A project to develop, produce, and disseminate a multicultural, multi-level curriculum for English-as-a-Second-Language (ESL) learners is described and evaluated. The curriculum is designed for thematic instruction at the beginning and intermediate language levels, and addresses four language skill areas (listening, speaking, reading, writing). Development of the curriculum involved surveying ESL students in two classes to determine the topics that best meet their interests and language needs. Six subject areas were selected: introductions; talking about families; health; current events; neighborhoods; and exploring careers. Instructional activities emphasizing the four language skills were developed for each subject. The activities were field tested in three ESL classes, and teacher and student feedback used to refine the materials. A curriculum manual and teacher's guide were also prepared, and two workshops on the curriculum were presented. Students who participated in the field testing gained significantly in listening/speaking and reading proficiency. The project was found to have met its goals and objectives. Students' letters to the author/developer are appended. The student manual and student and teacher evaluations are appended. (MSE) (Adjunct ERIC Clearinghouse on Literacy Education)

Purpose: To develop, produce, and disseminate a multicultural, multi-level curriculum for ESL learners based on the thematic approach which will provide instruction for beginning and intermediate students in the four language processes.

Procedures: The curriculum developer surveyed ESL students to ascertain the topics which best meet their interests and language needs. Six themes were chosen; based on these themes, classroom activities were developed emphasizing the four language processes. The activities were field tested in three ESL classes. Feedback from the teachers and students was used to revise the activities. The curriculum developer wrote a curriculum manual and teachers' guide and presented two workshops on the use of the curriculum.

Summary of Findings: Students who participated in field testing the manual advanced significantly in listening/speaking and reading proficiency. In the beginning class, students reading ability increased .4 points on a 6 point scale and their listening/speaking ability increased by 1.6 points on a four point scale. In the intermediate class, students reading ability increased .6 points on a 6 point scale and their listening/speaking ability increased by 2.6 points on a 4 point scale.

Comments (Conclusions, Findings, Barriers, if any): This was a successful project which met its goals and objectives.

Products (if applicable): A multicultural curriculum manual designed for beginning and intermediate ESL students.

Final Report

A. Introduction

This report details the activities of "A Curriculum for Multicultural Populations: Teaching ESL from a Thematic Approach", a project supported under Section 353 of the Adult Education Act. The objective of this project was to develop, produce and disseminate a multicultural, multi-level curriculum for ESL learners based on a thematic approach which provides instruction for beginning and intermediate students in the four language processes. (A copy of the manual produced through this project is located in the appendix section.) The curriculum manual will be most useful to teachers and tutors instructing beginning and intermediate level ESL students; the manual is particularly designed for teachers and tutors of multi-level classes or small groups.

All activities described in this report were completed during the time period 7/1/93 to 6/30/94. The curriculum developer on this project was Daryl Gordon. She researched and developed curriculum activities, wrote the manual, and presented workshops for teachers and tutors in the use of the curriculum. Sandra Kwisz, ESL teacher, assisted in development of activities and field tested the lessons in the manual. Mary Taylor, Teacher Supervisor, supervised the project, ensuring progress towards the project objectives. Amelia Bellardo-Cox, LSH Women's Program Director, oversaw the project's development, ensuring timely attainment of the project's goals. Also, Tina Kluetmeier, an ESL teacher at Southeast Asian Mutual Assistance Associations Coalition, Inc., volunteered her time to field test portions of the manual.

Upon completion of printing the manual will be disseminated through AdvancE, the Mayor's Commission on Literacy, the Bureau of Adult Basic and Literacy Education Programs and the Western Pennsylvania Adult Literacy Resource Center. Also the manual will be distributed to other ESL adult literacy programs, including, but not limited to the Lighthouse, Congreso de Latinos Unidos, and the Southeast Asian Mutual Assistance Associations Coalition, Inc.
Finally, the manual will be made available to a variety of agencies which provide adult ESL instruction through conferences and workshops.

B. Statement of Problem

This curriculum was designed to address two main needs in the field of adult ESL instruction. The curriculum addresses the need for interactive, interesting, and relevant curriculum material geared to the interests and experiences of ESL learners. ESL teachers and learners are in great need of curriculum which meets the needs of learners for both English instruction and sharing of their experience and cultures in the classroom. Through a needs assessment of adult ESL students, this project identified the most pressing needs of the population and then provided interactive exercises through which learners can improve their English proficiency while discussing relevant issues in the classroom. Learners use English to discuss their experiences and issues which are important to them, while they learn from other students about their cultures and experiences.

Secondly, this project addressed the growing need for a multi-level curriculum in ESL classrooms. ESL classes often have learners with vastly different speaking, listening, reading, and writing abilities. This can result in more advanced students feeling bored by the lack of challenge and less proficient students feeling confused and frustrated by material which is far above their level. This manual allows teachers to tailor instruction to different groups in the classroom. Because the curriculum manual contains a number of exercises for self-study or small group work, the teacher can work with one group while the other group works independently or with a classroom tutor.

C. Goals, Objectives and Results of Project

Objective 1: Develop a student manual for ESL learners based on the thematic approach.
The student manual, with accompanying teacher notes, was developed through the following methods. The manual can be found in the appendix section.

Method 1: Research and compile information on thematic approach and specific student-centered themes.

The curriculum developer conducted a thorough search of current research on the thematic approach in ESL instruction, as well as a review of ESL textbooks which employ a thematic approach.

Method 2: Survey students in two ESL classes to ascertain which themes best meet their interests and language needs.

The curriculum developer designed a needs assessment tool to ascertain the themes in which students have the greatest interest and in which they felt the greatest need for English proficiency. The needs assessment instrument was administered to 13 students in a Beginning and an Intermediate ESL class located at the Lutheran Settlement House, Women's Program. In response to the question, "I need English to:“, students answered that their greatest needs (in order of importance) were to 1) understand TV, 2) get a job, 3) talk with a nurse or doctor, 4) read newspapers/magazines, 5) answer the telephone, 6) complete applications, 7) go to college/university, and 8) make new friends.

Method 3: Develop listening, speaking, reading, and writing activities around each theme geared for beginning and intermediate students.

