This competency-based secondary learning guide on balancing work and family is part of a series that are adaptations of guides developed for adult consumer and homemaking education programs. The guides provide students with experiences that help them learn to do the following: make decisions; use creative approaches to solve problems; establish personal goals; communicate effectively; and apply management skills to situations faced as an individual, family member, student, and worker. Each learning guide includes the following sections: a general introduction and guidelines for using the material; a checklist for users for advance planning; introduction to the guide; specified competencies, with student outcomes/evaluations, definitions, key ideas, teacher strategies/methods, suggested student activities, sample assessments, and supplementary resources. Five competencies are addressed: identify trends that influence work and family lifestyle choices; define work and family obligations (responsibilities); describe ways work and family affect each other; analyze personal situation to determine areas of needed improvement; and plan management strategies to increase work/school satisfaction and family satisfaction. Thirty-two supplements contain information and activity sheets on the following: attitudes and values, employer supports and benefits, role expectations, stress, the superwoman myth, analyzing priorities, survival tips, short- and long-term goals, and family budget. A bibliography contains 39 items. (YLB)

Competency One: Identify trends that influence work and family lifestyle choices.

Competency Two: Define work and family obligations (responsibilities).

Competency Three: Describe ways work and family affect each other.

Competency Four: Analyze personal situation to determine areas of needed improvement.

Competency Five: Plan management strategies to increase work/school satisfaction and family satisfaction.
General Guidelines

The terms “teacher” and “student” are used throughout to describe the instructor and participants.

STRATEGIES (for teachers) and ACTIVITIES (for students) as stated in the guide are not always parallel to the numbering system.

Teachers need to carry out preassessment activities to determine level of student competency. Previous work or educational experiences may be such that the teacher will choose not to do some of the competencies.

Key to Symbols – The following symbols are used throughout the guides to designate enhancement activities:

- related basic skills, giving particular attention to language arts and mathematics
- related decision-making and problem-solving skills, including the application and transferability of these skills to personal, family, and work responsibilities to be demonstrated
- enrichment activities according to student abilities and experiences
- interrelationship of concepts to personal, family, and work
- influence of technology on the subject matter, application of knowledge, and related work
- pre- and/or posttest assessment activities

Checklist for Users

Before addressing any of the competencies, the teacher should check in advance to see what materials or preparations are needed.

Competency #1 – Identify trends that influence work and family lifestyle choices.

_____ Duplicate Supplement 2, “Topic Tumblers.”
_____ Duplicate Supplement 3, “What Do You Think?”
_____ Invite an employer in to discuss trends of employers to provide support services and benefits.
_____ Clip news articles related to trends or statistics regarding work and family and use with Supplement 4 and Activity 5.

Competency #2 – Define work and family obligations (responsibilities).

_____ Duplicate Supplement 6, “Attitude Inventory—Home and Work Role Expectations.”
Duplicate Supplement 8, “Roles—Past,” and 8A, “My Roles Throughout the Life Cycle.” The teacher may generate a varied list of roles for input into discussion.

Collect pictures from magazines and print media to use for a collage illustrating stereotyping of male and female roles.

Be prepared to give examples of TV shows and commercials that may send messages as to sex-role activities and responsibilities for Activity 6.

Activity 7 calls for pictures depicting various roles. The teacher may be prepared in case students are not.

For Activity 8, collect articles from newspapers regarding some nontraditional roles that notable men and women are fulfilling.

Activity 11 might require paper or a chalkboard to list examples of work/school responsibilities and family responsibilities.

Competency #3 — Describe ways work and family affect each other.

Duplicate Supplement 9, “Work and Family Inventory,” as needed.

The teacher will need two containers for Activity 3 with slips of paper for listing demands and influences.

Duplicate Supplement 10, “Ways Work and Family Affect Each Other.”

Duplicate Supplement 11, “Work and Family Game.”

Duplicate Supplement 12, “Individual Stress Producers,” as needed.

Prepare transparency for Supplement 13, “Six Ways To Overcome the Superwoman Myth.”

Competency #4 - Analyze personal situation to determine areas of needed improvement.

Prepare an overhead for Supplement 16, “Analyzing My Work-Family Balance,” and also duplicate for students. The teacher could use examples as follow:

ME – sports nut gardener writer
book lover

WE – mother son/daughter wife
housekeeper

THEY – employee manager church member club treasurer

Duplicate Supplement 17, “Analyzing Priorities.”
____Duplicate Supplement 18, “Getting a Handle on Stress and Distress.”

____Invite an employer or panel in to discuss job expectations and demand and effects on family and vice versa.

Competency #5 – Plan management strategies to increase work/school satisfaction and family satisfaction.

____Duplicate Supplement 20, “Spillover,” as needed.

____Duplicate Supplements 22 and 23, “Case Studies.”

____Duplicate Supplement 24, “Life Events.”

____Duplicate Supplement 26, “Tips To Relieve or Reduce Stress.”

____Duplicate Supplement 27, “Techniques for Reducing Stress at Work/School.”

____Determine if any of Supplements 29 through 32 are appropriate for students to select and work on individually.
Introduction

Work and family life in America is changing rapidly. No longer are work and family two separate areas of life. One seemingly always has an effect on the other in terms of time, duties, benefits, and responsibilities. The competing demands of work and family can be stressful and damaging for both sexes.

In order for people to be prepared for the future, it is important to be aware of some of the ways our society is changing related to work and family life and the resulting complexities in balancing work and family.

One of the most significant factors affecting families in our society today is the number of women entering the workforce. Families need the income from women's earnings. The economy needs the labor of women workers. Women will continue to have high-level participation in the workforce. Projections are that by the mid-1990s, half of the workforce will be female (Shreve, 1987).

The dramatic increase of women in the workforce has resulted in the need to find a more satisfactory balance between work and family responsibilities. This balancing act has been particularly difficult for women because, in general, their family roles have changed very little; women who work outside the home still assume the major proportion of home and family responsibilities (Couch, 1989). Since both men and women will continue to work outside the home, both must be involved in work and home responsibilities (Burge, 1989).

