This conference presentation handout describes a program which uses dance therapy to integrate special education students with various disabilities. The 6-week program at a middle school involved having a professional dancer teach students traditional and modern dance methods as a means of expressing emotions, followed by teams of students choreographing and performing a dance. The program also involved biweekly guidance sessions to facilitate improved feelings of mutual respect, and creation of costumes by students. Individual sections of the handout packet cover: project introduction, project description, necessary resources, projected costs, goals and objectives, project management, student attitude questionnaire, time schedule, project options, publicity, project evaluation, teacher evaluation, and student evaluation. Discover the magic of dance for your students. This presentation highlights an innovative program utilizing modern dance instruction and complementary guidance sessions for uniting children of several exceptionalities toward mutual respect and a common goal. Suggestions and resources toward developing a similar program are included.

All students, regardless of exceptionality, have special needs. By integrating students from various special education disciplines in a common environment and experience, attitudes, behavior, and self-control are positively affected. A dance therapy program conducted within the school setting effectively meets these needs.

Through the Art of Dance, the life qualities of discipline, dedication, perseverance, and teamwork were highlighted and emphasized in a special program at Twin Valley Middle School. The program was made possible through a grant received from the Pennsylvania Arts in Special Education Council. For six weeks, a young professional taught traditional and modern dance methods as a means of expressing feelings and emotions. Once the students were familiar with dance movements, they worked as a team and chose an emotion to perform. The dance instructor helped the students choreograph a dance and select music appropriate for the emotion selected.

A second component to the program incorporated biweekly guidance sessions that included written and oral follow-up activities. The counselor facilitated improved feelings of mutual respect.

In a third facet, students designed and created their own costumes which reflected the emotion selected and the group's interests. The students wore the costumes during the final culminating activities: school-wide dance repertoire assemblies and a parent performance.

Students took pride in their efforts and in achieving goals such as: learning about dance, taking risks, developing friendships, participating in a school-wide performance, and having fun. Teachers observed that students improved communication and socialization skills, took risks, changed negative energy into positive energy, exercised self-control, and accepted individual strengths and weaknesses. The program was a resounding success and brought out the best in students in all participating exceptionalities.

The presenters will provide workshop participants with practical suggestions for implementing a similar program. Packets of material which include program goals and objectives as well as suggestions for locating an artist-in-residence and acquiring funding will be provided. The presenters are excited to share this innovative, "magical" means of learning and growing.
PROJECT INTRODUCTION:

We feel all students, regardless of label or exceptionality have special needs. They have difficulty expressing feelings in a positive way, controlling their emotions, feeling good about themselves, getting along with others or just accepting others' strengths and weaknesses. By integrating students from each discipline (ES-LS-GS) in a common environment and experience we hope to change behavior and attitudes.

We will be utilizing the expertise of a Dance Artist-in-residence for instruction and a school Guidance Counselor and/or Psychologist for sharing sessions.

By removing the labels of exceptionality and blending all students in a common environment and learning experience we have already achieved a primary goal. Further assessment can be made by observing the interaction of our students in a regular classroom situation.

Criteria of successful performance:
- Students made progress in attaining global goal
- Students made progress in attaining short-term goals
- Students were able to interact regardless of exceptionality
- Students were able to recognize and accept other's strengths and weaknesses
- Students were able to channel negative energy in a positive way
- Students enjoyed participating
- Student evaluation of final dance
- Teacher evaluation of final dance

- If we have helped even 1 child achieve personal success then this project, for us, has been successful.

- If we have helped remove the barriers of stereotyping children then we have been successful.
TEACHER EVALUATION:

- Compare and contrast common characteristics of students you observed.

- Who in your group demonstrated the best leadership skills?

- While observing the group did you hear any positive or negative comments?

- How did the students relate to each other?

- How effectively did the guest artist relate to the children?

- Was each child given the opportunity to participate during Sharing session?

- How did this activity meet the goals and objectives outlined in your student's IEP?

- List any suggestions on how to improve or expand this activity.

- Would you consider this experience a success or a failure and why?
STUDENT EVALUATION:

1. How would you describe your participation in this Dance project?
2. Did you make any new friends during Dance class?
3. All kids are special. What makes you special?
4. Pick someone in your group. What makes this person special?
5. How did you use Dance to help you express your feelings?
6. Did the Sharing sessions help you in any way?
7. While participating in Dance and Sharing did you feel different from the other kids in any way?
8. Did you learn anything new about Dance?
9. If you were the teacher what would you do to make this activity better?
10. Would you like to do this again next year?