After compiling the eight topics identified by learners, the curriculum developer, drawing from experience in teaching beginning and intermediate classes, as well as consulting with Sandi Kwisz, the ESL teacher, the curriculum developer designed lessons around the eight topics. Six lesson themes were chosen incorporating the topics of greatest interest to learners. These themes are:
Introductions, Talking about Our Families, Health, Current Events, Neighborhoods, and Exploring Careers. Lesson activities emphasizing the four language processes were developed for each of the themes at both a beginning and an intermediate level.

Method 4: Field test curriculum activities in two ESL classes.

Field testing was conducted in three adult ESL classes from March to May 1994. Two classes (a beginning and an intermediate class) taught by Sandi Kwisz were located at the Lutheran Settlement House, Women's Program. The third class, a mixed level class of both beginning and intermediate students, taught by Tina Kluetmeier, was located at Southeast Asian Mutual Assistance Associations Coalition, Inc.

Method 5: Analyze data from field testing and revise manual as needed.

The curriculum developer met with both teachers at the conclusion of field testing to discuss the lessons and obtain comments, suggestions, and student reaction. In addition, both teachers, as well as five students, submitted letters detailing their impressions of the curriculum manual draft. Both teachers were extremely helpful in providing feedback about portions of lessons which were unclear or difficult to students. For instance, both teacher noted that a dictation activity in one of the chapters was difficult for students because they had not been able to read the material silently before the dictation. In the final draft, the curriculum developer changed the exercise to include student reading before the dictation activity. Both teachers also provided ideas for extension activities in many of the chapters which were incorporated by the curriculum developer. Also, one teacher noted that her beginning class did not have sufficient command of English vocabulary in some of the chapters to allow them to understand the listening activities or engage satisfactorily in discussion. In the final draft, the curriculum developer designed vocabulary activities entitled "Word Power" which were placed before the listening and speaking activities to allow learners.

Finally, the field testing in two different settings provided feedback on the suitability of the curriculum for different classroom populations. The population of one of the classrooms engaged in field testing was primarily Caribbean and Eastern European, while the other classroom was composed predominantly of East Asian refugees. Although both teachers expressed positive reactions about the curriculum and reported that students responded well to the lessons, the teacher in the second classroom provided important feedback about the suitability of some lessons for the refugee population. Commenting about field testing of a lesson in the family chapter in which students were to discuss family pictures, she reported that many students did not have family pictures to share because they left their countries under extreme circumstances. She suggested that the lesson instructions be expanded to encourage students to bring in recent photos of their family or to draw a picture if they have no photos. These suggestions were incorporated into the Teachers' Notes section of the curriculum.

Method 6: Write curriculum manual and teachers' guide.

This method was accomplished, incorporating the feedback described above from both the teachers and the students who participated in field testing the manual.

Objective 2: Disseminate and present information to other teachers.

This objective was accomplished through the following methods.

Method 1: Disseminate the manual through Advance, Mayor's Commission on Literacy, and conferences/workshops.
Upon completion of printing the manual will be provided to the above agencies, in addition to permanent copies of the manual on file with the Bureau of Adult Basic and Literacy Education Programs and the Western Pennsylvania Adult Literacy Resource Center. Also the manual will be distributed to other ESL adult literacy programs, including, but not limited to the Lighthouse, Congreso de Latinos Unidos, and the Southeast Asian Mutual Assistance Associations Coalition, Inc.

Method 2: Present two workshops for teachers on the use of the manual and the thematic approach in ESL instruction.

The curriculum developer designed and conducted two workshops for teachers and tutors which demonstrated the use of the thematic approach in ESL instruction and presented the lesson activities in the curriculum manual. The nine-hour workshops were offered under the auspices of the Mayor's Commission on Literacy. The first workshop, presented to twelve tutors and teachers at the Mayor's Commission on Literacy, was conducted on two consecutive Saturdays, October 23 and October 30. The second workshop was conducted for ten teachers and tutors at Community Christian Academy, a community center which offers ESL classes in the Spanish speaking community, on two consecutive Saturdays, January 22 and January 29.

D. Evaluation Instruments

The curriculum manual was evaluated through a variety of methods. First, students involved in the field testing of the manual were assessed both at the beginning of the school year (October) before the use of the curriculum and at the end of the school year (May) after having used the curriculum. Although three classes were involved in the field testing of this manual, only the two classes at the Lutheran Settlement House were involved in this assessment. The third class, located at a different agency, employs different methods of student assessment. Using the results of these assessment measures would have rendered the evaluation data incomprehensible.

The curriculum developer and the teacher of the two Lutheran Settlement House classes met early in the year to discuss and refine already existing assessment procedures. The assessment package included a listening/speaking and reading component. Also, a writing sample of each student was kept in a portfolio to be reviewed by the classroom teacher at the end of the year. For the purposes of this evaluation, the listening/speaking and reading assessments were used because their ease of comparison.

Each student was interviewed orally using the Literacy Volunteers of America Informal ESL pre-test to gauge listening and speaking proficiency. This assessment was conducted by the classroom teacher who ranked students out of a possible score of 4. Students were also given a packet of readings at different levels and asked to choose one they could read comfortably and discuss. Beginning students were asked to respond orally to the reading passage, while intermediate students responded in writing. The classroom teacher ranked the responses out of a possible of 6 points, according to the reading level of the passage and the students' understanding based on their oral or written response. The assessment methods were conducted in October and then repeated in May as a post-test.

The assessment methods were effective tools for both the teacher and students to view progress and demonstrated significant student improvement in both listening/speaking and reading proficiency, as the tables below indicate. However, the evaluation data was impaired by the low number of students participating in the post-testing phase of assessment. To insure relevant data, only students who participated in the October pre-testing were included in the post-testing scores below. Although new students were included in the class throughout the year and participated in the post-testing, their results were not included in the evaluation of the manual. As the results below indicate, only three students from the initial eight in the beginning class remained. In the intermediate class, only three students from the initial seventeen remained at the end of the year. The low numbers of students is attributable to the need for new immigrants to leave classes due to a need to find employment, deal with family illnesses, etc. Although greater numbers would provide more reliable data, the scores from the few students participating demonstrate significant advancement in English proficiency.

