation (DVR), non-profit agencies, and AHEAD (Association on Higher Education and Disability), which has a job bank.

E. APPLICATIONS

When completing an application it is important to do so neatly and completely. This is true if the person does or does not have a disability. If the application has a question regarding if the applicant can perform all job- related tasks and the applicant is unable to do so, then put "will discuss in interview." It is illegal for an application to ask if a person has a disability or has received worker's compensation. If questions such as those come up, it is the applicant's decision how to answer. The person might be more comfortable leaving the space blank or writing in "will discuss."

F. INTERVIEW

Prior to the interview the applicant needs to have completed a self-assessment. This includes knowing their strengths/weaknesses, what accommodations will be needed to complete the essential job functions of the job, and if, when and how to disclose a disability.

1. Questions than can/cannot be asked. There are certain questions the employer can and cannot ask under ADA. The applicant should be aware of what is appropriate.

Examples of questions that an employer cannot ask:

- Do you have any condition or disability that would prevent you from being able to perform the essential function of the job?
- Do you have a visual impairment?
- About any physical characteristics, (e.g. scars, burns)
- Are you in good health?
- Are you have ever had an emotional illness or have consulted a psychologist or psychiatrist?
Questions an employer can ask during a job interview, if it relates to an individual’s ability to perform job-related functions. Remember all questions should be asked of all applicants.

- Can you move 50 pounds from point A to B?
- Can you sit for two hours at a time?
- Can you read a video display terminal?
- Can you reach the top of a six-foot high filing cabinet?
- Can you do the essential functions of the job with or without a reasonable accommodation?
- Will there be a problem meeting the attendance policy?
- An employer may ask a person in a wheelchair who cannot drive, "This job requires 6 site visits per day. How, with or without a reasonable accommodation, might you get from one job site to another?"

Activity

To Trainer: The purpose of this activity is to illustrate what questions can and cannot be asked during an interview. To complete this activity ask for a volunteer from the audience. Give the person a copy of the script. Explain to the audience that this is a mock interview in which the employer is asking questions that are both legal and illegal. When the employer asks an illegal question, ask the audience to interrupt and state why it is illegal. If no one interrupts, the trainer should stop and say why it is illegal. The trainer and volunteer could also go through the interview first, then the second time have participants interact. Another Option is to ask participants to give different answers.

We are going to be doing an activity to illustrate questions that can and cannot be asked during an interview. When an illegal question is asked, please interrupt and state why it is illegal. We will go through the entire script once first. During the second time, please interrupt when you think a question is illegal.
The situation:
A person in a wheelchair is applying for a position as a social worker in a hospital.

Employer: Tell me about your experience and education and how it relates to this position.

Applicant: I have a Bachelor's degree in social work and I completed a one year practicum in a nursing home.

Employer: How and when did you become disabled? Also, what is your disability? (Illegal)

Applicant: I have a spinal injury that occurred on a waterslide when I was fifteen.

Employer: Does this disability cause you to take much time off? (Illegal)

Applicant: I have an excellent attendance policy. Please check with my past employers.

Employer: How will you be able to complete the essential function of the job of visiting patients in their rooms?

Applicant: I am able to move around easily using my wheelchair. If things need to be moved in the room, I will just ask.

Employer: Thank you for coming in. I will call you to update you on this position.

Discussion Questions:

- Are there questions about why these questions are illegal?
- Does anyone have a personal experience they would like to share with us?

G. NEGOTIATION

By the time an applicant gets to this stage, it is obvious they have completed their research and their self-assessment has paid off. When it comes to negotiating job functions and accommodations, it is important to look at the position, department, and the entire organization.

H. WHO TO CONTACT

We have included the numbers of various resources in case there are further questions concerning ADA, and legal questions.

VI. CONCLUSION - QUESTIONS

It has been illustrated throughout this workshop that there are many similarities and differences a person with a disability needs to be aware of prior to, and during, a job search. Hopefully, we were able to address the differences and provide information that will assisting serving individuals with disabilities. If you have any question, please call.

To Trainer: If you are giving the Post-Test, hand out before finishing.

Please complete this Post-Test. This will be used to determine the effectiveness of this training and to determine if we met the objectives. Also, fill out the evaluation. This will help evaluate the entire training session.