Balancing work and family means using time and energy to the best advantage so that you can be the best for yourself, your family, and your work. Balancing work and family can enable one to enjoy time at home and enrich family life, be more productive and increase job satisfaction, and improve mental health and one's outlook on life.

Although the composition of the workforce and family structures have changed rapidly, attitudes and institutions have been slower to evolve. Many workplace rules and practices remain based on a male, single-earner workforce. Many families still act under role sharing assumptions based on the presence of full-time homemakers. The conflict between these assumptions and reality necessitates finding better ways to balance home and career. The elimination of gender-biased roles in the workplace and the home can benefit individuals and society. Gender equity cannot be achieved until society recognizes the importance of work and family roles for both men and women.

Researchers have found that satisfaction with home life has a positive effect on job satisfaction and job satisfaction has a positive effect on home satisfaction (Burge, 1989).
Identify Trends that Influence Work and Family Lifestyle Choices.

Student Outcomes
- Recognize the need for balancing work and family.
- Become aware of one's attitudes and values toward work and family issues.
- Examine current trends related to work life and family life.
- Determine the effects trends may have on family lifestyles and choices.

Key Ideas

Work and family is not a female issue. Work and family concerns affect both sexes. Both males and females have a tough time balancing demands of home with those of a job.

Lifestyles today generally include work and family roles/responsibilities.

Changes in the family and in the workforce have an impact on lifestyle.

Some trends that will influence family and work life are as follows:

Family Trends
- Fewer conform to the traditional model where father is breadwinner.
- Families today are more diverse and less stable.
- Family resources are being reduced.
- More people are living in nontraditional families.
- The average size of the family has decreased.
- There are more single-parent families.
- There is an increase in the number of elderly people.
- More women are working.
- The need for elder care will increase.

Lifestyle Trends
- A large portion of single-parent families are headed by women; these families tend to be poor.
- As women make up most of the new entrants into the workforce, half of the mothers with children under six will work and most children will see both parents off to work each day (if they live with both parents).
- With the growing workforce participation of women with young children, a growing number of parents are turning to organized child care to enable them to work.

Work Trends
- Employers are experiencing some of the implications of change in family diversity.
- Family demands are impacting employers as related to child and elder care and flexible work hours.
- Women may see realistic policies for leaves, more flexible scheduling, benefits of equal pay, financial welfare, and child care.
Teacher Strategies/Methods

1. Introduce this competency by having students complete Supplement 1, "Survey on Balancing Work and Family." This can help the teacher determine or assess specific interest in topics. This information can also be useful for individual discussion with students when analyzing personal situations (Competency 4) and planning strategies (Competency 5).

2. Introduce the topic of working parents by using Supplement 2, "Topic Tumblers." Divide into groups and inform students they are to arrive at a consensus. Discuss how these topics affect work and family concerns.

3. Clarify with students the meaning of the term “lifestyle” and give appropriate examples. Emphasize that changes in workforce and family affect lifestyle. Point out that the structure of the family is shifting, with one-parent households the fastest growing structure. (Reasons include divorce rates and delayed ages for marriage.) The teacher might ask students how new family structures are causing challenges to families in balancing responsibilities as workers and as parents. Examples of challenges include time management, shared responsibilities, prioritizing, and stress.

4. Supplement 3, “What Do You Think?” can be used as an exercise to assess students’ current attitudes and values related to work and family issues. Emphasize there are no right or wrong answers. Students should be helped to see that choices contribute to the lifestyle a person could seek. Select any of the items and discuss how that choice may determine lifestyle.

5. Use Supplement 4, “Trends,” as a transparency to discuss the impact of those trends. (See Activity 5.) Some questions to ask are as follows:
   - What effect will women’s employment have on the future?
   - What are the advantages or disadvantages of working at home?

6. Because the increase of women working is such a major trend, the teacher might discuss how this affects families. Sample answers are fewer children; greater affluence; increased self-care by children; shared household responsibilities; and more interaction with grandparents.

7. Ask students what effect trends (listed in Key Ideas or from Supplement 4) could have on the following:
   - one’s career choice
   - economic status
   - child care expenses/options
   - responsibilities or scheduling of activities (single-vs. two-parent household)
   - time as relates to self, spouse, family, leisure, and tasks.

8. Recognizing that employers are becoming aware of the strains on working families, the teacher could discuss increasing trends of some employers to provide support services and benefits to employees such as parental leave, sick leave, retirement, and day care. If appropriate for the group, Supplement 5, “Employer Supports and Benefits Survey,” could be used to gather information. Discuss the effect these benefits may have on family lifestyles and choices.
An alternate activity would be to have an employer come in as a guest speaker to discuss support services and benefits available.

Suggested Student Activities

2. Working in groups, react to and arrive at a consensus for Supplement 2, “Topic Tumblers.” Share results and discuss points of concern.

3. Complete Supplement 3, “What Do You Think?” Discuss the pros and cons of each issue, why the selection was made, or what effect the choice could have on future lifestyles.

4. Select current or recent TV shows such as “Grace Under Fire,” “The Cosby Show,” “Family Ties,” “Who’s the Boss?” and “Growing Pains.” Identify the cast of characters, the family type, careers represented, and living environment. Then reflect on reruns of past shows such as the “Dick Van Dyke Show,” “Leave it to Beaver,” or “The Waltons.” Discuss how shows have changed to reflect changes in values and structures in the family today.

5. Bring in trends or statistics regarding work and family found in print or media. Discuss why trends are occurring and how these may affect the future. React to and/or add to those in Supplement 4.

6. Using any three lifestyles (e.g., single person, single parent, dual career couple with no children), discuss what decisions would be involved in choosing that lifestyle. (For example: a single person might choose to spend time on an education vs. family.)

