This paper reports on the implementation of an Integrated Assessment and Strategic Planning (IASP) process to comply with accountability requirements at the community college of New Mexico State University at Alamogordo. The IASP model adapted an existing compliance matrix and applied it to the business college program in 1995 to assess and improve program offerings and student learning. The model involves assessment of different program areas (clusters) on a rotating schedule over several years. The on-going business cluster assessment was originally expected to take 2.5 years to complete but initial success has allowed reduction of the timeline to 1.5 years. Assessment tools include surveys from the community, students, faculty, and employers; the new student data form; a survey of withdrawing students; and a high school survey. When all the data are collected, strengths and concerns will be evaluated. Extensive attachments include timelines, the matrix, and survey forms.

Why Reinvent the Wheel?
Let's Adapt Our Institutional Assessment Model

Discussion

NMSU-Alamogordo, a 2300 headcount branch community college of New Mexico State University, actively implemented an Integrated Assessment and Strategic Planning (IASP) process as the best vehicle to comply with a myriad of accountability requirements. These requirements include the Student Right-to-Know and Campus Security Act, the 1992 amendments to the Higher Education Act, the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Educational amendments of 1990 (Public Law 101-392) and other external sources. They and our own desire to assess and improve program offerings and student learning drive our continued assessment efforts. SPRE and the NMSU-A Integrated Assessment and Strategic Planning (IASP) Process: What We've Learned and Where We're Going (Twomey, Lillibridge, Hawkins, Reidlinger, 1995). The operation of IASP is described in the 1994 edition of A Collection of Papers on Self-Study and Institutional Improvement (Leas & Lillibridge, 1994). This paper reports how we took the matrix designed from the SPRE Compliance Matrix which was described in Development of the SPRE Compliance Matrix for NMSU-A (Hawkins & Lillibridge, 1995) and adapted it for use in a program cluster assessment for NMSU-Alamogordo during Fall 1995.

Outcomes Assessment Plan - Overall Timeline

A program cluster at NMSU-Alamogordo, consisting of the full time and associate business college instructors, volunteered to develop the model for future program cluster assessments. They are called the Business Cluster.

The concept for program cluster assessment was developed as part of an institutional outcomes assessment plan. IASP evolved from a faculty-driven, self-study process developed four years ago. IASP was modified when it became apparent that having the faculty assess all classes was an overwhelming task. Instructional divisions were divided into program and/or subject clusters. The clusters would be assessed on a rotating schedule over several years. A timeline was developed for programs to be evaluated periodically. (Attachment A - Timeline, NMSU-A Outcomes Assessment Project). The purpose of cluster assessment is to avoid “settling for face-compliance in lieu of real assessment.” The college resolved that it was possible that, by doing less assessment, it might achieve higher quality assessment, SPRE and the NMSU-A Integrated Assessment and Strategic Planning (IASP) Process: What We’ve Learned and Where We’re Going (Twomey, Lillibridge, Hawkins, Reidlinger, 1995.)

Business Cluster Plan

NMSU-Alamogordo business faculty met and adapted a Business Cluster Matrix of Outcomes, Possible Assessment Tools, Data Collection, Data Use and Timeline (Attachment B - Business Cluster Matrix), from a previous matrix developed for the entire college, Development of an Assessment Package for NMSU-Alamogordo, New Mexico (Himebrook, Twomey, Beck, Flores & Elliott, 1992) and the SPRE Compliance Matrix. From the Business Cluster Matrix, the faculty can develop the business cluster goals and a timeline. With the adoption of the Business Cluster Matrix, the program cluster assessment process is driven by the mission and purposes of NMSU-Alamogordo. This also assures that all efforts in the business cluster assessment meet the various external accountability requirements.

Business Cluster Goals

The Business Cluster defined its mission as “to assess the business and economics cluster as to outcomes based on surveys of student and business satisfaction.” Following the ratification of the original mission, the secretarial administration program was added to the Business Cluster assessment program.

Objectives for the Business Cluster include a continuous assessment tool to “fine tune” the business and economics curriculum to meet customer needs. Customers include present and potential students, Otero County businesses, and the Holloman Air Force Base civilian and military workforces. An additional objective includes developing assessment tools to determine student success. The cluster is looking for a way to get feedback from transfer institutions such as New Mexico State University and the Community College of the Air Force. Critical suggestions from local alumni and local business are also important.

