In Program Year 1994, Colorado divided its Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) funds among adult and youth job training programs, summer youth programs, dislocated worker programs, and the Governor's Special Initiatives. JTPA staffing levels decreased at the same rate as the declining budget. The programs became especially efficient at using employment and training service providers as the number of participants served throughout the state increased during the same period. To manage existing employment and training needs, Colorado's JTPA organizations relied heavily on the public-private partnerships on which JTPA is based. The Governor's Special Initiatives included education coordination programs, such as school-to-work transition, literacy and lifelong learning, nontraditional employment for women projects, and coordination of employment and training services and older worker programs. Dislocated worker programs consisted of such statewide programs as regional reemployment centers, rapid response, and community college scholarships, and special programs such as major layoff grants, environmental occupations, and older dislocated workers. Colorado's nine service delivery areas offered similar job training and employment assistance and services for economically disadvantaged and dislocated workers, but tailored basic services to meet needs of specific populations in the local community. (Tables, charts, and diagrams illustrate budget allocations and performance results.)

Job Training Partnership Act

THE JOB TRAINING PARTNERSHIP ACT:
Training Colorado’s Workforce for the 21st Century

JTPA: Delivering Services to Coloradans

The Job Training Partnership Act aims to improve employment opportunities for economically disadvantaged and work-dislocated individuals by providing federal funds for skills development and job training for demand occupations. Basic skills and remediation training complement occupational training in an effort to help participants obtain better skills and higher wages – and to help ensure a more prepared workforce for Colorado's and the nation’s employers.

In Program Year 1994 (July 1, 1994 through June 30, 1995), Colorado received a total of $31,501,145 to serve the education and training needs of eligible residents. These funds were divided among the following programs:

Adult and Youth Job Training Programs
Participants acquire vital employment skills through classroom and on-the-job training. A variety of training sessions are available for participants to improve basic skills, obtain a high school diploma, or receive occupational training. Many programs are designed expressly for special populations. JTPA administering organizations throughout the state work with local vocational and technical colleges and universities to provide the training.

Summer Youth Programs
Youth, aged 14-21, work in public or private non-profit organizations to gain valuable work experience and learn skills. Based on need, some youth also participate in remediation or GED programs.

Dislocated Worker Programs
JTPA organizations provide training and employment assistance for individuals who have been permanently laid-off from jobs. The "Rapid Response" program provides early on-site intervention, workshops, and information about available programs and services to workers who will be laid-off.

The Governor's Special Initiatives
These JTPA programs are designed to meet the unique needs of Colorado residents. Through priorities set by the Governor, funds are distributed to a variety of initiatives throughout the state. Program Year 1994 programs targeted school-to-work transition, literacy and life-long learning, non-traditional occupations for women, and retraining for older workers.
JTPA: An Organization for Results

1. The U.S. Congress authorizes JTPA legislation.
2. The U.S. Department of Labor lends oversight at the national and regional levels.
3. JTPA funds are distributed to the Governor by federal formula based on the unemployment rate and numbers of economically disadvantaged individuals in the state. The Governor is accountable for the administration of JTPA funds in accordance with federal and state laws and regulations.
4. The Workforce Coordinating Council, the state's human resource investment council, provides oversight and review of all the JTPA programs in the state, as the State Job Training Coordinating Council had done. The Council develops linkages with other education and employment and training programs, coordinates policy among related programs, approves the state plans, and recommends policy changes to improve service delivery statewide.
5. The Governor's Job Training Office (GJTO), the Governor's state administrative entity, distributes funds to the nine Service Delivery Areas (SDAs) based on unemployment statistics and numbers of economically disadvantaged individuals in the respective regions. GJTO monitors local program compliance with federal and state laws and regulations.
6. The nine SDAs administer JTPA funds. They work directly with eligible participants and service providers in the communities.
7. Each SDA has a Private Industry Council (PIC), which provides policy guidance and program oversight in the regions.
8. JTPA Older Worker funds, 8% Education/Coordination funds and some 40% Dislocated Worker funds are distributed to other state agencies or, through a Request for Proposal process, to organized labor and CBOs for special initiatives.
JTPA: Doing More with Less

Funding for JTPA programs in Colorado has steadily declined during the five year period since PY 1989. The declining budget has forced JTPA staffing levels to decrease at the same rate. However, programs have become especially efficient in utilizing employment and training service providers as the number of participants served throughout the state has increased during the same period, despite staff and budget reductions.