In addition to evaluation of the manual through student achievement, both of the teachers participating in field testing of the manual were asked to provide both verbal and written feedback about the manual's usefulness. Because one teacher worked for the Lutheran Settlement House and the other worked at a different agency, these evaluation instruments constitute both an internal and external evaluation of the project. The letters of both teachers, as well as letters from students about the manual, are included in the appendix section.

E. Dissemination

Upon completion of printing the manual will be disseminated through AdvancE, the Mayor's Commission on Literacy, the Bureau of Adult Basic and Literacy Education Programs and the Western Pennsylvania Adult Literacy Resource Center. Also the manual will be distributed to other ESL adult literacy programs, including, but not limited to the Lighthouse, Congreso de Latinos Unidos, and the Southeast Asian Mutual Assistance Associations Coalition, Inc. Finally, the manual will be made available to a variety of agencies which provide adult ESL instruction through conferences and workshops.

F. Conclusion

"A Curriculum for Multicultural Populations: Teaching ESL from a Thematic Approach" was a successful project which met its goals and objectives. Both students and teachers responded favorably to the curriculum, indicating their interest in the activities and the relevance of the activities to student lives. Also, teachers commented that the curriculum successfully provided instructional activities for both intermediate and beginning ESL learners in a multi-level classroom. One teacher who participated in field testing the curriculum wrote:

I was pleased to have had the opportunity to field test part of the ESL curriculum for multi-level classes developed by Daryl Gordon. It accomplishes the difficult job of meeting the diverse needs of the students in my class. The themes included are relevant to my students' interests. The activities are varied, covering the four skill areas while inviting students to make connections with their own experience and bring their knowledge to the tasks. This curriculum is an important and desperately needed addition to the limited materials available for teaching immigrant and refugee adults in community-based programs.

To Whom It May Concern:

I teach a multi-level ESL class for South East Asian adults in West Philadelphia. It is always a challenge to find appropriate materials that challenge the more advanced students in my class yet don't overwhelm the more beginning students.

I was pleased to have had the opportunity to field test part of the ESL Curriculum for multi-level classes developed by Daryl Gordon. It accomplishes the difficult job of meeting the diverse needs of the students in my class. The themes included are relevant to my students' interests. The activities are varied, covering the four skill areas while inviting students to make connections with their own experience and bring that knowledge to the tasks.

My students and I appreciated the opportunity to learn about each other and others whose similar experiences are captured by the readings, while developing language skills. This curriculum is an important and desperately needed addition to the limited materials available for teaching immigrant and refugee adults in community-based programs. I hope that it continues to receive the support that it needs so that other students can benefit as well.

Dear Daryl,

How are you?

Thank you for the story about Maria. I enjoy reading her story. She has very good ideas. I feel the same way about Maria.

I came to America because I hope my children will study hard, then they can get better education and they can have better jobs. They have a bank account in Laos. Their dream is to help my relative in Laos. That is my dream before I came here. The America is a beautiful country, and there are a lot of places. Our children go out and play together. That made the children don't want to stay home and don't want to study. I very upset if my children forget about their country, their language, and their culture. I very worry about their education. If they don't want to study and drop out of school, what can I do for them?

Sincerely,

Dear Suzy,

I am going to speak of my book who have any subjects:

1. I see some dictation with the explanations by the teacher how to take one dictation. The first time the students listen when the teacher is reading and second time she will read once slowly.

2. History of my children.

I like this history when my children lives in America. He does not forget their culture and country of origin. The education is very nice. Because the students are study many subjects.

I see the discussion questions and talking about family pictures who may be will take of times.

I am happy to take you something about of my book.

This manual is the result of the combined efforts and diligent work of many people. Without the students in the English as a Second Language classes at the Women's Program who participated in the topic selection, field testing, and evaluation of this project, this manual would not have been possible.

Much appreciation is due to the Women's Program staff members who participated in the development of this manual. Special thanks to Sandi Kwisz who field tested drafts of this manual in her class and gave valuable advice on revising the manual. Mary Taylor provided encouragement and administrative support for the project.

Thanks also to Tina Kluetmeier and her students at Southeast Asian Mutual Assistance Associations Coalition, Inc. who field tested the manual, offered helpful suggestions for revision, and provided an independent evaluation of the manual. Thanks also to Letha Bruce who drew the illustrations accompanying the lessons.

We extend many thanks to the Pennsylvania State Department of Education who funded this project. Special thanks Cheryl Keenan, Director, and Ella Morin, Special Demonstration Projects Advisor, of the Bureau of Adult Basic and Literacy Education.

Teachers' Notes

This curriculum manual explores six themes of particular interest to ESL learners. The topics were chosen through a needs assessment of both beginning and intermediate ESL classes. Each chapter presents one theme with listening, speaking, reading, and writing exercises, including separate activities designed for groups of students at the beginning and intermediate levels of instruction.

A multi-level curriculum is a great need for ESL learners and teachers. Many adult ESL classes are comprised of learners with vastly different speaking, listening, reading, and writing abilities. This can often result in more advanced students feeling bored by the lack of challenge and less proficient students feeling confused and frustrated by instructional materials which are far above their level. This manual provides teachers with a beginning and an intermediate lesson for each theme, so that teachers can tailor instruction to different groups in the classroom. A number of self-study exercises are included so that the teacher can work with one group while the other group works with a tutor or on an independent or small group task.

Each chapter in this curriculum explores one theme which is relevant and meaningful to adult learners. The relevance of the thematic units to adult learners insures that adult learners' interests and experiences are integrated with the curriculum goals and objectives. Learners have the opportunity to employ new vocabulary in all four language processes which reinforce language and vocabulary learning. Also, the thematic units provide learners with vocabulary and grammar within a meaningful context which increases retention.