Business Cluster Timeline

Because the Business Cluster is a model for future program cluster assessments, it was originally given two and a half years to develop, design, implement, and evaluate its program assessment. The first six months were spent reviewing the literature and becoming familiar with accountability issues outside the classroom environment. The next full year is for the development of the assessment plan, locating its data sources, and any development time that may be required for surveys. The second year is designed to evaluate the data generated from the assessment of the various organizations, students, community, and employers. The Business Cluster will write the report and begin the implementation of the recommendations generated from the cluster assessment. Because the Business Cluster assessment program has been so successful, the timeline was reduced to a year and a half. The results from the Business Cluster assessment may be integrated into the planning phase of the two-year IASP process that starts again in the Fall of 1996.

Business Cluster Organization

The organization of the Business Cluster included all faculty, both full time and associate, and the Outcomes Assessment Coordinator from the Office of Institutional Effectiveness. The chair of the Business Cluster is the program coordinator. Advisory boards, economic statistics from the New Mexico Department of Labor, and interested community members could also be included in the organization of a program cluster assessment. Since the Business Cluster is a model and much of the development work was new and unproven, the Business Cluster decided to keep its membership small and representative of NMSU-Alamogordo faculty and administrative staff. (Attachment C-Progress Report)

Budget Issues

As with any plan, it remains a vision until funded. Two approaches are recommended. If grant monies can be obtained, as Occupational Business students are included in the assessment process, the Office of Institutional Effectiveness can include the cost of the assessment tools in its grant writing efforts. As an almost last resort, the business program must budget for survey instruments, processing costs, and a prorated share of the Office of Institutional Effectiveness staff time for collating the data into useful information.

Another issue faced by the program coordinators is the loss of valuable teaching time to conduct the survey(s) in class. A minimum of 20 minutes is used per class, which should be made up sometime during the semester. Although faculty can readily see the mission-driven need to conduct data gathering surveys, they are reluctant to use class time.
Implementation Plan

After the Business Cluster assessment plan was finalized, data collection instruments needed to be selected. The Business Cluster determined that many assessment tools were already available or could be compiled from data sources at the college. However, it was apparent that they needed to ask the students, employers, and the general community for its assessment of the business and secretarial administration courses.

1996 NMSU-A Community Survey

The Office of Institutional Effectiveness developed the 1996 NMSU-A Community Survey (Attachment D). The survey will be mailed to selected postal routes in Alamogordo and Holloman Air Force Base, New Mexico, in March 1996. The Business Cluster felt that the general demographic information will serve as a baseline for its cluster assessment program from the local community.

Student Satisfaction Survey

Business students were surveyed in Fall 1995 using the Student Satisfaction Inventory™ (Attachment E), a well-designed instrument developed by Noel-Levitz Centers, Inc. The survey was distributed by each business instructor in class. The students completed the survey and returned it for extra credit. Questions on the Student Satisfaction Survey™ describe an expectation of the students and ask the student how important it is for the college to meet that expectation. The students are then asked to tell the college how satisfied they are with the way the college met their expectations. The designers of the survey suggested that the Business Cluster would learn about the following areas:

- Which aspects of the campus do our students care most about?
Which aspects of our campus do students find most and least satisfying?

How can we best meet student expectations?

How do our students' responses compare with students' responses at other community colleges?

The Business Cluster could add some questions specific to local program issues. Because the cluster is serving as a model, the business faculty has developed some "lessons learned" for future clusters who want to use the Student Satisfaction Inventory.

Employer Survey

Working in a joint effort with the Office of Institutional Effectiveness, the Business Cluster is in the early development of a comprehensive employer survey. The purpose will be to check with the employers to see if the business students are receiving the kind of education that meets the needs of the local business community. Also, the Business Cluster is interested in determining future educational needs of local businesses. The current plan is to conduct on-site interviews with a random sample of employers. Since there is an institutional and program need for this information, a joint effort will be made to ask local employers only once. The plan is to have the interviews conducted in a professional, efficient, and effective manner and not duplicate other campus efforts.

New Student Information

The Business Cluster needed to determine the students' goals for each class. Currently NMSU-Alamogordo is using a form, New Student Data Form (Attachment F), attached to the application for admission. The form asks for the students' goal in applying to NMSU-Alamogordo and the students' planned areas of study. Although the data from the New Student Data Form provides some information, the Business Cluster has decided to formalize a practice that each instructor is already doing in the classroom.

On the first day of class, each instructor has been asking students general information on why they are taking the class. The overall effort is for the instructor to discover what the students know. This also helps the instructor to understand what the students need to get from the class. The instructors felt that this process could be formalized and unified so it could be tabulated and reviewed by the cluster. The Business Cluster is also designing a short survey to ask the students at the end of the course to determine if the course met their goals.