To manage existing employment and training needs, Colorado's JTPA organizations rely heavily on the public-private partnerships on which JTPA is based. Decision-makers from business, organized labor, and community and public organizations offered more hands-on involvement in the employment and training process in PY 1994 than in the past.

In the next year, programs will be forced to become even leaner and more efficient as Congress is expected to reduce JTPA funds drastically.

The Governor’s Special Initiatives

Each year, a portion of Colorado's JTPA funds are allocated to special projects designed to meet some of the particularly unique needs of the state's JTPA population. Following is a representative sample of the programs that encompass the Governor's Special Initiatives.

Education Coordination Programs

School-to-Work Transition
GJTO collaborated with the Colorado Community College and Occupational Education System (CCCOES) to fund six school-to-work transition projects. The ventures are designed to prepare students for the world of work and enable them to maintain a productive role in the global economy. For example, one project -- a joint venture among the Community College of Denver, TEC North, and Denver Public Schools -- aids students at North and Zuni High Schools in Denver to discover the world of work.

Literacy and Life-Long Learning
Colorado Community College Computer Access Centers provide increased access to community college vocational programs to individuals with disabilities through adaptive computer technology and more efficient use of existing staff, equipment, and facilities. Computer Access Centers are available at 11 community colleges and three satellite campuses. Additionally, several SDAs received funding for adult remediation/literacy and job self-sufficiency projects.

The Department of Institutions received a grant renewal to continue their model family self-sufficiency program, providing case management, vocational training, and employment services to mentally handicapped adults residing in HUD-subsidized housing.

"Community Reintegration" is a project in which Department of Corrections personnel work with offenders to ensure that they receive necessary vocational and academic training and pre-employment services before release.

Non-Traditional Employment for Women Projects
The non-traditional occupations scholarship initiative provides scholarship vouchers to women, referred through eight of the SDAs, for training in "non-traditional" occupations. The scholarship voucher is redeemable at any public postsecondary institution.

Another initiative is a collaborative effort among the Jeffco SDA, Red Rocks Community College, and the Jeffco Department of Social Services to train women in a variety of primary career occupations.

Coordination of Employment and Training Services
The First Impressions initiative in the Governor's Office of Policy and Initiatives successfully leveraged JTPA funds with over $500,000 in other state, corporate, and foundation funding to promote early childhood education, nutrition, immunization, parenting, and adult education. JTPA funding has made such early childhood emphasis and outreach in local communities possible by assisting economically disadvantaged adults become more self-sufficient.

The Governor's Family Resource Centers have also successfully leveraged JTPA funds with over $200,000 in other state, corporate, and foundation funding to plan and implement centers in several communities across the state. The JTPA funds are specifically directed to assist educationally and economically disadvantaged individuals utilizing the centers.
Older Worker Programs

Colorado's Older Worker Programs provide training and employment opportunities to eligible participants, aged 55 and older. These programs provide work experience, on-the-job training, basic skills, vocational, and occupational training, and job placement assistance. In PY 1994, all 15 programs funded in PY 1993, through a Request For Proposal process, were refunded. Programs were offered in 14 Colorado counties.

Computer Training
Due to labor market demand, computer training has become a basic skill which is offered to all participants in Older Worker Programs.

Dislocated Worker Programs

A portion of Colorado’s JTPA funds are allocated to Dislocated Worker Programs. These programs are designed to assist workers who have been terminated or laid-off through no fault of their own.

Statewide Programs

Regional Reemployment Centers
Six grants were awarded to establish a network of one-stop assistance centers for dislocated workers.

Rapid Response
This program of early intervention assistance for pending layoffs, coordinated by GJTO, mobilizes services of many agencies including Job Service, Unemployment Insurance, and the Colorado AFL-CIO.

Unemployment Survival Workshops are provided on-site to acquaint workers with a variety of community resources which are helpful in the transition to new employment. Job Search Workshops, available to workers at companies which desire more expansive assistance, provide training in job-hunting skills. Labor-Management Layoff Assistance Committees, co-worker committees which are encouraged by federal law, help ease workers’ transitions through large layoffs and plant closures. An annual grant enables Job Service Center staff to help provide on-site assistance to dislocated workers. The grant also purchases labor market information from the Department of Labor and Employment.