Americans With Disabilities Act
Accessibility Requirements

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) prohibits discrimination on the basis of disability in employment (title I), State and local government services and transportation (title II), public accommodations (title III), and telecommunications (title IV). This chart summarizes the major accessibility requirements for each title of the ADA and includes references to the applicable regulations.
The ADA requires that the Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board (Access Board) issue guidelines to ensure that buildings, facilities, and vehicles covered by the law are accessible, in terms of architecture and design, transportation, and communication, to individuals with disabilities. Regulations issued by the Department of Justice and the Department of Transportation must be consistent with the Access Board's guidelines. The Access Board issued the Americans with Disabilities Act Accessibility Guidelines (ADAAG) for buildings and facilities on July 26, 1991; and amended it on September 6, 1991 to include additional requirements for transportation facilities. The Access Board also issued ADAAG for transportation vehicles on September 6, 1991. The Department of Justice has adopted ADAAG for buildings and facilities as the accessibility standard for new construction and alterations of places of public accommodation and commercial facilities covered by title III of the ADA. The Department of Transportation has adopted ADAAG as the accessibility standard for new construction and alterations of transportation facilities by public entities covered by title II of the ADA and for transportation vehicles acquired by public and private entities covered by titles II and III of the ADA. ADAAG is reprinted in the Department of Justice and Department of Transportation regulations, as applicable. The regulations issued by the Federal agencies listed in this chart contain other requirements, in addition to those relating to accessibility. The addresses and phone numbers for contacting the Federal agencies are at the end of this chart.

1 Recipients of Federal financial assistance have similar obligations under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. Most buildings constructed or altered with Federal funds are also required to comply with the Architectural Barriers Act of 1968.
Accessibility Requirements

Title III - Public Accommodations

Restaurants, hotels, theaters, shopping centers and malls, retail stores, museums, libraries, parks, private schools, day care centers, and other similar places of public accommodation may not discriminate on the basis of disability. 28 CFR 36.201.

Physical barriers in existing places of public accommodation must be removed if readily achievable (i.e., easily accomplishable and able to be carried out without much difficulty or expense). If not, alternative methods of providing services must be offered, if those methods are readily achievable. 28 CFR 36.304 and 36.305.

New construction of places of public accommodation and commercial facilities (non-residential facilities affecting commerce) must be accessible. 28 CFR 35.401.

Effective Dates

Title III - Public Accommodations

January 26, 1992 - unless otherwise noted below.

The obligation to engage in readily achievable barrier removal is a continuing one. 56 FR 35569 (July 26, 1991).

Facilities designed and constructed for first occupancy after January 26, 1993. A facility is designed and constructed for first occupancy after January 26, 1993, only if: (1) the last application for a building permit or permit extension is certified to be complete by a State, county, or local government after January 26, 1992; and (2) the first certificate of occupancy is issued after January 26, 1993.

Regulations and Enforcement

DOJ final rules on public accommodations and commercial facilities are in 28 CFR Part 36 (56 FR 35544, July 26, 1991).

DOT final rules on transportation vehicles acquired by private entities are in 48 CFR Parts 37 and 38 (56 FR 45584, September 6, 1991).

DOJ and DOT final rules require private entities covered by Title III to use ADAAG as the accessibility standard for new construction and alterations of buildings and for transit vehicles. 28 CFR 36.310 and 36.406; 49 CFR 37.7.

Measures taken to comply with readily achievable barrier removal must comply with ADAAG unless it would not be readily achievable in which case other readily achievable measures that do not fully comply with ADAAG may be taken. However, no measure shall be taken that poses a significant risk to the health or safety of individuals with disabilities or others. 28 CFR 36.304 (d).