Additional grammar practice highlighting a specific grammar point within the lesson is provided in the Grammar Appendix which begins on page 60. Specific grammar activities are provided for beginning and intermediate learners within each theme. In addition to providing students with extra practice on grammar, the Grammar Appendix reviews the vocabulary presented in the lesson.
The following section, Lesson Design, describes the general pattern of each of the lessons and the importance of each of these lesson components. The next section, Chapter Design, describes the purpose of each chapter, providing suggestions for adaptation and expansion of the activities presented within the chapter.

Lesson Design

Each lesson is designed to explore one theme with speaking, listening, reading, and writing activities to allow students to gain proficiency in the four language processes. The following section headings are used throughout the manual to describe the various types of activities:

Listening Activity

A listening activity begins each chapter, providing students with the opportunity to listen silently to the vocabulary and phrases of the chapter without the burden of responding immediately. The teacher should focus on listening for understanding during this activity, rather than soliciting repetition or response from the students.

Word Power

This activity provides students with new vocabulary necessary for the lesson. Often the new vocabulary is presented through pictures in which students pair pictures with the new vocabulary words. Realia can be used to extend and review this vocabulary. For instance, in the lesson on clothing, the teacher may use actual scarves, hats, and dresses as examples of vocabulary words.

Speaking Activity

Having listened and reviewed the necessary vocabulary, this section gives the students the experience of using the new language and sentence formations in a functional way in the classroom. These activities emphasize opportunities for students to discuss their own ideas, experiences, and issues which are important to them.

Reading Activity

Reading selections are included to allow students to further explore theme of the chapter. Because of copyright laws, relatively few reading selections are included. Teachers can supplement with reading selections from the following books which provide interesting materials at the appropriate levels for intermediate and beginning ESL students:

Gail Weinstein-Shr's Stories We Tell Our Children is available through Heinle and Heinle. It offers reading selections for beginning students around the theme of family and neighborhoods.

True Stories in the News: A Beginning Reader by Sandra Heyer is available through Longman. It includes wonderful reading selections on a variety of topics for high beginning/low intermediate ESL learners. Also, the companion volume More True Stories: A Beginning Reader contains more difficult reading selections appropriate for the intermediate level student.

Reading for Real: An Intermediate Reading Text by Thomas J. Swinscoe is available through Heinle and Heinle and contains reading selections on a variety of topics ranging from parenting to politics to cultural customs designed for the high intermediate learner.

Talk it over

This section is designed to give students an opportunity to practice new language with other students. Student groups often decrease anxiety and the pressure to perform for teacher, allowing more reticent students to talk more freely. This section allows students to share information about each other and their families and to learn about each other while practicing the language focus of the chapter.

Usually a group of 3-4 students is ideal for this discussion. The teacher may try different arrangements of groups to allow students to work with many students of different proficiency, country of origin, etc. During this part of the class, the teacher can circulate among the groups, answering questions and providing feedback for students. The teacher may also use this time to work with the other level of students on a teacher-directed task.

Using English Outside the Classroom

A number of lessons for intermediate learners provide an activity which encourages them to speak and listen to English speakers outside the classroom through interviews or surveys. These activities give intermediate learners confidence in speaking to native English speakers outside of class and provides them with other listening input than the teacher. Students may perform these activities with others in their neighborhood as an after class assignment or the teacher may plan classroom time for these activities, arranging for the ESL students to meet and talk with students from a GED class or the residents of a local senior citizen center.
Chapter Design

This section provides ideas for presentation, adaptation, or extension of the activities contained in the student manual.

Chapter 1 - Introductions
Additional Activities for Beginning and Intermediate Learners

Drawing Activity

To create a comfortable atmosphere for students to begin to share information about themselves, ask students to draw things about their lives on large pieces of newsprint. (Students might draw pictures of their families, activities they enjoy, pictures of their homeland, etc.) Introduce the activity by first drawing on the board pictures about yourself and asking students to guess what they know about you. As each student shows his/her drawings, the class can guess what information they now know about the student.

If students are uncomfortable with drawing activities, the teacher can bring a variety of magazines into class and ask students to cut out pictures and create a collage which tells something about themselves. Again, the teacher should model the activity first, by showing his/her own collage and discussing it first. (This activity is also useful for reviewing question format during the class. Either students or teachers can ask questions about student pictures.

Charting the Journey to the U.S.

Bringing a world map to class on the first day can develop into another introductory activity. Ask students to show what country they are from and the route by which they came to the U.S. Each student can draw the route of their trip to the U.S. If students have the English proficiency, they can also tell about how and why they came to the U.S.
Chapter Two - Talking about our Families

Additional Activities for Beginning and Intermediate Learners

Both beginning and intermediate learners will profit from a preview (or review) of vocabulary about the family. The teacher may draw a family tree using his/her own family to illustrate positions in the family. Students may also want to draw their own family trees and discuss them with the class.

In the Talk it Over section, students are encouraged to bring photos of their family. Be aware that students who are refugees may have no photos from the past. Let students know that they can bring present day pictures of their family or draw pictures representing their families as an alternative.

Intermediate Learners

For intermediate class, use riddle cards to review family relations. On index cards, write statements such as, "Your brother's wife is your ________" or "Your mother's brother is your ________." Have students work in pairs to "solve" the riddles.

Chapter Three - Current Events

Additional Activities for Beginning Learners

Beginning students can review colors, clothing, and descriptive words through the use of picture duplicates. Before class, cut duplicates of pictures with people from catalogs or magazines. In class pass out one picture to each student. Explain to students that they have to find the person who has the identical picture without showing the picture to anyone. Students should circulate around the room saying, for example, "I have a picture of a tall/thin woman. She is wearing a yellow sweater."

For more advanced students this activity can be made more difficult by narrowing the type of pictures used. For instance, only pictures of jewelry can be used. Students will then have to accurately describe the type and description of the jewelry to find their partner.

Chapter Four - Health
Additional Activities for Intermediate Learners

For intermediate learners, the teacher may want to obtain a copy of a medical history from a physician's office and have students complete the history in the classroom. This provides a good background in medical words, prepares students for using English with a doctor or nurse, and insures that students have a complete medical history in the event of an emergency. Students may also be interested in having a guest speaker come to the class to discuss a subject of interest such as high blood pressure or AIDS. Many community health centers have guest speakers who may be able to address the group. Providing the guest speaker with advice about speaking with second language learners (e.g. speaking clearly and using pictures, realia, or gestures) will insure the success of the talk.