7. Volunteer to check several employers or businesses to determine types of benefits provided to employees. Compile a list of benefits and discuss the effect these could have on work, family life, and lifestyle choices. For example, having flexible hours or child care support can alleviate conflict related to family roles or stress related to financial concerns. Supplement 5, “Employer Supports and Benefits Survey,” may be used as a checklist of benefits.
Sample Assessments

Knowledge

1. List three trends that are affecting work and family.

2. Select two family type structures. Contrast how balancing responsibilities as worker and/or parent differ.

Application

1. Select any item from Supplement 3, “What Do You Think?,” and describe how that choice may determine or affect lifestyle.

2. Investigate various supports and benefits available in community businesses or organizations.

Topic Tumblers

Working Parents

DIRECTIONS: Rank according to importance through consensus.

3 = Strongly Agree  2 = Agree  1 = Disagree  0 = Doesn't Apply

____ A. Working fathers are just as likely to have family/work conflicts as working mothers.

____ B. A man's primary responsibility to his family is to be the breadwinner.

____ C. The partner who earns the most has the right to be the most tired at the end of the day.

____ D. When a wife/mother joins the workforce, she is the only family member that has to shift or change roles.

____ E. When a child is sick, the mother should take off from work.

____ F. Children benefit from living in a two-career family.
What Do You Think?

DIRECTIONS: Examine your attitudes and values toward work and family issues in your lifestyle. Complete this exercise by placing a check in the appropriate blank for each statement.

Trends

Increased involvement in the number of women and mothers of young children in the labor market.

Families are getting smaller.

Growth of nontraditional families:
  single parents, grandparents, or other relatives raising someone else's children.

Changing values:
  toward education (illiteracy), the impact of television, the effect of both parents working

Growth of occupations in the service sector.

People are recognizing that work and family life affect each other.

Increase in proportion of the population over 65.

Employment and family activities may share the same space.
Employer Supports and Benefits Survey

DIRECTIONS: Contact the personnel manager or employer of a business. Ask if they have time to answer some questions regarding the types of benefits they offer to their employees.

List any benefit provided to employees related to the following:

Insurance:

Paid vacation:

Sick leave:

Parental leave:

Holidays:

Flexible work hours and schedules:

Job sharing:

Child care options:

Elder care options:

Employee assistance programs:

Savings and retirement options:

Please briefly discuss any other form of assistance to employees which helps them balance their work and home life.

Define Work and Family Obligations (Responsibilities).

Student Outcomes

- Determine factors that influence or contribute to work and family responsibilities.
- Describe work and family responsibilities individuals may assume at various times in the life cycle.
- Develop awareness of one’s personal work and family responsibilities.

Key Ideas

Even though people are away from home because of work, they are also full-time parent(s) or family member(s). People are fulfilling more than one role at a time. People have responsibilities to work and to personal/family life throughout the life cycles (e.g., couples with no children, beginning family, expanding family, launching family, empty nest, families with aging members).

The relative balance of work/family responsibilities varies with different stages of the life cycle.

How people view home and work responsibilities has been influenced by role models, mass media, and individual preferences.

The following two factors influence how people assume responsibilities in roles:

1. The demands, expectations, responsibilities, and pressures that other people impose on one in any given role.
2. One’s perceptions of what ought to be done to fulfill that role.

These two factors together influence our behavior.

The type of family structure (e.g., single-parent, two-parent, parents with children, extended families) affects the type and amount of responsibilities one may assume.
Teacher Strategies/Methods

1. Discuss some of the responsibilities persons may assume in home, child care, work, and career roles. Stress that regardless of the role one assumes, one is still a parent, or spouse, or family member. Have students do Activity 1, “Who Am I?”

2. The teacher may need to help students understand that choices will influence lifestyles. For example, some work/career goals are supportive of parenting and others are not. Recognition should be made that the parent with preschool and school-age children will be most affected by work. For example, a mother might decide to stay home from work with a sick child.

3. The teacher could ask the question, “Where do we receive our messages about our roles?” (See Key Ideas.)

4. Have students complete the inventory in Supplement 6, “Attitude Inventory—Home and Work Role Expectations,” to examine their attitudes and personal role expectations. After completing the inventory, discuss questions listed. Have students select any of the expectations. Discuss factors which may have influenced those expectations.

5. Discuss what effect career choices, marital status, income, and time would have on work and family responsibilities.

6. Discuss or list particular difficulties women face in the workforce (i.e., availability of child care or parental leave). Discuss how these relate to balancing home and family responsibilities.

7. Men are struggling but are increasingly sharing family responsibilities. Ask students to discuss advantages and significances of men sharing or assuming more home responsibilities. Include examples of how both sexes are currently assuming nontraditional responsibilities at work and home.

8. After defining life cycles, the teacher might ask students how work and family responsibilities would differ at various times in the life cycle. (See Activity 12 for use of Supplement 8A, “My Roles Throughout the Life Cycle.”) Discuss how roles vary in the life cycle and how they affect responsibilities. (For example, those with young children may have greater family-related responsibilities.) Ask questions such as “What stage would be most different?” “Why is it important to understand the changes that take place throughout the family life cycle?”
Suggested Student Activities

1. Identify and list roles the students are currently playing. This can be done by a "round robin" response answering the question "Who am I?"

2. Discuss "men's work" (bringing home the bacon) and "women's work" (cooking it). Discuss how sex-role stereotyping or ideas about male-female responsibilities develop.

3. Collect and display pictures from magazines and print media that illustrate the stereotyping of male and female roles.

4. Brainstorm where one receives messages as to work and family roles and responsibilities. Answers could include family sources, toys, and activities. Children's storybooks might be examined. Discuss stereotyping of occupations.

5. Complete Supplement 6, "Attitude Inventory—Home and Work Role Expectations." Discuss questions.

6. Report on TV shows and commercials that may send messages as to sex-role activities and responsibilities. (For example, the TV program "Home Improvement."

7. Collect or provide magazine pictures to depict various roles (include a variety of ages). Examples could include spouse, parent, child, family member, employee, employer, friend, citizen, or volunteer. Have students determine which roles are typically associated with work and which with family.

8. Bring in pictures or articles that show what notable men and women are doing in nontraditional roles with work and family.

9. Complete Supplement 7, "Tasks and Who Performs Them." Analyze the areas of responsibility and determine who is performing tasks. Discuss possible ways to share or balance if the responsibilities seem to be uneven.