Other Survey Instruments

The Business Cluster Matrix also called for other assessment tools: a withdrawing student survey, a high school survey, and a faculty survey. These assessment tools are being developed in other areas of the college. The Business Cluster hopes to use relevant data from these surveys for the Business Cluster assessment.

Lessons Learned

The program cluster assessment is a new concept at NMSU-Alamogordo. Currently, the Business Cluster is implementing its assessment plan. As the model for future cluster assessment, the Business Cluster has developed a system for recording the lessons that they learned along the way.

Planning Issues

Planning for a program cluster assessment, the cluster needs to adapt from the SPRE Compliance Matrix (1995) and the NMSU-Alamogordo Matrix of Outcomes, Possible Assessment Tools, Data Collection, Data Use, Timeline (1992), its own cluster matrix. This matrix will become a critical part of the development of the cluster assessment plan. Since the matrix is tied back to the college’s mission and purposes, the cluster efforts are within the total efforts of the college. The matrix will determine the outcomes, assessment tools, data collection, and data uses. A timeline is incorporated into the matrix. The cluster organization needs to be developed with defined roles for faculty, administrative support, and external resources, such as advisory boards, governmental sector support, and community sector support. The cluster needs to set its own mission, purposes, and goals for the assessment plan. The cluster timeline should drive the implementation of the plan. The result of the assessment plan is to take the information gathered from the cluster assessment and have it become part of the IASP, the strategic planning process at NMSU-Alamogordo.

Environmental Scanning

The Business Cluster needs to scan the environment and become aware of local economic and environmental issues. Through membership by faculty in service organizations, chambers of commerce and the advisory councils, this requirement is being met.

Student Surveys

Student Satisfaction Inventory™ - We experimented with sending the survey home with the student. A second batch of students completed the survey in class. From a visual comparison inspection of the separate batches of student surveys, it appears to the authors that the students did a better job completing the survey in class. The Business Cluster will have to evaluate which system is better.

- The Student Satisfaction Inventories™, developed by Noel Levitz, should be distributed between the fortieth day of the semester and the college’s withdrawal date.
A detailed explanation as to the purpose of the survey needs to be given to the student.

The Business Cluster suggests that a video explaining how the individual student will benefit may be helpful.

Students should not take the surveys home. The surveys completed in class produced better results. The Business Cluster is recommending that a 20 minute block be built into the syllabus so the instructor can monitor the survey and help the students.

Miscellaneous Challenges

- NMSU-Alamogordo has many short courses on and off campus. A system to survey the students in the short courses needs to be developed.
- The Business Cluster felt that a process for an exit interview when a student drops a class or withdraws from the college is important.

Future Plans

Reporting Issues

Once the data is collated into a user friendly format, the Business Cluster will assess and determine strengths and concerns. Strengths are used for advertising and publicity efforts to market our discipline. Strengths are also used to make course assignments, curriculum design and allocation of resource decisions. For example, based on faculty expertise, the decision was made to teach Spanish for Business Professionals as several of our faculty members are truly bilingual. Also, since many faculty have experience in the small business area, the cluster decided to add a concentration in Entrepreneurship to be detailed in the 1996-1997 NMSU-Alamogordo catalogue.

Concerns drive proactive plans if within the cluster domain. Concerns on such issues as safety and security drive recommendations to the Campus Committee on Safety - a prime concern was safety in the parking lots for example. Concerns on scheduling drove an effort to schedule classes earlier in the day time to meet the needs of students who can attend a class before entering work plus scheduling classes off campus when business partnerships are cooperative. We are actively pursuing efforts to be certified in the accounting sector and the management sector, and we are exploring other areas students feel certification would help their employment efforts.

All strengths and concerns derived from the assessment are validated against the mission of the institution and competencies required by the various agencies.

Form Design

To minimize the administrative burden and load on faculty, we are attempting to use readily available commercial data collection forms. Pre and post surveys on student expectations, for example, should be simple, easy to administer, and easily collated. The information derived will then be used to make quick adjustments rather than drive major changes, unless a major trend is recognized. The forms will be used each semester and tracked within the discipline so faculty can respond quickly and adjust syllabi if necessary. This requirement should be part of the ongoing assessment effort.

Cluster Report to Community

Once the assessment is complete, reporting to the community is a must. The community must be aware first of the institution's mission. Second, the community should be informed and asked to participate in formulation of strengths and concerns for proactive plans to meet these challenges.

The Business Cluster Committee cannot meet with each demographic group that makes up the community. However, we can target those groups we perceive are most interested and, using the Delphi Approach, can narrow dissemination of information to those groups that are stakeholders in the educational and training processes. For example, the Business Advisory Board composed of representatives from the Holloman Civilian Work Force Human Resource Offices, the New Mexico Department of Labor, the banking industry, the Alamogordo Chamber of Commerce and the Hispano Chamber of Commerce and a representative from the Alamogordo Public School District will be invited to participate. The synergy of this group should help the Business Cluster to adjust its vision and strategies if required.