Chapter 5 - Neighborhood
Additional Activities for the Intermediate Learner

Intermediate students may be interested in using their English outside the classroom to find out more about their neighborhood. The teacher may suggest that students interview an older resident of the neighborhood to find out what the neighborhood was like when s/he was young. Student can brainstorm their own questions. Some of the following questions can also be used: How long have you lived here? What was your favorite place in the neighborhood? What problems did the neighborhood have when you were young? How have things changed in this neighborhood?
Chapter 6 - Careers
Additional Activities for Intermediate Learners

Intermediate learners may want to do further research about the career in which they are interested, job openings, and job training opportunities. The public library often carries information about career opportunities and job training. Information is also available through local community colleges or the Private Industry Council. The teacher may wish to arrange a field trip or a guest speaker to encourage students to gather more information.

Talking about Feelings

Do you know the meaning of these words? If not, ask your teacher or a classmate.

- Happy
- Sad
- Angry
- Nervous
- Tired
- Sick
- Hot
- Cold
- Hungry
- Thirsty
Act It Out

Choose one of the feelings above and act it out for the class. Don't tell them what word you chose. They will guess which feeling you are acting out.

Conversation Circle

Sit in a circle. Your teacher will say to the student on his or her right, "I'm happy/tired/hungry. How are you?" After the student answers, he or she will say to the person on the right, "I'm happy/tired/hungry. How are you?" Continue around the circle.

Speaking Activity - What do you say?

Here are two different things to say when someone tells you good news.

About very important good news, say, "Congratulations!"

A: You look happy. What's up?
B: I won the lottery!
A: Congratulations!

About good news, say, "That's great!"

A: You look happy. What's up?
B: I found a dollar!
A: That's great!

About very bad news, say, "I'm very sorry."

A: You look sad. What's wrong?
B: My father died.
A: I'm very sorry.

About bad news that is not very serious, say, "That's too bad."

A: You look sad. What's wrong?
B: My car isn't working.
A: That's too bad.
Practice

What would you say if a friend told you these things:

1. I'm getting married next month.
2. My brother died.
3. My mother is coming to visit.
4. I got a job yesterday.
5. I'm moving to New Jersey.
6. I lost my purse.
7. I lost my job.

Design a T-Shirt for your Classmate

Americans often wear T-shirts to tell others about themselves. Sometimes they have pictures of a place or words or sayings. Design a T-shirt in the space below to show the class something about your classmate. When you're finished show the T-shirt to the class and explain why you made this T-shirt for your classmate.
T-Shirt Drawing
Writing Activity

Write a story about the student whom you interviewed.

Life Timeline

To share information about yourself with the class, use a timeline to show the most important events of your life.

Here is an example of a timeline of Rosa's life.

I was born. My family moved to Ponce.
I finished high school.
I was married.
My daughter was born.
We moved to the U.S.

In the space below, write your own timeline. When you've finished, show your timeline to the class and tell them about the most important events in your life. (Remember to use past tense!)

Writing Activity

Choose one event from your timeline about which you would like to write. Close your eyes and try to remember the details of that day. How did you feel? What were you wearing? Who was there? Write about that event.

Talking about Our Families
Intermediate Activities

Reading Activity

Read the following story and discuss the questions below with your class.

My Children

I would be very upset if my children forget about their culture and their country. I love America because it is a nice country full of opportunities and freedom. I came here so my children would have a better education, jobs and everything else they wish to gain in their lives.

Cape Verde is a beautiful country. It's always hot. We don't have any snow. It's a country that I will always treasure. I had such a wonderful childhood and friends that I see once in a while who live here. We share those memories everytime we get together.

Maria Bento
(from Looking Forward, Looking Back)

Discussion Questions

1. How does Maria feel about living in the U.S.?
2. What is she afraid her children will forget about her country?
3. What would you like for your children to know about your country?
4. What kind of cultures, traditions, or manners are different in the U.S. than in your country? What would you like your children to know about these?
Listening Activity - Dictation

Your teacher will read you the story above twice. The first time, listen as she reads. The second time, she will read it more slowly. Write down the story you hear. Then check your writing with the story.

Talking about Family Pictures

Bring a picture of your family to class. Tell a partner about your family. Use the following questions to discuss the pictures. When your partner tells you about his or her family, write down the answers, so you can tell the class about the family.

1. Who is in the picture?
2. When was the picture taken?
3. Where was the picture taken?
4. How many brothers and sisters do you have?
5. Are you the oldest? youngest? middle child?
6. Do you have children? How many? What are the ages of your children?

Think of at least two more questions to ask your partner.

Writing Activity

Write a short story about the picture of your family you have brought to class. Tell about when the picture was taken, who was in the picture, and what the picture makes you think about.
Family Sayings

Here are some American sayings about families. Read them and guess what they mean. Ask your teacher or a fellow classmate about any sayings you don't understand.

Blood is thicker than water.

He's a chip off the old block.

The apple doesn't fall far from the tree.

Children should be seen, not heard.

Do as I say, not as I do.

If you want to know what kind of a wife you will have, look at your mother-in-law.

Discussion

1. Discuss some of the sayings above. Do you agree or disagree with their meanings?

2. What sayings do you have in your language about families? How are the meanings the same or different from these sayings?

Writing Activity

Choose one of the sayings above or another saying about families and write about what it means to you.

Listening Activity

Your teacher will tell you to do certain things which involve moving parts of your body. Listen carefully and follow his/her instructions. You will hear instructions like:

Touch your ______.
Raise your __________ (right/left, leg/arm)

Speaking Activity

Now, your teacher will ask you for the names of parts of the body. She or he will point to parts of the body and ask you, "What is this?" Say the name of the part of the body.

Listening and Drawing Activity

Your teacher will give you instructions to draw a very strange body! For example, she or he will say, "Draw a body with two heads, three arms, thirteen fingers, and four eyes." Listen carefully and draw exactly what she or he says. When you are finished, compare your drawings with the other students. Did you understand everything the teacher said?