Community College Scholarships
GJTO made approximately $300,000 available to the Colorado Community College and Occupational Education System for retraining scholarships to dislocated workers.

Special Programs

Major Layoff Grants
GJTO received a $2.3 million national grant to aid workers dislocated from Continental Airlines.

Environmental Occupations
GJTO has once again renewed its contract with the Colorado School of Mines to train professionals for hazardous materials handling and clean-up projects.

Older Dislocated Workers
GJTO made plans to fund several community-based programs.
JTPA: Driven by Goals and Objectives

Each year, the Governor sets goals and objectives for JTPA to ensure that Colorado's human capital needs are met and that programs are coordinated with other employment and training initiatives. The goals and objectives for JTPA are the following:

1. Invest in human resource development by preparing individuals for meaningful employment and long-term economic self-sufficiency.
   * serve Coloradans experiencing barriers to employment through programs responsive to the changing demographics of the workforce.
2. Expand and enhance the use of joint planning and shared resources with public education and vocational training systems, and support efforts to improve the public education system to produce a workforce with more marketable skills to meet business and labor training needs.
   * promote school-to-work transition services in order to increase the number of youth staying in and returning to school; promote work-based curriculum which links classroom learning to worksite experience;
   * promote literacy and life-long learning to increase employment and earnings for Coloradans experiencing barriers to employment;
   * promote training, placement, and retention of women in non-traditional employment; and
   * promote and recognize innovative approaches to employment and training service delivery.
3. Integrate the services of JTPA and other agencies to assure self-sufficiency for Coloradans who are dependent upon public assistance.
   * provide services to public assistance recipients to offer new job opportunities; and
   * establish a united effort among appropriate state agencies, the Workforce Coordinating Council, and PICs to reduce or eliminate conflicting policies.

Service Delivery Areas

The Governor has designated nine JTPA Service Delivery Areas (SDAs) in Colorado. Eight are located in the state's largest population and employment centers, each serving one or two counties; the ninth – the Office of Rural Job Training – serves the remaining 55 counties across Colorado.

The SDAs offer similar job training and employment assistance and services for economically disadvantaged and dislocated workers, as provided under JTPA's Titles II-A, II-B, II-C, and III funding. However, each SDA tailors its basic services to meet the needs of specific populations in the local community.

The following pages present a representative sample of the types and breadth of services offered by each of Colorado's nine SDAs.
Adams County Employment Center

Youth Programs

Choices: A classroom setting is the venue for participants to receive eligibility requirements and program information, generic labor market information, testing, assessment, and a career exploration meeting with a case manager.

 Marketable Work Habits: Self-esteem is raised and job search skills are developed through classroom training programs.

Occupational Skills Training: Vocational education, on-the-job training, actual work experience, and work supplementation programs are available.

School-to-Work Transition: Classes utilizing youth competencies are available for in-school youth.

Youth Competencies: Training in basic academic skills, job-specific skills, and pre-employment and work maturity skills is available.

Adult Programs

Choices: A variety of information, from eligibility requirements, program information, and labor market information, to testing, assessment, and a career exploration meeting with a case manager is available for participants in a classroom setting.

Department of Corrections Program: Services including assessment, vocational training, and job search assistance are available for clients who are in a pre-release program from a Corrections facility.

Direct Training Services: Basic academic skills development, occupational skills training, on-the-job training, work experience, and work supplementation programs are available for participants.

 Marketable Work Habits: Self-esteem is raised and job search skills are developed in a classroom training setting.

Targeted Assistance Grant Program: Self-sufficiency is explored in programs specifically tailored for refugees.

Highlight: Youth Net

Based on a successful first year, Adams County Employment Center re-funded the five-district school-to-work program in Program Year 1994. The program targets youth at-risk of dropping out of school. Eligible youth attend a pre-employment/work maturity workshop in addition to their normal classroom routines. Upon completion of the workshop, participants meet with case managers for assessment and possible enrollment into a vocational education course at the Community College of Denver/Technical Education Center.

Adult Programs

Assessment: A comprehensive three-day workshop focusing on individual values, interests, aptitudes, abilities, and preferences, as well as barriers to employment is available.

Basic Skills Development: Individualized, competency-based, criterion-referenced educational programs are available. Programs are intensive, and are offered both one-on-one and in a group setting; extensive tutoring support is provided to all participants.