10. Identify changes the students have observed in their lifetimes regarding home and work life responsibilities.

11. Make a list showing examples of work responsibilities and examples of family responsibilities the students may have. Then have each student check three personal responsibilities that he/she assumes.

12. Use Supplement 8, "Roles—Past," and 8A, "My Roles Throughout the Life Cycle," to list roles and/or responsibilities at various ages. Supplement 8 can be used for past roles and responsibilities; 8A for future. Examples could be worker, college student, parent, or homemaker full-time.
Sample Assessments

Knowledge

1. List factors that influence decisions about roles/responsibilities one assumes as parent, spouse, and/or family member.

2. List changes you have observed in your lifetime regarding home and work life responsibilities.

Application

1. Interview parents or other adults to determine how decisions are/were made in roles/responsibilities assumed.

2. Determine which life role you are in now (Supplement 8A). How does it differ from your parent or grandparent? (An interview may be necessary.)

Describe Ways Work and Family Affect Each Other.

Student Outcomes

- Identify areas of conflict between work and family life.
- Identify factors associated with work that affect the family.
- Identify factors associated with family that affect work.

Key Ideas

Family customs, traditions, and attitudes shape a family member's beliefs and behaviors both at home and at work (or school).

Factors associated with work/school that affect family include work hours, relationships, employer support, travel, health and safety, and income.

Factors associated with family that could affect work include child care, family members, health, household tasks, family relationships and support, leisure time, and care for aging parents.

Responsibilities and factors associated with work impact relationships and duties in the family and vice versa. For some, work and family may remain independent of each other but for others, demands of the job "spill over" into family life; or happiness or discontent at home affects feelings at work. Guilt, fatigue, and overload occur when roles and responsibilities are not clear.

When there's a conflict between the demands of work and family, everyone can feel stress. When combining work and family, areas of conflict are often related to time, money, and personal concerns. People may experience feelings of guilt, stress, and lowered self-esteem (due to not feeling satisfied). Parent(s) may worry about quality child care. Individuals need to make adjustments to keep their lives in balance and reduce work and family conflicts. The family is more likely to bear the brunt of work/family conflict.

Simple things in one's everyday life such as time management, goal setting, one's job, and one's family affect the way one lives. Balance can help one get the most out of life and is good for families and employers. Balance can reduce stress and make life more satisfying.

Teacher Strategies/Methods

1. Supplement 9, "Work and Family Inventory," can be used to assess students' perceptions of important influences on balancing work and family. After students have checked how important each factor is, the teacher might ask for examples of how these may impact work and/or family. For example: Child care availability is a big issue today in work and family. Also, the number and ages of children could impact one's ability to move ahead in a career, particularly if the demands were for time or travel. Another example would be job demands and expectations. People who expect to get ahead in their careers or jobs may have to spend less time with their families.

2. Prepare for the "Work and Family Game," Supplement 11, by having two containers, one with demands listed on slips of paper and the other container with influences on family on slips of paper. See Activity 3 for students' instructions.

3. Have students summarize their areas of stress by using Supplement 12, "Individual Stress Producers." Discuss how any of the areas may cause conflicts in work and family life.

Suggested Student Activities

1. Complete the "Work and Family Inventory" (Supplement 9). As a group, determine which items were marked most frequently as very important. Discuss the issues involved in each statement.

2. Determine if each statement in Supplement 10, "Ways Work and Family Affect Each Other," is a work factor affecting family or vice versa. Discuss how each would impact work or family.

3. Play the "Work and Family Game" (Supplement 11). Two containers should be prepared—one containing slips of paper with demands written on them and the other container with slips of paper with influences written on them. Draw a demand and then an influence and describe a logical way in which the work demand can affect family life positively and negatively. Influence slips are put back in the container. (Points can be given if students play in teams.) An alternate approach would be to use Supplement 11 as a handout and discuss each demand and the way it influences family.

4. Collect illustrations or cartoons depicting how work affects family or vice versa. An example might be a happy parent with a paycheck or an exhausted parent after a day's work.

5. Complete Supplement 12, "Individual Stress Producers." Determine the areas that seem to be of most concern.

6. React to the term "superwoman myth." Discuss the implications. Discuss ways to overcome this problem. Discuss Supplement 13, "Six Ways To Overcome the Superwoman Myth."
Sample Assessments

Knowledge

1. List two areas of conflict between work and family. How can these be reduced?

2. Give a positive and a negative influence of work on family and vice versa.

Application

Using the family or work influences identified on Supplement 9, "Work and Family Inventory," interview some parents and/or workers to determine how important each is.
Work and Family Inventory

Indicate how important you consider each item in affecting the balance of work and family.

Ways Work and Family Affect Each Other

DIRECTIONS: Various ways work and family affect each other are listed below. Choose one or more of the statements and indicate if it is a work factor that affects family or a family factor that affects work.

Finding quality child care

Having time for self or to be with other family members

Managing household tasks

Salary too low, benefits not enough

Number of hours worked per day/week

Disagreement with supervisor

Travel out of town

Disagreement with family member(s)

Separation and divorce

Death of a family member

Limited partner support

New personal relationship

Poor health of family member(s) or self

Physical demands of work (toxic chemicals, strenuous tasks)

Caring for aging parents

Six Ways To Overcome the Superwoman Myth

1. Accept the fact that you can't have it all/you can't do it all.

2. Get help—delegate. Ask who else could do this, can I hire some help, can I choose not to do it at all?

3. Choose to use the life-saving word "NO."

4. Rebuild your support systems (pay attention to "used to..." and "I miss...").

5. Teach: Be a role model of balance to sons as well as daughters.

6. Call time-out: Take time to play.
Analyze Personal Situation To Determine Areas of Needed Improvement.

- Identify personal areas of stress related to work and family lifestyle.
- Determine personal work and family priorities.

Key Ideas

If too little attention is given to any aspect of one's life (e.g., personal needs, family responsibilities, work responsibilities), life can become "out of balance," which in turn can effect physical well-being, family relationships, self-esteem, and lower work productivity.