Getting Sick

The words below are different illnesses. Do you know the meaning of all the words? Match these words with the pictures below.

toothache ____ backache ____ headache ____ cold ____ sore throat ____ fever ____
earache ____ stomach flu ____ laryngitis ____

Making an appointment with the doctor

Listen to your teacher read this conversation. Then practice it with a partner. Take turns being the doctor's secretary and Flor, the patient.

Doctor's secretary: Hello, Dr. Jones' office. May I help you?

Flor: Yes, I want to make an appointment.
Doctor's secretary: What kind of problem are you having?

Flor: I have a backache.

Doctor's secretary: How long have you had the backache?

Flor: For about five days.

Doctor's secretary: Are you taking any medicine for the pain?

Flor: Yes, I'm taking aspirin.

Doctor's secretary: Okay. Can you come in this Tuesday at 4:30?

Flor: Yes. Tuesday at 4:30 is good.

Doctor's secretary: Fine, we'll see you then.

Flor: Thank you. Good-bye.

Questions

After listening to the conversation above, answer these questions.

1. What kind of problem does Flor have?
2. How many days has she had this problem?
3. Is she taking any medicine?
4. When is her appointment with the doctor?
Talk it Over

Now make an appointment for yourself. Your teacher will play the doctor's secretary and give you an appointment time. Write the date, day and time in the space below.

Discussion

These are some common health problems. When is the last time you had one of these problems? What kind of medicine did you take when you had that problem? Tell your class or a partner about it.

- toothache
- backache
- headache
- stomachache
- cold
- sore throat
- fever
- laryngitis
- earache
- stomach flu
- hiccups

Reading Activity

People have many different medicines to use for health problems. Some of them are unusual. Read the story below to learn about some different medicines.

Please Pass the Bird Brains

Do you have a headache? Take an aspirin -- or eat bird brains.
Do you want beautiful skin? Use skin cream -- or eat pearls. Is your hair turning gray? Color your hair -- or eat black rice.
"Eat bird brains, pearls, and black rice?" some people ask.
"How strange!" But for many Chinese people, bird brains, pearls, and black rice are not strange things to eat; they are good things to eat. They are good medicines, too.

Many Chinese believe that food can be medicine. They believe that eating bird brains, for example, stops headaches, soup with ground pearls is good for the skin, and black rice stops hair from turning gray.

Food that people use for medicine is called medicinal food. The Chinese have eaten medicinal food and spices for centuries. Ginger, for example, is a common spice in Chinese cooking. Ginger gives food a nice flavor. The Chinese began to use ginger many years ago. They used ginger not because it tasted good. They used ginger because it was medicinal. Ginger, they thought, was good for the digestion. It also helped people who had colds. Pepper and garlic, too, were probably medicines a long time ago.

(From: More True Stories: A Beginning Reader, by Sandra Heyer)

Questions

1. Why do people eat bird brains?

2. What part of the body is helped by eating ginger?

3. Would you use these medicines? Why or why not?

4. How long have Chinese people used medicinal food?

Talk it Over

What remedies do old people in your country recommend for some of the health problems above? How do they use them? Work with a small group of three to four students to fill in the table below. Do you use these remedies now? Why or why not?
Act It Out

Work with a partner to write a commercial for one of these remedies and act it out for the class.

Idioms

Preview

Idioms are phrases that do not mean exactly what they say. For instance, "Let's hit the road" sounds like someone is taking a stick and hitting the street with it, but Americans use this phrase to mean, "Let's go." Here are some idioms which have to do with the body. Look over the list and see if you can guess what they mean.
• to twist someone's arm
• to pull someone's leg
• hold your tongue
• put your foot in your mouth
• pain in the neck

Understanding Idioms

Read the sentences below and try to figure out the meaning of these idioms.

1. I really didn't want to go to the party, but Bill twisted my arm, so I went with him.

2. First, Claudia told me that she lost the winning lottery ticket! Then, she laughed and said she was pulling my leg.

3. I was very angry at the meeting and I wanted to tell her, but I held my tongue.

4. She really put her foot in her mouth when she told him that she didn't like his suit.

5. I don't like when Susan comes to visit. She's such a pain in the neck!

Discussion

1. "To twist someone's arm" means to convince someone to do something they don't want to do. What idioms do you have in your language which have the same meaning?
2. "To pull someone's leg" means to play a joke on someone. What idioms do you have in your language which have the same meaning?

3. "To hold your tongue" means not to say something when you're angry or upset. What idioms do you have in your language which have the same meaning?

4. "To put your foot in your mouth" means to say something accidentally which hurts someone else's feelings. What idioms do you have in your language which have the same meaning?

5. "A pain in the neck" means someone who is irritating or bothersome. What idioms do you have in your language which have the same meaning?

Talk it Over

Get up from your seat. Talk to your classmates and ask them the questions below. When someone says "yes", write his or her name in the blank.

Find someone who:

has a friend who twists his/her arm sometimes.

likes to pull people's legs.

holds his or her tongue when angry.

put his/her foot in his/her mouth last week.

has a friend who is sometimes a pain in the neck.

Are you wearing ________ (jeans/socks/sandals...) today?

Are you wearing ________ (yellow/blue/green) ________
(jeans/socks/sandals....) today?

Conversation Circle

Sit in a circle. Ask the student on your right, "What are you wearing today?" After he or she answers, he or she asks the person on the right, "What are you wearing today?" Continue around the circle.

Talk it Over

Look at the other students in your classroom. Write three sentences about what one person is wearing. (Example: She/he is wearing brown shoes.) Then read your sentences without telling the name of the student. Can your classmates guess the name of the student?

Writing

Work with a partner. Look through magazines to find a picture of a famous person. Use some of the words from this chapter to describe what they are wearing and what they look like.
Writing Activity

What do you like? What don't you like?

In the spaces below draw 1) something you like and 2) something you don't like.

I like _____________.

I don't like _____________.

Now write about things you like and don't like. Your teacher will ask you questions about what you like.

1a. I like to eat _____________.
1b. I don't like to eat _____________.