On application by State or local government, Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights, in consultation with the Access Board, may certify that State or local building codes meet or exceed ADAAG. 28 CFR 36.601 to 36.608.
Accessibility Requirements

| Elevators are not required in newly constructed or altered buildings under three stories or with less than 3,000 square feet per floor, unless the building is a shopping center; shopping mall, professional office of a health care provider, terminal, depot, or other station used for specific public transportation, or an airport passenger terminal. 28 CFR 36.401(d) and 36.404. | Examinations and courses related to licensing or certification for professional and trade purposes must be held in accessible buildings or alternative accessible arrangements must be made. 28 CFR 36.309(b)(1)(ii) and (c)(4). | New buses and other vehicles (except aircraft and automobiles) acquired by private entities to provide specified public transportation must be accessible or system in which vehicles are used must provide individuals with disabilities a level of service equivalent to that provided to the general public depending on whether entity is primarily engaged in business of transporting people, whether system is fixed route or demand responsive, and vehicle seating capacity. 49 CFR 37.101 to 37.107. |

| New over the road buses (buses with an elevated passenger deck located over a baggage compartment) must be accessible. 49 CFR 37.169, and 49 CFR 38.151 to 38.157. | Vehicles must comply if the closing date for submission of bids is after August 25, 1990 (February 25, 1992 for rail passenger cars and vans with a capacity of less than 8 persons when operated by a private entity primarily engaged in the business of transporting people). ADAAG is applicable standard as of October 7, 1991. Interim standards apply before that date (56 FR 40762, October 4, 1990). | Structural changes in over the road buses to provide access to wheelchair users are not required until July 26, 1996 (July 26, 1997, for small companies). Date may be extended an additional year after completion of a study. |

Regulations and Enforcement

| Individuals may file complaints with the Attorney General. Individuals may also file a private lawsuit. Where appropriate and to the extent authorized by law, the use of alternative means of dispute resolution is encouraged. | Remedies are the same as available under Title II of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Court may order a private entity to make facilities accessible, provide auxiliary aids or services, modify policies, and pay attorneys' fees. | Court may award money damages and impose civil penalties in lawsuit filed by Attorney General but not in private lawsuit by individuals. |

| Small businesses with 25 or fewer employees and gross receipts of $1 million or less may not be sued for violations occurring before July 26, 1992; and small businesses with 10 or fewer employees and gross receipts of $5 million or less may not be sued for violations occurring before January 26, 1993. However, such small businesses may be sued for violations relating to new construction and alterations to facilities occurring after January 26, 1992. | | |

Established in 1983 as a service of the President's Committee on Employment of People with Disabilities, the Job Accommodation Network (JAN) is an information network and consulting resource to enable qualified workers with disabilities to be hired or retained. Businesses, rehabilitation professionals, and persons with disabilities can discuss their concerns and information needs with JAN's Human Factors Consultants and receive immediate suggestions on solutions to accommodation problems. JAN offers comprehensive information on methods and available equipment that have proven effective for a wide range of accommodations. Included will be names, addresses, and phone numbers of appropriate resources. You can make personal contacts for additional insights. Information can be provided by phone or mail, and is available at no cost to the caller.

Examples of Job Accommodations

A plant worker who was hearing-impaired was able to use a telephone amplifier designed to work in conjunction with hearing aids, allowing him to retain his job and not be transferred to a lower-paying job within the company. Cost $23.95.

A clerk with limited use of her hands was provided with a "Lazy Susan" file folder for her desk. This prevented her from having to reach across her desk and allowed her to remain in her job as before. Cost: $85.00.

An individual with the use of only one hand needed to be able to use a camera as part of his job. A tripod had proven to be too cumbersome. By providing a waist pouch (such as is used in carrying flags), he was able to manipulate the camera and keep his job. Cost: $50.00.

Changing a desk layout from the right to the left side for a person with a visual impairment data entry operator. Cost: $0.

A receptionist who was blind was provided a light-probe which allowed her to determine which lines on the telephone were ringing, on hold, or in use. Cost: $45.00.

A headset for a phone was rented that allowed an insurance salesperson with cerebral palsy to write while talking. Cost $49.95.

An individual with one hand working in a food service position was able to perform all of the tasks in her position except opening cans. A one-handed can opener enabled her to perform that one remaining task. Cost $35.00.

A groundskeeper who had recovered from a stroke had limited use of one arm and needed to be able to rake grass to maintain his position. The use of a detachable extension arm on the rake allowed him to grasp the handle on the extension with the affected hand and control the rake with his functional arm. Cost: $19.80.

A timer with an indicator light allowed a medical technician who was deaf to be able to perform the laboratory tests required for her job. Cost: $26.95.

The situation:
A person in a wheelchair is applying for a position as a social worker in a hospital.