A person's life can also become out of balance from the demands, expectations, responsibilities, and pressures that others impose on him/her and by one's own perceptions of what an individual thinks he/she should be doing to perform his/her role. Most people find that there are times of imbalance related to the family life cycle, their job/career development, or other factors.

In order to have balance, one must decide upon goals and set priorities. To do this, one must determine what is important for self and family and build life around that.

Analyzing and setting priorities is helpful in determining what is important in life and the amount of time to devote to any priority or activity.

Each person must learn to balance the needs and responsibilities in his/her roles as an individual (ME); as a family member (WE); and as an employee, or employer, or both (THEY). While these areas may not always be equally divided, most people will need to devote time and attention to each area over time.
Teacher Strategies/Methods

1. Review with students what is meant by "balance" and how life can get out of balance (refer to Key Ideas). Lead students in a discussion asking for examples of the effects of being out of balance in the areas of physical well-being, family relationships, self-esteem, and work productivity. Supplement 14, "Lifestyle Check-Up," can be used to discuss physical well-being and relationships. Emphasize that physical well-being affects stress.

2. Supplement 15, "My Employability Quotient," can be used to discuss qualities employers seek. Ask how a life that is out of balance affects one's employability quotient.

3. Using Supplement 16, "Analyzing My Work-Family Balance," as a transparency overhead or as a handout, have students draw their circle as it is now. Instruct students to draw a circle as they would like it to be. Ask students to determine how they plan to make it more balanced. Discuss some ways or alternatives for accomplishing this (e.g., getting someone else to do things, changing standards, saying "No").

4. Using Supplement 17, "Analyzing Priorities," have students rank their priorities. Students can analyze their priorities by answering questions at the bottom of the form. Point out that this may be a way to determine areas in which one needs to improve. This exercise may be used in Competency Five for developing strategies.

5. Suggest that students look at Supplement 18, "Getting a Handle on Stress and Distress," to determine what they are doing or could implement. Discuss commonalities within the group (if appropriate). Work with individual students on the self components from Supplement 12, "Individual Stress Producers," and ways to work toward improvement.

6. Consider having an employer or panel discuss job expectations, demands, job responsibilities, and effects on a family, and vice versa.

Suggested Student Activities

1. Complete a personal assessment using Supplement 14 and/or Supplement 15. Discuss any of the statements and how they may affect "balance" in life.

2. Complete the activity using Supplement 16. If the student feels his/her life is balanced, have him/her share how that balance is maintained. If the student feels life is out of balance, or needing change, develop a list of three to five ways to make it more balanced. Ways can be shared with the group.

3. Analyze and rank priorities by completing Supplement 17. Answer the questions individually, but discuss in groups if appropriate.

4. Using Supplement 18 suggest how some of these ideas might be implemented in handling stress. Identify areas that could lead to improvement.

5. Consider designing bumper stickers or verses as inspiration for people who are feeling overwhelmed with home and work/school responsibilities (e.g., "This is a Self-Help Kitchen"). Share and discuss as appropriate.

Sample Assessments

Knowledge

1. Define "priority." List two work/school priorities and two family priorities.

2. What is stress? Give an example of a personal stress related to work/school and one related to family lifestyle.

Application

1. After completing Supplement 14, "Lifestyle Check-Up," determine what personal improvements may be needed. Make a plan to accomplish these improvements.

2. Develop a plan for making the circle in Supplement 16, "Analyzing My Work-Family Balance," balanced according to the students' choices.

3. After analyzing priorities in Supplement 17, develop a plan that may help achieve priorities.

Analyzing My Work-Family Balance

ME - Personal
WE - Family and close relationships
THEY - Work (or outside activities)

Draw your work-family balance circle below:

Most of the time

The most out of balance I am likely to be How often?

How (spouse, boss, and so forth) wants it to be

How I want it to be

Adapted and/or reprinted with permission of Minnesota Vocational Education Work and Family Institute (1986) Balancing work and family (Vol II) (p. 175). 1820 North Xenix Lane, Plymouth, MN 55441.
Analyzing Priorities

DIRECTIONS: Rank the following from 1 to 5: 1 is "not important" and 5 is "extremely important."

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Area</th>
<th>How important is this Area to Me?</th>
<th>What Amount of Attention or Time Is Devoted to this Area?</th>
<th>How Successful or Satisfied Do I Feel in this Area?</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1. Your employment: career, job worries, work done at home, deadlines met ...</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Your partner: time with, consideration of, talk to ...</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Your children: care-giving duties, help with homework, spend time with, read to ...</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4. Yourself: maintain your hobbies and interests (e.g., reading, friendships) ...</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5. The house: housework, maintenance ...</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Look at your rankings and consider the following:

- Are you devoting time and attention to an area that is relatively unimportant to you?
- Are you failing to succeed in an important life area or role?
- Are you getting little success out of a little effort?

Getting a Handle on Stress and Distress

DIRECTIONS: Personalize this sheet. Check yourself in each area. What are you currently doing, how might you implement the suggestions?

1. Work off stress.
2. Talk out your worries.
3. Learn to accept what you cannot change.
5. Get enough sleep.
7. Do something for others.
8. Take one thing at a time.
10. Make yourself available.

Plan Management Strategies To Increase Work/School Satisfaction and Family Satisfaction.

Student Outcomes

- Recognize that positive and negative spillover exists between work/school and family life.
- Recognize that management strategies can help reduce work/school and family conflict/stress.
- Identify some management/coping strategies.
- Devise a personal plan or strategy for select work/school or family situation(s).

Key Ideas

Variables affecting positive spillover from work/school to family include friendships at work/school, ability to work independently, and an improved self-concept. Negative spillover from work/school to family may be related to high levels of involvement at work/school and excessive work/school demands.

A supportive home environment including sharing responsibilities, personal health, and health of family members are related to positive spillover from family to work/school.

Negative spillover from family to work/school is influenced by a lack of time for self and leisure. Family-related events and having young children in the family affect work/school satisfaction.