2a. A sport I like to watch is _____________.
2b. A sport I don't like to watch is _____________.

3a. The color I like is _____________.
3b. The color I don't like is _____________.

4a. I like to wear _____________.
4b. I don't like to wear _____________.
Conversation Circle

Sit in a circle. Choose a topic to talk about. Your topic might be food, clothing, or hobbies. If you choose food, your teacher will say to you, "I don't like spinach, but I like oranges. Do you like oranges?" You will answer, "I don't like oranges, but I like apples." You will ask the person on your right, "Do you like apples?" Continue around the circle.

Roleplay - Talk Show

Work with one other student. Choose one person you would like to interview. Imagine that you have the opportunity to interview this person on a talk show. Write ten questions you would like to ask this person. Act out the interview with one person being the talk show host and the other being the famous person.

Writing Activity

A talk show host's job is to ask questions which will be interesting to the audience. Many well-known people, however, think that they should be able to maintain their private lives even though they are famous. Write about whether you think there are some questions a famous person should not be asked. Explain your answer. You may want to use an example from a famous person's life to illustrate your answer.

Using English Outside the Classroom - Survey

Take a survey by asking five Americans a question. Bring the answers back to class and compare them with the group. Here are some possible survey questions. Use one of these questions or create your own.

1. If you could ask the president any question, what would you ask him?
2. If you could ask one question of any person, living or dead, what question would you ask?

Asking For Directions

Claudio is lost and needs directions to the supermarket. First listen to your teacher say this dialogue. Then practice the dialogue with your teacher or another student.

Claudio: Excuse me, where is the supermarket?

Man: It's on 43rd and Walnut.

Claudio: 43rd and Walnut?

Man: That's right.

Claudio: How do I get there from here?

Man: Go straight ahead for two blocks and turn right. That's 43rd St. Turn left on 43rd St. and go three blocks. The supermarket is on your right side.

Claudio: Let's see, I go straight for two blocks. Turn right and go three blocks, right?

Man: That's right. The supermarket is across from the post office.

Claudio: Thanks.

Questions

1. Where is Claudio going?

2. What do you think he is going to buy?

40
3. Where is the supermarket?

4. What is across from the supermarket?

Listening Activity

Following a Map

Your teacher will give you directions to a building on a map of your area. He or she will not give you the number of the building, so you will have to listen carefully and follow the directions.

Talk It Over

Practice

Work with a partner. Draw a simple map. Put buildings numbered 1-10 on the map. Give him or her directions to one of the numbered buildings on the map, but don't say the number of the building! Your partner will follow your directions. When you have finished, check your partner's work. Did he or she find the correct building? Next, change roles and your partner will give you directions to a place on the map.

Act It Out

Practice asking for directions to one of the places in Word Power above. Your teacher will give you directions. Repeat the directions to make sure you understand.

   b. The subway station is behind the restaurant and the movie theater.

8. a. Bear right on 40th St.
   b. Bear right on 14th St.
Using English Outside the Classroom

Try one of the activities below to practice your skills at asking and giving directions.

1. Write directions to a place in your neighborhood. Make sure that the directions are clearly written and easy to understand, but don't write the place you are directing the person. Exchange directions with a classmate. For homework, follow the directions. When you return to the next class, report back on where you went.

2. Practice asking directions from Americans on the street. Make a list of places in your neighborhood to which you may need directions. For homework, ask directions to one of these places. Did you understand everything the person said? If there were words you didn't understand, ask your teacher.

Reading Activity - Issues in the Neighborhood

Those Who Don't

Those who don't know any better come into our neighborhood scared. They think we're dangerous. They think we will attack them with shiny knives. They are stupid people who are lost and got here by mistake.

But we aren't afraid. We know the guy with the crooked eye is Dave the Baby's brother, and the tall one next to him in the straw brim, that's Rosa's Eddie V. and the big one that looks like a dumb grown man, ..'s Fat Boy, though he's not fat anymore or a boy.

All brown all around, we are safe. But watch us drive into a neighborhood of another color and our knees go shakity-shake and our car windows get rolled up tight and our eyes look straight. Yeah. That is how it goes and goes.

Sandra Cisneros' The House on Mango Street
Discussion Questions

1. What do "Those Who Don't" think about the author's neighborhood?

2. How does the author feel about her own neighborhood? What sentences tell you how she feels about it?

3. What does the author mean when she says, "our knees go shakity-shake"?

4. How do you think people from other neighborhoods feel when they enter your neighborhood?

5. How do you feel when you go into other neighborhoods in your city?

Talk it Over

Think about your neighborhood here in the U.S. and your neighborhood in your country. Work with a group of 3-4 students. One person in the group should be the secretary who will write the groups' responses. Take a large sheet of paper and divide it into two columns. Label one column, "Neighborhood in the U.S." and label the other "Neighborhoods in Our Countries". List all the words you can think of to describe the two neighborhoods. When all the groups are finished, post the sheets up on the wall. Are there any words you don't know? Ask your teacher or another student about them. Talk about your old neighborhood and your neighborhood in the U.S. When you are finished, discuss these questions:

1. What do you most like about your neighborhood in the U.S.?

2. What do you most miss about your neighborhood in your country?
3. Did most of the people in your class live in an urban (city) or rural (country) neighborhood in their country?

4. How are the lists about the neighborhood in the U.S. and in your countries different?

5. What concerns or problems did you have in your old neighborhood?

6. What concerns or problems do you have now in your neighborhood?

Writing Activity

Write about the differences between your neighborhood in the U.S. and in your country. Use some of the words from the word lists in the activity above. Describe the neighborhoods so that the reader can see, hear, smell, and feel what they are like.

Using English Outside the Classroom - Survey

To find out more about your neighborhood and practice your English skills, take a survey of the people in your neighborhood. Ask five Americans these questions, "What do you think is the best thing about our neighborhood?" and "What do you think is the biggest problem in our neighborhood?" Write down their answers and share them with the class.