Employer: Tell me about your experience and education and how it relates to this position.

Applicant: I have a bachelors degree in social work and I completed a one year practicum in a nursing home.

Employer: How and when did you become disabled? Also, what is your disability? (Illegal)

Applicant: I have a spinal injury that occurred on a waterslide when I was fifteen on a waterslide.

Employer: Does this disability cause you to take much time off? (Illegal)

Applicant: I have an excellent attendance policy. Please check with my past employers.

Employer: How will you be able to complete the essential function of the job of visiting patients in their rooms?

Applicant: I am able to move around easily using my wheelchair. If things need to be moved in the room, I will just ask.

Employer: Thank you for coming in. I will call you to update you on this position.

JOB SEARCH - ISSUES CONCERNING INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES

CONCLUSION
OBJECTIVES

1. Basic knowledge of Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act and the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).

2. Definition of a disability/impairment.

3. Job Search issues for an individual with a disability including:
   - Accommodations
   - Disclosure
   - Resume
   - Interviewing.
Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 covers: Any institution or activity receiving federal assistance. It states: An individual with a disability must be provided reasonable and appropriate academic adjustments.

ADA

Title I - Employment

25 or more employees - July 1992

15 or more employees - July 1994
Definition of a disability:

- The person has a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities;

- has a record of impairment; or

- is regarded as having an impairment.
Steps to determine if a person is "otherwise" qualified:

- Education
- Experience
- Licenses
- Skills
- Other requirements
- Can meet the essential functions of the job, with or without a reasonable accommodation.
ESSENTIAL FUNCTION:

Basic, necessary, and integral part of the job.

MARGINAL FUNCTION:

Minimum part of the job.
Reasonable accommodation:

Any modification or adjustment to a job or the work environment that will enable a qualified applicant to participate in the application process or to perform essential job functions.
Types of Reasonable Accommodations are:

- Flextime
- Modified Work Schedule
- Modification of equipment
- Readers or Interpreters
According to the Job Accommodation Network (JAN, 1992)

31% of accommodations cost little or nothing
19% of accommodations cost $1 - $50
19% of accommodations cost $51 - $500
11% of accommodations cost $501 - $1000
01% of accommodations cost $5000 and up
UNDUE HARDSHIP:

- Nature and net cost of accommodation
- Overall financial resources
- Type of organization
- Affect to business
THERE IS NO "ONE"
JOB THAT PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES CAN DO,
BUT MANY THEY CAN DO.
SELF - ASSESSMENT

• WHAT DO I WANT MOST FROM WORK?

• WHAT ARE MY PERSONALITY TRAITS?

• WHAT IS IMPORTANT TO ME?
DISCLOSURE

IF, WHEN AND HOW SHOULD A PERSON
DISCLOSE THEIR DISABILITY?
DISCLOSURE

IF ??

WILL IT SUPPORT THE OBJECTIVE OF GETTING HIRED?
WHEN AND HOW TO DISCLOSE

1. THIRD PARTY REFERRAL
2. CALL FOR INTERVIEW
3. APPLICANT CALLS TO INFORM EMPLOYER
4. APPLICATION
5. DURING INTERVIEW
6. INTERVIEW - PRE-OFFER
TIPS ON HOW TO DISCLOSE

1. TIMING

2. MINIMIZE DISCUSSION

3. PREPARE

4. DISCLOSE NEEDED ACCOMMODATIONS, NOT DISABILITY
SHOULD A PERSON PUT A DISABILITY ON A RESUME?

NO!
PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES WILL NEED TO MAKE 10 TIMES MORE CONTACTS TO GET AN INTERVIEW, THAN FOR PEOPLE WITHOUT A DISABILITY.
INTERVIEW

1. DISCLOSURE

2. ACCOMMODATIONS

3. JOB FUNCTIONS

4. QUESTIONS THAT CAN AND CANNOT BE ASKED
Questions employers cannot ask:
» Do you have a disability?
» Have you ever been to a counselor?
» Have you ever filed a worker’s compensation claim?
» Will your condition cause you to take much time off?

Questions employers can ask:
» Can you move 50 pounds from point A to B?
» Can you fulfill the essential function of the job with or without a reasonable accommodation?
» Will you be able to meet the attendance policy?