Obligations associated with raising children, caring for elderly parents, and maintaining a home can affect job performance and family life satisfaction.

A number of strategies can be used by families when combining work/school and family. Some strategies include learning to say "No"; using resources in the community; establishing priorities; sharing duties (household and child care); and developing financial, stress, and time management skills.

Coping or balancing strategies include ways to handle conflict and frustration, to encourage communication change, to establish priorities, to reevaluate standards, and to change expectations of one's self and others. In the work/school area, one may need to define values and goals. In the family area, resources within the family, within individual members, and within the community may be utilized. Ways to cope with stress may include developing a support network of friends and family, seeking help from community agencies and professional persons, and identifying those things that can be altered and those which are beyond one's control.

Clinging to "the way things used to be" is not productive and often not supportive of family relationships, individual self-esteem, or work/school and family satisfaction.
Suggested ways to make time for both family and work/school include the following:

- Prioritize – Decide what is most important, what things add value to life, and which have greatest impact on family.

- Let Go – Not everything is worth doing or worth doing well. Homes need to be clean, not spotless; meals need to be nutritious, not gourmet; people's lives need to be rewarding, not exhausting.

- Practice new ways of juggling. Use shortcuts. Do less but do it well. Decide what is essential for oneself and family.

  Reward oneself by taking time to play and not feeling guilty that everything wasn't accomplished that one thought needed to be done.

Both financial management and time management strategies require skills in setting goals, analyzing what is currently happening, developing a plan, and evaluating the plan.

Personal management strategies such as health maintenance and planning leisure time can be used to reduce stress at work/school and at home.
Teacher Strategies/Methods

1. Help students recognize differences between positive and negative “spillover” using examples listed in Key Ideas. Have students complete Supplement 20, “Spillover,” and suggest ways to deal with negative aspects.

2. Define vocabulary words with students before completing Supplement 21, “Work Demands Crossword Puzzle.” Discuss the effect these job demands can have on spillover, conflict, and/or stress.

3. Several management and coping strategies are identified under Key Ideas. Emphasize those that seem appropriate to the group. Ask for examples of each.

4. Lead a discussion on the strategy of learning to say “No,” by asking for examples. Refer to Activity 5.

5. Emphasize that all types of demands and life events can disrupt individuals/families and cause stress. Ask students to identify those most or least stressful. These may be grouped according to marital status and sex. Make it clear that much of the stress that people deal with in balancing work/school and family is not preventable. Stress also is not all bad. It is how people deal with stress that makes the difference.

6. Discuss ways to cope or reduce stress using Supplement 26, “Tips To Relieve or Reduce Stress.”

7. Discuss with students the various coping/balancing strategies identified in Key Ideas.

Identify where one might go to seek help. The following are examples:

- friend or family member
- physician
- member of clergy
- a support group
- community or wellness center

8. Supplement 27, “Techniques for Reducing Stress at Work/School,” can be reviewed and discussed as deemed appropriate by the teacher and as meets the needs of students.

9. The teacher can work individually with students to select a work/school or family situation and devise a personal plan or strategy for addressing the situation. Supplement 28, “My Personal Plan,” can be used as a planning document if the teacher deems appropriate. Possible suggestions for strategies are goal setting, money management, time management, and household efficiency. Other possibilities include reviewing previous supplements such as "Lifestyle Check-Up," "My Employability Quotient," "Analyzing My Work-Family Balance," and "Analyzing Priorities" and then developing strategies for these.

10. Supplements 29 through 33 are also provided for ideas for goal setting, money management, and scheduling efficiency.

Note: A number of activities related to time management will be found in Learning Guide 9, Managing Home and Work Responsibilities.

Suggested Student Activities

3. React to the case studies in Supplements 22 and 23 and select a strategy.
4. In groups, list tasks frequently done at home. Compare level of standards for these tasks. Which need to be raised? Lowered?

5. Divide into buzz groups and discuss reasons people have trouble saying “No.” Discuss how saying “No” can free a person to say “Yes” to oneself or family.

Respond to “I should have responded with a ‘No’ to _____ and a ‘Yes’ when _____.”

8. Identify a list of time-wasting activities either at home or work/school. Discuss possible solutions to problems such as telephone interruptions, unrealistic time estimates, and the inability to say “No.”

9. Discuss the meaning of terms like “Time flies,” “Time drags,” “Spending time,” and “Living on borrowed time.”

10. Devise a plan or strategy for managing some particular situation. Supplement 28, “My Personal Plan,” can be used. Suggestions from previous activities or supplements might be reviewed such as Supplement 14, “Lifestyle Check-Up,” Supplement 15, “My Employability Quotient,” Supplement 16, “Analyzing My Work-Family Balance,” and Supplement 17, “Analyzing Priorities.” Supplements 29 through 32 are also provided for ideas related to goal setting, money management, and scheduling efficiency.
Sample Assessments

Knowledge
1. Define spillover. Give a positive and a negative example.
2. Define or explain by example the crossword puzzle terms in Supplement 21, "Work Demands Crossword Puzzle."
3. Give an example of a short-term and a long-term goal.
4. Identify coping strategies or ways to deal with stress.

Application
1. Devise a personal plan or strategy for managing a work/school or family situation.
2. Identify two stresses at work/school or with family. List techniques for reducing or coping with those particular stresses.
Spillover

Spillover can be positive or negative. Positive spillover is a spread of satisfaction from work/school to family or family to work/school. Negative spillover is a spread of dissatisfaction from work/school to family or family to work/school. List examples for each of the statements below.

Positive spillover from family to work

Negative spillover from family to work

Positive spillover from work to family

Negative spillover from work to family

Work Demands Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1. actual amount of time spent at work
2. expectation of a job requiring the employee to move if necessary
3. expectation of a job requiring the employee to be out of town
4. the emotional atmosphere of a workplace

DOWN
1. hours spent working above the normal required amount
2. the time of day or days of the week a person works
3. the aspects of the workplace such as comfort, safety, and health
4. the demand of a job that requires an employee to temporarily stop working

Case Study

Single-Parent Family with a Young Child

The Ramirez Family

Yolanda has a daughter, Nan, who is 3 years old. Yolanda works full-time and has responsibility for all household and child care tasks.