Talk It Over

Work with a small group of three to four students. Look at the list of jobs above. Discuss with your group the best and worst jobs on the list. Then, rank the jobs from 1 to 10 (1= best and 10=worst). The following sentences may help you in talking with your group:

The best job is ______, because ______ (It pays well/ It's interesting/ It's easy work).

The worst job is ______, because ______ (It doesn't pay well/ It's boring/ It's dangerous work).

1. ____________ 6. ____________
2. ____________ 7. ____________
3. ____________ 8. ____________
4. ____________ 9. ____________
5. ____________ 10. ____________

Act It Out

Act out one of the jobs on the list above for the class. Don't tell them which job you are acting out. The class will guess both what you are doing and the name of the job. For instance, someone will say, "She's pouring and serving drinks. She's a bartender."

This list of actions below will help you to say what the person is doing.
She/he is:

- serving food.
- teaching students.
- cooking food.
- cutting and styling hair.
- planting seeds.
- baking bread.
- typing letters and answering the phone.
- directing traffic and giving tickets.
- talking to patients and giving injections (shots).

Dialogue - What Do You Do?

Augusto meets Peter at a party. After they introduce themselves, Augusto asks about Peter's job. Listen carefully as your teacher reads the conversation below. Then work with a partner to read the dialogue.

Augusto: What do you do?
Peter: I'm a cook.
Augusto: Oh, where do you work?
Peter: At Bob's Restaurant.
Augusto: Where is it?
Peter: It's at the Gallery at 11th and Market.
Augusto: Is your job full-time or part-time?
Peter: It's full-time. I work from 10:00 to 6:00 Tuesday through Saturday.
Augusto: How long have you worked there?
Peter: For about three years.
Augusto: Three years! You must like it!
Peter: Well, it's a job. It's okay. The people are nice and the boss is fair, but it doesn't pay very well and it's kind of boring sometimes.

Talk It Over

Talk with another classmate about your choice of jobs. Tell him or her what jobs you chose and why.

Ranking Jobs

What is most important to you in choosing a job? Choose the five things that are most important to you. Rank them in order from 1 to 5. (1= most important, 5= least important) When you have finished, compare your answers with a partner.
To make a lot of money.
To have a clean job where you can wear nice clothes.
To work with people.
To work good hours.
To have a safe job.
To have respect from other people.
To have a job which interests you.
To get benefits (insurance, paid holidays, sick days, etc.).

Writing Activity
Write about the best or worst job you have ever had. What did you do? When? What was good or bad about that job?

Job Interviews
Here are some of the most common questions employers ask on a job interview. Read over the list. Ask your teacher or a classmate about any questions you don't understand. Then think about how you would answer each of these questions. Work with a partner or a small group to write answers to each of these questions.

1. What are your qualifications for this position? (Why should we hire you?)

2. What are your strengths? What are your weaknesses.

3. Tell me about yourself.

4. Why are you interested in this position? Why do you want this job?

5. What kind of experience do you have in this type of job?
6. What does not appeal to you about this job?

7. Describe your last job. What were your responsibilities?

9. Do you want to work full-time or part-time?

10. Do you have a car? How will you get to work?

11. Where do you hope to be five years from now?

Dos and Don'ts in a Job Interview

Read over the list below. Which of them should you do in a job interview? Which should you not do? Write "yes" next to the things you should do and "no" next to the things you should not do. Compare your answers with the rest of your class. Do you agree on all points?

For homework, interview an American who has a job you might like. Ask them which of these things they would or would not do on an interview.

Look at the interviewer. ______

Chew gum. ______

Wear big earrings and necklaces. ______

Wear a suit and tie (men) or a dress (women). ______

Dress neatly. ______
Come to the interview a few minutes early.

Give long answers.

Give short "yes" or "no" answers.

Smoke.

Give personal information about your family.

Answer a question even if you don't understand it.

Ask about how much the job pays early in the interview.

Act It Out
Roleplay a Job Interview

Using English Outside the Classroom
Informational Interviews

Before actually going on a job interview, it's a good idea to talk to someone who has the job you want. You can get more information on the job, find out about the advantages and disadvantages, and practice your English skills. Read over the questions below. If there are any questions you don't understand, ask your teacher. What other questions do you have about the job? Write these questions in the blanks provided. Make a list of two people you know who have a job about which you would like to get more information. Call them and ask if you can talk with them for fifteen minutes about their job. Ask them the following questions.
1. What responsibilities do you have in this job?
2. What kind of experience or education do you need?
3. What do you like about this job?
4. What do you dislike about this job?
5. What are possibilities for advancement? (What kind of promotions can I get from this job?)
6. What is the salary range for this job? (Approximately how much does this job pay?)
7. Does this job involve night or weekend work?
8. Do you know anyone I could speak with to get more information about this job?

Additional Questions:

9. __________________________________________________________

10. __________________________________________________________

Setting Goals

Now that you've gotten more information about jobs, it's time to think about your goals. The chart below asks you to think about your long term goal (a goal you would like to achieve in five years) and your short term goal (a goal you would like to achieve this year or semester). After you have completed these sections, write down the skills you need to meet your short-term goal. For example, you may need improved English skills or further training in a particular area to achieve the goals you've set. Once you have written the skills you need, think about where you can get more information about meeting your goal. For instance if you need to continue your education, you might get more information at a community college or a program which prepares students for the GED. If you want job training, you may find more information at a local Private Industry Council.

When you've finished filling in the chart below, talk with a partner about your goals.

Intermediate Grammar Activities

"Both of" or "Neither of"

When comparing two people or things, both of is used with affirmative ideas and neither of is used with negative ideas. A plural verb follows both of. A singular verb usually follows neither of, but a plural verb is also possible.

Example:

David is shy. I'm shy.
Both of us are shy.

Tina isn't rich. I'm not rich.
Neither of us is (or are) rich.

A. Compare these people using both of or neither of.

1. Luciano Pavarotti likes to sing. Laura likes to sing.

2. Olympic swimmers swim well. I swim well.

3. The pope is religious. Gloria is religious.

4. Lydia doesn't like sports. John doesn't like sports.
5. Michael Jordan is tall. Carlos is tall.

8. Mitsuo doesn't smoke. Peter doesn't smoke.