Standard mechanisms include making available to the public bound copies in the Alamogordo Public Library and in the Townsend NMSU-A Library. In addition, publicity can be generated through our marketing department. The local newspapers and media are most cooperative. The cluster should use such marketing techniques as a return post card to be included in the report, e-mail addresses of Business Cluster committee members, office telephone numbers, and other tactics requesting responses. A deadline must be set for pragmatic reasons.

Business Cluster Response to Community Concerns

One advantage of a relatively small institution is flexibility. Even though policies and procedures are primarily developed through the College of Human and Community Services with input from the New Mexico State University branches, mechanisms exist to rapidly respond to training and educational needs of the community. Through the Weekend College, Interim Courses, Special Topic Courses, and Community Education, needs can be addressed and fulfilled.
The Job Applicant Bank maintained by the Business Cluster is the primary source of pre-qualified experts in the field to cover almost any subject.

Once a need is identified and made known, we can design a course and provide an instructor normally within one semester. For example, a need was expressed by Holloman military for a supervision course in spring semester 1995. Within seven days, the need was fulfilled. Administration, the Holloman Education Center, and the Business Program Coordinator worked to make it happen.

Conclusion

Let us not reinvent the wheel. Take your institutional strategic assessment plan and adapt it. Our goal is to meet the needs of our students and communities within the guidelines set by the State Legislature, the Commission on Higher Education, and our accreditation councils. To do this we must stop, reflect, and modify our direction if necessary. But let us refrain from creating bureaucratic nightmares, overloading the faculty, and boring the community with too many assessment tools.

The meeting was called to order at 1:45 PM. Members present were Francisco Aguirre, Danny Taylor, Jim Erbes, Margaret Hall, and Robert Rowe. Guests were Linda Hawkins and Leisa Bryant-Gonzalez. The purpose of the meeting was to ascertain where we stand and to review the results of the Student Satisfaction Inventory conducted in the fall semester 1995.

I: Linda Hawkins from the Office of Institutional Effectiveness passed out copies of the Business Cluster Student Satisfaction Inventory. She then gave a brief explanation. Members are to read and attempt to develop ways and means to extract strengths and concerns from the survey. We will then work to develop action plans or recommendations if the areas are outside our domain. We need to focus specifically on the questions the business cluster developed. At first review we are well within the relevant range and the data validates our hypothesis that we are doing well as a discipline and as an institution.

II: To develop an on-going assessment framework, we are looking at developing a pre and post survey instrument building on what most instructors are doing presently. I, for example, ask students some facts and their expectations. If all business faculty members did the same, we could use the Office of Institutional Effectiveness to collate the data into useful information to determine student satisfaction on a continuous basis.

The item was tabled until our next meeting, March 12, at 1:30 PM in the Business Cluster Conference Room.

III: The Community Needs survey will be mailed out March 19, 1996. The Business Cluster should be able to use some information from this survey in developing training/certification programs as well as modification of curriculum if required.

The Employer - Business Needs/Satisfaction survey is behind the time line as the Community Needs survey for the entire institution is tying up the Office of Institutional Effectiveness staff. We hope to work on this item as soon as the Community Needs survey is complete.

Meeting Adjourned at 3:30 PM. Next scheduled meeting is March 12 at 1:30 PM.

March 19, 1996

Dear Survey Participant:

Thank you for agreeing to participate in our important survey. Our goal at New Mexico State University-Alamogordo is to meet your educational needs. The hallmark of community colleges such as ours is flexibility, adaptability, and responsiveness to local demands. Our goal is to customize our courses and services to meet the demands of local citizens.

To meet this goal, we need your help.

Please take time to complete the survey now; it should take about ten minutes. Return the survey in the stamped, self-addressed envelope. We will not know which survey that we receive is yours. Results will be tabulated by the NMSU-A's Office of Institutional Effectiveness. The results will be presented to community advisory groups, local media and other interested organizations and individuals, and will be used to better meet the needs of our community.

Please note, if you prefer a Spanish version of this survey or prefer a LARGE PRINT version of this survey, please call 439-3714.

NMSU-Alamogordo has constantly changed and improved over the years in order to bring you improved educational services. This survey is our opportunity to find out what else the community would like from us. This is your opportunity to let us know how we can better meet your educational needs.

Thanks for your assistance. We look forward to your feedback.

Sincerely,

Charles R. Reidlinger
