In spring 1995, College of the Desert, in California, undertook a study to determine the perceptions of students at both its Copper Mountain and Palm Desert campuses regarding college services. A representative sample of students were administered a 7-point attitude scale (Student Satisfaction Survey developed by Noel-Levitz Centers, Inc.) both the relative importance of the services and students' satisfaction with them. An analysis was then conducted to determine the gaps between levels of importance and satisfaction, indicating that all services, except for Veterans services at the Palm Desert campus, received higher importance ratings than satisfaction ratings. At the Palm Desert campus, the five largest gaps between importance and satisfaction occurred in the areas of parking, registration, concern for students, financial aid notification, and security. At the Copper Mountain Campus, the five largest gaps occurred in the questions pertaining to the availability of child care, the variety of courses, financial aid notification, library resources and services, and academic advising. Includes the survey instrument, graphs of overall ratings for each service area by campus, graphs of ratings of specific services within each area by campus, and ranked tables of gaps for each campus. COLLEGE OF THE DESERT
Office of Institutional Research
43-500 Monterey Avenue
Palm Desert, California 92260
September 12, 1995

During the Spring Semester 1995 the Office of Institutional Research administered a Student Satisfaction Survey developed by Noel-Levitz Centers, Inc., a nationally known educational firm. The Academic Senate's Educational Policies and Practices Committee chose this particular survey after considering a number of similar surveys and options. With the cooperation of numerous instructors, the survey was administered during the tenth week of the semester to a representative sampling of students.

The unique feature of the Noel-Levitz instrument is that it allows the respondent to rank each survey question by two scales (both 1 to 7): importance and satisfaction. Responses can then be located on a grid with importance and satisfaction as the two axes. Further, a "gap" can be calculated between the perception of importance and the accompanying judgment of satisfaction. The purpose of this report is to tabulate in visual form that "gap."

A copy of the survey form leads off the report. Noel-Levitz groups the survey questions into eleven "scales" (probably better called areas). A listing of scales with their subordinate questions is given, as well as a ranking of questions in descending order by gap. The eleven scales, as well as the individual questions within the scales, are then tabulated visually for each campus. Finally, the questions are sorted by gap.

It is recommended that readers also obtain a copy of the Noel-Levitz tabulation of the survey results. Here one can learn the demographic data of the samples; a listing of student majors within the samples; results to the questions on diversity (which contained only one scale); results to the three overall educational experience questions; and, most importantly, national norms for purposes of comparison. Copies of the Noel-Levitz tabulation are available from this office.

The Student Satisfaction Survey is part of the districtwide effort to measure and be responsive to student outcomes. The survey was accomplished with the help of numerous college staff. But most of all, the survey has been a success due to the efforts of the certificated staff who administered the survey in the classroom. The Academic Senate also played an instrumental role, especially Jack Tapleshay and Matt Monica of the Educational Policies and Practices Committee and Paulette Gage at Copper Mountain.

Listing of Questions Grouped by Scale
Dear Student,

Your institution is interested in systematically listening to its students. Therefore, your thoughtful and honest responses to this inventory are very important.

You are part of a sample of students carefully selected to share feedback about your college experiences thus far. Your responses will give your campus leadership insights about the aspects of college that are important to you as well as how satisfied you are with them.

To preserve confidentiality, your name is not requested.

--- Thank you for your participation.

Instructions:
- Use a No. 2 pencil only. Please do not use ink or ballpoint pen.
- Erase changes completely and cleanly.
- Completely darken the oval that corresponds to your response.

Each item below describes an expectation about your experiences on this campus. On the left, tell us how important it is for your institution to meet this expectation. On the right tell us how satisfied you are that your institution has met this expectation.