Yolanda believes that the best person to care for a child is the child's parent. She has to leave Nan with a daycare provider while she works, but does not leave her any other time during the week.

Lately, Yolanda has been getting cross with Nan and does not have the patience to let Nan learn new tasks such as dressing herself. Nan seems to take forever putting on her coat.

Yolanda wants to be more calm with Nan. She often feels depressed. What changes could Yolanda make?

The following are some strategies she could consider:

- adjusting expectations
- using outside help
- redefining roles of family members

1. Decide which strategies would work in this situation. List possible solutions.

2. Role play a discussion between Yolanda and her friend, Sue, as Yolanda considers these strategies and makes a decision.

Case Study

Two-Parent Family with an Older Child

The Kroger Family

Lee and Roberta have a daughter, Holly, who is 15 years old. Both adults are employed full-time outside the home.

Holly is involved in school activities such as band, track, and two clubs. She would like to find a part-time job to earn extra money.

Tasks related to the car are Lee’s responsibility. He knows how to do the routine maintenance. Lee has been so busy with extra hours at work that he has not had time to take care of the car properly.

Roberta takes care of the lawn, laundry, and cooks the meals. Everyone likes home-cooked meals so she spends the weekend cooking and freezing meals.

The entire family cleans the house on the weekends, choosing the day everyone is at home.

Roberta is frustrated because she spends all weekend doing some type of cooking or cleaning task. All three family members want to change how responsibilities are handled. They all want different results.

The following are strategies the Krogers are considering:

• adjusting expectations
• using outside help
• redefining roles of family members

1. Decide which strategies would work. List possible solutions.

2. Role play a discussion among Lee, Roberta, and Holly as they consider these strategies and make a decision.

Some Survival Tips on Balancing Home, Family, and Work/School

Control Your Thoughts.
- Remember that people are more important than things. Think more about the wonderful and positive things and less about the obnoxious and negative things.
- Accept adjustments to standards.
- Rethink all "shoulds" and "oughts."
- Let go—you don't have to do everything yourself.
- Affirm yourself.
- Set personal and family goals.
- Be where you are—at work/school think about work/school, and at home think about home.

Control Tasks.
- Recruit others to do or help with chores.
- Make sure everyone's responsibilities are understood.
- Let children or siblings assume responsibility.
- Delegate.
- Remember that others will not do tasks exactly as you would do them—surrender some control.
- Get organized.
- Get a long telephone cord.

Control Your Role.
- You can't do it all, so do fewer things more effectively.
- Do not be a constant caregiver.
- Evaluate your priorities.
- Look for places to curtail or eliminate your involvement.
- Distinguish between reasonable and unreasonable demands.
- Say "No" to unreasonable demands.

Control Your Sense of Well-Being.
- Laugh.
- Talk.
- Say what you need.
- Learn and practice active listening.
- Fight only the battles that are really worth winning.
- Seek out a supportive mentor, telephone buddy, or social support system.
- Spend more time with yourself.
- Make a commitment to maintain your health.
- No matter what, never forget you are special!

Tips To Relieve or Reduce Stress

1. Pinpoint your specific stressor. (Refer back to Supplement 12.)

2. If possible, plan for the changes in your life. Life is more predictable than we are willing to recognize and accept.

3. Establish relationships with people with whom you can talk.

4. If you have something stressful happening at work/school, try to cut down on involvement in stressful situations outside of work/school.

5. Seek some time to be alone for yourself.

6. After a disappointing setback, take stock of your achievements.

7. Get rid of hostility.

8. Getting enough rest (7-8 hours a night) and eating well-balanced meals gives you strength to manage.

10. Delegate a task... It may not be done your way, but that’s okay.

11. Smile at people as often as you can and express appreciation.

12. Use humor.

13. Instead of a coffee break, take a relaxation break. Change the scene.

14. Recite a prayer from your religious tradition.

15. Try to vacation one week three times a year instead of three weeks once a year.

16. Drive with your jaw relaxed, tongue in the center of your mouth, spine against the back of the seat. Relax your grip on the steering wheel.

17. “Don’t sweat the small stuff.”
Techniques for Reducing Stress at Work/School

Techniques for reducing stress at the workplace/school include the following:

1. Think positively. Try not to jump to conclusions or dwell on "should haves." Talk out upsetting things.

2. Avoid "perfectionism." People with unrealistically high standards put too much time and effort into tasks. Women especially are prone to perfectionism—both at home and work.

3. Learn how to delegate.

4. Talk to other people. Discuss concerns with coworkers in an attempt to solve problems.

5. Laugh more.

6. Develop some decompression tactics. Learn to mentally shift gears between work and home (take a walk, shower, and so on).

   • Concentrate on deep breathing (oxygenates blood).

   • Go for a walk (reduces tension).

   • Get a glimpse of nature (brings on feelings of hope, serenity, and openness).
My Personal Plan

DIRECTIONS: Describe a situation you would like to analyze and for which you might develop a strategy. Analyze your family or work/school activities, set goals, and develop a plan of action and evaluation.

What is the situation?

What is your strategy/plan for (e.g., time, money, health, leisure)?

What are your goals?

What is your plan of action?

What is your evaluation plan?
Short-Term Goals and Long-Term Goals

Short-Term Goals

There are many types of short-term goals. Getting home from work/school safely can be a short-term goal. The types of short-term goals that this exercise will be concentrating on are short-term goals that will help you to make your work/school and family life more compatible.

In the space below, list the goals you have:

for the next day

for the next week

for the next month

for the next year

On a separate sheet, write some of the ways you can achieve these goals.
Long-Term Goals

In column A, list the long-term goals you have for yourself.
In column B, list the long-term goals you have for your work/school.
In column C, list the long-term goals you have for your family.

Dealing with Financial Stress and Preparing a Family Budget

I. Signs of financial stress.

A. Family disagreements and arguments about money.
B. Lack of communication about family spending.
C. Debts that exceed income.
D. Late payments on bills, rent, mortgage, and so on.
E. Excessive worry over financial situation.