Family Literacy Program: Basic skills and parenting skills are taught to single AFDC recipients with children aged 3-4 in a program designed specifically for this group.

Occupational Training: Training is provided, via redeemable vouchers, at vocational schools, community colleges, and proprietary schools throughout the metro area.

Arapahoe/Douglas County
Employment and Training

Youth Programs

Basic Skills Development: Self-paced, individually-guided, computer-assisted basic education programs are offered in several locations.

Educational Options: High school dropouts are enrolled in alternative education programs which award academic credits and will enable the youth to work toward a diploma or a GED. Participants are identified through collaboration with local school districts.

Internships/Work Experience: Real-world job experience, relating to participants' career interests and occupational goals, is available with both public and private employers.

Job-Specific Skill Training: Occupational training is offered at vocational schools, community colleges, and proprietary schools.

Teen Mentoring Program: Mentoring is available for students attending designated area high schools.

Highlight: Partnership with Housing Authorities

JTPA and JOBS services will be coordinated with a family self-sufficiency program for individuals in subsidized housing through agreements initiated by Arapahoe/Douglas County Employment and Training with Englewood, Sheridan, and Arapahoe County Housing Authorities, and the Douglas County Health and Human Services Program. In this venture, case management services will focus on individuals' employability and self-sufficiency plans.
Boulder County Employment & Training Center

Youth Programs

Self-Sufficiency Programs: Vocational skills, school-to-work, career exploration, and basic skills are provided to participants. Different from adult self-sufficiency programs, classes in the world-of-work emphasizing employer expectations, communications skills, and cooperative team skills, are included in this program.

Summer Youth Employment & Training: Youth receive 8-10 weeks of paid work experience, coupled with work maturity training and academic enrichment classes.

Work Experience/Internships: "Real-world" work environments are exhibited to youth through jobs, lasting six to eight weeks, with public, non-profit, and for-profit employers.

Highlight: The Learning Lab

The BCETC Learning Lab consists of two primary components: 1) reading, math, and GED preparation; and 2) computer literacy.

The Learning Lab offers context-based math and reading instruction at 13 computer workstations. Clients can meet the unique requirements of their chosen occupation through an individually tailored curriculum addressing deficiencies which would hinder success in that occupation. Once their basic skill levels are high enough, participants are enrolled in occupational skills training classes. The Lab also provides "fast-track" preparation for the GED.

Computer literacy is another major part of the Lab. Participants learn the most recent upgrades of software that are in high demand from local employers.

Adult Programs

Dislocated Worker Programs: Retraining is provided to dislocated workers whose skills are no longer marketable. Other program components include workshops to aid individuals re-learn job search techniques and adjust to job loss. This program is delivered through the Career Transition Center North in Broomfield.

Self-Sufficiency Programs: Vocational skills, work experience, and basic skills are taught to welfare recipients and low-income adults. Extensive support services, including child care are also provided; programs are designed to reduce and/or eliminate participants' dependence on public assistance.

50+ Employment Opportunities: Older workers' job skills are translated into the demands of the current labor market; programs are targeted to individuals aged 50 and over.
Colorado Springs/El Paso County Industrial Training & Human Resource Development

Highlight: Visions to Potential/Charter School

The "Visions to Potential" program is a dropout retrieval program for economically disadvantaged high school dropouts, run in cooperation with the Educational Opportunity Program, an alternative high school. Students attend classes at the Institute for Business and Industrial Technology, a training facility of the SDA.

At the beginning of the 1995-96 school year, the SDA will replace this program with the Community Prep School, Colorado Springs' first charter school. Operating under the auspices of Colorado Springs School District 11, Community Prep School will serve 120 at-risk actual and potential dropouts in grades 9-12. The School will be located at the Institute for Business and Industrial Technology.
Jeffco Employment & Training Services

Youth Programs

Year-Round Youth Program: Economically disadvantaged and/or disabled youth (ages 16-21), including a high percentage of teenage mothers and offenders, receive basic skills remediation, job training, pre-employment workshops, vocational counseling, and wilderness challenge experiences.

Summer Youth Program: Basic skills remediation, job training and placement, work maturity workshops, and vocational counseling are available for economically disadvantaged and/or disabled youth ages 14-21.

