ABSTRACT

This employment assessment tool for parents of young adults with deaf-blindness was created to assist in examining strengths and weaknesses of various employment programs in relation to their child's employment wants and needs, to guide parents in advocating for what is needed from a specific job to ensure their child's success, and to provide a user-friendly instrument. The tool covers seven areas: vocational assessment activities, job development/job match activities, job site characteristics, job description, health and safety issues, socialization on the job, and available supports. The instrument can be used to: (1) stimulate thinking during the initial stages of considering employment and assessing whether this might be a valuable experience for a family member; (2) help when looking at several specific jobs and assessing how they match the young adult's skills, interests, preferences, and personality; and (3) organize the many questions to be asked when considering a specific job and support package for a young adult. EVALUATING EMPLOYMENT PROGRAMS

The development and dissemination of this instrument was supported by cooperative agreement (#H025E20001) from The U.S. Department of Education. The opinions expressed in this instrument are solely those of the authors. No official endorsement by the U.S. Department of Education is intended or should be inferred.

The Helen Keller National Center - Technical Assistance Center (HKNC-TAC) is pleased to share this employment assessment tool for parents of young adults with deaf-blindness. This instrument was created to assist parents in looking at different aspects of employment for their family member who is deaf-blind. Our goals in developing this instrument were threefold: first, to construct an instrument that allows parents to examine the strengths and weaknesses of various employment programs in relation to their child's employment wants and needs; second, to guide parents in advocating for what is needed from a specific job to ensure their son or daughter's success; and, third, to ensure that the instrument is user friendly for parents.

With these goals in mind, we have created an evaluative list of considerations that parents may wish to keep in mind when looking at possible employment programs and specific jobs for their son or daughter. This tool offers seven areas of assessment: 1) Vocational Assessment Activities; 2) Job Development/Job Match Activities; 3) Job Site Characteristics; 4) Job Description; 5) Health and Safety Issues; 6) Socialization on the Job; 7) Available Supports.

This instrument is meant to be general and flexible so that it can be used in many ways. For example, it can help to stimulate thinking during the initial stages of considering employment for a family member adult and assessing whether this might be a valuable experience for him or her. It can also help when looking at several specific jobs and assessing how they match the young adults's skills, interests, preferences and personality. Finally, it can also be used as a checklist to organize the many questions to be asked when considering a specific job and support package for a young adult. Parents may use the entire instrument or select categories of questions that concern them most. It is meant to be flexible and capable of meeting a wide variety of needs.