II. How to deal with financial stress.

A. Discuss finances and spending with family.
   1. Have a weekly meeting.
   2. Keep written records of all spending.

B. Keep payments as frequent and complete as possible.
   1. Let creditor know that you intend to pay in full.
   2. Try to make arrangements with creditors for a payment plan that is satisfactory to all involved.
   3. Seek help from a financial counselor.

C. Prepare a family budget and work within it. Use “Preparing a Budget” (next page).
Preparing a Budget

(This can be for a family or individual, whichever is appropriate.)

1. What is the gross monthly income of your family?

2. How many family members are supported by this income?

3. What is your monthly cost for housing (i.e., rent, mortgage)?

4. On average, how much does your family spend on food per month?

5. On average, how much does your family spend on necessary household items per month?

6. What is the total of the minimum monthly payments to your creditors (include credit cards, loan payments, car payments, and so forth)?

7. Do you pay more than the minimum payments on these debts?

8. How much, per month, do you pay for auto expenses (including gas, insurance, maintenance)?

9. On average, what is the total of your monthly utility expenses (including electricity, gas, telephone, water, cable television, and so forth)?

10. How much, if any, of your monthly income goes toward the cost of education for yourself and/or other members of your family?

11. How much of your monthly income goes toward insurance?

12. How much of your monthly income goes toward medical expenses?

13. How much of your monthly income goes toward childcare expenses?

14. List all of your monthly expenses that have not yet been mentioned.
Tips To Lighten Up a Schedule

Discuss the following ways to lighten up a schedule:

- Get up 15 minutes earlier each day.
- Keep your home and/or workspace organized to suit your needs.
- Prepare for your day the night before (e.g., lay out clothes, prepare lunch).
- Delegate duties at work and home when appropriate and possible.
- Carpool to work or school. For example, use the time you save by not driving to read or catch up on work.

List other ways you can lighten your schedule in the space below.
Scheduling Your Day

Analyze your schedule. What do you actually do in one day? Using the times given, list everything you do in one day, from the time you wake up until the time you go to sleep. Be as specific as possible.

12:00 – 1:00 A.M.
1:00 – 2:00 A.M.
2:00 – 3:00 A.M.
3:00 – 4:00 A.M.
4:00 – 5:00 A.M.
5:00 – 6:00 A.M.
6:00 – 7:00 A.M.
7:00 – 8:00 A.M.
8:00 – 9:00 A.M.
9:00 – 10:00 A.M.
10:00 – 11:00 A.M.
11:00 A.M. – 12:00 P.M.
12:00 – 1:00 P.M.
1:00 – 2:00 P.M.
2:00 – 3:00 P.M.
3:00 – 4:00 P.M.
4:00 – 5:00 P.M.
5:00 – 6:00 P.M.
6:00 – 7:00 P.M.
7:00 – 8:00 P.M.
8:00 – 9:00 P.M.
9:00 – 10:00 P.M.
10:00 – 11:00 P.M.
11:00 P.M. – 12:00 A.M.

On a separate sheet, list the things you would like to change about your schedule.

WORLD-CLASS EDUCATION FOR THE 21ST CENTURY: THE CHALLENGE AND THE VISION

VISION STATEMENT

As we approach the 21st century, there is broad-based agreement that the education we provide for our children will determine America's future role in the community of nations, the character of our society, and the quality of our individual lives. Thus, education has become the most important responsibility of our nation and our state, with an imperative for bold new directions and renewed commitments.

To meet the global challenges this responsibility presents, the State of Illinois will provide the leadership necessary to guarantee access to a system of high-quality public education. This system will develop in all students the knowledge, understanding, skills and attitudes that will enable all residents to lead productive and fulfilling lives in a complex and changing society. All students will be provided appropriate and adequate opportunities to learn to:

- communicate with words, numbers, visual images, symbols and sounds;
- think analytically and creatively, and be able to solve problems to meet personal, social and academic needs;
- develop physical and emotional well-being;
- contribute as citizens in local, state, national and global communities;
- work independently and cooperatively in groups;
- understand and appreciate the diversity of our world and the interdependence of its peoples;
- contribute to the economic well-being of society; and
- continue to learn throughout their lives.

MISSION STATEMENT

The State Board of Education believes that the current educational system is not meeting the needs of the people of Illinois. Substantial change is needed to fulfill this responsibility. The State Board of Education will provide the leadership necessary to begin this process of change by committing to the following goals.

ILLINOIS GOALS

1. Each Illinois public school student will exhibit mastery of the learner outcomes defined in the State Goals for Learning, demonstrate the ability to solve problems and perform tasks requiring higher-order thinking skills, and be prepared to succeed in our diverse society and the global work force.

2. All people of Illinois will be literate, lifelong learners who are knowledgeable about the rights and responsibilities of citizenship and able to contribute to the social and economic well-being of our diverse, global society.

3. All Illinois public school students will be served by an education delivery system which focuses on student outcomes; promotes maximum flexibility for shared decision making at the local level; and has an accountability process which includes rewards, interventions and assistance for schools.

4. All Illinois public school students will have access to schools and classrooms with highly qualified and effective professionals who ensure that students achieve high levels of learning.

5. All Illinois public school students will attend schools which effectively use technology as a resource to support student learning and improve operational efficiency.

6. All Illinois public school students will attend schools which actively develop the support, involvement and commitment of their community by the establishment of partnerships and/or linkages to ensure the success of all students.

7. Every Illinois public school student will attend a school that is supported by an adequate, equitable, stable and predictable system of finance.

8. Each child in Illinois will receive the support services necessary to enter the public school system ready to learn and progress successfully through school. The public school system will serve as a leader in collaborative efforts among private and public agencies so that comprehensive and coordinated health, human and social services reach children and their families.

Developed by citizens of Illinois through a process supported by the Governor, the Illinois State Board of Education and the Illinois Business Roundtable. Adopted as a centerpiece for school improvement efforts.