Colorado Youth Corps: Colorado's only SDA-run year-round program teaches youth to work cooperatively and creatively as work crew teams perform community conservation tasks.

Longview High School Program: This "second-chance" program combines employment-related anti-violence themes with dynamic instruction. It is jointly funded, staffed, and administered with Jefferson County Schools.

Adult Programs

Basic Skills Training: Remedial education, GED preparation, on-the-job training, job search, vocational training, and work experiences are provided to clients on an individualized basis.

Dislocated Worker Programs: Retraining, job search, placement assistance, and support services are available to individuals affected by layoffs or occupational dislocation.

Older Worker Programs: Programs are aimed at translating seniors' job skills into the demands of the current job market.

Non-traditional Employment for Women: Services are available to assist women train for and obtain employment in higher-paying jobs traditionally filled by men.

Refugee Assistance: Targeted job training and placement assistance for refugees.

Highlight: Non-Traditional Occupations for Women

Training Services, Jefferson County Department of Social Services, and Red Rocks Community College have partnered to help over 50 women reach their individual employment goals through the Non-Traditional Occupations Incentive grant. More than 90% of the women have entered employment in such non-traditional fields as copy machine repair, auto mechanic, electrician, cable installer, and printer. The average wage at placement was $7.55 per hour.

The Incentive grant provides workshops, parenting classes, personal development, math and reading skills, non-traditional job training, and supportive services to eligible women residing in Jefferson County. The grant was funded by CCCOES using JTPA 8% education/coordination funds.
Adult Programs

Career Network: Skills and support to aid dislocated workers reenter the workforce are provided at a regional reemployment center which has been designed specifically to assist dislocated workers.

Career Planning Workshop: Career development assistance is available.

Computer Resource Center: Computerized self/career exploration, remediation, and training resources are available.

Formal Assessment: Vocational exploration through aptitude and career interest tests is available.

Occupational Skills Training: Short- and long-term classroom training opportunities may be pursued by participants.

Transferable Skills Workshop: Labor market information and assistance for transferring skills to new occupations is available to individuals adapting to the process of change.

Work Experience: Subsidized, on-site occupational skills training in public or private non-profit organizations may be pursued.

Highlight: Youth Conservation Corps

"At-risk" youth can participate in a producttive work experience program provided by a public-private venture with combined funds from Anheuser-Busch, JTPA, the City of Fort Collins, and the National and Community Service Act.

Larimer County Employment and Training Services

Youth Programs

Career Planning Workshop: Career development assistance is provided to participants.

Challenges: Support is provided for alternative high school youths to stay in school and graduate.

Computer Resource Center: Computerized self/career exploration, remediation, and training resources are available.

Formal Assessment: Vocational exploration via aptitude and career interest tests is available.

Work Experience: Subsidized, on-site occupational skills training in public or private non-profit organizations may be pursued by participants.

YES (Youth Employment Strategies): Job search/re-tention, self-exploration and career decision-making skills are taught in a competency-based format.
Mayor's Office of Employment & Training

Youth Programs

Remediation: Intensive remediation is available for youth ages 14-21; pre-employment and academic remediation is available for youths ages 16-21; and academic remediation and job placement is available for youths ages 18-21.

Youth Fair Chance: At-risk youth, ages 14-21, residing in a number of northwest Denver neighborhoods are eligible to receive educational, supportive, career training, and referral services.

Youth & Young Adult Services: Youth and young adults, ages 14-30, residing in the Clayton, Cole, City Park West, Five Points/Curtis Park, North Capitol Hill, Skyland, and Whittier neighborhoods in northeast Denver are eligible to participate in educational and employment programs through the Youth Fair Chance Northeast program. The in-School component focuses on school-to-work and mentorship programs for youth, ages 14-20. The out-of-school component provides basic skills training, GED and ESL classes, vocational/certification programs, and continuing college education to youth, ages 16-30.

Highlight: Summer Youth Employment & Training Program - Academic Component

More than 300 youths, aged 14-17, participated in the four-week academic enrichment program. The program's "real-life" approach focused on increasing students' application of academic learning to practical life skills. Intensive instruction in motivation and self-esteem building was also provided.

Participants received 90 hours of academic training emphasizing reading, math, and computer skills. Field trips, speakers, tutors, and hands-on activities complemented the interdisciplinary, classroom-style learning. Classes included a variety of subjects such as Checks and Balances; Reading, Writing, and Illustrating; Everyday Law; and Computer-Generated Art.

Adult Programs

Basic Skills Training: Basic skills and pre-employment services for welfare recipients, non-traditional training and employment for women, adult basic education, ESL classes, tuition assistance, job placement assistance, and vocational skills training are some of the services available to individuals needing specialized services.

Dislocated Worker Services: Retraining, tuition assistance; ESL and GED classes, basic skills training, job search and placement assistance, and non-traditional training and employment for women are provided to laid-off or occupationally dislocated individuals.

Refugee Services: Cultural bridging training and pre-employment/work maturity training are provided to refugees. Other services to help make refugees self-sufficient are available.

Services for Persons with Disabilities: On-the-job training opportunities are available to individuals with disabilities.
Adult Programs

Basic Skills Training: Remedial education, GED preparation, on-the-job training, job search assistance, vocational training, and work experience is provided on an individualized basis.

Dislocated Worker Programs: Retraining, job search and job placement assistance, and support services are provided to individuals experiencing layoffs or occupational dislocation.

Youth Programs

Summer Youth Employment and Training Program: Basic skills training, English-as-a-second-language education, math and reading remediation, pre-employment and work maturity competencies, on-the-job training, and work experience are provided on an individualized basis for youth, ages 14-21.

Year-Round Youth Program: Basic skills remediation, vocational counseling, occupational skills training, on-the-job training, job search skills training, GED assistance, and work experience are provided for economically disadvantaged and/or disabled youth, ages 16-21.

Highlight: Reemployment Centers

Rural Job Training (RJT) successfully opened two new reemployment centers – the South Central Reemployment Center in Pueblo and the Network for Employment and Training in Grand Junction – in March 1995, with funding from the Governor’s Job Training Office and RJT. Both centers offer comprehensive services for dislocated workers including testing, assessment, job search assistance, workshops, retraining, and job placement services.
Weld County Employment Services

Youth Programs

Governor's Summer Job Hunt: Pre-employment workshops and summer job placement assistance is available for youths, aged 16-21; this program is operated for the Department of Labor and Employment.

In-School Program: Remedial education and pre-employment and job-specific skills competency training is available for "at-risk" youth.

Job Opportunities and Basic Skills Program: Basic skills, vocational education, and occupational training are provided for youth receiving welfare. This program is operated for the Department of Social Services.

Out-of-School Program: Remedial education and pre-employment and job-specific skill competency training is available for "at-risk" youths who are enrolled in an alternative high school, have dropped out of high school, or are no longer in school.

Summer Youth Program: Job placement, employment experiences, and academic enrichment activities are provided.

Youth Conservation Corps/Youth Crime Prevention Intervention Program: Cooperative teamwork skills are developed and reinforced as youth work collaboratively and creatively as members of a work crew to perform conservation tasks in their communities.

Highlight: GED Preparation through the Learning Lab

In a collaborative effort between Aims Community College and Weld County Employment Services, the Learning Lab delivers basic education, GED, and remedial education services. GED preparation is provided through a combination of traditional classroom and computerized instruction. 60 Employment Services clients receive GEDs through this program each year, on average. The Lab also provides instruction in keyboarding, Lotus, WordPerfect, and advanced mathematics.

Adult Programs

Basic Skills Training: Remedial education, GED preparation, on-the-job training, job search assistance, vocational training, and work experiences are provided as individualized services.

Dislocated Worker Programs: Relocation assistance, job search workshops, a job club, and readjustment support services are available for laid-off or occupationally dislocated individuals.

Job Opportunities and Basic Skills Program: Basic education, vocational education, and occupational training are provided for adult welfare recipients; this program is operated for the Department of Social Services.

The Colorado Workforce Coordinating Council

The Workforce Coordinating Council was created as the state's human resource investment council by Governor Romer's Executive Order in March 1994, and was codified into state law by the Legislature later in the spring. Comprised of 21 members representing private industry, education, labor, community-based organizations, local elected officials, and state agency directors, the Council has assumed the responsibilities of the Job Training Coordinating Council, as well as those of the State Council on Vocational Education. The Council meets monthly to recommend policy changes to the Governor to coordinate and improve employment and training programs. The Council also reviews and approves JTPA and other agencies' state plans.
